LONDON, WEDNESDAY, AUG 16-(AP)-FRONTIER REPORTS TO THE LONDON PRESS SAID THIS MORNING THAT PARIS WENT WILD WITH JOY WHEN NEWS WAS RECEIVED OF ALLIED LANDINGS IN THE SOUTH OF FRANCE, AND THAT SPORADIC FIGHTING BETWEEN PATRIOTS AND COLLABORATIONISTS BROKE OUT IN THE STREETS WHEN CROWDS ASSEMBLED SINGING THE "MARSELLAISE."

GERMAN POLICE PATROLS STOOD BY UNABLE TO CONTROL THE DEMONSTRATION, THE REPORTS SAID, AS PARISIAN ENTHUSIASM SOARED WITH PRIDE IN THE KNOWLEDGE THAT FRENCH ARMY UNITS WERE AMONG THE FORCES PARTICIPATING IN THE LANDINGS.

AUG 16 1944

A MADRID DISPATCH TO THE DNB NEWS AGENCY SAID THAT WHEN PARIS WAS QUIET THE SOUND OF ALLIED GUNFIRE FROM THE FIGHTING IN NORTHERN FRANCE COULD BE HEARD DISTINCTLY.

THIS REPORT SAID GREAT BONFIRES WERE ABLAZE IN THE CITY'S COURTYARDS AS GERMAN ARMY ARCHIVES AND FILES OF THE VICHY MINISTRY WERE BURNED TO KEEP THEM FROM ALLIED HANDS.

LEADING COLLABORATIONISTS WERE SAID TO BE FLEEING THE CITY, AND VICHY WAS PICTURED AS A PLACE OF DISORDER. THE COLLABORATIONIST CAPITAL VIRTUALLY WAS IN A STATE OF SIEGE, WITH ARMED GUARDS FILLING THE STREETS, THE REPORTS SAID.

THE GERMAN-CONTROLLED MONTE CARLO RADIO SAID THE GERMANS CLAMPED A STRICT CURFEW ON THE SOUTH OF FRANCE, THREATENING VIOLATORS WITH EXECUTION. THE POPULACE WAS SAID TO BE FORBIDDEN TO USE THE STREETS FROM SUNSET TO DAWN WITHOUT SPECIAL PERMISSION FROM THE GERMANS, AND VEHICULAR TRAFFIC WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN PROHIBITED.

PUBLIC PLACES OF ENTERTAINMENT WERE REPORTED SHUT DOWN AND A BAN PLACED ON THE SALE OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.

LONDON, AUG 15-(AP)-THE ALGIERS RADIO, WHICH IS THE USUAL CHANNEL FOR BROADCAST OF OFFICIAL NEWS FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER, CAME ON THE AIR UNUSUALLY EARLY TODAY AND CALLED IN OTHER STATIONS FOR A HOOKUP IN PREPARATION TO TRANSMIT AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF UNDISCLOSED NATURE.

LISTENERS HEARD THE ALGIERS ANNOUNCER GIVE INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE HOOKUP TO TRANSMITTERS IN THE UNITED STATES AND ALLIED-HELD ITALY AS WELL AS TO LONDON.

NO ANNOUNCEMENT HAD BEEN MADE MORE THAN TWO HOURS AFTER THESE PREPARATIONS.

(A ROME VOICE TRANSMISSION RECORDED AT 5AEW BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS IN NEW YORK AND ADDRESSED TO PRESS ASSOCIATIONS IN NEW YORK AND LONDON, NETWORKS IN BOTH PLACES AND THE PUBLIC RELATIONS BUREAU IN NEW YORK, SAID: "WE REQUEST THAT YOU CONTINUE TO MONITOR THE VOICE TRANSMITTERS OF APH ROME AND ALGIERS AFHQ RELAY AND THE BBC TRANSMITTERS IN ITALY THROUGH THE DAY FOR SPECIAL RELEASES."

(THERE WAS NO EXPLANATION OF THE REQUEST, WHICH FOLLOWED BROADCAST OF THE REGULAR DAILY COMMUNIQUE.)

LONDON AUG 15-(AP)-THE GERMAN TRANSOCEAN NEWS AGENCY SAID TODAY THAT ALLIED TROOPS WERE ATTACKING FIERCELY ON ALL SIDES OF THE NORMANDY ENTRAPMENT RING BUT ASSERTED FIELD MARSHAL GEN. GUENTHER VON KLUGE'S "REGROUPED AND REINFORCED" FORCES IN THE INNER CIRCLE HAD MADE LOCAL COUNTERATTACKS.

THE BROADCAST SAID A "CONSIDERABLE FORMATION" OF THE GERMAN AIR FORCE WAS THROWN AGAINST AMERICAN TANKS AND INFANTRY IN FIERCE FIGHTING AT THE SOUTHERN PINCER CLAW.

AT THE WESTERN END OF THE SAC RINGING THE GERMANS THE ALLIES ATTACKED STRONGLY FROM THURY-HARCOURT AROUND TO DOMFRONT "BUT REGROUPED AND REINFORCED GERMAN FORCES COUNTERED THESE MOVES WITH STRONG ATTACKS," TRANSOCEAN SAID.

IT ADDED THAT NO BIG CHANGES OCCURRED IN BRITTANY. GUDEL, SIX MILES NORTHWEST OF LORIENT, WAS HEAVILY SHELLED BUT AN AMERICAN TANK ATTACK WAS "HALTED BY CONCENTRATED GERMAN ARTILLERY FIRE," TRANSOCEAN CLAIMED. THE DISPATCH SAID THERE WAS "ONLY LOCAL AMERICAN RECONNAISSANCE" AT ST. NAZAIRE AND THAT THE SITUATION WAS UNCHANGED AT ST. MALO AND BREST.

BY WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE AUG 15-(AP)-FRANCE STOOD TODAY ON THE EVE OF COMPLETE FREEDOM FROM THE HARSH GRIP OF HITLER AS THE ALLIES LAUNCHED A NEW BLOW FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN TO WRENCH GERMAN ARMY FINGERS LOOSE FROM TERRITORY IT HAS HELD SINCE 1940.

THAT FREEDOM OF FRANCE IS A MATTER OF NO MORE THAN WEEKS IS THE ONLY CONCLUSION TO BE GAINED FROM A TOUR OF THE BATTLE FRONT IN NORMANDY AND BRITTANY WHERE THE GERMAN 7TH ARMY NOW FACES DESTRUCTION.

EARLY REPORTS INDICATED THAT THE INVASION OF SOUTHERN FRANCE WAS MEETING ONLY SLIGHT OPPOSITION. THAT WAS EXPECTABLE, BECAUSE MARSHAL VON KLUGE HAS BEEN STEADILY DRAWING DIVISIONS FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN AREA OF FRANCE IN AN EFFORT TO STOP THE OFFENSIVE IN THE WEST WHICH IS TEARING HIM TO BITS.

IT IS ESTIMATED THAT THE GERMANS NOW HAVE FEWER THAN FIVE FULL DIVISIONS READY TO DEAL WITH ANY INVASION FROM THE SOUTH.

JUDGING FROM THE EXPERIENCE THE AMERICANS HAD IN RACING OVER BRITTANY, THESE ARE SCARCELY ENOUGH TO DEAL WITH THE FRENCH UNDERGROU WHICH UNDOUBTEDLY IS NOW SPRINGING TO ARMS ALONG THE RIVIERA TO SPAIN

LANDINGS WERE MADE WEST OF TOULON--A HOTBED OF FRENCH RESISTANCE SINCE THE FRENCH FLEET SCUTTLED ITSELF IN THE HARBOR.

THAT THE FRENCH ALONE WERE STRIKING WITH PLENTY OF POWER WAS SEEN A REPORT IN ALGIERS THAT THE FRENCH NAVY NOW HAS 178 SHIPS AND 50,000 MEN. IT IS NO SECRET THAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES HAVE BEEN REARMING THE FRENCH ARMY IN AFRICA SINCE EARLY LAST YEAR.

LT. GEN. IRA EAKER, AIR COMMANDER IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, HAS BEEN TURNING AMERICAN AIR POWER LOOSE ON THE FRENCH COAST FOR WEEKS AND IT IS LIKELY THAT THE FRENCH AND THEIR ALLIES ARE FINDING THE SHORE BATTERIES PULVERIZED, AS IN NORMANDY. THE GERMANS HAVE REPORTED FOR SOME TIME THE PRESENCE OF BRITISH AND AMERICAN WARSHIPS IN THAT REGION

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND, LARGELY THROUGH HITLER'S INSISTENCE THAT THE ARMY NEVER RETREAT BUT STAND AND DIE, NOW APPEARS TO BE IN AN IMPOSSIBLE SITUATION.

FACING THE ALLIES IN THE SOUTH, THE ENEMY HAS THE REMNANTS OF AN ARMY TRYING DESPERATELY TO COPE WITH NEW AND OVERPOWERING LANDINGS.

IN MIDDLE FRANCE, THE FRENCH UNDERGROUND IS RUNNING WILD AND MAKING IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE ENEMY TO MAINTAIN COMMUNICATIONS OR MORE DIVISIONS FROM ONE PLACE TO ANOTHER AT ANY SPEED.

IN THE WEST, GEN. EISENHOWER'S FORCES ARE IN THE PROCESS OF DESTROYING THE ONLY POWERFUL GERMAN ARMY IN FRANCE--THE SEVENTH--

WHICH HAS BEEN KEPT STRONG BY ROBBING DIVISIONS FROM FORCES IN BELGIUM, HOLLAND AND NORTHERN FRANCE. IT IS DIFFICULT TO SEE HOW THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND CAN DO ANYTHING BUT GIVE UP FRANCE AND RETREAT WITH WHAT IT CAN SAVE INTO BELGIUM AND GERMANY.

IF THE GERMANS HOLD TO HITLER'S ORDER OF "NO RETREAT," THEY WILL BE DESTROYED TOTALLY BY FASTER AND MORE MOBILE ALLIED FORCES WHICH CAN SURROUND AND DEAL WITH ARMY SEGMENTS AT LEISURE.

FD947AEW

BY GLADWIN HILL.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, AUG. 15-(AP) POWERFUL ALLIED ARMIES INVADED SOUTHERN FRANCE TODAY AND PUNCHED SEVERAL MILES INLAND AGAINST WEAK OPPOSITION, WHILE 450 MILES TO THE NORTH THE GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY WAS BEING ANNIHILATED IN A CONSTRICTING NORMANDY TRAP.

THROWING A HUGE PINCERS UPON FRANCE, THE ALLIES POURED ASHORE AT SEVERAL POINTS IN THE TOULON AREA, AND A FRONT DISPATCH DECLARED THEY WERE "WELL INTO SOUTHERN FRANCE THIS AFTERNOON AND GOING FAST." SOME 14,000 MEN LANDED IN THE FIRST FEW HOURS, BACKED BY GREAT AIR AND SEA ARMADAS.

IN NORMANDY, THE ALLIES NARROWED TO NINE MILES THE NECK OF A TRAP WHERE REMNANTS OF FIELD MARSHAL VON KLUGE'S SEVENTH ARMY WRITHED UNDER BLOWS OF FOUR ARMIES. CANADIANS STRUCK WITHIN A MILE OF FALAISE IN FLUID BATTLE. AMERICANS FOUGHT EIGHT MILES BELOW FALAISE.

HUNDREDS UPON HUNDREDS OF NAZIS WERE SURRENDERING. AMERICAN AND BRITISH ARMIES CLOSING IN FROM THE WEST BOTH ADVANCED, WITH THE U.S. FIRST ARMY GAINING AS DEEP AS SEVEN MILES IN 24 HOURS. VON KLUGE'S POCKET HAD BEEN HALVED TO AN AREA OF SOME 300 SQUARE MILES.

THE SOUTHERN LANDINGS WERE ACCOMPLISHED WITH AMAZINGLY SMALL CASUALTIES, FRONT REPORTERS SAID.

"BY MIDMORNING ALL LANDINGS WERE PROCEEDING SUCCESSFULLY ACCORDING TO SCHEDULE AGAINST ONLY LIGHT GROUND OPPOSITION AND NO AIR OPPOSITION," DECLARED A SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN COMMAND. "THE SUPPORTING AIRBORNE OPERATION WAS ALSO SUCCESSFULLY EXECUTED."

THE GREATEST FLEET EVER TO SAIL THE MEDITERRANEAN CARRIED AMERICAN, BRITISH, AND FRENCH TROOPS ROLLING THROUGH THE SOUTHERN FRENCH WALL. THOUSANDS OF PARACHUTISTS LEAPED BEHIND NAZI DESENDERS. THE FULL WEIGHT OF ALLIED AIR POWER IN THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER BACKED THE PUSH.

FOUR SEPARATE AMERICAN, BRITISH AND CANADIAN ARMIES TO THE NORTH CRUSHED IN UPON FIELD MARSHAL GUENTHER VON KLUGE'S WRECKED SEVENTH ARMY. HIS FALAISE ESCAPE NECK WAS REDUCED TO 10 MILES. HUNDREDS UPON HUNDREDS OF GERMANS WERE CAPTURED. AGAIN VON KLUGE TRIED A COSTLY DAYLIGHT RUSH IN AN EFFORT TO ESCAPE.

OVERNIGHT THE WESTERN INVASION HAD DOUBLED IN SCOPE, EXPLODING OPEN A FOURTH FRONT AGAINST HITLER AFTER THE GERMAN HOLD IN SOUTHERN FRANCE HAD BEEN WEAKENED.

THE ALLIED OBJECTIVE "IS TO DRIVE OUT THE GERMANS AND JOIN UP WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES ADVANCING FROM NORMANDY," ASSERTED GEN. SIR HENRY MAITLAND WILSON, COMMANDING THE SOUTHERN INVASION.

GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER DECLARED THE GERMANS ON THE NORMANDY FRONT "ARE TAKING A SOUND BEATING." BUT HE WARNED THAT "WE ARE STILL A LONG WAY FROM THE RHINE," ALTHOUGH THIS WEEK HAS BROUGHT "A VERY DEFINITE CLIMAX" IN ONE PHASE OF THE VAST LIBERATION CAMPAIGN.

INTO FRANCE WITH THE LANDINGS BETWEEN MARSEILLE AND NICE WENT A FRENCH ARMY, COMING HOME, FIGHTING AGAIN ON ITS OWN SOIL FOR VENGEANCE AGAINST HITLER'S CONQUERORS OF FOUR YEARS AGO.

THE UNDERGROUND WAS RISING IN STOUT SUPPORT OF BOTH JAWS OF THE PINCERS THROWN ON FRANCE.

THE ARMIES PUNCHING FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN ARE ONLY 400 MILES FROM AMERICANS WHO CROSSED THE LOIRE BELOW BRITTANY.

PIERCING THE SOUTHERN COAST, THE ALLIES LANDED IN CALM, CLEAR WEATHER IN PERFECTLY-TIMED OPERATIONS, SEIZING FIRST OBJECTIVES WITHIN AN HOUR, AND MET RESISTANCE MUCH LESS THAN WAS EXPECTED.

ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT KENNETH DIXON FLYING OVER THE BEACHES SAID "AS FAR AS 20 MILES INLAND A COMPLETE LACK OF ANY KIND OF A STRUGGLE MARKS THE RUGGED LANDSCAPE." NOT A SINGLE ENEMY FIGHTER PLANE OPPOSED THE ARMADAS OF GLIDERS AND PARACHUTE-TROOP TRAINS, SAID PRELIMINARY REPORTS.

THE LANDINGS WERE NEAR THE MOUTH OF THE RHONE, A VALLEY ROUTE TO THE NORTH. EIGHT HUNDRED SHIPS, INCLUDING BATTLESHIPS, SUPPORTED THE ASSAULT.

THE TRAP UPON VON KLUGE MEANWHILE WAS NEARLY SNAPPED SHUT. A FRONT DISPATCH SAID THAT AGAIN THIS MORNING THE GERMANS TRIED TO BREAK OUT EASTWARD, BUT THE ROUTE BELOW FALAISE WAS BLOCKED BY A WALL OF BOMBS AND SHELLS.

WEST OF FALAISE, THE ROOF OF HIS CORRIDOR "APPEARED TO BE COLLAPSING TODAY" UNDER A BRITISH AVALANCHE OF TANKS AND MEN, A FRONT REPORT DECLARED.

ON ALL SIDES THE ALLIES PRESSED IN. HUNDREDS OF CAPTIVES WERE TAKEN BY AMERICANS CLOSING FROM THE WEST. THE POCKET WAS SLIMMED TO HALF ITS SIZE. THOUSANDS OF GERMANS WERE STILL BELIEVED CAUGHT. A BRITISH STAFF OFFICER SAID VON KLUGE WAS THROWING IN REINFORCEMENTS, BUT THEY WERE APPARENTLY 80 PER CENT "SLAVE TROOPS," TOSSED IN AS SACRIFICE REARGUARDS WHILE VON KLUGE SOUGHT TO SAVE HIS ARMOR AND HIS BEST MEN.

(BERLIN BROADCASTS SAID "A VIOLENT BATTLE UNPRECEDENTED IN LIVING MEMORY IS BEING FOUGHT" FOR THIS NARROW GAP.)

BITING OFF THIS FINAL AVENUE OF FLIGHT WERE THE AMERICAN THIRD ARMY COMMANDED BY LT.-GEN.GEORGE S. PATTON, JR., AND THE CANADIAN FIRST ARMY POUNDING DOWN FROM NORTH OF FALAISE, AND NOW WITHIN 2 1/2 MILES OF THAT COMMUNICATIONS CENTER. PATTON WAS A SCANT EIGHT MILES BELOW FALAISE.

THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY PRESSED IN FROM THE WEST, AIDED BY THE BRITISH SECOND BETWEEN IT AND THE CANADIANS.

LT.-GEN.OMAR N.BRADLEY IS COMMANDING THE U.S.12TH ARMY GROUP, THE GREATEST AMERICAN FORCE EVER MASSED IN BATTLE, IT WAS DISCLOSED. THIS INCLUDES PATTON'S THIRD ARMY, AND THE FIRST ARMY, NOW HEADED BY LT.-GEN.COURTNEY W. HODGES. BRADLEY HAD LED IT BEFORE COMING ARMY GROUP COMMANDER.

A HALF-DOZEN MORE TOWNS FELL AS THE DRAWSTRING TIGHTENED ALL AROUND THE NORMANDY POCKET. THE AMERICAN INVESTED GER, EIGHT MILES EAST OF MORTAIN, AND ZUN

EAST OF MORTAIN, AND DOMFRONT, 15 MILES SOUTHEAST.

MORTAIN FORMERLY WAS THE WESTERN TIP OF THE GERMAN SALIENT.

THE CANADIANS, TOPPING THEIR 6,000-YARD ASSAULT YESTERDAY WITH A NEW SURGE ON A TWO-MILE FRONT, CAPTURED EPANEY AND HILL 184 AND ADVANCED WITHIN 2 1/2 MILES OF FALAISE, SWEEPING UP AT LEAST 1,000 PRISONERS.

A FRONT DISPATCH SAID THE VALUE OF FALAISE WAS ALL BUT LOST TO THE GERMANS SINCE THE CANADIANS FROM POSITIONS ON HIGH GROUND NORTH OF THE CITY DOMINATED ESCAPE ROUTES EASTWARD TO LISUEUX AND PARIS.

PATTON'S AMERICAN THIRD ARMY ON THE SOUTHERN SIDE OF THE TRAP NOW IS ONLY A LITTLE OVER EIGHT MILES FROM FALAISE. UNITS OF THIS ARMY WERE FIGHTING IN THE BY-PASSED TOWN OF ARGENTAN, 13 MILES SOUTH OF FALAISE.

IN ORDER TO HANDLE THE NEUTRALIZATION TWO CRACK ALLIED OUTFITS WERE SENT SILENTLY IN DURING THE DARKNESS OF NIGHT ON D-DAY MINUS ONE. ALTHOUGH CENSORSHIP OROHIBITS GIVING THEIR NATIONAL COMPLEMENT IT CAN BE SAID THEY WERE THOROUGHLY REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED NATIONS ASPECT OF THIS CONFLICT.

THEIR JOB WAS NOT ONLY TO SILENCE THE DEFENSIVE GUNS WHICH GUARDED THE INVASION WATERS BUT ALSO TO DO IT SO QUIETLY THAT THE MAINLAND WOULD NOT BE ALERTED. ALTHOUGH THEY WERE NOT HEARD FROM FOR HOURS AFTER THEIR DEPARTURE FROM THE INVASION CONVOY IT BECAME APPARENT BEFORE DAWN THAT THEY HAD CARRIED OUT THEIR MISSION.

WHEN THE FIRST PARACHUTE TROOPS STRUCK SOME FOUR HOURS BEFORE THE SEA-BORNE INVASION THE RETURNING PILOTS REPORTED THEY WERE NOT FIRED UPON THROUGHOUT THEIR MISSION. WHEN I FLEW OVER THE BEACHHEAD WITH THE FIRST FLIDER MISSION SHORTLY AFTER DAWN THE FORMATION DREW NOT A SINGLE SHOT--EITHER ANTI-AIRCRAFT OR OTHERWISE. AND THAT WAS THE SAME TERRITORY WHERE A FORMATION IN WHICH I PREVIOUSLY RODE BROUGHT FORTH THICK ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE.

DOWN UNDER US BOTH LARGE NAVAL AND SMALL LANDING CRAFT WERE SWEEPING STEADILY SHOREWARD WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST RESISTANCE. HAD THE BATTERIES OF THESE ISLANDS BEEN STILL FREE TO FIRE ON THE APPROACHING CONVOY OR APPROACHING AIR BORNE UNITS THERE WOULD BE PLENTY OF FIRING.

BUT WE ALL KNEW THEN THAT THE TWO CRACK "ISLAND NEUTRALIZING" UNITS HAD DONE THEIR WORK WELL--EVEN THOUGH THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE DID NOT SAY SO UNTIL MORE THAN 12 HOURS LATER.

THREE DAYS AGO THE RODNEY STARTED FOR HER TARGET BUT RAF SPITFIRE SPOTTERS ORDERED HER BACK TO PORT BECAUSE VISIBILITY WAS SO GOOD, STRONG AAHBATTERIES ON ALDERNEY COULD SHOOT DOWN HER OBSERVATION PLANES.

BUT EARLY TODAY THE MIGHTY SHIP CHURNED THROUGH THE CHANNEL, ANCHORED IN DELIBERATE, METHODICAL FASHION AND FOR TWO HOURS AND 31 MINUTES PUMPED HIGH EXPLOSIVE SHELLS INTO THE BATTERY.

THE FIRST SHOT, FROM A COLD GUN, LANDED 300 YARDS FROM THE TARGET, A RECTANGLE 170 YARDS BY 140. THE RANGE WAS CORRECTED AND THE FIFTH, SIXTH, SEVENTH AND EIGHTH SHOTS MADE DIRECT HITS.

AS OUR 48TH SHELL WHISTLED TOWARD THE TARGET, LT.CMDR. FRANCIS W. R.LARKEN, GUNNERY OFFICER, TURNED AND REMARKED "THERE'S NOT MUCH COPY IN THIS."

WITH THE COST OF EACH SHELL ESTIMATED AT $1,000, ROUGHLY $75,000 WORTH OF PROJECTILES WERE FIRED AT THE ENEMY IN 151 MINUTES.

SJ511PEW

WITH ALLIED AIRFORCES ATTACKING SOUTHERN FRANCE, AUG 15-(AP)-THIS INVASION MARKS THE FIRST MAJOR TEST OF AMERICAN PLANES AND CREWS IN THIS THEATER ON NIGHT INTRUDER WORK.

COL.MALCOLM R.GREEN OF SAN FRANCISCO, WHO WAS CHARGED WITH THE JOB OF CONVERTING SOME OF THE A-20 BOSTON LIGHT BOMBERS OF HIS COMMAND INTO INTRUDERS, SAID THE PREVIOUS ALLIED ARRANGEMENT HAD BEEN TO LET THE BRITISH HANDLE NIGHT WORK OF THIS TYPE WHILE THE YANKS TOOK OVER THE DAY SHIFT. NOW, HOWEVER, A-20 INTRUDERS ARE HELPING TO HARASS ENEMY ACTIVITY ON THE BEACHHEAD.

INTRUDER WORK DIFFERS FROM OTHER AERIAL OPERATIONS IN THAT EACH PLANE FLIES ALONE. GREEN SAID THE BIGGEST JOB IN CONVERSION WAS TO RETRAIN CREWS -- ACCUSTOMED TO FORMATION AND TEAM OPERATION -- IN NAVIGATION AND OTHER PHASES OF SOLITARY NIGHT MISSIONS.

BY HERBERT L.MATTHEWS
NEW YORK TIMES CORRESPONDENT REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN PRESS

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, (4P.M.), AUG. 15-(AP)-A FLABBERGASTED AMERICAN ARMY NUMBERING MANY, MANY THOUSANDS, IS WELL INTO SOUTHERN FRANCE THIS AFTERNOON AND GOING FAST.

IT HAS BEEN DONE VIRTUALLY WITHOUT OPPOSITION AND WITH AMAZINGLY SMALL CASUALTIES.

THE JERRIES WERE CAUGHT COMPLETELY BY SURPRISE.

WHAT FEW GERMANS WERE WAITING FOR US HAVE BEEN SCATTERED OR CAPTURED.

MEN, TANKS, ARTILLERY AND MATERIAL OF ALL KINDS HAVE BEEN POURING INTO THREE SEPARATE BEACHES SINCE H-HOUR AT 8 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING, AND BY NOW WE HAVE BUILT UP SUCH STRENGTH THAT IT SEEMS ALMOST CERTAIN WE HAVE COME NOT ONLY TO STAY BUT ALSO TO PUSH ON.

THIS OUGHT TO BE THE DECISIVE BLOW FOR FRANCE, AND EVERYBOD IS ASTOUNDED THAT IT WENT OFF SO EASILY.

IT HAD BEEN A NIGHT OF TERROR FOR ALL FRENCH ALONG THE BEACHES AND RESORT PLACES, AND SOME PAID WITH THEIR LIVES AND DESTRUCTION OF THEIR HOMES.

BUT THE ALLIED AIR FORCES HELD BACK THEIR HEAVIEST TELLTALE RAIDS UNTIL DAYLIGHT THIS MORNING.

THREE HOURS OF HELL PRECEDED THE LANDING. BOMBS, NAVAL GUNFIRE AND ROCKETS FLAMED AND ROARED INTO THE BEACHES FROM DAYLIGHT UNTIL H-HOUR.

BEFORE THE SMOKE LIFTED THE TROOPS WERE SWARMING UP THE BEACHES, HARDLY BELIEVING THEIR LUCK, AS ENGINEERS BLASTED THEIR WAY THROUGH CEMENT WALLS AND TANKS DROVE IN WITH HARDLY A SHOT COMING FROM JERRY.

IT ALL WAS PROOF THAT SECURITY WAS GOOD AND SO WAS THE STRATEGIC PLAN.

NOW COMES THE BUILDUP AND IT IS GOING TO BE TREMENDOUS AND IT IS GOING TO BE QUICK.

AMERICANS CAN BE PROUD THAT THIS WAS THEIR VENTURE FROM ITS INCEPTION TO THIS SUCCESSFUL OUTCOME--PERHAPS OUR GREATEST SINGLE CONTRIBUTION TO THE WAR IN EUROPE.

THE GERMANS DOUBTLESS WILL RALLY AND THROW IN FORCES TO STOP THE PUSH AS SOON AS THEY CAN; BUT MEANWHILE NOTHING COUNTS TODAY BUT THE JUBILATION AT THE ALMOST BLOODLESS SUCCESS OF THE GREAT OPERATION.

UNITS ON OUR FLANK DID NOT HAVE IT QUITE SO EASY, BUT THEY TOO ARE WELL INLAND AND MOVING FAST.

WHAT I WANTED TO KNOW FIRST OF ALL, UPON LANDING, WAS WHY THE GERMANS DID NOT PUT UP A FIGHT. THEY HAD AMPLE COASTAL DEFENSES, GUN EMPLACEMENTS AND WONDERFUL HILL POSITIONS BEHIND THE BEACHES.

SO I WENT STRAIGHT TO THE PRISONERS' CAGE WHERE 125 JERRIES WERE GATHERED. IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG TO FIND OUT WHAT WAS WRONG.

THERE WASN'T ANY FIGHT LEFT IN THEM. ONE MASTER SERGEANT SAID HE KNEW THE ARMY IN NORTHERN FRANCE HAD BEEN BROKEN. FOR THREE MONTHS HE HAD REALIZED THE WAR WAS LOST, HE SAID.

"THERE'S NO REASON TO FIGHT," HE ADDED, "FOR WHOM SHOULD WE FIGHT?"

"YOU MEAN YOU ARE NOT FIGHTING FOR HITLER ANY MORE?" I ASKED.

"THAT'S IT," HE REPLIED. "ANYWAY WE HAVE GOT NOTHING TO FIGHT WITH."

THEIR DEJECTION CONTRASTED REMARKABLY WITH THE HAPPINESS OF THE FRENCH.

ALL OF THE DOZENS OF PERSONS I TALKED TO NEAR THE BEACH AND IN THE FIRST TOWN WE CAPTURED ACTED AS IF SOME DREADFUL NIGHTMARE HAD LIFTED FROM THEM.

IN THAT TOWN A CROWD GATHERED AROUND ME, SEEING THAT I COULD SPEAK FRENCH, AND TOLD ME THEIR WOES--LITTLE FOOD, MANY HUMILIATIONS.

"WHAT DO YOU THINK OF DE GAULLE AROUND HERE?" I ASKED.

"WE ARE ALL FOR DE GAULLE(" A SPOKESMAN ANSWERED.

AUG 161944

"AND GIRAUD?" I ASKED.

"GIRAUD TOO," THEY ANSWERED.

CLEARLY THEY MEANT THEY WERE ANTI-VICHY, ANTI-COLLABORATIONIST.

ONE GROUP NEAR THE BEACH SAID WISTFULLY, "MONSIEUR, WE ARE HAPPY TO SEE AMERICANS, BUT IT GAVE US A LITTLE HEARTACHE NOT TO SEE THE FRENCH COME IN."

CB&JJ407PEW

WITH ALLIED AIR FORCES ATTACKING SOUTHERN FRANCE, AUG. 15-(AP)-FOR WEEKS MEMBERS OF THE U.S. 12TH AND 15TH AIR FORCES HAVE BEEN SLOWLY THROWING A CORDON OF DESTRUCTION AROUND SOUTHERN FRANCE.

THE NOOSE WAS TIGHTENED IN THE FINAL STAGES BY MAJ.GEN.JOE CANNON'S 12TH AIR FORCE UNTIL IT WAS YANKED CLOSE AROUND THE BEACHHEAD THROAT BY THE AIR TASK FORCE TACTICAL AIR COMMAND.

UNDER A DIFFERENT NAME AND COMMAND, THE SAME TACTICAL FIGHTERS AND BOMBERS DID THE SAME JOB AT THE ANZIO BEACHHEAD, BEING CREDITED WITH DELAYING THE NAZI COUNTER-ATTACK 18 DAYS. THEY ALSO KEPT THE GERMANS CUT OFF AND CONSTANTLY HARASSED DURING THE LAST BIG PUSH UP ITALY.

THE BIGGEST PROBLEM IN THE AIR PREPARATION FOR THIS INVASION WAS TO AVOID GIVING AWAY THE LOCATION OF THE ATTACK.

FIRST STEPS, LARGELY STRATEGIC, WERE DESIGNED TO DAMAGE ENEMY MILITARY FACILITIES AND INSTALLATIONS DEEP INLAND. WITH BOMBERS FROM BOTH CANNON'S CREW AND MAJ.GEN.NATHAN F.TWINING'S 15TH AIR FORCE SLASHING COMMUNICATIONS DEEP INSIDE FRANCE, MEDIUM AND FIGHTER BOMBERS FOLLOWED, UNTIL ENEMY MILITARY TRANSPORTATION GRADUALLY WAS CHANNELLED INTO A HANDFUL OF KEY ROUTES THROUGHOUT SOUTHERN FRANCE.

FOR EVERY MISSION THE AIRMEN FLEW TO ISOLATE THE PLANNED BEACHHEAD SECTOR, THEY FLEW AT LEAST TWO OTHERS CUTTING COMMUNICATIONS ELSEWHERE ALONG THE FRENCH COAST.

THROUGHOUT ALL THE PREPARATORY WORK, EVEN THE MOST MINOR RECONNAISSANCE MISSION OVER THE PLANNED BEACHHEAD SECTOR WAS DUPLICATED ELSEWHERE TO AVOID TIPPING THE ALLIED HAND.

BY ERIC SEVAREID

CBS CORRESPONDENT REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN NETWORKS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, AUG. 15-(AP)-WE ARE TALKING FROM A PINE-COVERED HILL SEVERAL MILES INLAND FROM THE FRENCH SOUTH COAST.

YOU HAVE HEARD BY NOW HOW WE LANDED HERE--THOUSANDS OF SOLDIERS IN A PREDOMINANTLY AMERICAN SHOW, ALMOST WITHOUT OPPOSITION. ONLY A FEW LIVES WERE LOST AND FOR THAT WE ARE GRATEFUL.

BUT IT IS NOW VERY QUIET HERE. WHERE THE GERMANS ARE NOW, THE BULK OF THEM, I CANNOT TELL YOU--BUT YOU MAY FIND OUT VERY SUDDENLY. THEY'VE DONE VERY LITTLE HARM TO THIS FAMOUS HOLIDAY COAST. IT IS OBVIOUS THERE'S BEEN LITTLE PLEASURE HERE FOR SOME TIME.

I'VE BEEN TALKING FOR THE LAST HOUR WITH SOME FRENCH PEOPLE. THEY TELL ME THE GERMANS BEGAN MOVING OUT MANY OF THEIR TROOPS AND EVEN BATTERIES SEVERAL DAYS AGO.

A FEW MINUTES AGO, I TALKED WITH AN AMERICAN WOMAN WHO HAD BEEN LIVING HERE SINCE WAR BEGAN, WITH HER TWO CHILDREN. THEY ARE ALL RIGHT, BUT THEY ARE THIN FROM LACK OF FOOD. SHE IS THE FORMER FRANCES HYDE OF PLAINFIELD, N.J.

HER BROTHERS, DORSEY OF WASHINGTON, AND CARL OF MASSACHUSETTS, SHOULD KNOW THAT SHE IS ALIVE AND WELL.

(EDS: THESE SPELLINGS ARE PHONETIC, FROM A VOICE BROADCAST, AND MAY BE IN ERROR. THE BROADCAST GAVE THE BROTHER CARL'S ADDRESS AS RAYBURN, MASS. RAYNHAM, MASS., MAY HAVE BEEN MEANT.)

WHEN THE BOMBARDMENT BEGAN THIS MORNING, SHE RAN WITH HER TWO CHILDREN TO TAKE COVER. THE NOISE SHE SAID WAS DEFEANING. WHEN SHE SAW PEOPLE IN THE VILLAGE, SHE CAME OUT OF HIDING TO FIND TO HER INEXPRESSIBLE JOY THAT THEY WERE AMERICANS.

NEARLY ALL THE AMERICANS IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WERE TAKEN BY THE GERMANS LONG AGO. THIS AMERICAN WOMAN RECEIVED FROM THE GERMANS A HALF-POUND OF BREAD EVERY THREE DAYS FOR HERSELF AND TWO CHILDREN.

APPARENTLY MANY FRENCH FASCISTS AND VICHYITES WERE LIVING HERE AND ARE HERE ALSO. ONE IS THE DIRECTOR OF ONE OF THE WORST PRO-NAZI, ANTI-SEMITIC FRENCH NEWSPAPERS, WHICH WAS A GREAT HELP TO THE GERMANS IN CONFUSING THE FRENCH BEFORE THE WAR BEGAN.

THE VILLAGE AND COUNTRY PEOPLE HAVE WELCOMED US MOST SINCERELY, BUT NOT WITH A TREMENDOUS OUTBURST OF ENTHUSIASM. IN THE FIRST PLACE, THE LANDING SURPRISED THEM. THERE WERE A FEW STRAINED TEARS. AND THEY ARE PEOPLE WHO SUFFERED A LONG, LONG TIME. THEY WELCOME US BUT THEY ARE QUIET ABOUT IT. THEY ARE A LITTLE MORE SHREWS THAN THE ITALIANS, AND THEY ARE NOT COUNTING UPON AN UNENDING FLOW OF MANNA FROM THE AMERICAN ARMIES.

AND WE ARE ONLY THE BEGINNING. BEFORE LONG, THERE WILL BE HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF FIGHTING FRENCHMEN HERE. THIS WILL BE PART OF A HALLOWED GROUND WHEN FRENCHMEN THEMSELVES BEGIN THE LIBERATION OF THEIR OWN LOVELY LAND--LONG IMPRISONED BUT NEVER FORGOTTEN.

--DASH--

IN WASHINGTON, DORSEY HYDE,JR., CHIEF OF THE DOCUMENT SECURITY SERVICE OF THE WAR LABOR BOARD, EXPRESSED GREAT PLEASURE UPON LEARNING THAT HIS SISTER AND HER CHILDREN WERE SAFE.

HYDE, WHO DID NOT HEAR THE SEVAREID BROADCAST, SAID HIS SISTER MARRIED COUNT HORACE GUICHARDI ABOUT 20 YEARS AGO AND HAS LIVED IN FRANCE SINCE. HE SAID HE BELIEVED SHE HAD BECOME A FRENCH CITIZEN, WHICH WOULD EXPLAIN WHY SHE HAD NOT BEEN INTERNED BY THE GERMANS. HE HAD NOT HEARD FROM HIS SISTER FOR THREE YEARS.

HYDE'S BROTHER, FREDERICK C.HYDE, ALSO WAS IN FRANCE WHEN THE EUROPEAN WAR BROKE OUT AND WAS INTERNED WHEN THE UNITED STATES BECAME A BELLIGERENT. DORSEY RECEIVED A LETTER THROUGH THE STATE DEPARTMENT THREE WEEKS AGO RELATING THAT FREDERICK HAD BEEN TRANSFERRED TO A CAMP NEAR PARIS.

ANOTHER BROTHER, CHARLES (CORRECT), IS IN THE INVESTMENT BUSINESS IN BOSTON AND A SISTER, MRS.KATHERINE SCHNEIDER, ALSO LIVES IN BOSTON.

ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT

REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN PRESS

A SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE COMMAND POST IN NORMANDY, AUG 15-(AP)-GEN.DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT LT.GEN.GEORGE S. PATTON, JR., "OLD BLOOD AND GUTS" OF THE TUNISIAN AND SICILIAN CAMPAIGNS, IS LEADING THE AMERICAN THIRD ARMY WHICH HAS DRIVEN ROUGHSHOD OVER THE GERMANS IN LOWER NORMANDY AND BRITTANY.

SINCE AUG.1 THE THIRD ARMY HAD EFFECTED THE CUTOFF OF THE BRETON PENINSULA AND HELPED CLOSE A TRAP ON THE GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY WITH A SPECTACULAR SWEEP NORTHWARD FROM LE MANS.

A FRENCH DIVISION OF ARMOR UNDER BRIG. GEN. JACQUES LECLERC, WHO JOINED THE ALLIES FROM LAKE CHAD IN AFRICA, IS FIGHTING WITH PATTON.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF PATTON'S COMMAND CAME AFTER IT WAS REVEALED THAT LT.GEN.OMAR N.BRADLEY IS THE OVERALL COMMANDER OF THE NEWLY-FORMED 12TH U.S. ARMY GROUP AND LT.GEN.COURTNEY H.HODGES HAS TAKEN BRADLEY'S FORMER PLACE AS COMMANDER OF THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY. THE FIRST AND THIRD ARMIES ARE INCLUDED IN THE 12TH U.S. ARMY GROUP.

EISENHOWER SAID THAT PATTON HAD BEEN ON THE MARCHING WING OF THE AMERICAN SPEARHEAD DRIVING TO ENVELOPE THE GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY IN NORMANDY. THE SUPREME COMMANDER ADDED THAT THAT WAS WHERE PATTON BELONGED.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT CONFIRMED SOMETHING MOST EVERYONE, INCLUDING THE GERMANS, HAD GUESSED. IT CAME AT A PRESS CONFERENCE IN WHICH EISENHOWER SUMMARIZED THE SITUATION IN ONE OF THE WAR'S MOST CRITICAL PERIODS---FOR THE GERMANS. BUT EISENHOWER WARNED AGAINST EXPECTING THAT THE END WOULD COME IN A MATTER OF WEEKS.

"THIS WEEK IS MARKING A VERY DEFINITE CLIMAX IN ONE PHASE OF THE OPERATIONAL PLAN THAT HAS BEEN IN EFFECT SINCE D-DAY," THE GENERAL SAID. "JUST WHAT WILL BE THE RESULT IN THE SUM TOTAL NO ONE CAN SAY. IT IS CERTAIN THAT GERMAN FORCES CONGREGATED ON OUR FRONT ARE TAKING A SOUND BEATING. IN THE CAMPAIGNS LYING AHEAD NUMBERS OF SUCH TACTICAL VICTORIES MUST BE WON BECAUSE, EVEN IF WE REALIZE OUR FONDEST HOPES IN A SITUATION SUCH AS THIS, WE ARE STILL A LONG WAY FROM THE RHINE.

"ALL OF US ARE KEYED UP TO KEEP ON INTENSIFYING OUR EFFORTS TO THE MOMENT OF FINAL VICTORY---NO MATTER HOW LONG IT MAY TAKE."

THE SUPREME COMMANDER APPEARED GUARDEDLY OPTIMISTIC OVER THE TREND OF THE FIGHTING AND AGAIN CITED THE COORDINATION OF THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCES AND THEIR SUPPLY SERVICES.

PAYING PARTICULAR TRIBUTE TO THE RAF AND THE U.S.AAF, EISENHOWER SAID THE ALLIES NOW WERE REALIZING OPPORTUNITIES THAT THEY HAD EXPECTED TO HAVE ALL THROUGH THE CAMPAIGN, BECAUSE THEY HAD EXPECTED GOOD WEATHER.

EISENHOWER SAID, HOWEVER, THAT A MAN WHO ATTEMPTS TO MEASURE THE LENGTH OF WAR REMAINING IN TERMS OF WEEKS IS NOT ATTEMPTING TO USE ANY LOGIC, BUT MERELY HUNCHES AND WISHFUL THINKING.

HITLER HAS NOTHING TO LOSE BY FIGHTING TO THE LAST MAN, HE CONTINUED, AND WITH THE PEOPLE FIGHTING UNDER THE HEEL OF A DESPOT AND NOT IN THE "SPONTANEOUS COOPERATION OF FREE PEOPLE" AS PRESIDENT WILSON SAID, THERE IS NO REASON TO EXPECT THEM TO QUIT UNTIL THE BITTER END.

THERE'S A REAL BATTLE OVER THERE, THE GENERAL SAID, A TERRIFIC BATTLE.

COMMENTING ON THE GERMANS' STUBBORN RESISTANCE IN THE CAEN-FALAISE AREA, EISENHOWER EXPLAINED THAT THE ENEMY HAD TO HOLD (AT THOSE POSITIONS) TO PERMIT ANY FIGHTING IN THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA AND ON SOUTH TO THE LOIRE RIVER.

UNTIL THE GERMANS COULD INSTALL STATIC DEFENSE POSITIONS IN HERE, THEY HAD DEFENDED IT WITH ALL THEIR PANZERS. THAT WAS THE REASON, HE SAID, THAT THE PROGRESS OF BRITISH AND CANADIANS HAD NEVER BEEN AS SPECTACULAR AS THAT OF THE AMERICANS, WHO MADE A MAGNIFICENT BREAK-THROUGH, BUT EVERY FOOT GAINED AT CAEN WAS ALMOST AS IMPORTANT AS MILES ELSEWHERE.

EISENHOWER SAID PATTON HAD BEEN PLACED IN HIS ACCUSTOMED ROLE AS A DASHING MAN ON A MARCHING WING--WHERE HE BELONGS.

THE SUPREME COMMANDER TRIED TO CATCH UP WITH PATTON FOR A VISIT LAST WEEK, BUT COMPLAINED THAT GENERAL BRADLEY WOULD NOT LET HIM DRIVE DOWN THROUGH THE AREA, STILL INFESTED BY SNIPERS, UNLESS A COUPLE OF SCOUT CARS AND A TANK WENT ALONG.

EISENHOWER, WHO DISLIKES SUCH SHOWHAND FUSS, CALLED THE WHOLE THING OFF.

THE SUPREME COMMANDER SAID HE LIKED TO VIEW THE ALLIED ARMIES AS A TEAM, WITH ONE WING ON THE LEFT AND THE OTHER ON THE RIGHT. THEY ARE FIGHTING WITH EQUAL CLEAN, MORAL EFFICIENCY AND DETERMINATION, HE SAID.

EISENHOWER VIEWED THE GERMANS' PRESENT PLIGHT AS A RESULT OF THE MISTAKE OF HOLDING TOO LONG AND UNDERESTIMATING THE STRENGTH IN THE MACHING WING UNDER PATTON.

QUESTIONED ABOUT THE PROBABILITY OF AN ENTRY INTO PARIS AND THE CHANCES THAT THE GERMANS WOULD FORTIFY AND DEFEND THE OLD FRENCH CAPITAL, EISENHOWER REITERATED THAT HE WAS NOT INTERESTED IN THE CAPTURE OF PARIS. HIS AIM IS TO DEFEAT THE GERMAN ARMY WHEREVER HE FINDS IT.

BY DON WHITEHEAD

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, AUG. 15-(7:01 P.M.)-(AP)-FIELD MARSHAL GEN. GUENTHER VON KLUGE'S SEVENTH ARMY IS BEING DESTROYED TODAY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST VICTORIES OF THE WAR IN NORTHERN FRANCE.

ALLIED ARTILLERY HAS DROPPED A CURTAIN OF STEEL ACROSS THE ENEMY'S NARROW CORRIDOR BETWEEN FALAISE AND ARGENTAN AND HAS SLAMMED SHUT ALL THE ROUTES OF ESCAPE FOR THE MASS OF ENEMY TROOPS AND EQUIPMENT TRAPPED IN THE DEATH POCKET. BIG GUNS ARE BLASTING ANYTHING THAT MOVES DOWN THE FEW ROADS LEFT TO THE GERMANS STRUGGLING TO GET THROUGH THE GAP.

"VON KLUGE'S FORCES HAVE CEASED TO EXIST AS AN ARMY," ONE AMERICAN OFFICER DECLARED AS TROOPS OF HIS DIVISION DROVE FORWARD IN THE AREA OF LA FERTE-MACE. FROM THE WEST, SOUTH AND EAST THE AMERICANS CLOSED IN FOR THE KILL WHILE THE BRITISH AND CANADIANS MAINTAINED PRESSURE FROM THE NORTH.

A LION'S SHARE OF THE CREDIT GOES TO LT. GEN. OMAR N. BRADLEY, AMERICAN COMMANDER IN FRANCE, WHO ENGINEERED THE SPECTACULAR MANEUVERS WHICH CLOSED AROUND THE GERMAN ARMY BEFORE IT COULD WITHDRAW FROM THE TRAP. THIS IS ONE OF THE GREATEST MILITARY DEFEATS SUFFERED BY THE GERMANS IN THIS WAR AND THERE ARE SOME MILITARY MEN WHO ARE COMPARING IT TO THE RUSSIAN VICTORY AT STALINGRAD WHICH WIPED OUT HITLER'S SIXTH ARMY.

HOW MANY THOUSANDS OF GERMAN TROOPS AND HOW MUCH EQUIPMENT HAS BEEN BAGGED IN THE POCKET NOBODY KNOWS, BUT THE TOTAL IS GREAT. IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR MUCH TO SQUEEZE THROUGH THE GAP WHICH IS NOT YET OCCUPIED PHYSICALLY BY OUR TROOPS.

AND OUR TROOPS ARE CAPTURING HUGE STORES OF AMMUNITION AND EQUIPMENT AS THEY PRESS FORWARD. HUNDREDS OF PRISONERS ARE STREAMING BACK TO THE CAGES. THOUSANDS MORE ARE CERTAIN TO BE TAKEN WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS.

THERE ARE ESTIMATES THAT FROM 15,000 TO 60,000 ENEMY TROOPS HAVE BEEN TRAPPED, BUT REGARDLESS OF THE FINAL COUNT, VON KLUGE'S ARMY HAS DISAPPEARED AS A FORCE TO BE RECKONED WITH ON IN FUTURE MOVES BY BRADLEY'S FIRST AND THIRD ARMIES.

"THE SEVENTH ARMY HAS LOST THE BULK OF ITS EQUIPMENT AND MATERIAL," SAID LT. COL. ROBERT F. EVANS OF DAVENPORT, IOWA, "AND ITS ORGANIZATION IS GONE. THOSE WHO GOT OUT OF THE GAP CAN BE REORGANIZED TO FIGHT AGAIN, BUT THERE ARE NOT ENOUGH OF THEM TO FORM AN ARMY."

THERE STILL IS BITTER RESISTANCE IN MANY PLACES INSIDE THE POCKET WHICH IS BEING RIPPED AND BLASTED BY BIG GUNS AND BY THE ALLIED AIR FORCES, BUT THE GERMANS ARE THROWING EVERYTHING THEY HAVE INTO THE LINE IN A DESPERATE LAST STAND FIGHT.

THE BEST EXAMPLE OF THE GERMANS' COMPLETE DISORGANIZATION WAS IN THE FACT THAT ONE AMERICAN DIVISION YESTERDAY TOOK PRISONERS FROM 18 DIFFERENT GERMAN DIVISIONS. ODDS AND ENDS OF EVERY AVAILABLE DIVISION WERE TOSSED TO THE SACRIFICE BY VON KLUGE IN HIS DESPERATION.

WITH THE CANADIAN FIRST ARMY IN FRANCE, AUG. 15-(AP)-CANADIAN TROOPS ADVANCED TO WITHIN A MILE OF FALAISE TODAY ON THE NORTHERN EDGE OF THE GERMANS' LAST ESCAPE GAP FROM THEIR NORMANDY POCKET.

(THIS ADVANCE CLOSED THE GAP TO NINE MILES. AMERICANS ARE BATTLING ONLY EIGHT MILES SOUTH OF FALAISE.)

FIGHTING IN THE CANADIAN SALIENT CHANGED FROM A SLUGGING MATCH TO HIGHLY FLUID CHARACTER.

ENEMY ARMOR, SPOTTED MASSING IN THE FALAISE AREA FOR A COUNTER-ATTACK, WAS ASSAULTED THROUGHOUT THE DAY BY TYPHOONS.

THE CANADIAN PUSH WHICH OPENED AT NOON YESTERDAY HAS "REACHED ITS OBJECTIVES AND GONE BEYOND," A SENIOR CANADIAN OFFICER SAID. "WE EXPECT THE GERMANS TO FIGHT STUBBORN REARGUARD ACTIONS INTO FALAISE ITSELF, BUT THE CRUST SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN BROKEN."

THE CANADIANS HAD PUSHED FORWARD ABOUT FOUR MILES SINCE YESTERDAY.

FALAISE HAD ALL BUT LOST ITS VALUE TO THE GERMANS SINCE CANADIANS DOMINATED HIGH GROUND NORTH OF THE CITY AND THE ROAD ESCAPE ROUTES EASTWARD TO LISIEUX AND PARIS.

SWEEPING UP AT LEAST 1,000 PRISONERS IN AN OFFENSIVE LAUNCHED AT NOON YESTERDAY, THE CANADIANS DROVE FAR SOUTH OF EPANEY, WHERE A BATTLE NOW IS RAGING.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN NORMANDY, AUG. 15-3:45 P.M.-(AP)-THE ROOF OF THE GERMAN ESCAPE CORRIDOR WEST OF FALAISE APPEARED TO BE COLLAPSING TODAY UNDER BRITISH HAMMER BLOWS AS AN AVALANCHE OF TANKS AND TROOPS BEAT WITHIN A MILE OF CONDE-SUR-NOIREAU AND THREATENED OTHER POINTS ALONG THE MAIN ESTABOUND AXIS.

THE GERMAN BASTION OF CONDE WAS THROWN INTO IMMEDIATE JEOPARDY AS BRITISH INFANTRY CAPTURED ST. DENIS DE MERE.

OTHER SWIFT STRIKING COLUMNS OF LT. GEN. MILES C. DEMPSEY'S BRITISH SECOND ARMY ADVANCED EASTWARD ALONG THE VIRE-VASSY ROAD TO WITHIN THREE MILES OF VASSY.

"THE PACE OF THE GERMAN WITHDRAWAL IS RISING HOUR BY HOUR," A BRITISH OFFICER AT FORWARD HEADQUARTERS SAID LATE TODAY. "VON KLUGE IS PULLING OUT HIS ARMOR FIRST AS NO.1 PRIORITY AND ALSO IS SEEKING TO EXTRICATE HIS BEST INFANOJV. BUT HE MUST LEAVE BE

IS PULLING OUT HIS ARMOR FIRST AS NO.1 PRIORITY AND ALSO IS SEEKING TO EXTRICATE HIS BEST INFANTRY. BUT HE MUST LEAVE BEHIND STRONG REARGUARDS TO PREVENT A COMPLETE COLLAPSE.

"IN SOME PLACES THE GERMANS ARE RETREATING SO FAST OUR TROOPS ARE HAVING DIFFICULTY MAINTAINING CONTACT BUT THERE STILL IS NO SIGN OF ENEMY PANIC."

THE HEADQUARTERS OFFICER SAID VON KLUGE HAD ISSUED ANOTHER ONE OF HIS MYRIAD "FIGHT TO THE LAST BULLET AND LAST BREATH" COMMANDS.

FOURTH LEAD INVASION (180)

BY EDWARD KENNEDY

ROME, AUG 15-(AP)-MANY THOUSANDS OF MEN FROM THE ARMY OF FRANCE AND THE BATTLE-HARDENED AMERICAN AND BRITISH DIVISIONS OF ITALY POURED OUT UPON THE BEACHES OF SOUTHERN FRANCE TODAY AND STRUCK SEVERAL MILES INLAND IN AN ALMOST BLOODLESS INVASION.

AUG 16 1944

MEETING SCANT OPPOSITION, EITHER ON THE GROUND OR IN THE AIR FROM THE ENEMY'S THINNED AND BOMB-RIDDLED DEFENSES, THE ALLIES ESTABLISHED A FOURTH MAJOR WAR FRONT AGAINST HITLER BY SECURING FIRM BEACHHEADS ALONG A BROAD SECTION OF THE RIVIERA BETWEEN MARSEILLE AND THE ITALIAN FRONTIER.

(DNB IN A BERLIN BROADCAST, SAID ALLIED TROOPS HAD LANDED AT THREE

PLACES, IN THE GULF OF ST.TROPEZ, AT ST.RAPHAEL AND AT CAP D'ANLVXES, ALL IN A 32-MILE STRETCH OF COAST ON BOTH SIDES OF CANNES AND ABOUT MIDWAY BETWEEN TOULON AND NICE. "THE NUMBER AND STRENGTH OF EMPLOYED FORCES CANNOT BE COMPARED WITH THE LANDING IN NORMANDY," SAID ONE. "NO FURTHER LANDING OR SUPPLY VESSELS ARE OFF THE SOUTH FRENCH COAST AT PRESENT."

THE LANDING FORCES WERE AMAZED, CORRESPONDENTS ON THE BEACHHEAD SAID, BY THE SOFTNESS OF THE ENEMY.

NAVAL UNITS PARTICIPATING INCLUDED AMERICAN, BRITISH, FRENCH, CANADIAN, NETHERLANDS, POLISH, GREEK AND BELGIAN SHIPS.

(ALTHOUGH THERE WAS NO MENTION OF SPECIFIC UNITS INVOLVED IN THE INVASION, DONALD COE, BLUE NETWORK CORRESPONDENT, MESSAGED THAT HE COULD DISCLOSE THAT "THE MAJOR PART OF THE LANDING FORCES WAS COMPOSED OF AMERICAN TROOPS.")

AUG 161944

THE LANDINGS WERE MADE AT SEVERAL POINTS ALONG A BROAD SECTION OF THE COAST AT PLACES WIDELY SEPARATED FROM EACH OTHER.

THE COAST LINE FROM MARSEILLE TO NICE HAD BRISTLED WITH BIG GUNS INSTALLED BY THE GERMANS TO BEAT OFF JUST SUCH AN ATTACK AS CAME THIS MORNING, BUT THESE HAD BEEN TERRIFICALLY ATTACKED BY ALLIED AIR FORCES IN AN INTENSIVE FOUR-DAY OFFENSIVE IN WHICH THOUSANDS OF TONS OF BOMBS WERE DROPPED.

AN HOUR BEFORE THE FIRST TROOPS WERE LANDED THE BEACHES WERE LEFT A SPECTACLE OF DEVASTATION BY A FINAL LOAD OF AIR BOMBS.

THIS NEW INVASION OF EUROPE OPENED UP THE FOURTH MAJOR FRONT AGAINST HITLER, ONE THAT MAY WELL PROVE THE DEATH BLOW TO THE GERMANS.

THE SWARMS OF LANDING CRAFT DID NOT BEGIN DISGORGING THEIR FIGHTERS AND ARMOR UNTIL AFTER DAYLIGHT, BUT PARACHUTE, GLIDER-BORNE TROOPS WERE STREAMING INTO SOUTHERN FRANCE BEFORE DAWN.

THE PARACHUTISTS DESCENDED ON SEVERAL GERMAN STRONG POINTS INLAND.

"THE ASSAULT, WHICH WAS IN STRONG FORCE, WAS LED BY SPECIALLY TRAINED ALLIED TROOPS, MANY OF THEM VETERANS OF PREVIOUS INVASIONS AND CAMPAIGNS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER," ALLIED HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED.

A BRIEF SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE ANNOUNCING THE INVASION DID NOT LOCATE THE LANDINGS, BUT RETURNING CORRESPONDENTS SAID THE ALLIED TROOPS STRUCK AT MANY POINTS OVER A BROAD STRETCH OF THE MEDITERRANEAN COAST.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE INVASION WAS ACCOMPANIED BY AN APPEAL FROM GEN. SIR HENRY MAITLAND WILSON, ALLIED MEDITERRANEAN COMMANDER, TO THE FRENC PEOPLE TO "PLAY THEIR PART" IN THE NEW BATTLE OF FRANCE.

WILSON DECLARED THE OBJECTIVE OF THE TROOPS NOW ASHORE IN THE SOUTH WAS "TO DRIVE OUT THE GERMANS AND JOIN UP WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES ADVANCING FROM NORMANDY."

"THE ARMY OF FRANCE IS IN BEING AGAIN, FIGHTING ON ITS OWN SOIL FOR THE LIBERATION OF ITS COUNTRY WITH ALL ITS TRADITIONS OF VICTORY BEHIND IT," HIS BROADCAST PROCLAMATION SAID. "REMEMBER 1918."

TEXT OF THE SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE ISSUED BY GEN.SIR HENRY MATHLAND WILSON, SUPREME ALLIED COMMANDER IN THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER, AS RSPORTED BY THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION:

"TODAY AMERICAN, BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS STRONGLY SUPPORTED BY ALLIED AIR FORCES ARE BEING LANDED BY AMERICAN, BRITISH AND FRENCH FLEETS ON THE SOUTHERN COAST OF FRANCE."

FOUR DAYS OF CONTINUOUS ALLIED AIR ATTACKS ON TARGETS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE PRECEDED THE LANDINGS.

IMMEDIATELY BEFORE THE LANDINGS ALLIED BOMBERS IN GREAT FORCE HAD LOOSED AN OVERWHELMING WEIGHT OF EXPLOSIVES ON GERMAN COASTAL GUNS SET UP TO REPEL JUST SUCH AN ATTACK AS MADE BY THE ALLIED ASSAULT TROOPS.

THE GREATEST WEIGHT FELL BETWEEN MARSEILLE NORTHEASTWARD TO THE ITALIAN FRONTIER.

THE ALLIES HAVE BEEN MASSING MEN AND MATERIALS FOR MONTHS ON CORSICA, ABOUT 130 MILES SOUTHEAST OF THE COAST OF FRANCE AT NICE ACROSS THE LIGURIAN SEA, AND ONLY YESTERDAY THE BERLIN RADIO REPORTED LARGE ALLIED CONVOYS HAD BEEN OBSERVED PASSING GIBRALTAR INTO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

A BROADCAST BY THE NAZI-CONTROLLED VICHY RADIO YESTERDAY SAID THE GERMAN ARMY COMMANDER AT MARSEILLE, FRANCE'S SECOND LARGEST CITY, HAD ORDERED EVACUATION FROM THAT SEAPORT OF ALL PERSONS WHOSE PRESENCE "IS NOT OF DIRECT OR INDIRECT INTEREST" TO THE GERMAN ARMY.

THE LANDING OPERATIONS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE OPENED UP THE FOURTH MAJOR FRONT AGAINST HITLER EVEN AS AMERICAN, BRITISH, CANADIAN AND OTHER ALLIED TROOPS IN NORMANDY-BRITTANY WERE CLOSING IN ON BETEEEN 100,000 AND 200,000 GERMANS FOR WHAT GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER SAID PROMISED TO BE A MAJOR VICTORY FOR ALLIED ARMS.

THE ALLIES DROVE INTO THE AREA THAT PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL ONCE CALLED "THE SOFT UNDERBELLY" OF EUROPE JUST 69 DAYS AFTER GENERAL EISENHOWER'S FORCES INVADED WESTERN EUROPE.

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL HIMSELF WAS CLOSE AT HAND AS THIS NEW BLOW WAS LANDED UPON THE ENEMY. HE ARRIVED IN ITALY LAST FRIDAY. AN OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT YESTERDAY SAID HE WAS CONFERRING WITH MARSHAL TITO, LEADER OF THE YUGOSLAV PARTISANS.

IT WAS UNCLEAR WHAT COURSE INTO FRANCE THE ALLIES WOULD FOLLOW ONCE THEY ARE FIRMLY ESTABLISHED ASHORE.

IN ANY EVENT, THE LANDING FORCES CAN EXPECT ASSISTANCE FROM THE FRENCH MAQUIS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, WHERE THE PATRIOTS HAD TIME TO ORGANIZE BETWEEN THE SURRENDER OF FRANCE IN 1940 AND THE GERMAN MOVE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN COAST IN NOVEMBER, 1942.

THE COAST, STRETCHING FROM SPAIN TO ITALY, AND 700 AIRLINE MILES FROM BERLIN--FARTHER THAN FROM THE NORMAN-BRETON SECTOR--IS PART OF WHAT PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL ONCE CALLED THE "UNDERBELLY" OF EUROPE.

THE NAZIS PRESUMABLY HAVE FORTIFIED THE COAST IN THE MEANTIME, BUT WHETHER THEY HAVE BEEN FORCED TO REDUCE THEIR GARRISONS TO MEET THE ALLIED THREAT FROM NORMANDY AND BRITTANY IS SPECULATIVE.

(A DISPATCH FROM BARCELONA, SPAIN, ON AUG. 9 SAID THE GERMANS HAD WITHDRAWN TROOPS FROM THE SECTION OF SOUTHERN FRANCE BORDERING ON SPAIN BUT THAT FEW TROOPS HAD BEEN MOVED FROM THE ACTUAL COAST.)

THE FRENCH MEDITERRANEAN COAST IS SHAPED LIKE A SICKLE, WITH THE HANDLE TO THE RIGHT AND THE GULF DU LION FORMING THE INDENTATION AT THE LEFT.

MARSEILLE, LOCATED ON THE GULF, 20 MILES EAST OF THE RHONE RIVER'S MOUTH AND ABOUT THE SAME DISTANCE WEST OF TOULON, IS FRANCE'S SECOND LARGEST CITY, WITH A POPULATION OF 914,000, AND IS ONE OF THE NATION'S LARGEST PORTS.

AUG 16 1944

THE NAVAL BASE OF TOULON WAS THE LAST BIT OF FRANCE TO BE TAKEN BY THE GERMANS. WHEN HITLER TRIED TO GRAB THE FRENCH FLEET ON NOV. 27, 1942, THERE WERE 75 FRENCH SHIPS IN THE GREAT HARBOR, BUT FRENCH NAVAL MEN SCUTTLED 44 TO 51 WARSHIPS AND DAMAGED OTHERS BEFORE THE GERMANS COULD LAY HANDS ON THEM. A FEW SHIPS ESCAPED TO THE ALLIES.

OTHER PRINCIPAL CITIES ON THE FRENCH MEDITERRANEAN COAST ARE NICE, AVIGNON, NIMES, MONTPELLIER, CETTE, BEZIERS, NARBONNE AND PERPIGNAN.

NICE, A CITY OF 241,000 AND A CENTER OF RIVIERA ACTIVITY IN PRE-WAR DAYS, BECAME FRENCH IN 1859 AS A REWARD TO THE NATION FOR AIDING THE ITALIANS IN EXPELLING THE AUSTRIANS FROM LOMBARDY.

AUG 16 1944

IN 1939, HOWEVER, ITALIAN FASCISTS LISTED NICE AS A "STOLEN TERRITORY" AND AGITATED FOR ITS RETURN. IT WAS ONE OF THE OBJECTIVES OF THE ITALIANS WHEN THEY WENT TO WAR.

MONTPELLIER, HAVING A POPULATION OF 90,000, IS ABOUT 80 MILES WEST OF MARSEILLE AND WAS A SOUTHERN FRANCE MILITARY HEADQUARTERS.

ROME, AUG. 15-(AP)-THE INVASION OF SOUTHERN FRANCE WAS A CAREFULLY PLANNED FOUR-WAY OPERATION WITH FRENCH PARTISANS SUPPLEMENTING THE AIR-LAND-SEA TEAMWORK THAT HAS BEEN A PART OF ALL PREVIOUS ALLIED LANDINGS.

FRENCH TROOPS COUNTED ON THEIR OWN COUNTRYMEN FOR A MAJOR MINE-SWEEPING OPERATION IN ADDITION TO THE USUAL GUERRILLA ATTACKS IN THE REAR OF GERMAN FORCES.

MORE THAN TWO MONTHS AHEAD OF TODAY'S D-DAY, FREE FRENCH AGENTS REPORTED THROUGH ALGIERS THAT THEY HAD COMPREHENSIVE INFORMATION ON GERMAN SEA AND LAND MINE FIELDS IN THE PROPOSED LANDING AREA.

BOTH AMERICAN AND FRENCH TROOPS LANDING TODAY WERE BATTLE-HARDENED IN ITALY. THE ENTIRE FRENCH CORPS, WHICH PERFORMED BRILLIANTLY IN THE SWEEP UP THE ITALIAN BOOT, WAS WITHDRAWN FROM THE FRENCH ARMY FRONT WEEKS AGO IN PREPARATION FOR THE NEW INVASION.

JUST BEFORE THEY LEFT THE FIFTH ARMY LINE, WHERE THEY WERE THE LINK BETWEEN THE AMERICAN AND BRITISH FORCES, THE FRENCH MOVED SO FAR FORWARD THAT THEY WERE OBLIGED TO STOP BECAUSE THEY HAD CREATED AN EXPOSED RIGHT FLANK ALMOST AS LONG AS THE FRONT TO WHICH THEY WERE ASSIGNED.

FRANCO-AMERICAN FORCES WERE PREPARED FOR EXTREMELY SWIFT MOVEMENT NORTHWARD IF THE GERMANS FAILED TO OFFER ALL-OUT RESISTANCE.

ZAKHAROV'S OFFENSIVE FROM THE SOUTHEAST WAS ASTRIDE ONE OF THE FEW HIGHWAYS SUITABLE FOR EXTENSIVE MILITARY OPERATIONS THAT RUN THROUGH THE HISTORIC SWAMP-MARSH AREA OF THE MASURIAN LAKES WHERE 30 YEARS AGO THE GREAT BATTLE OF TANNENBERG WAS FOUGHT.

WITH THE FALL OF OSOWIEC, A MOATED STRONGHOLD WITH 30-FOOT-HIGH WALLS, ZAKHAROV'S TROOPS MASSED IN FORCE ALONG A 45-MILE REACH OF THE AUGUSTOW CANAL AND THE ADJOINING BIEBRZA AFTER DRIVING 350 MILES

FROM WHITE RUSSIA IN SEVEN WEEKS.

A MIDNIGHT RUSSIAN COMMUNIQUE DESCRIBING THE CAPTURE OF OSOWIEC SAID THE RED ARMY TROOPS LITERALLY DUG AND BLEW THE GERMANS OUT OF THAT FORTRESS. ASSAULT TROOPS CROSSED THE MOAT BEFORE OSOWIEC AND REDUCED DOZENS OF BLOCKHOUSES BEFORE OVERWHELMING THE GARRISON OF THE CITADEL'S INNER DEFENSES IN HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING.

MOSCOW, AUG 15-(AP)-THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND IN FRENZIED DESPERATION THREW IRREPLACABLE RESERVES OF TANKS AND INFANTRY INTO VAIN COUNTER-ATTACKS TODAY AGAINST RED ARMY SPEARHEADS IN WARSAW'S INDUSTRIAL DISTRICT OF PRAGA, AND AT RUSSIAN ARMIES NEAR THE EAST PRUSSIAN FRONT IN LITHUANIA AND WEST OF THE VISTULA IN SOUTHERN POLAND.

RED ARTILLERY AND DIVE-BOMBERS DESTROYED 114 ENEMY TANKS IN THE HARD DAY'S FIGHTING WHICH SAW THE ENEMY WITH THE FEROCITY OF A CORNERED WILD ANIMAL STRIKE BACK AT THE MOST DANGEROUS BULGES IN THE EASTERN FRONT.

GEN.IVAN MASLENNIKOV'S SWEEP ACROSS ESTONIA FREED ANOTHER 80 SETTLEMENTS BUT ELSEWHERE FROM THE BALTIC TO THE WESTERN REACHES OF THE CARPATHIANS THE RED ARMY STOOD ITS GROUND BREAKING WAVE AFTER WAVE OF GERMAN COUNTERATTACKS WITH ARMOR AND INFANTRY.

FOR THE FIRST TIME MARSHAL KONSTANTIN K.ROKOSSOVSKY REVEALED HE HAD ACTUALLY REACHED THE PRAGA DISTRICT ACROSS THE VISTULA FROM THE MAIN SECTION OF WARSAW ALTHOUGH HE HAS BEEN WITHIN GUNSHOT OF THE POLISH CAPITAL SINCE LAST JULY.

WHEN THE GERMANS MANAGED TO STABILIZE WARSAW'S DEFENSE TEMPORARILY ROKOSSOVSKY METHODICALLY SWUNG EAST AND NORTH ANNIHILATING THE WEDGE WHICH THE ENEMY HAD ATTEMPTED TO DRIVE INTO HIS RIGHT FLANK AND COLLABORATING WITH GEN.G.F.ZAKHAROV IN THREATENING EAST PRUSSIA FROM THE SOUTH.

ASTRIDE TWO MAIN RAILWAYS FROM BIALYSTOK TO SEIDLCE INTO WARSAW THE RUSSO-POLISH DIVISIONS TURNED THE OUTLYING FACTORIES AND APARTMENT BUILDINGS INTO GUN-CRAMMED FORTRESSES WHICH BROKE THE HEART OF THE GERMAN COUNTERATTACKS.

NORTH AND SOUTH OF THE POLISH CAPITAL ROKOSSOVSKY STRETCHED HIS ARMORED TENACLES WHICH CURLED PERILOUSLY TOWARD THE GERMAN REAR.

THE GERMANS CHOSE TO SQUANDER THEIR PRECIOUS STRATEGIC STORE OF MEN AND MACHINES IN FUTILE AGGRESSIVENESS NOT ONLY AT WARSAW BUT NEAR THE LITHUANIAN COMMUNICATIONS JUNCTION OF RASEINIAI, 35 ODD MILES FROM EAST PRUSSIA AND AGAINST THE BRISTLING SOVIET SALIENT WEST OF SANDOMIERZ AND THE BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE VISTULA.

IN EACH SECTOR GERMAN ARMOR WAS SMASHED BACK BY RED GUNNERS. NAZI RIFLEMEN WERE STOPPED AND SCATTERED BY THE POWERFUL SCREEN OF AUTOMATIC WEAPONS AND MORTARS.

WEST AND NORTHWEST OF SANDOMIERZ THE RED ARMY REACHED OUT AND OCCUPIED SEVERAL STRONGPOINTS.

AUG 161944

IN THE GALICIAN HIGHLANDS WEST OF SANOK RED MOUNTAIN TROOPS HELD FIRMLY AGAINST ENEMY PANZER THRUSTS.

THERE WAS NO FRESH NEWS OF GEN.ZAKHAROV'S GREAT ATTACK ON EAST PRUSSIA FROM POINTS LESS THAN 12 MILES SOUTH OF THE FRONTIER BUT HE WAS KNOWN TO BE POURING REINFORCEMENTS ACROSS THE BIEBRZA AND NEARING BOMB-BATTERED GRAJEWO, TWO MILES FROM THE BORDER.

AN ALEUTIAN ISLAND BASE, AUG 15-(AP)-A YEAR AGO TODAY UNITED STATES AND CANADIAN TROOPS OCCUPIED THE ALEUTIAN ISLAND OF KISKA, AND THE ANNIVERSARY FINDS AMERICAN FORCES CARRYING A MANY-PRONGED DRIVE TOWARD TOKYO WITH REPEATED TRIP-HAMMER BLOWS AT JAPAN'S INNER DEFENSES AND HOME ISLANDS.

AUG 16 1944

IN EVACUATING KISKA, THE TOKYO WAR LORDS, THEIR DREAM OF DICTATING PEACE IN THE WHITE HOUSE BLASTED, ACKNOWLEDGED TO THE WORLD THAT THEY WERE UNABLE TO HOLD WHAT THEY HAD SEIZED.

SINCE THEN THEIR FORCES HAVE BEEN BEATEN OR BY-PASSED IN THE SOLOMONS, NEW GUINEA, GILBERTS, MARSHALLS, CAROLINES AND MARIANAS.

THEIR HOMELAND HAS BEEN BOMBED REPEATEDLY--ALONG THE KURILE CHAIN BY ALEUTIAN-BASED ARMY AND NAVY PLANES, AND IN DESTRUCTIVE BLOWS AT THE INDUSTRIAL HEART OF THEIR EMPIRE FURTHER SOUTH BY B-29 SUPERFORTRESSES.

THE JAPANESE FLIGHT FROM KISKA FOLLOWED THEIR FINISH BATTLE AT ATTU THREE MONTHS EARLIER. THEY HAD HELD THE TWO ISLANDS SLIGHTLY MORE THAN A YEAR.

NOT A SINGLE ENEMY WAS FOUND BY THE UNITED STATES-CANADIAN AMPHIBIOUS FORCE WHICH SWARMED ASHORE AND OVER THE SANDY BEACHES AND TUNDRA HILLS OF KISKA. BUT THEY FOUND ABANDONED SUPPLIES AND FACILITIES OF ALL SORTS. THE JAPANESE HAD BARELY GOTTEN AWAY, PROBABLY BY SUBMARINE OR FOG-HIDDEN SURFACE CRAFT, WITH THE SHIRTS ON THEIR BACKS.

IT WAS BELIEVED THAT THE JAPANESE MAY HAVE HAD AS MANY AS 10,000 SOLDIERS AND SAILORS ON KISKA AT ONE TIME.

WRECKS OF FOUR MERCHANT SHIPS AND THREE "TOJO CIGAR" TYPE MIDGET SUBMARINTS WERE VISIBLE IN KISKA HARBOR. NUMEROUS OTHER CRAFT, INCLUDING WARSHIPS, WERE LATER LOCATED BY SALVAGE OPERATION DIVERS BENEATH THE SURFACE.

THE WAR IN THE NORTH PACIFIC ENTERED A NEW OFFENSIVE PHASE AGAINST THE JAPANESE KURILES, EXTENDING FOR 600 MILES FROM SHIMUSHU AND PARAMUSHIRO SOUTHWEST TO HOKKAIDO. PARAMUSHIRO IS 800 MILES FROM ATTU. NAVY BOMBERS AND WARSHIPS AND ARMY BOMBERS HAVE POUNDED THE KURILES.

DEFENCE HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED HIS PROMOTION FROM BRIGADIER TO ACTING MAJOR-GENERAL AND HE SUCCEEDS MAJ.-GEN. GEORGE KITCHING, 33, A DIVISIONAL COMMANDER OF MONTREAL, AS THE MOST YOUTHFUL OF CANADA'S HIGH RANKING OFFICERS.

NO INDICATION AS TO WHETHER HE IS TAKING A DIVISION WAS GIVEN IN THE OFFICIAL RELEASE. SUCH MATTERS NOW ARE SUBJECT TO TIGHT CENSORSHIP. HOWEVER, IT HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED RECENTLY THAT MAJ.-GEN. R.F.L. KELLER, KELOWNA, B.C., COMMANDER OF THE 3RD DIVISION, ATTACHED TO THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY IN NORMANDY, HAD BEEN WOUNDED AND IT MIGHT BE THAT GEN. SPRY IS SUCCEEDING GEN. KELLER.

GEN. SPRY WAS LAST IN THE NEWS IN THE ITALIAN CAMPAIGN IN JULY. HE WON THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER FOR BRILLIANT HANDLING OF A BRIGADE IN FIGHTING IN THE PONTECORVO AREA.

IN 1932 HE WAS COMMISSIONED IN THE PRINCESS LOUISE FUSILIERS, HALIFAX, WHERE HE ATTENDED DALHOUSIE UNIVERSITY. TWO YEARS LATER HE WAS APPOINTED TO THE ROYAL CANADIAN REGIMENT. HE WENT OVERSEAS WITH HIS REGIMENT IN 1939. HE BECAME A GENERAL STAFF OFFICER AT A DIVISIONAL HEADQUARTERS IN 1941. IN SEPTEMBER, 1942, HE WAS APPOINTED PERSONAL ASSISTANT TO LT.-GEN. A.G.L. MCNAUGHTON, FORMER COMMANDER OF THE CANADIAN ARMY OVERSEAS.

GEN. SPRY WAS WITH GEN. MCNAUGHTON IN ALGIERS JULY 10, 1943, WHEN THE 1ST DIVISION WENT ASHORE IN SICILY AND HE ACCOMPANIED GEN. MCNAUGHTON ON AN INSPECTION OF CANADIANS IN SICILY.

WHEN LT. COL. C.R. CROWE, ROYAL CANADIAN REGIMENT, WAS KILLED, LT.-COL. SPRY TOOK OVER HIS OLD REGIMENT AND COMMANDED IT IN SOME OF THE MOST HARD FOUGHT ACTIONS OF THE SICILIAN CAMPAIGN. HE CONTINUED IN THIS CAPACITY ON THE MARCH INTO ITALY UNTIL LAST DECEMBER WHEN HE WAS PROMOTED BRIGADIER.

Faced By New Trap Outside

Seventh German Army Consists Now of Only Eleven Slim Divisions.

ALL BADLY CUT UP BY ALLIES

Escape Corridor Further Narrowed — Raked By Shell—Foe's Casualties Placed at 250,000.

By James M. Long

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Thursday, Aug 17 (AP)—Canadian troops stormed into Falaise from two sides Wednesday night, battling desperate German resistance in the center of the town as enemy rear guards attempted to hold open the ever-narrowing corridor for the full flight of remnants of the German Seventh Army.

An official announcement said 11 under-strength divisions were in the Normandy trap, and the Germans themselves reported that those managing to struggle out through the eight-mile wide corridor probably were heading for another snare shaping up between Paris and the mouth of the Seine river.

Canadians Storm Into Center

The Canadians, storming into the center of the town where William the Conqueror was born, were suported by tanks of an armored regiment as they slugged their way across the tiny Ante River running through the northwestern part of Falaise. But they met stiff resistance from Germans entrenched in the town's main buildings.

On the other claw of the huge trap, American forces from the south have captured Putanges, front dispatches said. The town is ten miles west of Argentan and its capture seals off the only road through the bottlneck wide enough for two trucks to pass.

Allied planes showered explosives on the trapped Germans and at the same time dropped 2,000,000 "surrender" leaflets, showing pictures of German defeats at Cherbourg and in Russia. It appeared that except for the struggle at Falaise and Argentan, upper and lower jaws of the pincers, resistance was crumbling fast.

A "Land Dunkerque"

One Allied officer likened it to a "land Dunkergue," as American and British forces, breaking inside the pocket, found a chaos of flight. The pocket now is shrunk to eight miles wide at the gap and 15 miles wide at the base and little over 20 miles long.

It was a defeat of an army, one officer said, but not an annihilation, and it remained to be seen, in view of the new threat to the Germans in the Paris direction, how many actually would escape.

Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's forces have hemmed in enemy troops sufficient in number, along with those already dead or captured, to make another Stalingrad in Normandy, Associated Press Correspondent William Smith White wrote from the front.

Many Divisions Were Skeletons

A few hours after American tanks captured Putanges in a sharp thrust, cutting down the escape corridor, an official announcement said the trapped divisions — all probably far below normal strength —included the 271st, 977th, 326th, 276th, 277th, 89th, 85th and 272nd infantry, the 21st panzer and the 9th and 12th SS divisions. At full strength, these divisions would aggregate 165,000 men, but their number probably does not approach that now. How far they have been reduced cannot be estimated.

The immense disorder of the enemy's organization was demonstrated in the capture of scattered elements of a dozen different divisions in small groups all over the battlefield.

Germans Report Heavy Fighting

The German high command reported heavy fighting in the whole Chartres-Dreux area some 60 miles northeast of Le Mans and 40 miles west of Paris. The Germans declared the purpose of this new sweep by American armored forces was not yet clear but that it suggested the intention of a new encirclement cutting the German retreat to Paris and the Seine).

There was no Allied substantiation of the German report. The whole sector east of the Falaise bottleneck was under an Allied news blackout as complete as that which masked Lt. Gen. George S. Patton Jr.'s cutoff drive north of Le Mans a week ago.

Bulk of Enemy Out of Trap

It seemed clear by now that the Germans had managed to get much of the crippled Seventh Army out of its trap—to what fate remained to be seen.

A British staff officer conceded that Marshal Guenther Von Kluge had succeeded in extricating virtually all of his armor from the original trap. Infantry was still streaming out as best it could under shell fire, seeking cover in roadside ditches, hiding by day and hurrying by night through a gap now a scant eight miles wide.

The last estimate of the force still inside the sack was about 50,000, the tag end of an army which had lost close to 100,000 men in the past two weeks and some 300,000 since D-Day.

Roving Guerrilla Bands

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported from Third U. S. Army headquarters in France that the remaining Germans were breaking up into roving guerrilla bands and seemed to have been so decimated that the Seventh Army could not reassemble its remnants for a break-through to join other disorganized units beyond Paris.

German accounts of a new wedge between the escape gap and Paris suggested exeactly the same tactics of speed and daring with which Patton curled up the original German flank and turned a near-straight battle line into a bag.

An Associated Press dispatch from the front said American forces were well on the way toward Paris over littered roads of German retreat and declared the battle of France may be decided in a matter of days.

Clean Sweep From Paris South

It held the promise of a clean sweep from the Seine to the Mediterranean where the Allies' new invasion wedged inland up to eight miles along the Riviera coast with real resistance being encountered at only one point.

The Falaise trap shrank by half to an area about 20 miles long and about five miles deep as the crust of the rearguard fight crackled and the Allies crashed into disorganized positions. Prisoners began pouring in from divisions badly mixed and scattered.

In view of the difficulties of any German withdrawal over bomb-pocked roads back to the Seine there seemed a god chance that even the armor Von Kluge had pulled out of one trap might find its end in another.

Could Burst Through Paris

From the Chartres-Dreux area the Americans would be in a position to burst through to Paris if that was the plan, but so far every indication pointed toward a strategy of destruction of the German fighting force rather than seizure of territory or cities.

Patton had the same choice before—and veered north to close the trap on the German Seventh Army.

If it stabbed up to Seine in a new cutoff, the new Allied attack would have carried to the flank of the German 15th Army, guardian of the Pas-De-Calais area and the last full army in France.

For the first time in this week of wholesale air drubbing, the Germans got another break from the weather. Ground fog covered Normandy throughout most of the day, giving the enemy cover for their get-away.

Allies Scatter "Surrender" Leaflets

Through the fog Allied planes scattered 2,000,000 "surrender" leaflets on the Falaise Gap. They showed pictures of German mass surrenders at Cherbourg and on the Russian front.

Late in the afternoon Allied planes, again in action against the retreating Germans, spotted German transport withdrawing as far east as the Seine.

Storm into Falaise

On the north side of the Normandy pocket British and Canadian forces stormed into the outskirts of Falaise, birthplace of William the Conqueror and the capture of the town was believed imminent.

The U. S. First army captured Putanges, on the Orne river 10 miles west of Argentan. The effect of this seizure was to compress the Normandy pocket behind its mouth.

American forces proceeded with the cleanup of the Breton peninsula. Dinard, just west of St. Malo, was occupied after organized resistance ceased.

(The situation at St. Malo was not clear. The German DNB agency broadcast a dispatch saying the Americans had captured the city. There was no Allied confirmation and a later Berlin broadcast of the International Information bureau, Nazi propaganda agency, declared the St. Malo fortress still was resisting).

Front dispatches said it was estimated Patton's U. S. Third army had inflicted nearly 100,000 casualties on the Germans — capturing 39,000 prisoners, wounding 46,000 men and killed 11,000. The Canadians have taken 2,000 prisoners in the past three days. Thus the Germans estimated Normandy casualties were brought to between 250,000 and 300,000. The estimate on Aug. 8 was 190,000.

surrender leaflets.

Both the German high command communique and Nazi radio broadcasters said Americans of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army had plunged 60 miles eastward from Alencon and were battling on a 20-mile sector between Dreux and Chartres. Patton won Alencon in his drive northward from Le Mans into Argentan, where he brought in the southern jaw of the pincers on Falaise.

Outskirts Of Falaise

Canadians on the north reached the outskirts of Falaise and opened an assault on that communications town.

Orderly until now, Kluge's retreat began to show the first signs of chaotic confusion. A British staff officer declared it was no longer being conducted according to plan, it was a case of "just get out—if

"great new developments are shaping up in the north of France," said the Allied plan in the push eastward seemed aimed not only at preventing escape of the Germans but "simultaneously to create an upheaval in the Paris region."

In addition to this defeat in Normandy, and the menace of other Allied legions forging inland in southern France, the Germans were confronted by an uprsing of the French forces of the interior in unprecedented force.

Maquis were disclosed officially to have taken four Brittany towns by storm, to have driven in on six more, and to have trapped 1,500 Germans around Paimpol, besides other blows that yielded hundreds of prisoners and destroyed many important enemy resources.

Half Of Quadrangle

The approaching cleanup in Normandy gave the Allies firm hold on the western half of the Seine-Loire quadrangle running inland to Paris. Part of its eastern end was menaced by the reported push to Chartres.

Allied ground troops hammering all around the perimeter of the German Seventh Army's salient have halved the size of the area in the past 24 hours.

Interlocking Fire Zones

One explanation contained in a front dispatch for the failure of the Allies to close the Falaise-Argentan escape gap was that the two armies driving toward each other had to exercise extreme care to avoid coming under each other's artillery fire.

British and Canadian troops on the north side of the pocket captured Vassy, 20 miles to the west of Falaise. American and British troops together sliced off a large section of the western end of the pocket. The Americans scored gains of up to three miles and took Tinchebray, a road junction nine at 190,000.

Dinard Occupied

In the Brittany cleanup Dinard, just west of St. Malo, was occupied by the Americans after organized resistance ceased there. This was the site of the heaviest fighting on the Breton peninsula.

(The situation at the ancient Breton north coast port of St. Malo was obscure. The German news agency DNB said in a broadcast dispatch that the Americans had captured the city where a die-hard Nazi garrison has been holding out in the old Citadel.

(There was no immediate Allied confirmation of this report, however, and in a later Berlin broadcast the International Information Bureau, Nazi propaganda agency, asserted that the St. Malo fortress still was holding out.

(The German communique said that the remainder of the St. Malo garrison had withdrawn into the Citadel after having repelled strong enemy attacks and is continuing to withstand all assaults.

Little Likelihood Of Stand

A front dispatch said there seemed to be little likelihood that Falaise would be in German hands much longer. Already the Canadians have reduced the Germans' use of the vital escape route eastward to a mere trickle of men and material.

The advance in this area took Canadian units west across the Caen-Falaise highway through Ussy and directly south down the road through St. Pierre-Canivet and Aubigny, all of which were captured.

Pressing down the northern lid of the "coffin salient," British troops by-passed the former German rallying point of Conde-sur-Noireau and pushed across the Noireau river.

hemmed in between Falaise and Argentan are:

Eight infantry divisions — the 271st, 977th, 326th, 276th, 277th, 89th, 85th and 272nd — and the 21st panzer, 9th SS and 12th SS.

But these trapped troops are sufficient — along with those who already have died — to make another Stalingrad here in Normandy and one more memorable even than that Russian disaster for Hitler.

Elements of German divisions are scattered all over the battlefield. A dozen divisions have been represented in groups of captives, who altogether would not make a company of men. This shows better than anything else the immense disorder in the enemy's organization.

At full strength these divisions would number at least 15,000 men each or an aggregate of 165,000 men but their number at present probably is nowhere near that figure. How far they have been reduced cannot be estimated.

They constitute the surviving Seventh Germany army, aside from those who have escaped through the gap, now only about eight miles wide.

Putanges is on a line north of Argentan and the whole of Bradley's lower wing is swinging northwestward behind and in parallel support of this extreme forward lunge.

During the day the movement passed beyond Rannes.

Up above this main area — along the American left and center — there was little resistance all day to our steady advance. It was mainly a job of consoldidating our positions. Several small towns — L'Archamp, St. Clair, Dhaluous and La'Ferriere — have been cleaned up.

Quick Knockout Blow Of Nazis In West Seen

AUG 17 1944

BALL

A United States Observation Post Between Alencon and Argentan, France, Aug. 15 (AP—Delayed)—The Americans appeared tonight to be moving toward a quick knockout blow of the Germans in western France.

Hitler's troops in western France have been defeated in battle, overrun and slashed to pieces in retreat. The rout of Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge's forces in Normandy has eliminated the last sizable German opposition short of the Seine.

Over German roads of retreat, littered by the wreckage of thousands of vehicles and by thousands of dead, American tanks and trucks are moving in virtually unbroken columns for 100 miles.

A German valley of defeat unfolds for miles. Off to the north great columns of smoke are rising against the green forested hills where enemy columns are trying to escape through a narrowing gap under the punishment of our artillery and aviation.

These fires are marking the end of an enormous amount of German armor. They have been burning for three days. Every time a German column shows itself the fires are rekindled by our dive bombers and artillery. From here you can hear the rising and falling whine of dive bombers, but they are many miles away and obscured by smoke and haze. The Germans bent on escape charge recklessly into our fire. They surrender by the hundreds, but there still has been no mass capitulation.

Through field glasses you can see doughboys moving from farm to farm and village to village in the valley below mopping up enemy remnants.

Church Bells Ring

Village church bells are ringing. In Catholic France they are celebrating the Feast of the Assumption. French families are riding to church in high two-wheeled carryalls.

Over these same roads the Americans were tearing German columns to pieces yesterday.

During and preceding this decisive operation the Luftwaffe failed to show itself by daylight for ten days. Its only appearance has been by night and then largely on flare-dropping missions of puny proportions. From up in the Cherbourg peninsula to these parts the record of the German army has been one defeat after another. German losses in equipment and men have been appalling.

"Our tanks raced through hedgerows, flushing the hiding Heinies, and I saw some of them running after tanks begging to be taken prisoner," said Major William Depuy, of Lake Preston, S. D.

Lieut. Louis Selig, of Baton Rouge, La., told of a German colonel and four other officers who gave themselves up.

Sergt. Roy E. Holcomb, of Dayton, Ohio, watched four Thunderbolts destroy an entire German column, including anti-aircraft guns, assault and anti-tank weapons within two fiery minutes.

Germans Say Yanks Are But 40 Miles From The City

HILL

London, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Allies showered steel and surrender leaflets on the German Seventh Army's pellmell retreat near Falaise today and, by Berlin account, hurled an American column within 40 miles of Paris, threatening a new encirclement of fleeing German troops.

German broadcasts declared the American Third Army, in a lightning 60-mile eastward drive, was battling near Dreux and Chartres, only 40 miles from Paris.

These armored spearheads, driving toward the Seine, carried the potential menace of swinging behind the enemy and bottling him up between the river and the Atlantic coast. Seine bridges have been knocked out by dive bombing.

Most Armor Out

Field dispatches declared Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge had pulled most of his armor from the vanishing Normandy front, but his hatch below Falaise had been sliced to eight miles. Possibly 50,000 Nazis still were fighting rearguard actions within the dwindling Normandy pocket.

Allied planes showered the enemy with 2,000,000 safe-conduct-you can."

A field dispatch reported that the wildly milling Germans still left in the cauldron were so mixed up that troops of no fewer than 12 units were identified in the area of one square kilometer.

DAY

300,000 Casualties

Total German casualties in the debacle of western France approached the 300,000 mark.

Included in the shower of surrender leaflets were pictures of German officers capitulating at Cherbourg. These were designed to illustrate the type of treatment the enemy could expect.

The Germans were running a fiery gantlet of bombs and shells near Falaise.

Putanges, a major crossing of the Orne river 10 miles west of Argentan, was captured, widening the southern jaw of the escape gap.

Front dispatches said it was estimated the American Third Army in a little over two weeks has inflicted nearly 100,000 casualties on the Germans—taking 39,000 prisoners, wounding 46,000 and killing 11,000.

An additional 2,000 prisoners were taken by the Canadians in the last three days.

This brings the Germans' estimated total Normandy casualties to from 250,000 to 300,000. On August 8 the total was estimated

WITH THE FIRST U. S. ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 16 — (AP) Troops of 11 German divisions are caught in Lt. Gen. Omar . Bradley's Normandy pocket, it was disclosed officially tonight, a few hours after American tanks in a sharp thrust forward captured Putanges and narrowed the escape corridor.

Many if not all of the divisions struggling in the great trap, now are far below normal strength, however.

Patton's Tanks on Rampage Stormed Through Nazi Lines

By E. D. BALL.

With the United States Third Army in France, Aug. 15 (A. P.) (Delayed).—Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's breakthrough from the Cherbourg peninsula has been a typical Patton rampage. He sent his tanks storming forward and when they hit something they couldn't crack immediately, he sent them around it.

At Rennes, for instance, he ran into stubborn resistance in suburban La Charbonniere. He sent his tanks around the city to crack the German hold from the rear.

Gen. Patton hit the beaches early in July waving a $1,000 bet that he would beat Lieut.-Gen. Omar Bradley and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery to Paris. Word had it that, Gen. Bradley and Gen. Montgomery themselves matched his grand, but Gen. Bradley later denied it and Gen. Montgomery is not a betting man.

DAY

On another occasion Gen. Patton calmly told correspondents he had bet $5 that his armor would be in Brest that night. It was on a Saturday and that night his tanks were there, although there had been no indication of such a long dash.

Gen. Patton, who knows what the inside of the doghouse looks like, had forty-three correspondents in it for twenty-four hours. For a month he and his prospective command were supposed to be a military secret and during that time word got around that somebody had blabbed. He ordered correspondents confined to quarters but released them when he found out they were not the offenders.

In fact, his presence was another one of the war's worst kept secrets. Everybody, it seems, knew he was here. The Nazis repeatedly talked about the activity of "General Patton's Third Army." The General chafed at being the ghost commander of a ghost Army.

In addition to his brace of pearl handled six shooters he carries a leather encased, needle pointed French hand sword. When he is talking he whacks the sword on the table or against the sides of his breeches legs.

During a big operation he puts on pince nez glasses with a vicious swipe and pores over his maps, looking like a big-shot businessman studying a profit and loss report which shows more loss than profit.

Talks With Drawl.

He talks in a sort of drawling falsetto which gets lower the hotter he gets under the collar. And he still can raise hell when his ire is aroused.

The other day he got caught in a column. Standing up in his jeep he saw traffic worrying around a big six-wheel prime mover standing half on and half off the narrow road. Dismounting and striding forwrd, he wanted to know what was going on.

"Us is eating, suh," came a voice from underneath the shady side of the truck.

"Yas suh. Yas suh," replied the offending driver when he was told to get his truck off the road and into a nearby cemetery before it was put into it permanently.

Wearing a brightly shellacked helmet shell with three brightly polished stars bolted on, Gen. Patton bounces over the countryside in a jeep or fast six-wheel cavalry reconnaissance car. At the end of a hot, dusty day his face is covered with black French dust and his eyelids look like the pollen-covered legs of a honeybee.

Usually up Front

You usually find him somewhere up front, fanning himself with his helmet shell and swapping yarns with G. I.'s and brass. His favorite driver for both his jeep nad "recon" car is Sergt. John L. Mins of Abbeville, Ala.

Pvt. Joe Trzcinski of Whiting, Ind., who collects autographs on playing cards, was pedaling down a Normandy sideroad one day when he saw an important looking officer walking alone in the twilight.

"Sure, why not?" the officer said, when Joe dismounted and asked for his autograph. Upon seeing three stars on the officer's helmet, Joe got flustered and dropped his bike.

While the General picked up the bike, Joe fumbled through his deck for the most important card he had left—the ace of diamonds. The officer borrowed Joe's pen, scribbled his name and walked on. The signature read: "G. S. Patton Jr., Lieutenant General, San Gabriel, Calif."

Rankin Praises Patton

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16. (AP)—Rep. Rankin (D-Miss) told the House today that Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., is a soldier with the brilliance of Stonewall Jackson and the tenacity of Ulysses S. Grant.

Nazis In Pocket 'Become Bands

Of Guerrillas

By Harold V. Boyle

United States Third Army Headquarters, Aug. 16 (AP)—The German Seventh Army is breaking up into roving guerrilla bands and appears today to have passed the point where it is able to mass its remaining men and supplies for a break-through to the Seine river to join other broken and disorganized units fleeing toward Paris.

Demoralized by shattering artillery and aerial bombardments, the Nazi army within the narrowing steel ring in Normandy is disintegrating daily and is trying to escape from the squeezing pocket in groups of 15 to 30 men.

Fire Power Over Roads

Third Army officers expressed belief the bulk of the German Seventh Army is caught in the gigantic trap whose only gap is an eight-mile exit between Falaise and Argentan. All escape roads through this corridor of death are "interdicted," an army term meaning they are controlled by strong fire power although not straddled by troops.

An indication of the vast and vital wound inflicted on the German army in France is the unofficial estimate that the Third Army alone in its colossal sweep to Argentan captured 39,000 prisoners and killed 11,000 Germans.

Others In Brittany

Another 20,000 German troops are hopelessly cut off on the Brest peninsula in port defenses and isolated strong points which are being reduced at leisure.

Below the Loire and in the vicinity of Angers 5,000 more of the enemy are being slowly cut to pieces and no longer can be considered an effective fighting force.

Thus, from Brest to Argentan, most fighting now consists of brushes with heavily armed Nazi guerrilla bands, trying desperately to rejoin their comrades who already have given up the battle of France as lost and are retreating as fast as possible on bicycles, carts and afoot.

Shrug Their Shoulders

Told that the Allies have landed another great army in southern France, most German prisoners only shrug their shoulders in resignation.

Only the most fanatical Nazis still have any notion that they can hold the American, British and French forces from the borders of Germany. When these insist vehemently that Hitler yet will produce a secret weapon and win the war, other prisoners jeer and say: "Fuehrer Kaput" (finished).

The remnants of the German Seventh Army have become no more than military bandit forces, reduced to night raids on French farms for supplies of food. Numerous cases of terrorism by drunken Nazi soldiers were reported.

Yet, when cornered, many of these guerrilla bands battle fiercely, before yielding, with the desperation of men who feel they have nothing in life left to lose.

Suicide Missions

Other German units assigned to "suicide" rear-guard missions for delaying the tidal wave of advancing American armor have preserved the Prussian discipline to the last, dying beside their own blasted guns.

The Germans hide out in caves and woods like the old Quantrill raiders in Missouri and Kansas after the Civil War. French farmers, resistance groups and rear elements of the American army all round them up.

Even along the main roads, if you ride in a jeep out of convoy, you are likely to hear the zing of a sniper's bullet whizzing past your head 50 to 150 miles behind the chaotic front—if you can say a "real front" actually exists any longer.

Truck Drivers Take Prisoner

Negro quartermaster truck drivers have been taking a considerable role in rounding up German stragglers. They have captured many as they sped along secondary roads rushing up supplies. These men, on occasion, have leaped from trucks with rifles and flushed out hidden Nazis. Often they arrived at the front lines with a mixed load of prisoners and supplies.

"Our platoon has taken about seventy prisoners while bringing up food and ammunition to the front," said Sergt. Edwin Kelly, of Richmond, Va., "but to tell you the truth, we'd rather not take them prisoner—we'd rather fight until we can get it over with."

Nazi 'Soldier', Age 10, Taken

On the British Front, France, Aug. 16 (AP)—British troops captured their youngest prisoner in the battle of France today, a 10-year-old youth dressed in a German uniform.

He confessed his age between sobs and said he "never shot anyone."

He said he was a stepson of a shanghaied Russian fighting with the Germans, and that his name was Stanlius. He was found hiding in a dugout with six Nazi troops. He was incredibly dirty and frightened, but his fears soon turned to bubbling delight when the British put him through the standard delousing process.

Stanlius loved it. He showered himself with insectide powder and a few minutes later agreed that although a bath was strange, it was not too bad.

The British Tommies who captured him want to adopt him now that he is fumigated.

Monty Still Commands North France Troops

Allied Headquarters, France, Aug. 16 (AP)—Supreme headquarters said today in an official statement that there has been no change in Gen. Sir. Bernard L. Montgomery's status as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's deputy commander in the field.

Montgomery remains as field commander of all ground forces under Eisenhower, including both the American 12th Army group commanded by Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley and the British-Canadian 21st Army group.

A headquarters spokesman declared that Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander, went to France to be "nearer the situation, but is no more in direct personal command than he has always been."

Wilson In Mediterranean

Allied troops invading France from the south are under Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, whose position there is the same as that occupied by Eisenhower in the west, it was said officially.

Wilson is the commander of the Allied forces in the Mediterranean theater. His troops in the south of France presumably will move into the jurisdiction of Eisenhower as they drive northward into Eisenhower's theater of operations and link up with the Allied armies in the west, but nothing official has been said on this point at the moment.

Bradley Under Monty

Dispatches carried yesterday by the Associated Press, Reuters and the British Press Association said that Eisenhower's move to France put him in personal command and that the announcement that Bradley was commanding the American 12th Army group meant that the two groups assumed equal status, both reporting to Eisenhower.

The AP dispatch was based on information from the field. (It was passed by American Army censorship.) Headquarters correspondents of Reuters and Press Association said their stories had been confirmed by an official in a headquarters conference room.

Today's announcement said: "It is officially stated at supreme headquarters that announcement of General Bradley's command of the 12th Army group in no way affects the position of General Montgomery as over-all commander of all Allied ground forces in France under General Eisenhower."

FRENCH PATRIOTS USE ARMOR TO AID ALLIED OFFENSIVE

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCES, Aug. 16—(AP) The twin Allied drives into France from the north and south were disclosed today as already linked from the channel to the Mediterranean and from the Atlantic to the Alps by powerful operations of the French Forces of the Interior, who are now fighting with armor.

In a tribute to the French partisans Supreme headquarters reported they had entered the towns of Sixun, Brasparts, Pleyben, Chateau Neuf, Coray and Milizag and had taken by storm Quimperle, Bannalec, Chateaulin and Dournez.

Brig. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, chief of French resistance forces, announced that an F. F. I. armored detachment for the first time participated in a battle, occupying Erveden, in central Brittany, after a fight in which 65 Germans were killed and 150 captured.

The French Forces of the Interior, who, in addition to individual engagements, are keeping up a constant widespread disruption of German war facilities and supplies, are under direction of Gen. Dwight W. Eisenhower. Their operations, however, extend throughout territory now under assault by Eisenhower's southern counterpart, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson.

A dispatch from Bern quoted the Geneva newspaper La Suisse as saying French partisans, cooperating with thousands of Allied paratroops, were about to take the important southern port city of Marseille, from which the Germans are moving eastward toward Toulon.

The paper also reported Cannes and Nice were already occupied and that advance guards of the French were moving toward the Italian border.

Another dispatch in La Suisse from Chiasso said Italian fascists expected the Allies would soon join northern Italy and southern France in a single front, followed by additional landings along the Italian coastline to take the Nazi's Gothic Line from the rear.

This fear, the report said, prompted Field Marshal Albert Kesselring to fly to France where Wehrmacht heads of the French and Italian fronts were said to be conferring.

The paper also reported that Maquis reserves who had previously remained in the cities have been issued secret orders to join the fight.

Goaded by F. F. I. successes the Germans continued their savage reprisals. French circles in London reported that the villages of Mont-Sauche and Planche, in Nievre province, were burned to the ground after an F. F. I. attack on a German convoy in that district.

Nor were the French the only ones to feel the spite of the losing Nazis. A German newspaper in Holland reported that an additional 23 Dutchmen had been executed by the Nazis.

Patriots Win a Dozen Towns

Forces Under Gen. Koenig Attack Nazis at Many Points in North Brittany.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—French forces of the interior, using an armored detachment for the first time, have captured nearly a dozen towns and encircled 1,500 Germans at Paimpol, on the north Brittany coast fifty airline miles west of St. Malo.

Successive communiques today from Gen. Eisenhower's Headquarters and from the FFI Commander, Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, told of the fresh successes, most of them in Brittany peninsula. Gen. Koenig said his patriots had captured Erdevan and throughout the whole of France are giving the enemy no rest.

Supreme Headquarters said the French patriots had operated in close co-operation with other Allied forces. They have entered Sizun, Brasparts, Fleyben, Chateauneuf, Coray and Milizagc and captured by storm Quimperle, Bannalec, Chateaulin and Douarnenez.

The communique also said the FFI had annihilated German garrisons at Moutiers and Bourg St. Maurice after fierce fighting.

French patriot resistance was reported quickening through central and southern France. In the north the Maquis were reported to have burned 400,000 gallons of German gasoline.

Move Toward Italy.

The Nazi garrison at Tarantaise was reported driven back toward the Italian border with an increasing loss of personnel through surrenders to pursuing Italian, as well as French, patriots.

Vichy, meanwhile, was reported in a turmoil, with collaborationists attempting to flee the city and armed guards patrolling the streets. The AFI (Independent French Agency) quoted a dispatch from Bern as saying 10,000 French patriots were "advancing toward Vichy" and that they were being joined en route by hundreds of recruits.

The same dispatch asserted that other patriot forces of the interior were moving on Bordeaux.

Paris Wild With Joy.

In Paris, the populace was said to have gone wild with joy at news of the Allied landings along the Riviera, and some reports from the French border said sporadic fighting had broken out in the streets between collaborationists and patriots who assembled in the streets singing the "Marsellaise." German police were reported unable to control spontaneous patriot demonstrations.

GEN. PATCH COMMANDS

British, American Airborne Units Block Enemy in Reinforcing Coast.

ROME, Aug. 16 — (AP) French and American invasion troops, now identified as the Seventh army, under the veteran U. S. Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, were fighting as much as eight miles into southern France tonight after smashing German coastal defenses and establishing themeslves firmly on a 70-mile stretch of the Mediterranean coast between Toulon and Cannes.

Disclosing that the land, sea and air forces making this latest breach in Hitler's continental wall were under an all-American command, Allied headquarters announced tonight that "all intitial objectives have been taken" and that casualties of all services had been exceptionally light."

Land Reinforcements

At 10:45 o'clock tonight (4:45 P. M., E.W.T.) headquarters announced that the landing of reinforcements was continuing without interruption and that the bulk of the leading infantry divisions was already ashore Nearly 700 prisoners had been counted up too last night, the announcement said.

Herbert L. Matthews, New York Times correspondent, representing the combined American Press, said paratroopers yesterday had taken the large coastal town of St. Tropez on the Gulf of St. Tropetz, about midway between Nice and Marseille.

The Allies tonight were pouring ashore by sea and air a steady stream of new fighters and equipment. British and American airborne troops, landed on a big scale behind the lines, were effectively blocking German attempts to rush reinforcements to the invasion scene.

The Americans used flame-throwers to burn Germans out of stone emplacements.

The highly-trained and expert airborne forces were landed from towed gliders which formed a train miles wide, and by parachute from transports which kept more than 1,000 men swinging in the air at a time.

Opposed at One Point

Although serious opposition was encountered at one undisclosed point, preventing the Allies from debarking, most of the opening assault "overran intricate beach obstacles strongly protected by German coastal guns," headquarters disclosed tonight.

No powerful or general German opposition had yet developed, persons arriving from the beachhead reported.

The headquarters of Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Briton who is commander-in-chief of the Allied Mediterranean forces, disclosed tonight that the invasion was under American command on land and sea and in the air.

The attacking ground force is the American Seventh army, paced by the veteran Sixth corps of Anzio fame and commanded by Gen. Patch, veteran of Guadalcanal and successor last spring to Lt. Gen. S. Patton, Jr., as chief of the Seventh army.

The invading French forces are part of this army, and are under the command of the colorful Maj Gen. Lattre De Tassigny, who left France less than a year ago after escaping from a prison to which he had been sent by the Vichy regime.

Vice Admiral H. K. Hewitt is in command of the naval oerations, and Brig. Gen. Gordon P. Saville, chief of the 12th tactical air command, heads the air units, headquarters announced

Fighting Continues

Fighting continued throughout last night, but the Allied command did not specify the exact localities where resistance was being encountered. Fliers returning from bombardment missions over the beachheads in most instances reported seeing no signs of fighting.

Headquarters stated flatly in tonight's bulletin that "our troops have established themeslves firmly on the south coast of France between Cannes and Toulon." This 70-mile shore includes most of the points of assault previously mentioned by correspondents on the scene and in German broadcasts.

(The Nazi Commentator Ludwig Sertorious said an initial Allied objective was the big naval base of Toulon, but that the Allies probably would maneuver as they did at Cherbourg, avoiding a frontal assault from the sea and attempt to cut it off by land.

(A German transocean news broadcast said the Nazis had blown up harbor installations at Cannes, Nice and St. Tropitz.)

Most frequently mentioned in dispatches were the towns of Frejus, St. Raphael and Dramont, in a group about 15 miles southwest of Cannes, in addition to Cap Negre, about midway between Cannes and Toulon, officially announced as captured yesterday. One correspondent reported fighting at Ste. Maxime, between St. Raphael and Cap Negre. This is near St. Tropez, where Berlin said tanks were landed.

Indicating the speed of the assault, Associated Press Correspondent Sid Feder, writing from the beachhead, said that within four hours after landing some American elements had pushed more than three miles inland in a sector "less than eight miles from Cannes," at a stretch of beach "virtually the same spot as that on which Napoleon landed on his return from his exile on Elba."

Yanks Overrun Dramont

Within an hour after landing the Americans overran the tiny town of Dramont, Feder disclosed, and meanwhile "other forces hit out toward the large towns of St. Raphael and Frejus to the west, while still more pounded across the surf almost the entire distance to Toulon."

Inland, American and British airborne troops, after blocking whatever routes of enemy reinforcement still were open after the air forces had finished demolishing almost every bridge in the area, pushed on against "predetermined objectives," tonight's bulletin related.

At the same time battleships, cruisers and other warships continued to bombard whatever enemy strongpoints still were holding out within their range, and the Mediterranean air forces roared out over the invasion area in a ceaseless stream, hammering every target sighted.

The original airborne units, which landed well behind enemy coastal defenses at the beginning of the invasion early Tuesday, later were reinforced by another airborne operation that met neither air nor ground opposition.

The German air force continued to be a negligible factor, leaving Allied planes free to roam the entire area, knocking out bridges well up the Rhone valley which might have been used by the enemy either to bring in reinforcements or withdraw the present forces engaged.

The enemy began calling upon his carefully-hoarded night bombing force, however, in an effort to take a toll of naval craft were officialy declared to be exceptionally light, this resulting from "perfect coordination of all arms and services."

General Patch In Command

Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch of Guadalcanal fame, was officially identified as the invasion commander. American and French troops make up his army. The original Seventh Army, built around the United States Second Army Corps which fought across Tunisia, was headed during its Sicilian campaign by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who now commands the United States Third Army in western France. Patch succeeded Patton as head of the Seventh Army last spring.

French elements of the Seventh are commanded by Maj. Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, who escaped prison at Riom after being sentenced by a Vichy court to a 10-year term for organizing armed resistance to the Nazi invasion of southern France.

DAY

Block Reinforcements

British and American airborne troops vaulting behind the lines were credited officially with blocking enemy reinforcements. Great fleets of United States troop carriers winged supplies and reinforcements by glider and parachute into the air-borne bridgehead today.

German resistance generally continued relatively weak.

Assault forces fought on through the night after overrunning the first beach obstacles.

At one point, however, heavy German opposition prevented landing craft from beaching, it was learned.

Reinforcements Pour Ashore.

American and French forces are still streaming ashore on the beachheads between Toulon and Cannes.

"Casualties are exceptionally light," it was officially announced.

The assault was facilitated throughout by a superior air bombardment and was supported by naval gunfire said by observers to be heavier, and more effective than during any previous operation in the Mediterranean theater, a headquarters announcement said.

"Airborne American and British troops, together with the pre-D day bombing of roads, railroads and bridges, have successfully blocked enemy reinforcements. The airborne units are moving on pre-determined objectives," headquarters said.

The landings were generally lightly opposed, but heavy German fire blocked off sea landing craft at one point, it was learned. This setback was reported by Technical Sergeant Richard T. Wright, of Arlington, Va., a marine combat correspondent. He said the German fire at this point, which was not identified, had prevented troops from debarking.

Bombers Hit Rail Bridges

Allied headquarters said the operations were proceeding "according to plan." No comment was offered upon broadcast German accounts of the action nor was a report that French parachutists were operating 20 miles inland officially confirmed.

It was known that the Allies had landed at Cap Negre and in the area of Frejus, 35 miles apart, on the coast between Toulon and Nice, and the Germans said other attacks were made in the St. Tropez Gulf region, between Cap Negre and Frejus.

Reinforcements Landed

The Mediterranean Allied Air Force sent Flying Fortresses against vital rail bridges of southern France in support of the attack. Unescorted, the bombers encountered no enemy planes.

A heavy two-way traffic filled the air lanes between southern France and Italy. The MAAF said reinforcements for air-borne troops were landed yesterday and "no opposition either from the air or on the ground was encountered."

The reinforcement wave was de-

KENNEDY

Rome, Aug. 16 (AP)—The United States Seventh Army reconstituted after its victorious campaign in Sicily, has smashed through German coastal defenses and established itself firmly in southern France, penetrating inland as far as eight miles in some places, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

Casualties in this newest invasion of Hitler's Europe

cleared easily the largest of the day, with not less than 1,000 parachute troopers in the air at one time and the glider train extending more than 50 miles.

American and French forces are still streaming ashore on the beachheads between Toulon and Cannes.

Frontier reports to La Suisse of Geneva said the Allies had occupied Cannes and Nice and that French Partisans, cooperating with 1,000 Allied parachute troops, were about to take Marseille, from which the Germans were moving southeastward toward Toulon.

East of Nice, French advance guards were said to have passed the principality of Monaco on their way to the Italian frontier at Ventimiglia.

Single Front Seen

A dispatch from the Italian border said the Germans had ordered immediate evacuation of residents along the Ligurian coastline from Ventimiglia to the naval base of La Spezia, 110 miles to the east across the Gulf of Genoa, in the expectation of new Allied landings.

A report from Chiasso to La Suisse said Fascists believed southern France and northern Italy would soon be united in a single front and that Field Marshal General Albert Kesserling's Gothic line defenses eventually would be attacked from the rear.

New Landing Expected

It was suggested that this operation would be launched by fresh forces landed on the Ligurian coast after Allied positions between Nice and Cannes were reinforced.

This expectation was supported by reports that strong land and naval forces are still in Corsica and Sardinia and by the continued intensive bombing of the coast and military facilities of Genoa.

The assault was facilitated throughout "by a superior air bombardment and was supported by naval gunfire said by observers to be heavier and more effective than during any previous operation in the Mediterranean theater," a headquarters announcement said.

Troops Commended

Patch was quoted as commending both French and American troops in the seaborne operations for "the aggressiveness displayed by both assault and follow-up units."

(Fresh Allied landings were declared in Berlin dispatches to Stockholm to have lengthened the front to 120 miles, from the French naval base of Toulon to San Remo, Italian port and winter resort, 84 miles southwest of Genoa. Tank battles were reported in progress midway between Toulon and Cannes. The Germans said heavy fighting had developed for an airfield north of St. Raphael.

Installations Blown Up

(A Transocean broadcast from Berlin said German forces had blown up harbor installations at Nice, Cannes and St. Tropez, all likely spots for attack.

(The British radio said 12,000 French sailors were participating in the invasion.

(CBS Correspondent Eric Sevareid reported that Allied troops began fighting last evening for St. Tropez, on the gulf of the same name midway between Cannes and Toulon.

Five Towns Reported Taken

(The British radio said the Allies had captured five towns, including one five miles inland, and that "prisoners are coming in in batches." The towns were not identified.)

George Tucker, Associated Press war correspondent, said the landings covered a 40-mile stretch of the coast.

Another dispatch said the Germans began some heavy shelling, forcing landing craft to hit the beaches behind the dense smoke screens.

Allied troops have so far counted 2,000 prisoners, says a dispatch from the beaches by Vaughan Thomas for the combined British press, according to a Reuter report.

Air activity during the night included an attack on the Valence airdrome in the Rhone valley. By both day and night German communications leading to the battle area were battered virtually without letup.

Three enemy aircraft were destroyed in operations in the past 24 hours and 20 Allied planes were lost.

The weather still held good.

Little Naval News

"Although there is little in the way of definite naval news from the assault area on the southern coast of France," said a naval communique, "steady building up of the army by the Allied navies is proceeding smoothly. . . . The work continues by night as well as by day."

(German broadcasts acknowledged beachheads were established at three points and that glider troops were pouring in. The enemy broadcasts said heavy battles were under way, and asserted Allied bombs failed to knock out German coastal batteries.)

Cap Negre and the heavily-fortified sentinel islands of Port Cros and Levant, 10 miles offshore, were captured before dawn yesterday by picked American and French troops. Seizure of the islands cleared both sea and air approaches to the mainland.

Last night the Transocean news agency said in a Berlin broadcast that landings had been made at various points from Cannes west to the Toulon region.

(Transocean said Toulon itself had been shelled and that Allied naval fire "now extends over the whole length of the coast from Toulon to San Remo, east of Nice. German coastal batteries are replying."

(The Nazi propagandists declared the southern France landings were "on the same great scale as in Normandy."

Heavy Fighting Reported

(The German-controlled Paris radio early today said there was heavy fighting between Cannes and Nice and between St. Raphael and Cap Camarat, some 25 miles to the southwest. A CBS reporter said, however, American Liberty ships were being unloaded in Cannes harbor.)

On the first day of operations on this fourth major front against Hitler "substantial numbers" of troops were put ashore, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson's headquarters announced last night.

Allied airmen themselves had a big day, more than 14,000 participating in D-day operations. This was exclusive of airborne and parachute troops.

"The Jerries were caught completely by surprise, and that few there were waiting for us have been scattered or captured," wrote Herbert L. Matthews, of the New York Times, representing the combined American press.

(Turkish advices immediately began a round of conjecture that other Allied landings might come soon elsewhere.

GEN. WILSON HEADS ALLIED FORCES IN SOUTHERN FRANCE

ROME, Aug. 16.—(AP) An all-American team, under the Supreme command of the Briton Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, directs the Allied invasion of southern France on the ground, in the air and on the sea, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch veteran of 30 years' service whose fighting ranges from the French battlefields of the first World war to the recent Guadalcanal campaign in the Pacific, was announced as commander of the U. S. Seventh army which carried out the landing operations on the southern French coast.

Hewitt Heads Naval Units

U. S. Vice Admiral H. K. Hewitt is commander of naval operations and Brig. Gen. Gordon P. Saville heads the air unit as commander of the 12th tactical air force.

The fact that all three of these commands are American stamps the invasion of Southern France as predominantly an American undertaking. There are, however, British troops engaged and appointment of Gen. J. N. De Lattre de Tassigny as commander of the French is itself an indication of the importance of the French force taking part.

The French force is an integral part of the Seventh army under Patch's command.

Patch was graduated from West Point in 1913 and served with the First Infantry division in France in the last war. In this war he achieved fame in the Pacific by his successful command of American troops which cleared New Caledonia and Guadalcanal.

Announcement of Patch's leading the invasion forces answered the long-standing question, "what became of the American Seventh army?" It dropped out of the public eye after Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., led it in conquest of a greater part of Sicily.

Yesterday's landings were only two days short of the anniversary of its entry into Messina, which ended the Sicilian campaign.

When Patch took over after Sicily the Seventh had been stripped of most of its combat units, which had gone to the Fifth army for the Italian campaign. But its headquarters functioned—and prepared for the present invasion of France.

Now once again the Seventh army is a powerful war machine, containing seasoned American veterans of the Italian campaign and other units.

Patch's wife and daughter, Mrs. C. M. Drummond, live in Staunton, Va. his son, Capt. A. M. Patch, Jr., is in the 79th infantry division.

Hewitt was in command of the American landings in Morocco in 1942 and in the following Spring assumed command of U. S. Naval forces in northwest African waters. In this capacity he commanded the American naval operations in Sicily and at Salerno. His home is in Hackensack, N. J.

Saville has commanded the 12th tactical air force in Italy since last spring. He was born in Macon, Ga., in 1902.

Lattre Commands French

The commander of the French forces is known colloquially as de Lattre, not as de Tassigny. He graduated from St. Cyr, France's military academy in 1913—the same year Patch graduated from West Point.

He was wounded in a cavalry skirmish in the last war while killing three Germans in hand to hand combat. He slashed them down with his sabre, one which his grandfather carried in the Napoleonic wars, and himself got a lance thrust in his chest.

At the time of the French armistice he asked permission to take his division to England or North Africa but was refused. When the Allies invaded North Africa de Lattre, then at Montpelier in southern France, sought to galvanize the French army to resist German occupation of that area.

He failed and was sentenced to ten years imprisonment. De Lattre escaped from Riom prison in September 1943 after long and patient preparations. He sawed his window bars, scaled the wall with a rope and eluded 50 gendarmes especially picked by Laval to guard him.

Some weeks later he reached London and placed himself at the disposal of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who promoted him to a full general and gave him his present command.

GEN. PATCH LEADS U. S. SEVENTH ARMY

Rome, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—The Allied force attacking southern France is the Seventh Army, commanded by Major-Gen. Alexander M. Patch of Guadalcanal fame, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

The initial assault was executed mainly by the United States Sixth Corps—famous for its work on the Anzio beachhead. The Seventh Army also includes a French force under Major-Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, who commanded the Iron Division in the battle of Rethel in France in 1940.

United States Vice Admiral H. K. Hewitt is commander of naval operations and Brig.-Gen. Gordon P. Saville, commander of the [illegible] Tactical Air Command, heads the air units, it was announced.

Gen. Patch, 54-year-old veteran of thirty years of Army Service, replaced Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton Jr., as commander of the United States Seventh Army last spring. He fought previously in the Pacific, mopping up the Japanese on Guadalcanal.

Gen. De Tassigny, who was sentenced by the Vichy Government to ten years for organizing armed resistance to the Nazi occupation of unoccupied France at the time of the North African invasion. He escaped prison at Riom, fled to London and then to Algiers. Troops under his command landed on Elba, the Napoleonic prison, and captured the island and 1,900 prisoners.

Two Invasions Put G. H. Q. On Spot

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 16 (AP)—The double invasion France has supreme headquarters in a jurisdictional spot where it might have to draw a final line through a bush.

The northern invasion under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's supreme headquarters organization and the southern one under Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson are both on equal status, so far as has been disclosed.

Maquis Forces

Therefore, supreme headquarters is forced to wave away any questions about the southern invasion as pertaining to a different command, but supreme headquarters here has been handling the French forces of the interior whose operations extend deep into the southern area.

Supreme headquarters said it intended to continue occasional reports on them, thus creating this situation: If some Maquis and some of Wilson's invaders were fighting on opposite sides of a hedge in southern France, supreme headquarters could recognize formally the activity of the Maquis, but not of Wilson's troops.

Churchill Witnesses Landings in France

ROME, Aug. 16—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill visited Corsica and then went by destroyer to watch landing operations on the French coast, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

With the prime minister as guests on the warship were U. S. Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commander of the American Army Services of Supply.

"Prime Minister Churchill was greatly impressed by the clockwork precision of the operation," the headquarters announcement said.

Nazis Shoot And Duck

Rome, Aug. 16 (AP)—Lieut. Com. William F. Bringle, 30, of Memphis, Tenn., commander of a naval air squadron, flew over the southern French invasion beaches an hour and a half before H-hour, and landed three and a half hours later.

In all that time, he said, the only Germans he saw were hiding in a trench about 50 feet from the gun they were manning.

"I could see two loaders carrying a shell rush down the hill, slam the shell into place and race back to the shelter. A minute later a third German would leave the hole, rush downhill to the gun and jerk the lanyard. Then he would scurry uphill to safety.

"As observer for the navy's guns, I called the target to a cruiser. Her shells looped three miles inland and landed squarely on the battery. I was so low the concussion rocked my ship."

Commandos 'Unlocked Door' For New Invasion

AUG 17 1944

By George Tucker

[Chicago Tribune War Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press]

Aboard Admiral Lyal Davidson's Flagship, Aug. 15 ((AP)—Delayed) The navy got 'em here but it was the commandos who unlocked the door.

Under protection of booming naval guns, tens of thousands of American and French troops poured across the beaches of southern France along 40 miles of front today, but only after desperate bands of troops had slipped ashore six hours before, climbed almost unscalable cliffs and overwhelmed the crews of formidable coastal batteries so that troop transports could approach the jumping-off point with minimum danger.

Ranger Commando Boys Act

The plan was so imaginative in conception and daring in execution it was originally ruled out by the navy as being impossible, but the army insisted it could be done and tough Ranger-Commando type boys made good by capturing the islands of Levant and Port Cros just off the mainland and silencing all guns before daybreak.

While this heavy cruiser and scores of other cruisers, battleships and destroyers of the Allied navies, including one tiny Greek destroyer, maneuvered four giant convoys into position, the troops slipped into small boats and were escorted into a maze of rocky inlets by a torpedoboat flotilla led by Lieut. Gilbert Reid of Kalamazoo, Mich.

DAY

First Wave Hits Beach

"We'll get anybody ashore that wants to go ashore," the big blond skipper said. The first wave hit the beach at exactly 12.30 A. M. and marked the landing area with signal lights. By 1.30 succeeding waves were clamboring up the cliffs and from that moment on it was a matter of waiting until they signalled the guns were silenced.

Davidson was anxious yet confident as the hours wore on and he paced the signal bridge waiting for reports. Like dark blurs on an inky sea we could see the outlines of warships as they patrolled lanes. Suddenly gunfire broke out off our port beam and twin tongues of flame leaped across the water.

Somebody yelled: "My God, two of our destroyers are shooting at each other." But the rasping clatter of the communications speaker put a stop to that nonsense. It was a message from the destroyer, she had been chasing a ship which refused to identify herself. The destroyer brought her guns to bear on the fleeing target and scored a direct hit with the first salvo. The enemy tanker leaped into flame and became an inferno which quickly lit up the summer sea.

She burned until she was a charred skeleton, then sank beneath the waves.

Later three American torpedo boats rescued the crew, who promptly advised us that a German submarine was prowling the assault area.

Another Enemy Ship "Dies"

The same destroyer soon brought her guns to bear on another enemy target and after a brief interval laconically signalled: "Target dead in water. Crew abandoning ship."

Survivors were picked up and a prize crew sent aboard to man the captured ship.

From time to time flares or starshells burst in the sky, but no enemy craft came near us and no shells from land-based batteries fell in our vicinity. In fact, it was too easy; we simply couldn't believe it.

We got yellow signals, then red signals indicating unidentified aircraft in the area, but they always turned out to be our night fighters and finally Navigator Joe Costello, of Boston, Mass., shook his head, turned to me and said: "We are going to have to pay for this, mark my word."

Bombers Appear

As day broke the first skeins of bombers roared overhead, and dumped their loads on the beaches. Until they appeared the deputy commander of the 12th Tactical Air Force, who rode the bridge of this ship, had been an anxious man. But as the bridge trembled under the impact of bombs on the target he relaxed, removed binoculars from his eyes and lapsed into a happy smile.

The first boats scraped the beaches at exactly 8 A. M. for the main landings and for the next hour and 45 minutes nothing but reports of continued success came in. The admiral began to loosen up and laugh and talk. He'd been pacing the bridge all night, pausing only now and then to dictate or receive a message or sip coffee.

Now for the first time he sat down and relaxed. He looked at his staff crowding the bridge and one asked: "Admiral, how do you feel?" The admiral laughed. "My feet hurt," he replied.

Fondest Hopes Exceeded By Success

By Herbert L. Matthews

[New York Times War Correspondent]

[Representing Combined American Press]

A Landing Beach in Southern France, Aug. 15 (AP—Delayed)—The landing on this central beach has succeeded beyond the wildest hopes.

Our troops already are in the hills beyond the beaches and the first-phase line soon will be reached.

The beaches themselves swarm with men and vehicles. The water around us is filled with craft of every kind coming and going with impunity.

Resistance has been amazingly slight—not one Jerry plane, not a single cannon shot from shore. Those landing met only a little light-arms and mortar fire. If the other two landings have had anything like this success—and it seems that they are having it—the Nazis have been dealt what may prove a mortal blow.

Like Shadow Boxing

The reality has been almost an anticlimax. We were keyed for a great struggle and that beach in front of us was pulverized before the troops went in, but now it seems like shadow boxing.

The timing on the beach was near perfection. With all the complexities and intricacies of the landing operation, American troops set foot on the French Riviera at H-hour plus two minutes.

We floated on a calm sea just before the landings. At 6.30 A. M. a scout boat—a racy thing which was nothing but a seaplane pontoon equipped with a motor—returned, and its pilot, Lieut. (j.g.) H. W. Noel, of Greenville, Tenn., reported he'd been within 2,000 yards of the shore and saw and heard nothing.

DAY

Like A Rehearsal

The assault boats went ashore jauntily flying American flags. It was like a naval review, a parade or a rehearsal—anything but real war.

The general I stood beside kept saying, "Everything's lovely."

Before I went ashore at noon the air had cleared and we had a long survey of this famous coastline where so many American tourists used to spend the winter months. We could see the fashionable hotels, beautiful villas—the homes of playboys and playgirls of Eurpoe turned momentarily now into a battleground.

No Underwater Obstacles

Before we got off Naval Lieutenant Joseph Finley, of Pontiac, Ill., who had been close to shore in a LCI, came up and reported there were no underwater obstacles and amazingly little opposition ashore. He had seen only one machine-gun nest from one of the many blockhouses open fire. This was an obstinate one that had defied sniper fire from ground troops and was silenced only when rocket boats and then a destroyer opened up on it.

Finley said he had seen a few tanks blown up by land mines but otherwise no damage. Through glasses he saw German soldiers coming out of a big hotel waving a white flag.

The shore batteries are there but they weren't fired. The pillboxes are there, too, and we expected a murderous enfilading fire but it didn't materialize. Everybody is simply flabbergasted — but very happily so.

Troop Carriers Shuttle Supplies to Bridgehead

GRAHAM - DAVE

Gliders From Italy Bring In Jeeps and Howitzers

AN AMERICAN TROOP CARRIER BASE, Italy, Aug. 16 (AP)—A heavy two-way traffic filled the air lanes between southern France and Italy again this morning as great gray fleets of American troop carriers shuttled supplies and reinforcements by glider and parachute into the swollen airborne bridgehead.

Glider landing strips several miles inland continued to resemble used-car lots as a hundred motorless ships bearing jeeps, seventy-five-millimeter howitzers and countless smaller tools of war slipped in virtually unopposed. Thousands of parachutes abandoned where air-borne fighters stepped out of them made it look from the air as though the folk of the French Riviera had hung out a vast, colorful washing.)

DAY

Troop-carrier pilots and crews continued to refer to the shuttle-strips as milk runs, a term denoting utter lack of groundfire or enemy aircraft.

"We still climb into flak suits when we hit the beaches, but it is a waste of time," Captain Albert Harwell, of Memphis, Tex., a pilot, said.

French Skipper Shells Home

ABOARD A FRENCH CRUISER, Aug. 12 (Delayed) (AP).—The captain of this ship in an Allied task force steaming for a rendezvous with landing craft has the job of softening up part of southern France, and before troops land he will have helped to destroy his own home, his mother's home and several other bits of family property—houses which have been transformed by the Germans into pillboxes.

Warships' Guns Clear Riviera For The Troops

AUG 17 1944

By Seymour Korman

[Associated Press War Correspondent, Representing the Combined American Press]

Aboard a United States Destroyer off the French Riviera, Aug. 15 (AP—Delayed)— We have just lifted the range of our guns and the full shelling force of this mighty Allied armada is striking at targets in the hills inland and just beyond the American doughboys swarming ashore.

Now a few hours after zero hour, this devastated strip of French Riviera beach seems safely held by our soldiers and they are grouping for assaults on the softly rounded peaks.

DAY

Formidable Operation

I have just viewed for nearly four hours one of the most formidable and spectacular American-British and French combined sea, air and ground operations in Mediterranean history.

Four and five-inch guns now go off in broadside salvoes several times a minute. All along our screaming line sister destroyers in our squadron are pouring more of the same into enemy lines, and to our stern cruisers and battleships are hurling their bigger shells arching over us.

At 6.10 this morning we were eight miles from the beach and within range of nine-inch enemy coastal batteries. It was quiet and we had drawn no fire.

Bombers Arrive

Allied bombers came droning over. The powerful cracks came echoing back across the water as thheir bombs hit home. There were palls of smoke interlaced with orange and red flame.

Our destroyer came nearer, entering the bay. Minesweepers cut in ahead of us. At 6.40 we were in position less than 2,500 yards from the beach and riding parallel to the 1,500-yard strip of coastline which was our particular sector.

The two batteries of nine-inch guns on shore weren't firing. Apparently the airmen had done their job knocking them out.

Concentrated Bombardment

At 6.50, 70 minutes before H-hour, all hell broke loose from the navy. Even Bofors 40-mm. guns, normally used for anti-aircraft fire, were trained on a level toward shore.

The big ships joined in. Their targets now were concrete pillboxes and strong points in houses and pavilions on the beach. The enemy still wasn't retorting much, and whenever he did open up and reveal a position he caught a load.

This concentrated bombardment from sea and air went on for 63 minutes.

Then the infantry was on its way in those game little landing craft. The Germans opened up with their mobile 88's and mortars from the foothills and the peaks. Our soldiers returned some of the fire.

At 8 o'clock—H-hour—the first LCI reached shore. A smoke screen had been thrown to give them some concealment, but as it lifted I could see the GI's achieving land.

Yanks Prepared for Worst Stormed Beach Without Even Getting Wet.

DEFENSES EASILY OVERCOME

Some Fortifications Are Found Abandoned by Enemy—Prisoners Wide-eyed.

By SID FEDER.

Associated Press War Correspondent, Representing the Combined American Press

With American Forces on the Southern France Beachhead, Aug. 15 (A. P.). (Delayed).—Behind one of the mightiest concussions ever exploded by man, American doughboys ripped into southern France today and within four hours some elements had penetrated more than three miles inland with little opposition.

On this right flank portion of the beachhead where this is being written—in a sector only about eight miles fro mthe rich Riviera resort of Cannes—the doughboys came ashore without getting their feet wet and with little resistance.

Hitting on a pair of small narrow beaches covering a sector about three miles wide in this area, they had expected to tangle with all kinds of hell. Instead the troops encountered only scattered small arms fire.

I counted only four wounded men across the entire beach, which is virtually the same spot as that on which Napoleon landed on his return from his exile in Elba.

The minor resistance was overcome in a hurry and within an hour the American troops had overrun the tiny seaside town of Drammont. On the way to the village, elements of the command of Lieut.-Col. James Critchfield of Pine Valley, Cal., cleaned out the supposedly heavily defended left peninsula, surrounding Dagay Cove. They found only one pillbox, housing a coastal defense gun, which was easily overcome.

In Drammont, which was a Nazi billet, and in the neighborhood around it, these soldiers rounded up eighty-two prisoners by 11 A. M. Most prisoners were wide-eyed with shock and fear from the earth-shaking concussion turned loose on the invasion area.

DAY

Flame-throwers were used to clean out twelve-foot thick casements guarding one end of the beach. This and the fact that amphibious tanks landed at almost the same instant as the assault infantry made it easy to herd in these scared Jerries.

AUG 17 1944

Some mortar shells greeted the first of the larger ships to snuggle into the harbor. Lieut. Eugene Driscoll, 39 Washburn street, Jersey City, N. J., said one struck the yardarm of the LCT he was aboard and caused some damage and a few casualties but did not prevent a landing.

As they progressed farther inland the troops ran into somewhat more resistance. But between the assaulting infantrymen and blasting flame throwers no strongpoint was able to hold out long.

It was three hours before the first enemy counter-battery artillery was hurled in from the mountain range near Cannes. By this time some of our artillery was already ashore and tanks were barging along.

Natives said the Nazis have been evacuating this right flank area during the last five or six days. Some seemingly impenetrable concrete casements were unmanned when the infantry reached them.

Meantime, other forces hit out toward the larger towns of St. Raphael and Frejus to the westward, while still more pounded across the surf along almost the entire distance to Toulon.

By 10 A. M.—two hours after H hour—one force had Rastel Dagay Ridge under attack. At the same time Lieut. Herbert Gebbspan, 1823 Quentin Road, Brooklyn, N. Y., reported Drammont cleared except for a few snipers.

should have been somewhere inland. There was a group of tough, happy youngsters here this morning, and since they were satisfied, and so was the high command, there were no kicks coming.

It was cloudy the night before last, and navigators went by their so-called precision instruments. At a given time they were supposed to be over the target, so they sent the paratroopers out. That was at 4 a. m. and three planes full of men landed on the St. Tropez peninsula, realizing immediately that something was wrong. However, paratroopers have to be resourceful.

The Germans attacked with small-arms fire as they came down and several were killed. Other Nazis blew up the little port where fashionable yachts used to anchor.

So the paratroopers pitched in and took St. Tropez.

Nazis Admit Withdrawal From South France Ports

AUG 17 1944

By Wade Werner

LONDON, Aug. 16—(AP)—After contending all day that the Allied beachheads in southern France were widely scattered along the Riviera and "isolated from one another," the German radio tonight suddenly announced that the defending forces had destroyed harbor installations at Nice, Cannes and St. Tropez and were withdrawing inland to get out of the range of naval guns.

Critical Hour Expected Inland

"The critical hour is expected not on the coast, but inland," said the German Transocean agency in seeking to explain the withdrawals. It said many coastal points were "under the heaviest fire of Allied naval artillery."

Major landings, according to the German broadcasts, were at the mouth of the Anger River and on the St. Tropez Penisula, but others

Allied airborne trops were declared by the Germans to be attacking the defenses from the rear, "especially at St. Raphael," and also in the Nice area.

Stress New Development

At the same time the Germans stressed that "great new developments are shaping up in the north of France, where they said an east-

No Claims

The Germans made no claim that such unconfirmed blows had any effect on the situation, for another broadcast summarized the day's events by saying, "fighting on the French Mediterranean coast spread still further to the east and west as a result of fresh air and naval landings."

Another predicted that the Allies would seek to capture the big Toulon naval base by encirclement similar to that at Cherbourg.

In the background of actual military developments, editorials and articles in the German press had a gloomy, defeatist tone.

For example the magazine "Rome-Berlin-Tokyo," previously not notable for any conciliatory ideas, gives featured space in its latest issue to an article on the advantages of a negotiated peace.

ward surge by American armor was threatening Chartres. The enemy broadcasts said the overall Allied plan seemed to be not only to prevent the eastward movement of German troops but "simultaneously to create upheaval in the Paris region."

Various German reports insisted that the Falaise escape gap remained open but admitted it was growing narrower.

The DNB agency's military commentator Ludwig Sertorius acknowledged the overwhelming Allied air and naval superiority in southern France, while Joseph Saal, another commentator, said, "we must admit the seriousness and widespread consequences of the situation as it exists and as it will be in the near future.

Will Reach a Climax

The battle for France will reach a climax in the next few days and week . . . and we must also reckon with new, massed Soviet attacks."

Another of the German propaganda agencies, the "International Information Bureau," claimed that German planes over the southern coast "sank a large landing ship loaded with tanks and artillery" and damaged various other invasion fleet units in the Bay of St. Tropez.

Revolt Reported Growing

London, Aug. 16 (AP)—Underground forces, inspired by the Allied landings along the Riviera and the German retreat in Normandy were reported rising everywhere throughout France today in a swelling tide of revolt against Nazi forces which have held the French people in bondage for more than four years.

The German commanders at Pau, near the Spanish frontier, and at Toulouse, capital of the whole south-central area, were sent ultimatums demanding their immediate surrender the report said.

(Reuter said news has reached the Spanish border that the Maquis began an attack in the direction of Pau.

(They used artillery taken from the Germans at Mauleon, between Pau and Bayonne—on the Bay of Biscay coast—which they have recaptured after losing it to the Germons a month ago.)

Moving On Vichy

Vichy, meanwhile, was reported in a turmoil, with collaborationists attempting to flee the city and armed guards patrolling the streets. The AFI (Independent French Agency) quoted a dispatch from Bern as saying 10,000 French Patriots were "advancing toward Vichy."

The same dispatch asserted that other Patriot forces of the interior were moving on Bordeaux.

The German-controlled Monte Carlo radio declared the Germans had clamped a strict curfew on southern France, forbidding civilians from using the streets from sunset to dawn and banning vehicular traffic.

Tokyo Version of Invasion.

London, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—Twisting the news to suit its own purposes, the Tokyo radio today declared the Allied invasion of southern France was prompted by the slowness of offensive operations in northern France and German pressure on the eastern front.

Allied dispatches to have been invasion sites.

DAY

Repelled, Nazis Say

The enemy broadcast, without confirmation from Allied quarters, said tanks and guns aboard the sunken vessel had been destined to support landing operations in Ste. Maxime, on the north shore of the gulf.

"Naval units participating in the invasion continued to shell the coast in the course of this forenoon," it said. "German shore batteries, answering the fire, repeatedly forced minor enemy units to turn."

The broadcast said Allied airborne troops dropped in the vicinity of St. Raphael, two miles east of Frejus, "were cut off from their communications with the town" and others, dropped ten miles farther inland along the railway line to Toulon, "were attacked from two sides and deprived of the possibility of reaching the railway."

A Transocean broadcast said flatly that the Germans would not tangle with the invasion armies while still within range of Allied naval guns, a clear indication of a coming retreat.

Reinforcements Reported

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Transocean commentator, said additional air-borne troops had landed in the area of Nice and Cannes and beachhead units were reinforced from the sea.

"As yet no thrusts aiming farther inland are noticeable," he said. "At present the enemy appears to be devoting his efforts to establishing connections between the various small beachheads—between those farther apart by new landings from the sea. Naturally the strength and grouping of the southern Allied invasion troops cannot yet be gauged. The second wave is probably still at sea and the third and perhaps a fourth are still in jumping-off ports."

Report Continuing Successes.

By W. W. Hercher

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 16—(AP)—The Germans threw gigantic tank and infantry forces into an all-out struggle to hold Warsaw yesterday and forced the Russians out of the town of Ossow, seven miles northeast of the old Polish capital's contiguous suburb of Praga.

Loss of City Acknowledged

Loss of Ossow, acknowledged in the midnight Soviet communique, was the first time the Russians have announced giving ground since the vast victory parade of their summer offensive began June 23, but Moscow dispatches emphasized that this was no cause for Allied alarm.

NIGHT

An early morning supplement to the communique stressed the tremendous losses suffered by the German counterattackers, saying 30 enemy tanks, seven self-propelled guns, 11 armored troop carriers and four armored cars were left wrecked on a battlefield strewn with hundreds of Nazi dead before the Russians pulled back.

Moscow military observers took the view that the ferocious German counterattacks were but the prelude to a Russian operation to smash the Germans at Warsaw.

Repeated Nazi Counterattacks

Repeated German counterattacks in Estonia, on the Latvian-Lithuanian front and elsewhere were announced by the Russians as German resistance generally stiffened. All these were declared to have been thrown back, while the Russians themselves broke into the big south Poland town of Sandomierz, on the flank of their trans-Vistula bridgehead, and engaged in street fighting.

Russian accounts underscored that the Red Army had the situation in hand all along the front and that the offensive still lay with the Russians, although the German counter-offensive northeast of Warsaw was admittedly the most serious blow by the Nazis since the beginning of the great Summer campaign.

Had Not Announced Capture

The Russians never had announced capture of Ossow, marking their closest approach to Warsaw since they began the suburban siege of the capital July 31 after seizing Wolomin, 10 miles northeast.

This was the second day that the Russians had reported German counterattacks before Warsaw, but they made clear that the price the Nazis paid for this fractional success was exorbitant.

The communique reported that on all fronts Tuesday the Germans lost 118 tanks, raising the two-day total of German armor losses to 232 and implying that a great percentage of these were in front of Warsaw.

The German high command's communique omitted mention of Warsaw.

Elsewhere on the 1,000-mile active front the Russians reported continuing successes.

Advance on Estonian Front

On the Estonian front they announced advances that swept up 70 more towns, and in Lithuania, where the Russians have been bearing down toward Memelland, they announced repulse of German counterattacks.

On the Southern Polish front, Soviet troops broke into the city of Sandomierz and engaged the Germans in street fighting. The city had been by-passed closely for two weeks by the extended Russian bridgehead across the Vistula.

Fall of Sandomierz, however, would greatly strengthen the Russian advanced spearhead position and possibly permit Soviet forces there to strike sharply northward in an outflanking movement against Warsaw, as well as easing the way for a renewed drive southwestward on Krakow.

Warsaw the Focal Point

Warsaw was the focal point of the whole front, however, and Moscow dispatches said the Red army appeared to be starting its real all-out bid for the city against the bitterest sort of German resistance.

MOSCOW, Aug. 16. — (AP) The Red army gave ground tonight for the first time since the beginning of the Summer offensive June 23, evacuating the village of Ossow, seven miles northeast of Warsaw, in the face of tremendous German tank attacks.

Loss of Ossow, acknowledged in the midnight Soviet communique, was the first time the Russians have announced giving ground since the vast victory parade of their Summer offensive began June 23, but Moscow dispatches emphasized that this was no cause for Allied alarm.

Nazis Suffer Losses

An early morning supplement to the communique stressed the tremendous losses suffered by the German counterattacks, saying 30 enemy tanks, seven self-propelled guns, 11 armored troop cariers and four armored cars were left wrecked on a batlefield strewn with hundreds of Nazi dead before the Russians pulled back.

Moscow military observers took the view that the ferocious German counterattacks were but the prelude to a Russian operation to smash the Germans at Warsaw.

Repeated German counterattacks in Estonia, on the Latvian-Lithuanian front and elsewhere were announced by the Russians as German resistance generally stiffened. All these were declared to have been thrown back, while the Russians themselves broke into the big south Poland town of Sandomierz, on the flank of their trans-Victula bridgehead, and engaged in street fighting.

Russian accounts underscored that the Red army had the situation in hand all along the front and that the offensive still lay with the Russians, although the German counteroffensive northeast of Warsaw was admittedly the most serious blow by the Nazis since the beginning of the great Summer campaign.

On the Estonian front the Russians announced advances that swept up 70 more towns, and in Lithuania, where the Russians have been bearing down toward Memelland, they announced repulse of German counterattacks.

Break into Sandomierz

On the southern Polish front, Soviet troops broke into the city of Sandomierz and engaged the Germans in street fighting. The city had been by-passed closely for two weeks by the extended Russian bridgehead across the Vistula.

Fall of Sandomierz, however, would greatly strengthen the Russian advanced spearhead position and possibly permit Soviet forces there to strike sharply northward in an outflanking movement against Warsaw, as well as easing the way for a renewed drive southwestward on Krakow.

Warsaw was the focal point of the whole front, however, and Moscow dispatches said the Red army appeared to be starting its real all-out bid for the city against the bitterest sort of German resistance.

The Germans apparently were doing everything in their power to meet the Warsaw challenge, but how long they could continue to endure the necessary losses was problematical.

Farther north, on the fringes of East Prussia, the Russians were reported to have pushed to within ten miles of the East Prussian border northwest of Vilkaviskis. The German radio acknowledged Soviet gains on that front, but said the German lines were holding firm in the second strong pressure area around Raseintai, 30 miles northeast of the frontier.

The German radio also acknowledged Soviet tanks had broken through near the Latian-Lithuanian border north of Birji and said there was fierce fighting north of Biebrza on the southeastern approaches to East Prussia, where the Russians had made two penetrations along the railway between Bialystok and Lomza.

Hurling in large groups of infantry and tanks north and northwest of Siauliai in Lithuania, the Germans also were mounting a large counter-blow there, but it, too, gave military observers little cause for worry.

Reds Control Situation

Indications are that the Red army has the situation in hand on the entire front, and while the Germans may make penetrations here and there, the grand strategy still is in Russian hands and the offensive lies with them.

The most serious blow which the Red army has had to meet since the beginning of the offensive was the German attack northeast of Warsaw but it has been contained.

The Red army's campaign in Estonia swept in 70 places beyond Lake Pskov. There the Russians are moving steadily toward the Baltic and there seemed to be no halting them in that area any time soon.

SOVIET TROOPS ARE READY TO STORM WARSAW

GERMAN ATTACKS FAIL

AUG 17 1944

Indications Are That Struggle at Praga on East Side of the Vistula Is in Final Stage.

Moscow, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—The Red Army appeared today to be making its real, all-out bid for Warsaw against bitter resistance in the Praga district just across the broad and swift Vistula from the besieged Polish capital.

Another menace to the German defense system increased below East Prussia, where Soviet troops were driving through a fifteen-mile defense belt toward the German rail center of Lyck in the East Prussian Masurian Lake region.

Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's Army group has been within gunshot of Warsaw since late July. For the first time in many days, the Soviet communique mentioned the Warsaw battle, disclosing the destruction of thirty-two Nazi tanks and 800 troops in a counter-attack in the battle of Praga.

Completes Assault Plans.

Rokossovsky has completed his assault plans, built up reserves, strengthened his communications and eliminated a strong German threat to his right flank and today was striking for the heart of the enemy defense zone before Warsaw. Indications were that the struggle on the east side of the Vistula was in its final stage.

Seasoned Russian and Polish troops now are strongly dug in in a semi-circle around Praga, a great industrial district, and their massed artillery and planes were strewing the battleground with derelict tanks and sprawling German dead.

DAY

The Russians announced at midnight that Marshal Ivan S. Konev's army group which had taken 1,500 square miles west of the Vistula in the area 100 miles below Warsaw and thirty-five from Krakow had killed 140,000 Germans and captured 32,360 in a month ended August 12. Previous announcements ran the aggregate of dead or captured Germans in the summer offensive to 781,886 men, but the figure included operations of only six of the nine army corps reported in action. Nazi material losses were huge.

While only a frontal battle for Warsaw was reported in the Praga area, the Germans were in a precarious position and faced flank blows from the north and south as well.

A Soviet communique said the Germans succeeded in forcing a wedge into the Russian positions but by blows from the flanks the Soviet units threw back the enemy and restored the situation. Thirty-two German tanks and self-propelled guns were reported destroyed and 800 Germans killed.

The effort to relieve Warsaw was one of many major counter-attacks to which the German High Command committed irreplacable reserves yesterday, others striking vainly at Russian armies near the East Prussian front in Lithuania and west of the Vistula.

Detroy 114 Nazi Tanks.

The Russians destroyed 114 Nazi tanks during the day, in southern Poland.

[A broadcast Moscow announcement recorded in London today by the Soviet monitor said Marshal Ivan S. Konev's Fourth Ukraine Army had killed or captured 172,360 Germans between July 13 and August 12 in driving through southern Poland toward German Silesia.]

Yesterday's frenzied enemy attacks came while Red Army troops in northern Poland were striking along the Bialystok-Lyck railway through a fifteen-mile belt of Axis defenses guarding imperilled East Prussia in the Masurian Lakes region. Grajewo, only two miles from the frontier, was reported under heavy air attack.

In the north Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's sweep across Estonia freed another eighty settlements, but elsewhere from the Baltic to the western reaches of the Carpathians, the Russians said, the Red armies during the day broke wave after wave of German counter-attacks.

As for the situation at Warsaw the Russians manifested the utmost confidence that Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossofsky could deal with whatever forces the Germans still had available and would seize the initiative and strike for Warsaw itself at the moment most critical for the enemy.

Astride two main railways from Bialystok into Warsaw, Rokossovsky's divisions turned Praga's outlying factories and apartment buildings into gun crammed-fortresses which broke the heart of the enemy thrusts bombers and three fighters failed to return from Germany.

Rocket Planes Downed

The American fighters reported shooting down 32 German planes in air combat, including two rocket-propelled planes, and on the way back to Britain shot up 23 locomotives and more than 100 railroad cars.

At the same time medium, light and fighter bombers harassed the Germans on the western and southern French fighting fronts and unescorted flying fortresses bombed vital railway bridges in southern France.

Air support over the Falaise-Argentan corridor was somewhat reduced, however, by worsening weather over western France.

Following up the gigantic 4,000-sortie raids on the German air force in the field Tuesday, the Britain-based American Liberators and Fortresses assaulted a half-dozen aircraft plants and synthetic oil factories in Germany.

Bomber Plants Hit

Their targets included the Deitzsch Air Equipment depot, one of Germany's most important, the Schkeuditz and Halle Bomber Assembly plants, aircraft engine works at Madgeburg, Kothen and Dessau, the Halberstadt Air Force station, the synthetic oil factories at Magdeburg, Zeitz and Bohlen, and a carbonization and oil refinery at Rositz.

Results were described as excellent in clear weather.

and it was unlikely that the Americans, who have made a specialty of daylight raids, would shift to night work. British Mosquitos dropped 4,000-pound bombs in Berlin during the night, however, and also patrolled the front-line areas.

Local thunderstorms and a rising ground mist offered the Germans in northwest France their best opportunity to escape from aerial punishment since the Falaise-Argentan trap was laid.

Field dispatches reported, however, that Allied planes continued the assaults. They created havoc among 200 German motor vehicles plunging through the gap and hit an ammunition dump five miles south of Rouen.

American Marauders dropped 2,000,000 leaflets in the gap area, urging the Germans to surrender and promising them safe conduct. The leaflets featured pictures of the German officers surrendering at Cherbourg.

German Homeland Lashed By U.S. Heavy Bombers

By Ned Nordness

AUG 17 1944

LONDON, Aug. 16—(AP)—The Allies threw another one-two aerial punch at the German homeland today as more than 1,000 Britain-based American heavy bombers hit aircraft and synthetic oil plants inside the Reich and Liberators from Italy bombed the Friedrichshafen Chemical Works.

NIGHT

More mighty blows against the Nazi homeland were indicated tonight when the Berlin radio reported RAF heavies bombed towns in the German Baltic area. While swift Mosquitos raided Berlin, the heavies were "engaged in violent air battles with German night fighters," the broadcast said.

A communique from the U. S. strategic air force in Britain, calling the enemy opposition the strongest in weeks, said 23 heavy

Fighter opposition and intense anti-aircraft fire made the skies hot for the raiders, and their escort of nearly 1,000 fighters had a busy time keeping the interceptors off the big bombers. Many of the German planes were the new rocket-propelled fighters.

The German radio insisted throughout the day that a huge American bomber force had hit Germany during the night as well as by day. This was not confirmed,

2,000 Planes Hit Reich Again

London, Aug. 16 (AP)—Another American armada of 2,000 planes, half heavy bombers, smashed today at aircraft and oil plants and airdromes in Germany while other hundreds of flyers attacked enemy troops and defenses on the north and south French battlefields.

All the targets were in the Leipzig and Magdeburg areas in the very heart of Germany.

Striking from Italy unescorted Fortresses bombed rail bridges in southern France without encountering German planes, while Liberators bombed a chemical works at Friedrichshafen.

BEAUREPAIRE

Fourth Big Air Fleet

This was the fourth straight day in which the United States Eighth Air Force had sent 1,000 or more Fortresses and Liberators against continental objectives.

Much of the day's effort again was directed against German air strength in continuance of the campaign to prevent the hobbled Luftwaffe from coming to life in time to fly to the aid of battle-shattered German field armies.

Targets included the Delitzsch air equipment depot, one of the most important in Germany; bomber assembly plants at Schkeuditz and Halle; aircraft engine plants at Magdeburg, Dessau and Kothen; synthetic oil plants at Zeitz, Bohlen and Madgeburg; a carbonization and oil refinery at Rositz and a German air force station at Halberstadt.

Three New Targets

The Delitzsch, Schkeuditz and Rositz targets never had been hit before by American heavies. The Magdeburg engine plant and the Halberstadt air force station were damaged heavily earlier this month.

Synthetic oil plants struck today were knocked out two months ago, but recently were repaired and producing on a reduced scale.

All bombing was done visually in good weather, and United States headquarters called the results "good to excellent." The German radio reported air battles and asserted that 130 Allied bombers were shot down over southern France yesterday. The enemy said, moreover, that his bombers raided Allied invasion fleets off south France last night.

Tactical air units in Normandy joined artillery in pounding the beleaguered German Seventh Army, despite deteriorated weather.

Mosquitos Active

Mosquitos bombed Berlin last night. On other forays against German transport in France they were restricted by the weather but bombed three trains near Paris, eight barges on the Oise and 30 vehicles near Livarot.

Fighter-bombers based in Britain and France reported destroying or damaging at least 52 tanks and more than 350 vehicles in widespread operations yesterday. They also silenced 30 guns and knocked out 30 locomotives.

On the Russian, French and Italian fronts, Allied communiques listed 71 German planes destroyed and 56 Allied craft lost yesterday.

11 NAZIS DOWNED

A United States Fighter Base in England, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—Eleven German fighter planes were downed by sixteen United States Mustangs today in a twenty-minute battle that raged from treetop level to heights of more than three miles.

Twenty ME-109's were preparing to attack a formation of heavy bombers near Magdeburg when the Mustang squadron of Major John I. Elder Jr., of Edensburg, Pa., dived into them.

Double kills were scored by Major Elder, Lieut. Harold Spencer, Chicago, Ill., Capt. Henry S. Bille, Paradise, Cal., Lieut. William Cullerton, Chicago.

Pilots scoring singles were Capt. Charles W. Lamar, Hays, Kan., Lieut. Jack Crandell of Aurora, Ill., and Lieut. Kenneth Michels of St. Petersburg, Pa.

"We had been looking for a good fight for weeks," said Lieut. Spencer. "Today we found it."

Baltimore Man On Fort Tells Of Air Fight

The following story mentions one Baltimorean.

A United States Bomber Base in England, Aug. 16 (AP) — Flyers of two Fortress wings that bombed Delitzsch airfield, 15 miles north of Leipzig, today were attacked by about 30 rocket-firing Focke-Wulf 109s and a number of big American bombers were lost in a hot battle.

Survivors said:

"If you can tell the American public that the Luftwaffe is still around, we'll appreciate it."

Lieut. Harry Sleaman, 3537 Lyndale avenue, Baltimore, Md., commented grimly: "It took only 25 seconds for it all to happen from the time the fighters hit until the bombers started going down. I saw one B-17 dive and explode. Another went down so fast it disintegrated."

Saw Fortresses Explode

Sergt. Joe Faughan, Benton, Ky., an engineer gunner who made his 26th mission, also told of seeing Fortresses blowing up on the way down. He said there was heavy flak for nearly two hours of their mission.

Fighters apparently took one formation by surprise.

"It happened some distance from us," said Lieut. James Buildings, bombardier from Perry, Iowa. "I thought maybe they were our own fighters coming in, but when we saw Forts and fighters beginning to fall all over the place we realized they were enemy planes. There was a solid overcast above us and the enemy fighters hid in it until they dived right at the bombers."

Leader Praised

Capt. Harold Brown, Alliance, Ohio, was praised by fellow flyers for lead-navigating his group through heavy flak until Mustangs came up to drive off harassing fighters.

Lieut. Anthony Jellen, of Tacoma, Wash., a navigator, finished his tour and returned.

"Boy, did he sweat this mission out!" Flaughan said.

NAZI ROBOT BOMBS SHOWER ENGLAND

LONDON, Aug. 16 — (AP) Flying bombs were hurled in artillery-like salvos at London and South England today and tonight, ending the dark-hour respite for the metropolitan area, as the public speculated on possible new terrors from improved rockets.

"Is evacuation of women and children becoming even more urgent?" asked the London Evening News, alluding to public demands for more information about the Nazis' new V-2 terror weapon.

"Already 500 children have been killed and another 1,000 injured. If rockets descend on London we must not have children still here as victims for Hitler's dying venom," the paper said.

There has been some consideration by censorship and security officials over the advisability of relaxing the present policy to give the public information on both flying bombs and rockets.

Home Secretary Herbert Morrison acknowledged there had been looting but said there was no evidence to suggest it was the work of professional gangs.

As the enemy sought with short concentrated attacks to get flying bombs through the defense belt, coastal batteries reported repeated successes in getting robots on the wing.

Robots Hit London Twice During Night

London, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Germans attacked London with flying bombs shortly before midnight last night and again just before dawn today. An official announcement said the assaults caused both casualties and damage.

Robots also fell on southern England during the two attacks.

YANKS GET CARDS TO FILL OUT FOR ABSENTEE BALLOTS

LONDON, Aug. 16. — (AP) The Army has begun circulating cards for soldiers to fill out if they want absentee ballots for the presidential election, Colonel Thomas R. Kerschner, army voting officer, announced today.

He said the cards will be given to every member of the armed forces, right up to the front lines in France.

"Everyone will be given an opportunity to vote," he said. "Whether he does or not is up to the individual. The army is merely providing facilities. It is making no campaign to get soldiers to vote."

A voting officer has been assigned to every company to see that every soldier who wants to vote gets a chance. There is a strict ban on commissioned or noncommissioned officers attempting to influence any other soldier on how to vote, but Kerschner said there is no restriction on "private and informal discussion of political matters."

One headache has been the handling of publications likely to be interpreted as carrying one-sided political views. Sale of British newspapers at army stores is barred on the ground that it would be virtually impossible to "screen" every edition to see whether they present both sides of political issues. American newspapers, books and magazines carrying political matter are allowed in Red Cross clubs and canteens after "screening" by a board of army officers.

Soldiers, however, may buy any publication outside or receive newspapers, magazines or even political campaign literature through the mail.

The army, officially asserting it wanted to adopt as liberal a policy as possible under the soldier vote law, suggested that the American Correspondents association here advise it on a list of American newspapers for a poll among soldiers to select certain favored ones which would be allowed without censoring.

The Association's executive committee at a meeting today took the position that time is too short for the Association to help in any practical way even if it were regarded advisable for it to give noncontroversial counsel. The general feeling was that American soldiers should be allowed to read whatever newspapers they liked.

Chicago Kid's War Is Over

LONDON, Aug. 16 (AP).—The Chicago Kid was sent back to the United States today.

The Kid metaphorically stubbed his toe some forty days after D-Day during which period he made thirteen landings on the Normandy invasion coast as a crew of a Coast Guard-manned landing craft for tanks. When he reported "too tired to get up," an investigation revealed he was only fifteen years old.

He is Gerald W. Haddon, of Chicago. He left high school before the end of his freshman year, but now plans to be graduated, attend college and become a criminal lawyer in Chicago where he understands "they make good dough."

New Army Move To Overthrow Hitler Seen

Irun, Spain, Aug. 16 (AP)—The new Allied landings in southern France may give rise to a fresh attempt by German military leaders to overthrow Adolf Hitler with the hope of negotiating peace before Allied troops smash into Germany, a well-informed traveler from France asserted today.

This informant, well versed in conditions within Germany and who long enjoyed German confidence, said the military clique was determined to upset the Nazi regime at any cost and preserve for future generations the fiction that the German army had not been defeated in battle but had lost this war—like the first World War—through an internal collapse.

Seek To Keep Prestige

German professional officers everywhere, both in Germany and the occupied countries, he said, agree almost unanimously that the army's only hope for holding the future confidence of the German people lies in maintaining its prestige by forcing such a collapse.

The traveler said a German general had told him frankly:

"Sooner or later, perhaps 20 or perhaps 50 years from now, the fatherland may again be ready to follow a leader to regain Germany's proper position in the world. When that time comes, whether the leader is a soldier like Frederick the Great, an emperor like Kaiser Wilhelm or a fanatic politician like Hitler, the glorious tradition of the German army must remain unbroken so the German people will retain their military virtues.

Must Preserve "Army's Honor"

"We must preserve the army's honor—if not by force of arms then by overthrowing the civilian regime and so bringing defeat by what Hitler called treason rather than betray the German people's faith in the army."

The traveler said he believed that at least 90 per cent. of the professional German army officers now believe the war is lost.

RELATIVE QUIET REIGNS IN ITALIAN FIGHTING

ROME, Aug. 16 — (AP) Relative quiet reigned on the Italian front today as artillery activity and sniping tapered off and the Allied military government moved in food for the civilian population in liberated areas of Florence.

The Allied communique said there was "no change in the situation" on the 5th and 8th army fronts. Eighth army troops, however, have finished mopping up an enemy pocket in Empoli, 25 miles west of Florence on the south bank of the Arno river.

8th Army Mops Up Arno South Bank

Rome, Aug. 16 (AP)—Eighth Army troops have mopped up German resistance in Empoli, on the south bank of the Arno river 25 airline miles west of Florence, headquarters announced today.

The Italian front, however, remained generally unchanged.

Shelling of Florence by German long-range guns tapered off.

The Allied Military Government now is feeding three fourths of the population of Florence, it was announced, but in some suburban areas still cut off many thousands are unable to get food.

Named Rome Commander

Meanwhile, Brig. Gen. Thoburn K. Brown, of Maristown, Tenn., was named Allied commander for the Rome area, succeeding Maj. Gen. Harry H. Johnson, who left for a combat assignment.

Brown, a West Pointer, was formerly assistant commander of the 88th Infantry Division. He served in the Phillippines, Mexico and in France in the last war.

Six Parties Back Bonomi

ROME, Aug. 16 (AP).—The six political parties represented in the Italian government reaffirmed solidarity behind Premier Ivanoe Bonomi today in a joint statement apparently prompted by a widespread rumor that he would resign following transfer of the Rome region to Italian jurisdiction.

Vatican Organ Sees Allied Victory

Vatican City, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—The Vatican City newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, expressed belief today in an Allied victory in world war II.

In an article on the Atlantic Charter, L'Osservatore said the entire world how "is dominated by the Allied armed forces" and expressed the hope that the principles of the Charter would be translated into reality in international life.

Nazis Move Troops From South Greece

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 16 (AP)—Advices from inside Greece said today the new German commander, General Rosler, had ordered urgent preparations against an Allied attack in western Greece and Albania.

Meanwhile, it was reported here that the German commander of the Greek Aegean Islands of Samos and Lesbos had ordered his troops to concentrate in the ports and towns.

Rosler, who replaced General Sheidel, is moving all his heavy units out of south Greece, leaving only light covering forces, most of which consist of satellite troops, these advices said.

The German heavy defenses were being concentrated along the Adriatic coast of western Greece and lower Albania, it was reported. Along the Greek-Yugoslav frontier German troops have replaced Bulgar forces.

Jewish Refugees Say Nazis Sank Turk Ship

Istanbul, Aug. 15 (AP — Delayed)—Five survivors of the Turkish ship Mefkure, previously reported sunk August 6 while en route from Romania to Turkey with 250 Jewish refugees, said today the ship was sent to the bottom by shellfire from three German patrol boats.

The German craft attacked without warning, and machine-gunned the struggling passengers in the water when they abandoned ship, said the survivors.

(Previous dispatches from Ankara said only four of the passengers were believed to have survived.)

New York Sergeant Given Merit Medal

Istanbul, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—Tech.-Sergt. Alberto De Leyn, 40 years old, of New York city, former executive representative for the Times Square and Breslin hotels there, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for "exceptionally meritorious conduct and performance of outstanding service from August, 1943 ,to May, 1944."

ANKARA, Turkey, Aug. 15 (Delayed) (AP) — Stoiche Mushanoff, nephew of the Bulgarian opposition leader, Nikola Mushanoff, has arrived in Ankara for what is believed to be an effort to find a peace approach to the Western Allies through Russian channels. Mr. Mushanoff, who is vice president of the Bulgarian Parliament as well as former Minister of Commerce, lunched with the Bulgarian Minister, Nikola Balaibanoff.

ALLIED FORCES DRIVE ON MOGAUNG

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 16 — (AP) Allied troops in north Burma, driving south along the Mandalay railway, now are about 22 miles southwest of Mogaung, having reached a point two miles north of Pinbaw, headquarters announced tonight.

(The Japanese themselves acknowledged withdrawal into Burma from India where, the Tokyo radio admitted, "they are prepared for battles." The broadcast was recorded by the Associated Press.)

British troops continued their advance down the Tiddim road and in the Kabaw valley in western Burma. In the valley, operations were in progress against enemy rear guard elements 18 miles from the captured border stronghold of Tamu, a communique said.

Japanese forces retreating along the Tiddim road and in the Chindwin and neighboring valleys were struck hard by the Third Tactical Air Force of the Eastern Air Command, the communique said.

Allied Troops Reach Thaiwagon

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 16 (AP)—Allied troops on the road to Mandalay continued to advance southeast of Tamani and reached the village of Thaiwagon, two miles north of Pinbaw, a communique said today. Other troops on the Tiddim road advanced south.

Foe Quits India, London Says

LONDON, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Tokyo radio acknowledged today that Japanese forces have retired from northeastern India into Burma.

"Japanese forces engaged in the India-Burma frontier region have been transferred into Burmese territory, where they are prepared for further battles," said the broadcast recorded by The Associated Press.

The high command also reported unremitting Chinese attempts to recapture Hengyang on the Hankow-Canton railroad. Chinese attacking from the east recaptured several strategic points and cleared the vicinity of Lienhuachen of enemy remnants.

Vigorous Jap Attack Stopped

A vigorous Japanese attack south of Hengyang was stopped in its tracks. Enemy units driving southward from the area southwest of Hengshan were checked 12 miles west of Hengyang. Heavy fighting was in progress there as well as in the outskirts of Leiyang, south of Hengyang, where reinforced Japanese units made renewed assaults.

Almost the entire Salween river front was active as the Chinese pressed their campaign to clear the Burma road. The high command said large scale attacks were begun Monday on Tengchung and the last major Japanese positions east and south of Lungling near the Burma border. American war planes supported the assaults.

Preceded by heavy artillery preparation Chinese forces drove against two fortified hills guarding the eastern and southern approaches to Lungling. The Japanese on the crest of one height were cut off and progress was made against the other.

There was no change at Sungshan, key Japanese position which denies the Chinese the use of the Burma road west of the Salween river.

Chinese Offensive Begins Near Ichang

Break Through Enemy Lines at Several Points And Are Pressing Steadily Forward—Not Clear Whether Harassing Move. Or Attempt to Take City.

By Spencer Moosa

CHUNGKING, Aug. 16—(AP)—Chinese forces have begun an offensive in the vicinity of the Yangtze river port of Ichang, westernmost Japanese stronghold in central China, the Chinese High Command announced today.

Attacked Both Banks

A communique disclosed that on the evening of Aug. 14 Chinese troops attacked on both the north and south banks of the river and by yesterday morning had broken through the enemy's lines at several points and were pressing forward steadily.

It was not made clear whether this action represented a serious attempt to take Ichang or merely was one of the periodical Chinese harassing moves in this area.

LIBERATOR BOMBERS HIT JAP NAVAL BASE OF MAKO

CHUNGKING, Aug. 16 — (AP) Liberator bombers of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's U. S. 14th air force last night raided the Japanese naval base of Mako in the tiny but strategically important Pescadores islands, it was announced today.

No details were given on the bombing, the first Allied blow against the islands, which lie between Formosa and China. Mako is approximately 1,700 miles southwest of Tokyo and 400 miles north of the Philippines.

The Pescadores, under a decision of the Cairo conference, will be returned to China, after the defeat of Japan.

Liberators also made a night attack on Takao harbor in southwestern Formosa.

U. S. Planes Aiding Attack On Tengchung

Chungking, Aug. 16 (AP) — The Chinese command announced today that large-scale attacks with support of American planes were launched Monday on Tengchung and the last major Japanese positions east and south of Lungling on the Salween river front near the Burma frontier.

All Japanese counterattacks were reported repulsed at Tengchung before the Chinese opened their drive.

After intense artillery preparation, the Chinese were said to have attacked two heavily fortified hills dominating the eastern and southern approaches to Lungling, isolating the Japanese on the crest of one and making gains on the other.

At Sungshan, important Japanese position which denies the Chinese use of the Burma road west of the Salween, the situation was reported quiet.

Yanks Hit Mako, Jap Navy Base

Chungking, Aug. 16 (AP)—American Liberators bombed the Japanese naval base of Mako in the Pescadores Islands today in the first blow at those enemy islands between Formosa and China.

The Formosa harbor of Takao in the southwest portion of the big Japanese island were bombed at night by Liberators. All the attack planes were from Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's United States 14th Air Force. No details were given on the Mako attack.

Mako lies about 1,700 miles southwest of Tokyo and 400 miles north of the Philippines.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in the Cairo pronouncement said the Pescadores would be returned to China, from which Japanese seized them, after the Nipponese are defeated. The islands are tiny specks in the Pacific but important because of their strategic position.

Patrol Planes Strike New Blows At Philippines, Spice Islands

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Thursday, Aug. 17 — (AP) Allied bombers in new blows at the Philippines and the Spice islands raided Davao, on Mindanao, and destroyed 11 airplanes at Halmahera, headquarters announced today.

A patrol plane, probably from a Dutch New Guinea base, attacked the Wharf area of Davao, principal city in the southern Philippines, Sunday night. The damage to this important port, from which the Japanese formerly sent a flow of troops and supplies to Halmahera and New Guinea, was not disclosed.

Patrol planes have attacked Mindanao half a dozen times this month. Prior to the end of July, the Philippines had been beyond effective Allied bomber range since April, 1942.

Heavy and medium bombers joined in attacks upon Loobata airdrome on Halmahera Tuesday, in which 11 Japanese planes on the ground, were destroyed or seriously damaged.

Halmahera, stepping-stone from New Guinea to the Philippines and once one of the mightiest Japanese bases in the Southwest Pacific, was characterized by Gen. Douglas MacArthur this week as "practically neutralized" by bombing attacks.

Indicating the truth of that statement, the Japanese made no attempt to intercept the bombers Tuesday, and the planes went on to attack coastal installations and enemy shipping. Low-flying Mitchells sank a small freighter and several fully-laden coastal vessels. Antiaircraft fire at some points was intense.

Southwest of Halmahera, patrolling Liberators scored two direct hits on a 3,000-ton freighter-transport which was left dead in the water.

Light Allied naval units — unidentified, but "not P-T boats" — bombarded Japanese hide-out positions on the west coast of American-occupied Biak island off northwestern Dutch New Guinea Sunday. One Australian motor launch was sunk, but its crew rescued.

In mopping-up operations on Biak 248 additional enemy dead have been counted and 52 more prisoners taken. Known Japanese casualties on Biak now total about 4,500.

A 57-ton bombing by Seventh army air force Liberators on Japan's bypassed naval stronghold of Truk in the Carolines was reported tonight in a press release by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz.

The raiders encountered nine interceptors in the strike, made Sunday, shooting down one. Several Liberators were damaged but all got back to base, Nimitz said.

Truk has been under steady neutralization since the first carrier strikes there last February. The naval base now is nearly isolated by conquest of the Marianas, more than [illegible] miles to the west of it.

The aerial neutralizing campaign against Japan's inner island outposts today kept the Nipponese along a 3,500-mile battle arc confused as to where the next invasion thrust will come.

To Japanese in the far northern Kuriles or in island groups of the southwest and Central Pacific it was the same story — of Allied warplanes harassing them, cutting off their supplies, destroying their defenses and stores of war.

(The aerial war also was carried for the first time to the Pescadores islands, between Formosa and China where American Liberators attacked the Mako naval base. The raid, announced in Chungking, was made by Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's 14th American army air force, Takao harbor, in southwestern Formosa, was raided for the second time in two days.)

While American forces constructed bases in the Marianas islands, Allied aircraft in the southwest Pacific made new slashes at Halmahera, powerful Japanese base that will provide a springboard for invasion of the southern Phillippines. Halmahera already is considered "practically neutralized," Gen. Douglas MacArthur has reported.

A delayed report from Rembert James, Associated Press war correspondent on Saipan in the Marianas, told of the construction of a formidable American base there. He said American ingenuity had done almost as much in 31 days as the Japanese did in 27 years to build a base on Saipan.

U. S. NAVAL FORCES HIT JAPANESE ON 3,500-MILE FRONT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP) American naval forces are hitting the Japanese on a 3,500-mile front in the western Pacific and hold virtual control of 8,000,000 square miles of Pacific waters and islands once dominated by the enemy.

Ralph A. Bard, acting secretary of the navy, reported this today in a review of the Pacific war in which he described the western naval front as extending from Paramushiro in the north Pacific Kurile island chain 3,500 miles south to the Bismarck sea.

Another naval front line, he said, stretches 2,400 miles from the American-controlled mid-Pacific Marshall islands in the east to the westernmost tip of New Guinea.

Naval forces throughout the length of those lines, some under command of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, others under General Douglas A McArthur, Bard said, "continue a constant harassment of positions still occupied by the enemy."

Bard also reported that approximately 11,000 enemy dead have been counted on re-conquered Guam, former American base captured by the Japanese in the first few days of the war. This, he said, brings the known total of enemy losses in the Mariana islands campaign to "at least 40,000."

"Undoubtedly," he said, "the Japanese losses considerably exceed that figure for it is known that on Guam they have themselves conducted mass burials of large numbers of their casualties. In addition, large numbers of the enemy have been sealed up in caves, pillboxes on all three of the islands (Guam, Saipan and Tinian) that we have taken."

Our total losses in these operations, including wounded as well as killed, have been very much lighter than the enemy's, he added.

The acting secretary said there is "ample evidence" from intercepted Japanese news broadcasts to indicate that "our successful attacks in the Marianas have been a severe shock to the Japanese psychology." He also reported that on Guam there was a notable "absence of a final Japanese suicide attack. It is not known at present whether the enemy's will to make such an attack failed or whether the impact of our forces unbalanced him to such an extent that he was unable to do so."

In the Solomons and the Bismarcks, he said, the enemy is still making some effort to keep his remaining forces alive. Light naval forces conduct frequent bombardments of enemy positions and are steadily destroying "such little barge traffic as the enemy is able to carry on." Similar support, he said, is being given in northern and western New Guinea.

Shots Killing Japanese Drown Out Church Music

By The Associated Press.

AGANA, Guam, Aug. 6 (Delayed)—Strange things may be seen in Agana, ruined capital of Guam.

In a tent next to a ruined church, services were held today with a score of men attending and a portable organ playing.

A squad of men, looking for a Japanese who had entered the town during the night, worked within fifty yards of the church. There, in the midst of the hymn singing, they found the lone enemy. Shots drowned out the organ for twenty seconds and the Japanese lay still.

The organist never missed a note; none of the singers even turned around.

JON HALL'S WIFE IS NOT WORRIED

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—Actress Frances Langford, now on tour of southwest Pacific military camps, tonight appeared to treat lightly the report of a Hollywood melee between her husband, Actor Jon Hall, and Tommy Dorsey.

She said "Jon and I are so much in love that neither the brawl, if it took place, nor anything else, could separate us. After seven years of marriage we still are wonderfully happy and understand each other perfectly."

Hollywood reports said Mr. Hall suffered a broken nose and head and face cuts in the melee in a Hollywood apartment August 5. He told reporters hostilities started in playful manner, after he put his arme around Mr. Dorsey's wife, Actress Pat Dane.

BELGIAN RADIO CLAIMS DR. GOERDELER SEIZED

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—(AP) The Nazi-controlled Belgian radio said today that Dr. Karl Goerdeler, Prussian industrialist and former lord mayor of Leipzig, was arrested last Saturday on a charge of having "taken part in the plot against the Fuehrer."

The Federal Communications commission recorded the transmission.

One-time Hitler's commissar for the control of prices, Goerdeler had been sought since the announcement of the bombing attempt against Hitler July 20. The Nazis offered a reward of 1,000,000 marks $400,000 by old exchange rates) for his arrest. In turn, Goerdeler was reported to have had notices posted offering a 10-mark reward for Hitler.

U. S. Applies Pressure To Argentina

Freezes Gold Shipments As Economic Rebuff.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16—(AP)—The United States applied a single premonitory turn of the economic screw to recalcitrant Argentina today, halting the homeward flow from this country of gold owned by the South American nation.

It was the first positive action since Secretary of State Hull several weeks ago described Argentina as a "deserter" from the cause of the United Nations.

Argentina has been withdrawing gold from the United States for several months, shipments aggregating $20,000,000 to $30,000,000. The Treasury's foreign funds control divison recently refused to permit a shipment from New Orleans of about $2,000,000, and it was understood that no further shipments will be allowed pending clarification of the diplomatic situation.

Decline Comment

The State and Treasury Departments declined to comment. It was not clear whether the halting of gold shipments might be a forerunner to more drastic economic action.

AUG 17 1944

The possibility of a general "freeze" of Argentina's assets has been under consideration for months. The order actually has been drawn, but never issued.

Secretary Hull's description of Argentina as a "deserter" followed the recall for consuitations of Ambassador Norman Armour. Great Britain also recalled its ambassador.

Subsequently, the other American republics reaffirmed a policy of non-recognition of the present military Junta government in Argentina.

The stop on gold shipments is not regarded here as a particularly drastic curb.

Argentina, in effect, now acquires the status of a "neutral," and loses a preferred stauts.

Neutral countries are not Allied or associated nations. As a result, Latin American republics firmly aligned with the United Nations may withdraw gold from this country.

There was no available estimate of the value of Argentina's gold in the United States, nor of that country's other assets in this country.

ICKES WOULD RULE U.S. LAND

Asks Disposal Control for His Department.

Washington, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—Calling on Congress to enact a surplus property disposal law that would prevent a repetition of "the speculators' paradise that followed world war 1," Secretary of the Interior Ickes proposed today that his own department be given the job of handling Government land disposition.

Mr. Ickes indorsed the pending Murray-Taft-Stewart bill in testimony before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, saying that he thought it set up the necessary safeguards for thwarting "the cheats and chiselers" in sales of billions of dollars worth of unneeded war goods.

The Interior Department, with long experience in administering 13,000,000 acres of publicly owned lands, should be designated to handle the task of disposing of additional thousands of acres that were acquired for war purposes, he said.

Proposes Amendment.

He proposed an amendment to the Murray-Talf-Stewart bill to give it that authority, rather than leaving disposition under control of the over-all administrator and various agencies which now hold title to the land.

Mr. Ickes suggested that some large tracts be cut up into small owner-operated farms, or used as grazing lands.

He said that 15,000 acres of irrigable land in the Columbia Basin project, acquired by the Army for an airport, could be converted to small farms under the reclamation laws. The Murco bombing range, 157,000 acres in Kern, San Bernardino and Los Angeles counties, California, contains grazing lands "eminently suited for administration as part of California grazing district No. 1," he said.

Similarly, he said, 14,000 acres of the Wendover bombing range in Utah could be incorporated in grazing lands for lease at a profit to the Government.

Offers 'Multiple Renting' Plan.

Also indorsing the Murray-Taft-Steward bill, Chairman Maury Maverick of the Smaller War Plants Corporation put forward a proposed "multiple rental" plan whereby small firms would be able to lease space in large war plants from the SWPC or community associations or cooperatives which would buy them. This, said Mr. Maverick, would prevent the plants from being "sold to monopolistic interests which might buy them and close them to protect their own businesses from competition."

Will Clayton, Surplus War Property Administrator, told the committee he disapproved of the land sale provisions of the pending bill which he said would place "impossible restrictions" upon the administrator. He favored in principle the requirement that former owners of lands sold to the Government for war purposes be given first chance to buy them back, but questioned whether this should be done if it meant selling the land at below the market price.

Mr. Clayton said that Congress merely should state its objectives in general terms and leave the administrator free to carry them out as conditions dictated.

Fish Replies in Verse To Ickes's 'Fry' Attack

Reads Own Composition Before House to Answer Secretary

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP).—Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, of New York, turned to verse today in replying to the assertion by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, before the recent American Labor party convention that Mr. Fish should be "fried not only on one side but on both."

"If there is any frying to be done," Representative Fish declared in a House speech, "I want to have something to say about it."

He then read the following poem, titled "Reply to Secretary Ickes":

American Labor party, here we are,
Browder, Hillman, and F. D. R.;
We've come to give you the government's keys,
And I'm their spokesman, Harold Ickes,

AUG 17 1944

Fellow Communists, we have got the tin,
And are all out to do Tom Dewey in;
We'll dish it out against Curran and Fish,
For we are the United Communists.
I'm your spokesman, aged, aging Ickes;
Field Marshal Harry Hopkins and I agrees—
Up with the hammer, sickle and red flag,
And a Communist victory will be in the bag.
I want you Reds all to know, however fickle,
That the Communist Labor party is my selection
To assure the fourth termer's re-election;
Forward to victory, under the hammer and sickle.

Now, Field Marshal Ickes, let me say
That Communist, Red left-wing condemnation
In my district is the very best possible commendation;
So, lay on, you Reds, I'll never give way.

Field Marshal Ickes, you are on the way out;
Invincible in peace, and invisible in war;
After the election, you'll be given the door;
This is the end of your twelve years' pout.

Let Jabberwock Ickes, with eyes aflame,
Do his utmost with his foreign Red flag;
The American people are ready just the same;
They'll never ask nor give quarter to any Red rag.

One two, one two, and through and through,
The voting blade will go snicker-snack
And aging Marshal Ickes with his Red pack,
On election day, will go sadly galumphing back.

The Congressman's office reported the poem "was entirely of Mr. Fish's composition."

War Veterans' Treatment Will Get a Full Inquiry

Army and Navy Hear Returned Men Do Menial Tasks

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP).—Full investigation of reports of inconsiderate treatment of war veterans returned from overseas was promised to Senator Guy Cordon, Republican, of Oregon, by the War and Navy Departments in letters the Senator made public today.

Senator Cordon asked for the investigation when he received reports that service men upon return to this country had received menial tasks at camps and had not received leave or treatment their war records warranted.

Acting Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson said investigation of the charges had failed to substantiate them and only one instance was found in which soldiers were asked to assist in menial tasks. This, he said, was in a port where a shortage of personnel caused the returned veterans to be asked to assist with the work for a short time to expedite their assignments to reception stations.

Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal said the only specific place where reports of harsh treatment of returned naval men could be traced by the complaints was at the naval construction battalion replacement depot, Camp Parks, Shoemaker, Calif. He added that the commandant of the 12th naval district had been directed to conduct an investigation.

Taft Cites Army Vote Plan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP).—Senator Taft said today the War Department had created "a get-out-the-vote organization that would be the envy of any political organization in the country" in its instructions to officers on carrying out provisions of the soldier-voting law.

The instructions, Senator Taft said, direct that company or unit voting officers be appointed to personally "assist" troops in obtaining Federal or state ballots for the November election by supplying information and ballot application forms.

"They do say in the instructions that 'no soldier shall be ordered to vote or marched to the voting place,' but it seems to me this business of personal solicitation is going a little too far," Senator Taft told reporters.

VIERECK COUNSEL PRESSES MISTRIAL

Washington, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—Counsel for George Sylvester Viereck, one of twenty-six sedition conspiracy defendants, moved today for a mistrial on the ground that a new book, "Black Mail," was prejudicing the public against the persons on trial and perhaps had reached jurors. The attorney, Ben Lindas, told presiding Justice Edward C. Eicher that the book contained a deliberate attack on Viereck and that Washington bookstores were selling out the volume as fast as supplies were received.

Mr. Lindas said that the book, which was not identified further, "attempts to give the inference to the public that it is published with the consent and possible assistance of the very Government department [Justice] which is actively prosecuting this trial." He added that the book contained an alleged bill of particulars which gives more details of the charges against his client than he has been able to obtain from the prosecutors.

No immediate action was taken on the motion.

LETTER READ IN TRIAL WOULD BURY THE JEWS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 — (AP) A letter advocating "burying the Jews here and driving the Communists into the Pacific and Atlantic oceans, through civil war if necessary," and signed with the name of Frank W. Clark, chairman of the National Liberty party, said that was one of the things the party stood for.

It was one of more than 160 exhibits finally admitted by Justice Edward C. Eicher after several days of argument. The defense had contended that their seizure, in a Federal Bureau of Investigation raid on German American Bund headquarters in Los Angeles, was illegal.

The Clark letter was addressed to the Western states convention of the anti-Communist federation. That organization, other documents showed, had the same street address as the bund.

Byrnes Proposes Jobless Benefits Up to $20 per Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP) A move for unemployment benefits up to $20 a week gathered headway at the Capitol today with the reported backing of War Mobilization Director James P. Byrnes.

House backers of the Senate-defeated Kilgore bill, which would have set Federal standards up to $35 a week, gave indications for a time that they might settle for the lower figures, but later Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) announced he will make a floor fight for the Kilgore bill with the maximum pay cut to $25.

Endorses George Bill

Byrnes, in an executive session of the House Ways and Means committee, endorsed the principle of the George "state's rights" bill passed by the Senate last week, with the suggestion that the Federal government set up minimum standards ranging up to $20.

Celler, immediately after Byrnes' appearance in the committee room, said he would accept a compromise that would guarantee "twenty or twenty-five dollars a week" with Uncle Sam supplementing funds of poorer states.

Late in the day, however, he issued a statement calling the Senate bill a gold brick and announcing his plan to fight for the $25 maximum for unemployed veterans and displaced war workers with dependents.

The House itself, he said, must decide whether it "shall concur in the abdication of responsibility to the American people represented by the George bill."

The George bill, he asserted, omits participation of management, labor and agriculture in reconversion plans for specific industries and areas and fails to provide for continuation of a national employment service.

"The issue before the House is whether there shall be an average benefit to an unemployed war veteran or war worker of $14 as provided by the George bill or an average of $22 as provided by the Kilgore measure," Cellar said.

CIO Against Resolution

The CIO national executive committee jumped into the battle again with a resolution calling the George bill "one of the most unprincipled fakes ever attempted on the American people," and asserting that it "does nothing for the workers and the servicemen."

It said it would make a campaign test on the records of congressmen backing the George bill.

James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers union, joined the chorus in a letter to Representative Patman (D-Tex), asserting that enactment of the surplus property disposal bill now before the House, together with the George bill, would "make it certain that the farmers and wage earners of this country will be put through the economic wringer of concentrated economic power and monopoly in the transition and post-war periods."

The Senate bill does not undertake to boost state payments, which now vary, but guarantees the solvency of state funds and makes eligible for benefits some 3,500,000 government war workers. Before accepting it, the Senate turned thumbs down on the bill of Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) to set uniform rates with the Federal government augmenting state funds.

Celler Accepts Compromise

After Byrnes testified, Representative Celler (D., N. Y.), leader of a House bloc fighting for the Kilgore measure, said he would accept a compromise that would guarantee "twenty or twenty-five dollars a week," with Uncle Sam supplementing funds of poorer states.

"The Kilgore bill has been much misunderstood," the New Yorker declared. "Its opponents have failed to point out that it seeks to do something to avert unemployment, and have stressed the proposed $35 weekly payments and the fact that organized labor is backing it."

Byrnes was reported to have told the committee that some 3,000,000 employes of concerns hiring less than eight persons and not now covered should be made eligible for assistance.

The War Mobilization Director suggested, committee members said, that benefits be paid through the states for a maximum period of 26 weeks, with a guarantee of not less than $20 weekly for pesons eligible for top benefits. The government, presumably, would augment four of those states not able to pay the $20.

Committeemen said Byrnes told them that in proposing expansion of unemployment benefits he had in mind "preventing the necessity for creating another WPA."

After hearing Byrnes, the committee recessed until tomorrow.

G.O.P. CHIEFTAN BACKS NEGROES IN GEORGIA DISPUTE

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. — (AP) Declaring the New Deal had "slapped down" the legitimate claims of Negroes, Republican National Chairman Herbert Brownell, Jr., said today he had taken action to sue for the restoration of a slate of Georgia Republican electors selected by both Negroes and whites.

Brownell said that Democratic Gov. Ellis Arnall had upheld Georgia's Democratic Secretary of State, John B. Wilson, in certifying a rival group of Georgia Republican electors selected without any voice by Negroes.

"This is one more evidence," Brownell said in a press conference, "that New Deal leaders who slapped down the legitimate claims of the Negroes of this country at the New Deal convention in Chicago are maintaining that same attitude at the present time."

Brownell said the action would be filed in Georgia against the state secretary and that it would be carried to high courts if necessary.

Asserting the state secretary had disregaded the electors chosen by the Negro-white faction and certified by the Republican National committee, the national chairman said the group recognized by the state official consisted of "bogus Republicans." Both groups had announced for the Dewey-Bricker ticket.

Brownell made his statement immediately prior to conferring with a group of about 18 Eastern seaboard Negro Republicans, who, he said, had offered to help the Republican campaign.

The group, headed by Bishop David H. Sims of the African Methodist Episcopal church of Philadelphia, included representatives from cities ranging from Boston to Washington.

Commenting on Wisconsin's primary election yesterday, Brownell said the number of Republican votes cast was "sensational" and that it augured a Dewey-Bricker victory in that state in the fall election.

AUG 17 1944

Brownell conferred earlier today with Jacob France, Republican national committeeman, and Galen Tait, Republican state chairman, both of Maryland, and said they reported a Republican trend that would carry the Republicans to victory there in November.

FORTUNE POLL REPORTS GAIN FOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. — (AP) Americans favor re-election of President Roosevelt over the Republican nominee, Thomas E. Dewey by 52.5 to 43.9 per cent, Fortune Magazine's latest public opinion survey disclosed today.

The survey showed that Roosevelt's lead, now 8.6 per cent, had risen from 6.5 per cent when the last survey was announced July 8.

Fortune said regardless of personal wishes, 72.4 per cent of the public now expects Roosevelt to win in November, as against 66.4 per cent who believed he would win when its earlier poll was taken. It added that 19.4 per cent expect Dewey to win, and 8.2 per cent don't know.

Dewey Hits 'Four-Power' Alliance to Rule Peace, Pleads for Small Nations

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP) Gov. Thomas E. Dewey declared tonight that if the Washington post-war security conference resulted in a permanent four-power alliance "to dominate the world," the United Nations will have descended to power politics and "we will have lost the war before we have won it."

In a statement frankly interpreted by aides as critical of proposals made by President Roosevelt and Russian representatives for an enduring partnership between the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China, the Republican presidential nominee insisted that as soon as the world was brought to order by the Big Four, the small nations must have a voice in deciding their future destinies.

Speaks for G.O.P.

Telling reporters he believed he spoke the views of the Republican party, Dewey said that "in the kind of permanent world organization we seek, all nations, great and small, must be assured of their full rights."

He had received "disturbing reports," Dewey said, that the conversations which were to begin between diplomatic representatives of the four big Allied countries at the old Georgetown mansion of Dumbarton Oaks in Washington next week might be aimed toward a permanent four-power military alliance.

"It would be a tragedy if the coming conference among the British, Russian, Chinese and ourselves should be distracted from the task of planning for a genuine world organization for peace by proposals which amount merely to a four-power military alliance to control the world," he said in an 800-word statement handed to newsmen who gathered in the Executive offices.

To this he added, when reporters asked him to put it on the record, the following statement:

"If we get off on the wrong foot of cynical power politics, we will have lost the war before we have won it."

Dewey himself declined to elaborate, but intimates said he interpreted recent statements of President Roosevelt as indicating that the administration favored the formation of a world security organization in which the four great nations, with a rotating fifth power, would have dominating roles.

He was said to interpret the Russian viewpoint as expressed by that country's representatives, as favorable to permanent four-power control of any organization that might be formed.

Hull Silent

In Washington, after the Dewey statement apparently had been called to Security Hull called to Secretary Hull's attention, State department officials said there would be no comment now.

Declaring that the problem of future peace had two aspects, Dewey said that the United States, Britain, Russia and China must maintain their present unity to defeat Germany and Japan "wholly and conclusively" and must render those countries "permanently powerless to renew tyranny and attack."

"I have consistently advocated the maintenance for some time after the war of close military cooperation among the four powers so that if the Germans or the Japanese hereafter seek to evade their disarmament, we may strike quickly, together and with overwhelming might," he said.

"That is a specific responsibility of the victors. It is an essential part of winning the war. This responsibility to keep Germany and Japan disarmed should be shared with liberated peoples, but it cannot immediately be delegated to a world-wide organization while such organization is yet new and untried."

Cites Peace Factors

He added that in organizing for permanent peace different factors were involved.

"In some of these proposals there appears to be a cynical intention that the four great Allied powers shall continue for all time to dominate the world by force and through individual agreements as to spheres of influence," Dewey declared.

"I hope and pray that no such reactionary purpose will be allowed to dominate the conferences, else the peace of the world will, as surely as night follows day, again be destroyed."

The fact that the four nations had developed overwhelming military power did not give them the right to organize the world so that they might always be free to do as they chose, Dewey argued, adding:

"That would be the rankest form of imperialism. Such a proposal would be rejected by the American people."

Dewey said that peace was a task "of cooperation among equal and sovereign nations." He did not foreclose, he said, the likelihood that Germany and Japan, under reorganized governments, might sometime join the international security organization.

"Force is essential in any realistic program for the permanent maintenance of peace," Dewey said. "But in the long-term solution of interntaional problems peace and security cannot be left to the sanction of force alone. To leave them exclusively in the hands of a permanent military alliance of four victorious powers would be immoral."

AUG 17 1944

Text of Dewey Statement On Post-War Policy Aims

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—(AP) Following is the text of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's statement today on a postwar international organization:

Simultaneously with smashing military victories which bring the day of peace ever nearer, it is good that representatives of the British, Russian and Chinese governments will meet shortly with our State department for preliminary discussion of a permanent international organization to maintain the peace. Partial proposed plans have already been made public by the American, British and Russian governments. The American people are agreed upon the need for world organization. It is a bipartisan objective. It has been repeatedly urged by the Republican party and its leaders. The future of the world will depend upon the ideals, the sound thinking and the justice of the results achieved at these conferences.

I have been deeply disturbed by some of the recent reports concerning the forthcoming conference. These indicate that it is planned to subject the nations of the world, great and small, permanently to the coercive power of the four nations holding this conference.

Axis Must Be Crushed

In order that there may be no apprehension, I should like to make clear some fundamentals as I see them. The problem of future peace has two aspects. One relates to Germany and Japan. They must, of course, be wholly and conclusively defeated. More than that, they must be rendered permanently powerless to renew tyranny and attack. Their defeat will be achieved primarily by the united power of Britain, Russia, China and the United States. To insure that Germany and Japan shall never again be able to disrupt the peace of the world, these four Allies must maintain their present unity.

I have consistently advocated the maintenance for some time after the war of close military cooperation among the four powers so that if the Germans or the Japanese hereafter seek to evade their disarmament, we may strike quickly, together and with overwhelming might. That is a specific responsibility of the victors. It is an essential part of the winning of the war. This responsibility to keep Germany and Japan disarmed should be shared with liberated peoples, but it cannot immediately be delegated to a world-wide organization while such organization is yet new and untried.

In organizing permanent peace among the rest of the world, after the difficult post-war period, a very different attitude must be taken. In some of these proposals there appears to be a cynical intention that the four great Allied powers shall continue for all time to dominate the world by force and through individual agreements as to spheres of influence. I hope and pray that no such reactionary purpose will be allowed to dominate the conferences, else the peace of the world will as surely as night follows day again be destroyed.

Assails Peace "By Coercion"

The fact that we four have developed overwhelming power as against our enemies does not give us the right to organize the world so that we four will always be free to do what we please while the rest of the world is made subject to our coercion. That would be the rankest form of imperialism. Such a proposal would be rejected by the American people.

Within the area of peace-loving nations, peace is a task of cooperation among equal and sovereign nations. Force is essential in any realistic program for the permanent maintenance of peace. But in the long term solution of international problems, peace and security cannot be left to the sanction of force alone. To leave them exclusively in the hands of a permanent military alliance of four victorious powers would be immoral. It would be a denial of the ideals for which we are fighting.

Fighting for Freedom

The millions of Americans are not fighting and dying to dominate the world or impose our will upon freedom-loving people. We are fighting for our own freedom and to establish once and for all the rights of people everywhere to live in peace and freedom, safeguarded from the coercion of more powerful nations.

As Americans we believe with all our hearts in the equality and the rights of small nations and minorities. We believe in the essential equality and dignity of the individual wherever he lives. We believe in his right to freedom as well as our own. We do not believe that we or any other power has the inherent right to control his destiny. We are fighting this war to a victorious conclusion for these very principles. They must not be lost in a cynical peace by which any four powers dominate the earth by force.

Hits "Power Politics"

We must not sink into the abyss of power politics. We must rise to a new high level of cooperation and joint effort among respected and sovereign nations to work for and to preserve the peace of the world through all the years to come, based on freedom, equality and justice.

The kind of world organization we seek must concern itself with the basic causes of world disorder. It must promote a world opinion that will influence the nations to right conduct. It must develop international law. It must create an international tribunal to deal with international disputes.

In the kind of permanent world organization we seek, all nations, great and small, must be assured of their full rights. For such an organization, military force must be the servant, not the master. Only thus can we achieve the fellowship of peoples which is the essence of lasting peace. It would be a tragedy if the coming conference among the British, Russians, Chinese and ourselves should be distracted from the task of planning for a genuine world organization for peace by proposals which amount merely to a permanent four power military alliance to control the world.

To his prepared statement, Dewey added the following at a news conference:

"If we get off on the wrong foot of cynical power politics, we will have lost the war before we have won it."

Senate Comment Differs On Dewey's Declaration

AUG 17 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP) Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's warning against "cynical power politics" today highlighted one of the knotty problems facing framers of the post-war peace:

How to give small nations a voice in the world peace-enforcing agency and yet satisfy demands, notably from Russians, that the little countries not be permitted to impede swift action to quell threatened aggression.

There was no immediate comment from the State Department on the statement by Governor Dewey, who said he was deeply disturbed by reports indicating that at the Dumbarton Oaks conference opening next Monday "it is planned to subject the nations of the world, great and small, permanently to the coercive power of the four nations holding this conference."

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) called Dewey's statement a "timely warning." Chairman Connally (D., Texas) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee had no immediate comment.

Senator Thomas (D., Okla.) said: "Dewey's remarks are strangely reminiscent of the Republican chant of the last war. It sounds like a theme song of isolation. If the big powers don't get together and form an organization with power to back it up, certainly the little fellows can't be expected to do anything. They (Republicans) are beginning to sidestep, question and straddle. Whatever is proposed from now on will be opposed by Dewey."

Hatch's Comment

Senator Hatch (D., N. M.): "Governor Dewey is to be commended for expressing opposition to a mere military alliance as an effective means to preserve the peace of the world. I truly hope he and the responsible leadership of his party will now come out for and strongly support world organization of all peace-loving nations, backed with force to prevent aggression and the use of which for such purpose will never be in doubt."

The question of the role of small nations has been under discussion for some time.

In a White House statement last June, President Roosevelt outlined a plan for a post-war peace organization, including a council, "elected annually by the fully representative body of all nations, which would include the four major nations (the United States, Britain, Russia and China) and a suitable number of other nations."

The next day Senator Bridges (R-NH) urged Mr. Roosevelt to say whether little nations will have a representative vote on a proposed international council or will be "subordinated to the big four."

Recently, in an unofficial magazine article, a Russian writer suggested that it would be wise to leave decisions on the use of force to quell aggression to powerful countries with arms on hand. It was claimed one reason for the failure of the League of Nations was the mechanism which allegedly enabled small nations to delay or block the countries which had the power to enforce peace.

American officials have indicated the opinion that a way can be found to give the small nations their say, and yet assure speedy decisions by the world organization. How this would be done has not been disclosed but it was hinted that the voting rules might be so arranged as to prevent a minority of small nations from blocking action by the council.

It is believed that the Soviet delegates will be willing to go along if measures for giving the weaker nations a voice in decisions provide also for adequate peace enforcement.

Oppose Police Force

Neither the United States nor Great Britain favors an international police force. The Russians have advanced one idea that the powers set up an international air-force.

As a counter proposal, Washington has studied a scheme under which each nation would set aside a portion of its armed force as its contribution to policing the world. The special force would not be under international control, but could be called into action without a declaration of war. And would be maintained at agreed strength, disposed to move at a moment's notice.

Small nations as well as large powers could participate in this plan.

Mead Asks World Agency For Enforcing of Peace

Says Politicians 'Prevented Soldier Victory in 1918'

ROCHESTER, Aug. 16 (AP).—United States Senator James M. Mead, of Buffalo, called today "for a strong international society with powers to police by arms if necessary" to insure a permanent victory after this war.

Senator Mead told delegates to the seventy-second annual convention of the Firemen's Association of the State of New York that "politicians lacking the discipline of the people prevented the soldier victory in 1918" and declared "war makers of tomorrow" must not be allowed again to endanger permanent peace.

He said "dependents of America's fighting men who have given their lives must be the everlasting care of the nation."

The association protested the abolition of the State War Council's fire-training program and demanded its restoration under the jurisdiction of the State Education Department.

The delegates, concluding the convention, said in a resolution "a suitable fire-training program must be restored to the volunteer firemen" and urged its 200,000 members "to devote their influence and efforts to that end."

Other resolutions:

Established a committee to investigate the "desirability . . . of enactment of a law placing all volunteer firemen under the workmen's compensation law in order to secure increased benefits for them in the performance of their duty."

HAGUE ASSAILED ON SERVICE LISTS

AUG 17 1944

AUG 17 1944

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 16 — (AP) Despite a War department ruling that the service addresses of members of the armed forces "be kept secret for reasons of national security," the Hudson County Democratic organization, headed by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, has obtained and is using a confidential list of servicemen's names and addresses, Republican Gov. Walter E. Edge said today.

The War department stipulated the lists were to be used solely for the purpose of mailing general election ballots to service men, Edge continued, and State Adjutant General James I. Bowers long ago informed county clerks and other officials handling the lists that they were "absolutely secret and confidential."

Edge asserted he had received an affidavit alleging the list furnished to another county, which he did not name, also had been used by a political organization.

He said he had authorized an investigation, which an aide predicted would be made by the State Law department, to "determine who is responsible for this breach of faith and violation of trust."

If any state or county officials are found to have been involved in giving out the lists, the aide continued, the Legislature might institute impeachment proceedings.

Of the more than 308,000 names and addresses certified to county clerks by the adjutant general for use in the mailing of service ballots, 50,000 were those of Hudson residents.

Edge said form letters had been sent to Hudson service men "as far away as China, soliciting their political support and their votes against the revised constitution" of New Jersey supported by the state Republican organization.

PREDICTS VETERANS WILL ENHANCE U. S.

Cleveland, Aug. 16 (A. P.).—Millions of well-trained and disciplined soldier-citizens in the post-war period will be America's greatest assurance of stability in the opinion of Paul G. Hoffman president of the Studebaker Corporation.

In an address read last night to the fifty-first conference of International Association of Police Chiefs by Col. Willard Chevalier, vice-president of McGraw-Hill Publishing Company and publishers of Business Week Mr. Hoffman dispelled fears that the returning service man would be a problem to law officers.

Terming it sheer nonsense, Mr Hoffman said that "these veterans constitute one of the most regidly disciplined armies of all time. They are killing because it is necessary, not because they find the dirty business to their liking." He cited kindnesses of the Italian and Normandy fronts by American soldiers as proof that they are essentially unchanged will present no problem in discipline.

"Quite the contrary," he continued, "from the standpoint of building a better America—the goal toward which we are all striving—these men will bring youth, courage, daring, resourcefulness and initiative."

Medal-of-Honor Soldier Gets His Fondest Wish

Sgt. Huff Returns From Anzio Exploits to His Family

CLEVELAND, Tenn., Aug. 16 (AP).—A war hero and his family had what they most wanted tonight—a chance to be together—as Sergeant Paul Huff, wearer of the Medal of Honor, came back to a tearfully happy host of relatives.

The slim young paratrooper came here from Chattanooga where he landed in an Army plane from Charlotte, N. C.

"My Lord!" exclaimed Sergeant Huff from the opened door of the big transport as he glimpsed a score or more relatives rushing to meet him. A moment later he was engulfed by three young nieces, the first to reach him. Then it was a heartfelt "Pop!" as he stepped into the embrace of his father, Isham Huff, who had said it was "the happiest day of my life."

Sergeant Huff was decorated with the nation's highest award for action at the Anzio beachhead which resulted in the routing of more than a hundred Germans and the killing or capturing of two score more.

Colombia Gets 2 U. S. Boats

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 16 (AP).—Two eighty-three-foot United States Coast Guard patrol boats were transferred to the Colombian Navy here today. Captain J. E. Whitbeck, 7th Naval District Coast Guard officer, made the presentation to Lieutenant Commander E. Fallon, of Colombia. Colombian crews, trained at the Miami naval training center, went aboard immediately.

REDUCTION SCHEDULED IN TORPEDO OUTPUT

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—(AP) A gradual reduction in torpedo production has been scheduled for October in four plants due to the "outstanding successes" of American task forces, submarines, and air operations in restricting Japanese shipping, the Ninth Naval district announced today.

The Navy said the revised schedule, which it termed "at least a temporary readjustment of production," would affect the Amertorp corporation plants at Fores Park, Ill., and St. Louis, Mo.; the Naval Torpedo station at Alexandria, Va., and the Naval Torpedo station at Newport, R. I.

Employes will be given adequate notice in advance of the cutbacks and a gradual transferral of workers caused by the lower production quotas will be assisted by government agencies, management and labor, the Navy said. The War Manpower commission said each of the plants affected is in a group 1 labor area with the exception of the Amertorp factory at St. Louis.

LOW VOTE POLLED BY PROGRESSIVES

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 16 — (AP) The Progressive party, once a mighty power in Wisconsin politics came close to being counted out of the November general election today as tabulation of yesterday's primary was recorded.

Wisconsin law provides that candidates must get five per cent of the average vote cast for the party's candidate for governor in the previous two general elections.

The Progressives not only suffered a damaging blow when Orland S. Loomis, elected governor in 1942, died before his inauguration, but because of his victory, found themselves in a spot in the 1944 primary. Loomis polled nearly 550,000 votes in losing to Republican Julius Heil in 1940, and nearly 400,000 in 1942 when he defeated "Julius the Just." Thus, the party's four aspirants for the gubernatorial nomination in yesterday's test, needed about 23,600 votes to qualify.

As Progressive returns showed up in painfully small driblets, there appeared a possibility that the party would not get the needed percentage.

Republicans, casting about 75 per cent of the total vote of approximately 360,000, swept in acting Governor Walter Goodland as their candidate for governor, and selected U.S. Senator Alexander Wiley as their nominee.

Democratic victories were scored by Representative Thad Wasielewski and Andrew Biemiller, over C.I.O.-supported candidates in the Fourth and Fifth districts, both in Milwaukee, and Daniel Hoan, former Socialist mayor of Milwaukee, candidate for governor.

Guam Hero Who Eluded Japs Divorces Wife

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 16.—(AP) Chief Radioman George Ray Tweed, 42, who was rescued from Guam after 31 months of eluding the Japanese, has been granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from his wife, Mary Frances Tweed, 27, records in Superior Judge Jacob Weinberger's court revealed today.

The surprising development was disclosed as Tweed departed to return to active duty after a 30-day furlough, two weeks of which were spent in San Diego. He has been recently visiting his mother and other relatives in the vicinity of Portland, Ore.

Tweed filed the divorce complaint July 26, nine days after arriving here for a reunion with his family. Mrs. Tweed and her children—Ronal Cross, 9, a son by a first marriage and Robert, 3—were evacuated from Guam in October, 1941. She filed a waiver of contest to the complaint.

THREAT OF DRAFT INVOKED BY NAVY IN COAST STRIKE

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16. — (AP) The Navy today invoked the "severest sanctions" in efforts to force machinists to resume full war production in five San Francisco machine shops.

The sanctions included immediate selective service induction of all employes refusing to comply with return to work order, "denial of further employment," and withdrawal of all supplemental gasoline privileges. The Navy did not say whether the men could be employed in non-essential industries.

"These are probably the severest sanctions invoked, and although similar to those used during the transit strike in Philadelphia are slightly more severe," Rear Adm. H. G. Bowen, who took over the five machine shops on presidential order, said.

Officials of Lodge 68 of the Machinists' Union (A.F.L.), were not immediately available for comment.

However, E. F. Dillon, business agent, commented yesterday, after the Navy had seized five of the 104 "uptown" shops: "I don't know of any law that can make the men go back to work. I have no way of knowing whether the men will return to their jobs.

"We are law-abiding citizens, but we think we understand our rights. I am not prepared to make any statement regarding what the individual workers will do."

The controversy, involving overtime work, started last March. The union, negotiating a new contract with the employers, banned overtime, contending it was not necessary to fulfill government orders, and that sufficient manpower was available for the 48-hour week.

Both the regional and National War Labor boards ordered the union to rescind the ban.

The union refused and ordered its members not to work at the Federal Mogul corporation, which supplies bearings to other plants in this vicinity. It was the only plant actually struck, but workers remained away from the other four shops.

Several members of the union refused to comply with orders of the business agents, Dillon and Harry Hook, and reported for work.

In the last few days more machinists have gone back on the job, but Adm. Bowen's report today showed a considerable number still remained out. The report indicated about 535 employes were affected in the five seized shops.

DISPATCHES FROM SPAIN QUOTED ADVICES FROM THE FRENCH BORDER AS SAYING THAT THE MAQUIS, ACTING UNDER PRE-ARRANGED PLANS, HAD LAUNCHED A SERIES OF ATTACKS UPON GERMAN GARRISONS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE AS SOON AS THEY RECEIVED NEWS OF THE ALLIED LANDINGS.

BY SUNDOWN LAST NIGHT THEY WERE SAID TO HAVE SURROUNDED A SCORE OF TOWNS, INCLUDING AUCH, AGEN, MONTAUBAN, RODEZ, PERIGUEX, TULLE, AURILLAC AND LIMOGES.

SERIOUS GERMAN RESISTANCE WAS EXPECTED AT LIMOGES, THESE ADVICES SAID, BUT THE OTHER TOWNS MENTIONED WERE REPORTED MANNED BY GARRISONS OF LESS THAN 1,000 MEN EACH.

IN PARIS, THE POPULACE WAS SAID TO HAVE GONE WILD WITH JOY AT NEWS OF THE ALLIED LANDINGS ALONG THE RIVIERA, AND SOME REPORTS FROM THE FRENCH BORDER SAID SPORADIC FIGHTING HAD BROKEN OUT IN THE STREETS BETWEEN COLLABORATIONISTS AND PATRIOTS WHO ASSEMBLED IN THE STREETS SINGING THE "MARSELLAISE." GERMAN POLICE WERE REPORTED UNABLE TO CONTROL SPONTANEOUS PATRIOT DEMONSTRATIONS.

A MADRID DISPATCH TO THE DAILY MAIL SAID THE GERMANS HAD MADE BONFIRES OF ARMY ARCHIVES AND FILES OF VICHY OFFICIALS TO KEEP THEM FROM ALLIED HANDS. #

LONDON, AUG 16-(AP)-THE GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY IN NORTHWEST FRANCE WAS REPORTED IN CHAOTIC FLIGHT UNDER THE THREAT OF A NEW ENCIRCLEMENT TONIGHT, WHILE IN THE SOUTH OF FRANCE THE AMERICAN SEVENTH ARMY THRUST INLAND AS MUCH AS EIGHT MILES FROM A FIRMLY-ESTABLISHED 70-MILE BEACHHEAD.

THE DAY OF SWIFTLY-DEVELOPING ALLIED SUCCESSES ENHANCED THE POSSIBILITY THAT THE BATTLE OF FRANCE MIGHT BE DECIDED IN A MATTER OF WEEKS OR EVEN DAYS, WITH A CHANCE THAT THE GRAND-SCALE PINCERS MOVEMENT MIGHT QUICKLY DOMINATE ALL THE COUNTRY XROM THE MEDITERRANEAN TO THE SEINE.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT NAZI MARSHAL GUENTHER VON KLUGE WAS CONCEDED TO HAVE ACHIEVED SOME SUCCESS IN EXTRICATING MUCH OF HIS ARMOR FROM THE SNAPPING JAWS OF THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN TRAP, BUT ONLY AT THE SACRIFICE OF HIS INFANTRY, SOME 50,000 OF WHOM WERE ESTIMATED TO REMAIN IN THE POCKET.

A FIELD DISPATCH SAID IT WAS OFFICIALLY DISCLOSED THAT ELEMENTS OF 11 GERMAN DIVISIONS ARE IN THE TRAP BUT THAT MANY, IF NOT ALL OF THE UNITS, NOW ARE FAR BELOW NORMAL STRENGTH.

THE ALLIED BAG OF PRISONERS WAS EXPECTED TO BE LARGE FROM AN ARMY WHICH HAS LOST CLOSE TO 100,000 MEN IN TWO WEEKS AND 300,000 SINCE JUNE 6.

THOSE GERMANS WHO GOT OUT OF THE TRAP WERE IN A DIFFICULT POSITION, AND GERMAN BROADCASTS SAID AMERICAN ARMOR WAS RACING EASTWARD IN A NEW MOVE THAT BROUGHT CONFUSED FIGHTING AROUND CHARTRES AND DREUX, SOME 40 MILES WEST OF PARIS. WHILE THE ALLIES GAVE NO CONFIRMATION OF THIS REPORT, THE GERMANS INTIMATED THAT THE ALLIED AIM APPARENTLY WAS TO CONSTRUCT A NEW AND LARGER TRAP AGAINST THE SOUTH BANKS OF THE SEINE RIVER.

IN THE SOUTH THE LATEST BREACH IN HITLER'S EUROPEAN FORTRESS WAS DISCLOSED TO BE LED BY MAJ.GEN.ALEXANDER M.PATCH, COMMANDING THE U.S.SEVENTH ARMY, OF WHICH THE FRENCH ARMY OF MAJ.GEN.DE LATTRE DE TASSIGNY WAS A PART.

THE SOUTHERN FRONT WAS UNDER AN ALL-AMERICAN COMMAND ON LAND, SEA AND IN THE AIR. THE INVASION WAS DECLARED OFFICIALLY TO BE PROGRESSING SMOOTHLY, WITH "ALL INITIAL OBJECTIVES" TAKEN AND CASUALTIES "EXCEPTIONALLY LIGHT."

THE BEACHHEADS, CONSTANTLY BEING REINFORCED, WERE FIRM ALONG A 70-MILE STRETCH BETWEEN CANNES AND TOULON. THE GERMANS SAID THE AMERICAN AIM WAS TO TAKE THE LATTER POINT, AN IMPORTANT NAVAL BASE, BY THE SAME LANDWARD ENCIRCLEMENT TACTICS THAT WON CHERBOURG IN NORMANDY.

LONDON, THURSDAY, AUG. 17-(AP)-THE [illegible]ON DAILY MIRROR SAID EDITORIALLY THIS MORNING THAT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS BLUNDERED IN THE REPORTED MIXUP OVER THE COMMANDS OF GEN.SIR BERNARD L. MONTGOMERY AND LT.GEN. OMAR N.BRADLEY.

THE EDITORIAL ADDED THAT "IN THE GENERAL HANDLING OF THE WAR NEWS" HEADQUARTERS "HAS BEEN AMATEURISH, INCONSISTENT AND CONFUSING."

"IT IS TIME EFFICIENCY WAS ESTABLISHED IN THIS VITAL MATTER," THE NEWSPAPER SAID, DEMANDING THAT MONTGOMERY BE OFFERED "AN APOLOGY" FOR PRINTED AND BROADCAST STATEMENTS HE WAS "DEMOTED" TO EQUAL FOOTING WITH GEN. BRADLEY.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS HAD ISSUED A STATEMENT WEDNESDAY THAT THERE HAD BEEN NO CHANGE IN MONTGOMERY'S STATUS AS DEPUTY IN THE FIELD TO SUPREME COMMANDER GEN. DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER, AND THAT THE BRITISH GENERAL STILL COMMANDED ALL GROUND FORCES INCLUDING BRADLEY'S 12TH ARMY GROUP AND THE BRITISH-CANADIAN 21ST ARMY GROUP.

DISPATCHES CARRIED YESTERDAY BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, REUTERS AND THE BRITISH PRESS ASSOCIATION SAID BRADLEY ASSUMED A COMMAND EQUAL TO THAT OF MONTGOMERY'S BECAUSE OF HIS COMMAND OF THE 12TH ARMY GROUP. THE AP DISPATCH WAS BASED ON INFORMATION FROM THE FIELD, PASSED BY AMERICAN ARMY CENSORSHIP, AND HEADQUARTERS CORRESPONDENTS OF REUTERS AND THE BRITISH PRESS ASSOCIATION SAID THEIR STORIES HAD BEEN CONFIRMED BY AN OFFICIAL IN THE HEADQUARTERS CONFERENCE ROOM.

THE MIRROR CITED THE REUTERS DISPATCH FROM SUPREME HEADQUARTERS WHICH SAID "IT IS OFFICIALLY STATED THAT GEN.EISENHOWER HAS TAKEN OVER COMMAND IN THE FIELD AND UNDER HIM ON EQUAL FOOTING ARE MONTGOMERY AND BRADLEY."

"THIS MESSAGE," THE MIRROR SAID, "NOT ONLY INCLUDED THE BBC NEWS BULLETIN BUT WAS PRINTED IN EARLIER EDITIONS OF ALL LONDON NEWSPAPERS. THE MEANING OF IT SEEMED PLAIN. MONTGOMERY HAD BEEN DEMOTED, AND THAT IS THE MEANING WHICH HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE MUST HAVE ATTACHED TO THE STATEMENT."

AUG 17 1944

SPEAKING OF THE SUBSEQUENT REUTERS WITHDRAWAL AND HEADQUARTERS DENIAL OF THE STORY, THE MIRROR SAID IT WAS "SATISFIED" WITH REUTERS' EXPLANATION THAT IT "RECEIVED THIS MESSAGE FROM AN OFFICER AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS," AND ADDED:

"IT WAS CONFIRMED AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, PASSED BY THE CENSOR AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, AND THEN MORE THAN TWO HOURS AFTERWARD DENIED BY SUPREME HEADQUARTERS. LATER A SIMILAR STORY REACHED THIS COUNTRY AS TRUE FROM WASHINGTON, BUT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS STILL STUCK TO ITS DENIAL.

"WHAT IS BEHIND THIS CONFUSING ALTERNATION OF OFFICIAL ASSERTION AND CONTRADICTION WE DO NOT KNOW," THE MIRROR SAID, "BUT WE WERE ALREADY AWARE THAT THROUGHOUT THE WAR MUCH MISCHIEF HAS BEEN CAUSED BY THE ISSUE FROM VARIOUS HEADQUARTERS OF UNTRUE STATEMENTS AND ILL-ADVISED 'DIRECTIVES.'

"WHEN AN ARMY CONTROL SO VASTLY IMPORTANT AS SUPREME HEADQUARTERS FALLS INTO SIMILAR BLUNDERS IT BECOMES CLEAR SOMETHING IS SERIOUSLY WRONG; SOMETHING WHICH CANNOT BUT HAVE AN ADVERSE EFFECT ON THE HARMONY OF ANGLO-AMERICAN COOPERATION IN THE FIELD.

"IN GENERAL, THE HANDLING OF WAR NEWS HAS BEEN AMATEURISH, INCONSISTENT AND CONFUSING. ONE DAY OFFICIAL OPTIMISM RUNS HIGH; THE NEXT SOMEONE CAUTIOUSLY 'PLAYS IT DOWN.' IT IS TIME EFFICIENCY WAS ESTABLISHED IN THIS VITAL MATTER, AND MEANWHILE MONTGOMERY IS THE MAN WHO SUFFERED MOST FROM THE LATEST EXHIBITION OF OFFICIAL INEPTITUDE. WHEN IS HE TO GET HIS APOLOGY?"

LONDON, AUG.16-(AP)-THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND DECLARED TODAY THAT AMERICANS IN ANOTHER SWIFT 60-MILE EASTWARD ADVANCE HAD STRUCK WITHIN 40 MILES OF PARIS, BATTLING NEAR THE CITIES OF DREUX AND CHARTRES DUE WEST OF THE CAPITAL.

THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE SAID THIS DRIVE SPRANG FROM THE ALENCON AREA, 30 MILES ABOVE LE MANS, WITH BITTER FIGHTING BETWEEN DREUX AND CHARTRES, 40 AND 43 MILES FROM PARIS.

ANOTHER NAZI BROADCAST IDENTIFIED THE AMERICANS AS REINFORCED, MOTORIZED ELEMENTS OF LT.-GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S THIRD ARMY, WHICH HAD SEIZED LE MANS AND CURVED NORTHWARD, CLOSING ON THE FALAISE GAP. THIS BROADCAST DECLARED PATTON'S MEN STRUCK NORTHEAST OUT OF LE MANS, THROUGH OR NEAR NOGENT-LE-ROTROU AND LA LOUPE, 35 AND 50 MILES AWAY, AND THEN ON TO THE 20-MILE CHARTRES-DREUX SECTOR. BITTER FIGHTING PROCEEDS, ESPECIALLY NORTH OF CHARTRES, IT SAID.

IN BRITTANY, BERLIN RADIO ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THE TOWN OF ST.MALO HAD BEEN LOST, BUT DECLARED THE NAZI GARRISON IN THE FORMIDABLE CITADEL GUARDING THAT NORTHERN BRETON PORT STILL WAS HOLDING OUT.

GERMAN BROADCASTS ASSERTED PORT ESTABLISHMENTS AT NICE, CANNES AND ST.TROPEZ ON THE INVADED SOUTHERN FRENCH COAST HAD BEEN DESTROYED BY THEIR DEFENDERS. THEY REPORTED NEW LANDINGS ALONG THE BEACHHEAD, MAINLY BY AMERICAN AND POLISH TROOPS.

IN THE BERLIN ACCOUNT, HEAVY LANDINGS CONTINUED WEST OF CANNES. THE ALLIES WERE ABLE TO LAND ARMOR ONLY IN THE BAY OF ST.TROPEZ, MIDWAY BETWEEN TOULON AND CANNES, THE BROADCASTS SAID, AND GAINED FOOTHOLDS AT ST.RAPHAEL AND ISLANDS BELOW HYERES AFTER FIRST BEING REPULSED.

ADD LONDON - (HILL) XX RIVER

BRITISH TROOPS COMING DOWN FROM THE NORTH AND THE AMERICANS COMING UP FROM THE SOUTH SLICED OFF A LARGE SECTION OF THE WESTERN END OF THE POCKET. THESE ADVANCES CAME AS THE BULK OF THE TRAPPED GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY HAD BEEN BROKEN INTO SCATTERED GUERRILLA UNITS.

THE AMERICANS CAPTURED TINCHEBRAY AND PUSHED ON EASTWARD. THE BRITISH CAPTURED MONTSECRET, THREE MILES NORTHEAST OF TINCHEBRAY.

THE WHOLE WESTERN END OF THE SEVENTH ARMY'S "COFFIN SALIENT" WAS BUCKLING. FIELD MARSHAL GUENTHER VON KLUGE'S BEATEN TROOPS GAVE GROUND ALONG BOTH THE NORTH AND SOUTH SIDES OF THE POCKET.

AT THE SHELL-SWEPT ESCAPE GAP ITSELF, WHERE RESISTANCE STILL WAS THE FIERCIEST, CANADIANS HAD DRIVEN SOUTHWARD THROUGH THE DEFENSE CRUST TO WITHIN LESS THAN A MILE NORTH OF FALAISE. THE SITUATION IN THE CANADIAN SECTOR NOW WAS DESCRIBED AS FLUID, WHEREAS BEFORE THE GERMANS HAD MADE AN ALMOST IRON FIRM STAND.

THE QUESTION OF HOW MANY GERMANS WERE CAUGHT IN THE TRAP COULD NOT BE ANSWERED DEFINITELY FROM FIELD DISPATCHES OR THE CUMULATIVE OFFICIAL REPORTS REACHING SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, BUT HIS WAS THE OVERALL PICTURE.

AUG 17 1944

DESPITE THE PULLBACK NOW WEAKENING SECTOR AFTER SECTOR OF THE GERMAN REARGUARD STAND, IT WAS REPORTED AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS THAT MUCH AND PERHAPS MOST OF THE FORCE ORIGINALLY CAUGHT IN THE NOOSE LIKELY STILL WAS THERE.

IT WAS ORIGINALLY ESTIMATED BETWEEN 100,000 AND 200,000 MEN WERE IN THE ENCIRCLED ENEMY FORCE. LATEST FIELD ESTIMATES REDUCING THE EARLIER FIGURES TO 50,000 WERE REGARDED AT SUPREME HEADQUARTERS AS LIKELY TO BE CONSERVATIVE.

30.24— 18057

THERE HAVE BEEN REPORTS THAT AS MUCH AS HALF OF THE SEVENTH ARMY PULLED OUT OF THE GAP AS IT BEGAN TO CLOSE. WHILE TROOPS THAT GOT THROUGH ESCAPED THE PROSPECT OF CAPTURE THEY STILL FACED THE PROSPECT OF DESTRUCTION BY ALLIED AIR ATTACKS WHICH WOULD WRITE THEM OFF JUST AS EFFECTIVELY AS A FIGHTING FORCE. IT WAS POINTED OUT THAT MANY OF THE ENEMY DIVISIONS NOW HEMMED IN TOOK A WEEK TO GET FROM THE SEINE RIVER TO THE BATTLE AREA AND THE WAY BACK OUT WOULD BE UNDER FAR GREATER DIFFICULTIES.

AUG 17 1944

AS THE ALLIES CONTINUED TO HAMMER THE GERMANS IN THE NORMANDY DEATH TRAP AN AMERICAN OFFICER AT THE FRONT DECLARED VON KLUGE'S FORCE HAS "CEASED TO EXIST AS AN ARMY."

AMERIC[illegible]PS CAPTURED HUGE STORES OF AMMUNITION AND EQUIPMENT AS THEY PRESSED FORWARD. HUNDREDS OF PRISONERS STREAMED BACK TO THE CAGES, WITH THOUSANDS MORE CERTAIN TO BE TAKEN WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS, A FRONT DISPATCH SAID.

AUG 17 1944

NORTH OF ARGENTAN THE GERMANS STILL WERE REPORTED BATTLING DESPERATELY AGAINST THE ARMORED DRIVE OF THE AMERICAN THIRD ARMY COMMANDED BY LT. GEN. GEORGE S. PATTON, JR. PART OF ARGENTAN WAS IN AMERICAN HANDS AND THE SPEARHEAD STROVE TO CLOSE THE ESCAPE GAP AND JOIN WITH THE CANADIANS DRIVING SOUTH IN THE FALAISE AREA.

TO THE WEST AROUND THE RIM OF THE POCKET GAINS OF FROM TWO TO FOUR MILES WERE SCORED BY AMERICAN TROOPS YESTERDAY IN SECTOR AFTER SECTOR.

ON THE NORTH SIDE OF THE POCKET THE ENEMY'S RESISTANCE CRACKED EVEN FASTER AS GERMAN TROOPS PULLED BACK FROM THE LINE AND BRITISH TOMMIES PUSHED TO THE OUTSKIRTS OF CONDE-SUR-NOIREAU AND INTO VASSY. CONDE-SUR-NOIREAU, WHICH HAS SERVED AS A GERMAN RALLYING POINT IS 15 MILES EAST OF VIRE AND FIVE MILES EAST OF VASSY.

FIELD DISPATCHES SAID THE GERMANS WERE WITHDRAWING BY DAYLIGHT YESTERDAY FOR THE SECOND TIME IN THREE DAYS AND WERE TAKING AN AERIAL BATTERING. THE LARGEST SCALE NAZI PULL OUT, PARTICULARLY THROUGH THE FALAISE GAP, UNDOUBTEDLY WAS TAKING PLACE BY NIGHT.

A SUDDEN HEAVY THUNDERSHOWER LAST EVENING GAVE THE GERMANS ONE OF THEIR LAST CHANCES FOR FLIGHT BY HAMPERING ALLIED PLANES AND THERE WERE INDICATIONS THE GERMANS HAD TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF THE OPPORTUNITY.

THE FRENCH RIVIERA, AUG. 16-(AP)-THIS RIVIERA TOWN WAS TAKEN YESTERDAY BY AMERICAN PARATROOPERS IN ONE OF THE MOST SPECTACULAR EPISODES OF THE INVASION OF SOUTHERN FRANCE.

AS THE PARATROOPERS BEGAN RAINING DOWN IN THE STAR-LIT NIGHT GERMAN TROOPS STATIONED IN THE AREA IMMEDIATELY STARTED BLOWING UP PORT INSTALLATIONS AND ALL NEARBY SHIPPING. OTHER GERMANS DASHED OUT AND FIRED AT THE PARATROOPERS WHILE FRENCH PATRIOTS BATTLED THE GERMANS. WOMEN RAN FROM THE HOUSES WITH BOTTLES OF WINE AND FOOD WHICH THEY GAVE TO THE PARATROOPERS WHILE THEY HELPED THEM DISENTANGLE THEMSELVES.

CPL. JOHN CUNNIUS OF 1489 EAST 54TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y., TOLD ME "THE GERMANS SHOT AT US WHILE WE STILL WERE DANGLING IN OUR PARACHUTES WOUNDING AND KILLING A NUMBER OF OUR MEN."

THE FIGHT FOR THIS TOWN, POPULATION 4,000, WHICH WAS ESPECIALLY POPULAR IN PRE-WAR DAYS WITH AMERICAN TOURISTS, LASTED 14 HOURS, CENTERING MAINLY AROUNDLZWO STRONGPOINTS OVERLOOKING THE CITY FROM A CONCRETE BLOCKHOUSE ON THE OUTSKIRTS.

HERE LARGE NUMBERS OF GERMANS EITHER WERE KILLED, WOUNDED OR CAPTURED. THE TOWN ITSELF WAS CLEARED OF GERMANS BY AMERICAN PARATROOP PATROLS BY 9 A.M., BUT IT REMAINED WITHIN RIFLE-RANGE OF THE GERMANS IN THE BLOCK HOUSE AND CITADEL UNTIL THE BLOCKHOUSE WAS OVERPOWERED AT 4 P.M., AND THE CITADEL AT 6 P.M.

AFTERWARDS THE TROOPS MADE JUNCTIONS WITH OTHER ALLIED TROOPS ON BOTH SIDES.

"BRAVO, BRAVO," OLD MEN AND GIRLS IN RAGGED SKIRTS SHOUTED WHEN THI LEARNED THE INCOMING TROOPS WERE FRENCH. BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

CHICAGO TRIBUNE WAR CORRESPONDENT REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN PRESS WITH AMERICAN GROUND FORCES NEAR STEMMAXIME, AUG. 16-(AP)-OUR BEACHHEAD ON THE FRENCH RIVIERA IS NOW A DAY OLD, BUT FROM THE STEADY MOVEMENT OF PERSONNEL AND EQUIPMENT ASHORE WITH ONLY SPASMODIC ENEMY HARASSING FIRE IT LOOKS AS IF OUR MILITARY COLONY HAD BEEN HERE FOR WEEKS.

CERTAINLY THIS BEACHHEAD HAS PROGRESSED MUCH FASTER THAN ANZIO IN A SIMILAR PERIOD.

THE BAY IS A BUSY AMERICAN HARBOR. ALL VARIETIES OF TROOP TRANSPORTS AND LANDING CRAFT ARE PLYING THE BLUE WATERS TOWARD THIS STRAND AND OUR POSITION GROWS STRONGER EVERY MOMENT.

AUG 17 1944

INFANTRYMEN ARE COMING ASHORE ALREADY LOADED ON TRUCKS AS THEY MOVE DOWN THE SHIP RAMPS AND ARE REGROUPING AND MOVING INLAND TO THE HILLS. THEY ARE FANNING OUT IN THE INTERIOR SECTORS, EXPANDING THE BEACHHEAD IN SEVERAL DIRECTIONS AND JOINING UP WITH UNITS LANDING AT OTHER POINTS. JEEPS AND COMMAND CARS AND SUPPLY TRUCKS ARE POURING IN ALL ALONG THE LINE. TANKS AND FIELD GUNS ALSO ARE BEING UNLOADED.

"THIS HAS BEEN ALMOST TOO EASY," SAID AN INFANTRY CAPTAIN WHO HAS BEEN IN PREVIOUS AMERICAN AMPHIBIOUS OPERATIONS IN THIS THEATER. "BUT NONE OF US ARE GOING TO MAKE THE MISTAKE SOME DID AT ANZIO, WHEN THEY THOUGHT THE WAR WAS OVER BECAUSE THE INITIAL LANDINGS WERE UNOPPOSED."

AUG 17 1944

THAT FEELING OF CAUTION AGAINST WRITING OFF GERMAN DEFENSIVE STANDS AND COUNTERTHRUSTS IS PREVALENT AMONG OUR VETERAN SOLDIERS WHO REMEMBER ANZIO AND THE SOUTH COAST OF SICILY AND HOW MUCH POWER THE ENEMY HURLED AT US THERE AFTER OUR ARRIVALS HAD BEEN COMPARATIVELY UNMOLESTED.

THE BEACH FRONTAGE AND AREA JUST BACK OF IT IN THE STE. MAXIME VICINITY WERE NOT NEARLY SO BADLY BANGED UP AS WE HAD EXPECTED IN VIEW OF THE TERRIFIC NAVAL AND AIR BOMBARDMENT. BUT THE SHELLING AND BOMBING HAD BEEN REMARKABLY PRECISE AND PILLBOXES, STRONGPOINTS AND GUN POSITIONS HAD BEEN KNOCKED OUT AS ORDERED.

GERMAN 88S MORTARS AND SNIPERS WERE STILL ACTIVE FROM THE HILLS THIS MORNING, BUT THERE WAS NO CONTINUITY IN THEIR FIRE AND MOVEMENT OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS AND EQUIPMENT SEEMS AS NORMAL AND EFFICIENT ON THE BEACH AS IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN DURING A PEACETIME MANEUVER.

FARTHER EAST SOME OF OUR OTHER UNITS HAD A TOUGH TIME OF IT YESTER-

DAY AFTERNOON. H-HOUR FOR THAT FORCE WAS SEVERAL HOURS AFTER THAT FOR THE INFANTRY WHICH CAME IN NEAR STE.MAXIME. SOME OF THE LANDING CRAFT BEARING IN ON A BEACH RAN INTO HEAVY SHELLFIRE FROM GERMAN POSITIONS WHICH HAD SURVIVED THE PRELIMINARY BOMBARDMENTS. SO MORE NAVAL ATTACKS WERE CALLED FOR IN THAT REGION AND WAVE AFTER WAVE OF OUR HEAVY AND LIGHT BOMBERS CAME OVER. DUST AND SMOKE AND FLAME ROSE AND THERE WAS A CONSTANT THUNDER OF DESTRUCTION IN THE TARGET SECTOR. THEREAFTER THE GIS HAD AN EASIER TIME GETTING ASHORE.

A U.S.ARMY GENERAL DEPOT SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, AUG. 16-(AP)-AMERICAN SOLDIER MECHANICS TODAY SHOWED SIX LABOR LEADERS VISITING FROM THE UNITED STATES HOW THEY GET THINGS DONE IN THE LARGEST GENERAL DEPOT IN ENGLAND.

THE LABOR LEADERS, REPRESENTING THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR AND THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS EXPRESSED SURPRISE AT THE SIZE OF THE OUTPUT IN THE MAINTENANCE PLANT.

THE GROUP, GATHERED HERE TO GET FIRST HAND INFORMATION ON THE PERFORMANCE OF WAR EQUIPMENT, INCLUDES R.J. THOMAS, PRESIDENT OF THE CIO UNITED AUTOMOBILE WORKERS; DAVID MCDONALD, SECRETARY-TREASURER OF THE UNITED STEEL WORKERS, CIO; SHERMAN DALRYMPLE, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED RUBBER WORKERS, CIO; FRANK FENTON, NATIONAL DIRECTOR OF ORGANIZATION OF THE AFL; ALBERT WEGENER, INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF ELECTRICAL WORKERS, AFL, AND ERIC PETERSON, EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MACHINISTS, AFL.

BRIG. GEN.J.W.MC KELVINE AT HEADQUARTERS OF THE EUROPEAN THEATER TOLD THE VISITORS THAT AMERICAN MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT IS "THE ENVY OF ALL NATIONS," ADDING THAT THE QUARTER-TON JEEP AND THE TWO AND ONE-HALF TON TRUCK WERE AMONG THE MOST IMPORTANT VEHICLES IN THE WAR.

THE DEPOT PERSONNEL IS COMMANDED BY COL. WILLIAM J.CROWE OF KANSAS CITY, MO. IT CAN FIX ANYTHING FROM A WRIST WATCH TO A SHERMAN TANK.

A U.S.BOMBER BASE SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, AUG 16-(AP)-SOLEMNLY, 19-YEAR-OLD LT.EDWARD WITTY, ROUTE 1, WALBRIDGE, OHIO, TOLD OF "THE WORST 40 SECONDS I EVER SPENT IN MY WHOLE LIFE" -- 40 SECONDS IN WHICH HIS FORTRESS SQUADRON WAS RIPPED TO BITS IN A SUICIDAL ATTACK OF GERMAN FIGHTER PLANES, HIS BUDDY WAS LOST AND SIX OF THE ELEVEN PLANES IN HIS SQUADRON WERE SHOT DOWN.

"AND THEY TALK ABOUT THINGS GETTING EASIER OVER THERE -- BALONEY," HE SAID UPON HIS RETURN FROM THE BRIEF BUT VICIOUS BATTLE OVER LEIPZIG

LET HIM TELL HOW IT HAPPENED TO THE FORTRESSES:

"ONE PEELED UP TO THE RIGHT AND EXPLODED. ANOTHER TURNED DOWN TO THE LEFT AND EXPLODED -- HE WAS A BUDDY OF MINE.

"A THIRD WENT DOWN IN FLAMES AND BLEW ALL TO HELL. THEY HAD A DEAD BEAD ON ANOTHER. HE WENT STRAIGHT UP IN THE AIR AND EXPLODED.

"THE FIFTH HAD THREE ENGINES AFIRE. HE ROLLED OVER ON HIS BACK AN EXPLODED. THE SIXTH PEELED DOWN AND EXPLODED.

"IT WAS THE WORST 40 SECONDS I EVER SPENT IN MY WHOLE LIFE. IT SEEMED AN ETERNITY. IT WAS THE FIRST TIME I EVER PRAYED IN MY 16 MISSIONS -- AND I MEANT IT."

AUG 171944

ONLY THE LEAD SHIP -- IT'S CALLED THE "FEARLESS FOSDICK" -- AND WITTY'S WERE STILL THERE.

THE REST OF THE STORY WAS PIECED TOGETHER ON THE RETURN TO THE BASE. TWO OF THE THREE OTHERS HAD JOINED UP WITH OTHER FORMATIONS. THE THIRD, PILOTED BY FLIGHT OFFICER LOUIS MARPIL, 242A CLASSON AVE., BROOKLYN, N.Y., LANDED AT A MARAUDER BASE WITH ONE CREWMAN DEAD AND TWO WOUNDED.

AUG 171944

HIS SHIP RAKED BY FIRE FROM ENEMY FIGHTERS FOR 12 MILES, MARPIL THEN RAN INTO SLASHING FLAK AT 15,000 FEET, OVER BREMEN.)THE LAST ENGINE OF THE BADLY CRIPPLED FORT SUDDENLY WENT DEAD OVER THE MARAUDER BASE, BUT MARPIL GLIDED DOWN TO A NEAT DEADSTICK LANDING.

THE UNINJURED CREWMEN WITH MARPIL WERE LT.J.C.BOWLAN, HERINGTON, KANSAS, CO-PILOT; LT.ELLIOT WINSTON, 666 WEST END AVE., NEW YORK CITY, NAVIGATOR; AND SGTS. CLAUDE CARR, 1769 CEDAR ST., VAN BUREN, ARK. AND JOSEPH NEALON, 2126 BROADWAY, SCHENECTADY, N.Y., BOTH GUNNERS.

LT.JOSEPH WEINSTOCK, 208 CHESTERFIELD RD, PITTSBURGH, PA., BOMBARDIER AND FORMER EMPLOYEE OF THE PITTSBURGH POST GAZETTE, DIDN'T GO ON THE MISSION. ALL THE REST OF HIS CREW, EXCEPT THE NAVIGATOR, WERE SHOT DOWN.

ON THE FRENCH-SWISS FRONTIER, THURSDAY, AUG. 17-(AP)-FRENCHMEN THROUGHOUT HAUTE SAVOIE, SUPPLIED WITH GUNS AND AMMUNITION DROPPED BY ALLIED PLANES DURING THE PAST WEEK, FOUGHT ON BITTERLY THIS MORNING IN A MAJOR REVOLT AGAINST THE NAZIS THEY HAD LEARNED SO WELL TO HATE DURING FOUR YEARS OF OCCUPATION NOW DRAWING TO AN END.

JUST AFTER MIDNIGHT BIG FIRES COULD BE SEEN ON MOUNT SALEVE JUST OUTSIDE GENEVA. GERMANS WERE SMOKED OUT OF THE SCHOOL BUILDINGS AT VILLE LA GRANDE WHERE THEY HAD HELD OUT ALL DAY WEDNESDAY.

THE REGION WAS COMPLETELY UNDER PARTISAN CONTROL. JUST BEFORE MIDNIGHT ALLIED PLANES DROPPED NEW SUPPLIES TO FEED THE BATLLE. IT WAS REPORTED RELIABLY THAT A ERIES OF SUPPLY GLIDERS LANDED IN THE FRENCH JURAS JUST AFTER DUSK WEDNESDAY.

THERE WAS NO DOUBT THAT A GENERAL UPRISING, A REAL REVOLT, WAS IN PROGRESS. VILLAGE AFTER VILLAGE WAS LIBERATED DURING THE AFTERNOON. FIGHTING FRENCH APPEARED AT CUSTOM POSTS. FIGHTING BETWEEN GERMAN SOLDIERS AND SS UNITS HELPED TO SPREAD CHAOS IN THE NAZI GARRISONS.

GERMAN ARMY TROOPS AT THONON-LES-BAINS FOUGHT A BITTER, DAY-LONG BATTLE WITH MACHINE GUNS, RIFLES AND HAND TO HAND AGAINST THEIR OWN GESTAPO AND SS UNITS, WHILE OUTSIDE THE TOWN BETWEEN AVIAN AND THONON PARTISANS CARRIED OUT A HEAVY OFFENSIVE AGAINST OCCUPATION TROOPS. BIG FIRES WERE STARTED IN THE VILLAGE OF AMPHION AND NAZI TROOPS THERE FLED IN DISORDER.

FOUR OFFICERS SURRENDERED TO PARTISANS AT BELLEVAUX. CZECH AND AUSTRIAN TROOPS LAID DOWN THEIR ARMS. REGULAR GERMAN SOLDIERS SURRENDERED IN THE DOUVAING REGION.

WHILE A PARTISAN DIVISION OF AROUND 13,000 MEN SURROUNDED ANNECY 400 MEN CAPTURED THE BRIDGE OF CAILLE ON THE HIGHWAY TO GENEVA AND ESTABLISHED CONTROL OF THE ENTIRE ROUTE.

THE FRENCH MOBILIZATION FOR THE REVOLT WAS GENERAL. MEN FROM 16 TO 60 IN UNOCCUPIED VILLAGES TURNED OUT ABOUT 100 PER CENT, AND HASTENED TO THE FIGHTING POINTS. THE WOMEN ORGANIZED MAKE-SHIFT CANTEENS TO FEED THE NEWEST ARMY OF LIBERATION, AND STARTED A SUPPLY SERVICE TO PROVIDE BEDS AND BLANKETS.

THE BATTLE BEGAN YESTERDAY, BUT SECRET PREPARATIONS BEGAN LAST THURSDAY WHEN MESSENGERS WERE SAID TO HAVE BROUGHT SPECIAL INSTRUCTION FROM ALLIED HEADQUARTERS. EACH MEMBER OF THE RESISTANCE ARMY, AT LEAST 100,000 MEN IN THE UPPER SAVOIE ALONE, QUIETLY SLIPPED INTO HIS POST. BY SPECIAL SIGNAL THE ATTACKS IN THE VARIOUS TOWNS AND VILLAGES WERE LAUNCHED SIMULTANEOUSLY.

THE GERMAN-OCCUPIED HOTEL DE FRANCE AT ST. JULIEN WAS HEAVILY DAMAGED IN THE FIGHTING. GERMANS FLED, WERE CAPTURED, OR KILLED WITHI THE HOTEL. THOSE IN THE HOTEL BELLEVUE FLED TO THE CELLAR AND FOUGHT AMONG THEMSELVES WHETHER TO SURRENDER. UNDER SIEGE THEY WERE STILL FIGHTING EACH OTHER AS WELL AS THE PARTISANS LATE LAST EVENING.

THE FIRST TO SEEK REFUGE IN SWITZERLAND WAS AN INTERPRETER FROM THE GESTAPO. HALTED BY SWISS CUSTOM GUARDS HE WAS TURNED OVER TO THE ARMY FOR INTERNMENT. THE CHIEF GERMAN RESISTANCE WAS AT ANNEMASSE WHERE NAZIS WITHSTOOD THE SIEGE FROM THE HOTEL DE PAX.

A GROUP OF 30 GERMANS BARRICADED IN A CHATEAU NEAR BOSSEY TURNED MACHINEGUNS ON PARTISANS IN A HOT FIGHT. THE NAZIS STILL WERE HOLDING OUT IN CELLARS EARLY TODAY. THEIR BULLETS FELL IN SWISS TERRITORY AND SEVERAL HOUSES WERE HIT.

WITH THE NEW ALLIED LANDINGS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, MEANWHILE, EVER-INCREASING CONFUSION BECAME APPARENT IN VICHY. MARSHAL PETAIN WAS REPORTED STILL IN VICHY AUGUST 13, BUT HIS DEPARTURE FOR GERMANY WAS EXPECTED MOMENTARILY.

PIERRE LAVAL, MARCEL DEAT AND JOSEPH DARNAND WERE IN PARIS, WHERE LAVAL IS IN CONTINUOUS CONTACT WITH THE GERMAN EMBASSY AND MILITARY LEADERS. DARNAND AND DEAT ON THE OTHER HAND ARE DAILY GUESTS AT THE GESTAPO HEADQUARTERS WHERE DARNAND HAS AN OFFICE. DARNAND HAS REPLACED HIS OWN BODYGUARD WITH GESTAPO MEN.

BERN, AUG.16-(AP)-FRONTIER REPORTS TO LA SUISSE OF GENEVA SAID TODAY THE ALLIES HAD OCCUPIED CANNES AND NICE AND THAT FRENCH PARTISANS, COOPERATING WITH 1,000 ALLIED PARACHUTE TROOPS, WERE ABOUT TO TAKE MARSEILLE, FROM WHICH THE GERMANS WERE MOVING SOUTHEASTWARD TOWARD TOULON.

EAST OF NICE, FRENCH ADVANCE GUARDS WERE SAID TO HAVE PASSED THE PRINCIPALITY OF MONACO ON THEIR WAY TO THE ITALIAN FRONTIER AT VENTIMIGLIA.

A DISPATCH FROM THE ITALIAN BORDER SAID THE GERMANS HAD ORDERED IMMEDIATE EVACUATION OF RESIDENTS ALONG THE LIGURIAN COASTLINE FROM VENTIMIGLIA TO THE NAVAL BASE OF LA SPEZIA, 110 MILES TO THE EAST ACROSS THE GULF OF GENOA, IN THE EXPECTATION OF NEW ALLIED LANDINGS.

A REPORT FROM CHIASSO TO LA SUISSE SAIS FASCISTS BELIEVED SOUTHERN FRANCE AND NORTHERN ITALY WOULD SOON BE UNIED IN A SINGLE FRONT AND THAT FIELD MARSHAL GEN.ALBERT KESSELRING'S GOTHIC LINE DEFENSES EVENTUALLY WOULD BE ATTACKED FROM THE REAR.

IT WAS SUGGESTED THAT THIS OPERATION WOULD BE LAUNCHED BY FRESH FORCES LANDED ON THE LIGURIAN COAST AFTER ALLIED POSITIONS BETWEEN NICE AND CANNES WERE REINFORCED.

THIS EXPECTATION WAS SUPPORTED BY REPORTS THAT STRONG LAND AND NAVAL FORCES ARE STILL IN CORSICA AND SARDINIA AND BY THE CONTINUED INTENSIVE BOMBING OF THE COAST AND MILITARY FACILITIES OF GENOA.

IRUN, SPAIN, AUG. 16-(AP)-FRENCH PARTISANS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE HAVE OCCUPIED THE PYRENEES RAILWAY TOWNS OF OLORON AND MAULEON AND HAVE SURROUNDED THE IMPORTANT GERMAN BASTION OF TOULOUSE, WHERE STREET FIGHTING HAS BROKEN OUT, REPORTS REACHING HERE SAID TODAY.

FIGHTING ALSO WAS REPORTED AT MONT-DE-MARSAN, AND THE PARTISANS WERE SAID TO HAVE TAKEN THE TOWN OF LISLE-JOURDAIN, 20 MILES WEST OF TOULOUSE.

HEAVY FIGHTING WASHSAID TO BE IN PROGRESS SINCE LAST NIGHT BETWEEN GERMAN OCCUPATION TROOPS AND THE MAQUI FORCES AROUND PAU AND TARBES, WHICH ARE BETWEEN OLORON AND TOULOUSE. BOTH TOWNS WERE SAID TO HAVE FALLEN TO THE PARTISANS, BUT THERE WAS NO CONFIRMATION OF THIS REPORT.

FRONTIER OFFICIALS AT CANFRANC, SPAIN, HOWEVER, CONFIRMED THE FALL OF OLORON AND MAUELON (CORRECT), AND A NEUTRAL WHO LEFT TOULOUSE EARLY THIS WEEK SAID THE GERMAN GESTAPO AND VICHY COLLABORATIONISTS WERE ENGAGED IN NIGHT-LONG BATTLES WITH THE UNDERGROUND, THE CLASHES FREQUENTLY EXTENDING TO DAYLIGHT.

NEARLY 10,000 PARTISANS FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN FOOTHILLS OF THE PYRENEES WERE REPORTED MOVING EASTWARD TOWARD THE RIVIERA BATTLEGROUND WHERE ALLIED FORCES ARE FIGHTING. NEARLY 1,000 GERMAN AND VICHY PRISONERS WERE SAID TO HAVE BEEN TAKEN AT

OLORON AND MAUELON, BORDER ADVICES SAID. CAPTURE OF THE TOWNS WOULD GIVE THE MAQUIS COMMAND OF FRONTIER ROADS AND A RAILROAD, AND A WHOLE NETWORK OF SECONDARY HIGHWAYS LEADING TO THE PYRENEES.

MONT DE MARSAN FOR YEARS WAS HEADQUARTERS OF THE GESTAPO IN SOUTHWESTERN FRANCE.

MONTAUBAN, 110 MILES SOUTHEAST OF BORDEAUX, ALSO WAS REPORTED UNDER ATTACK.

ROME, AUG 16-(AP)-ALLIED LANDING CRAFT CARRIED AMERICAN AND FRENCH TROOPS ASHORE IN SOUTHERN FRANCE ON BOTH SIDES OF FREJUS, 33 MILES SOUTHWEST OF NICE, WITHOUT ANY SIGN OF ENEMY OPPOSITION AS FAR AS COULD BE ASCERTAINED FROM THE AIR, RETURNING AIRMEN SAID TODAY.

LT.ROBERT KIMBALL, OF 5021 CRAFTON AVE., CINCINNATI, OHIO, A LIBERATOR BOMBARDIER, REPORTED HIS FORMATION'S TARGET WAS THE FREJUS ROAD. LANDING CRAFT WERE AIMING FOR SHORE ON BOTH SIDES WHILE BIG WARSHIPS PUMPED SHELLS INTO THE TOWN, HE SAID.

THE MEDITERRANEAN ALLIED AIR FORCE YESTERDAY BROKE ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS FOR SORTIES FLOWN IN ITS OPERATIONS SUPPORTING THE INVASION OF SOUTHERN FRANCE, AN AIR FORCE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID.

WHILE HUNDREDS OF FIGHTERS PROVIDED A CONTINUOUS SCREEN OVER THE FLEET AND LANDING CRAFT, BOMBERS HAMMERED AREAS A FEW THOUSAND YARDS AHEAD OF THE INVASION BEACHES AND OTHERS STRUCK AT MORE DISTANT TARGETS.

COL.WILLIAM L.LEE, OF WEATHERFORD, TEX., COMMANDER OF A LIBERATOR WING, DECLARED THAT WITH BINOCULARS "I SAW NO FLAK, NO ENEMY AIRCRAFT, NO MOVEMENT OF ANY KIND ON THE ROADS, NO ENEMY. THE ONLY ACTIVITY CAME FROM LANDING CRAFT. I SCANNED THE ROADS LEADING TO AND FROM THE BEACHES FOR MILES AROUND AND DID NOT SEE A SINGLE TRANSPORT OF ANY KIND IN MOTION."

THE CONTINUOUS STREAMS OF LANDING MADE THE WATER OFFSHORE APPEAR "LIKE THE MAIN STREET OF MY HOME TOWN," SAID LT.CLARENCE L. LOCKRIDGE, 427 RIVERSIDE AVE., COVINGTON, VA., A FORTRESS BOMBARDIER.

OF ONLY ABOUT TWENTY ENEMY PLANES SEEN THROUGHOUT YESTERDAY'S RECORD OPERATIONS, THREE WERE SHOT DOWN. TWENTY ALLIED PLANES WERE LOST.

THE FORTRESSES SMASHED AT TWO BRIDGES OVER THE ISERE RIVER ON THE MONT CENIS LINE FROM ITALY TO FRANCE; A BRIDGE AT GRENOBLE AND ANOTHER AT ST.PIERRE-DA'ALBIGNY, 12 MILES EAST OF CHAMBERY. BRIDGES IN THE RHONE VALLEY, IN THE VALENCE AREA, ALSO WERE TARGETS.

TACTICAL AIRFORCE MEDIUM BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS, ALSO WITHOUT MEETING ENEMY OPPOSITION IN THE AIR, THIS MORNING INAUGURATED OPERATIONS SIMILAR TO THOSE EMPLOYED IN ITALY, STRIKING BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES AT RAIL AND ROAD TARGETS IN AN EFFORT TO CHOKE OFF GERMAN LINES OF SUPPLY AND REINFORCEMENT.

FORMATIONS OF MITCHELL BOMBERS STABBED DEEP INLAND IN THE RHONE VALLEY IN THIS OPERATION, AND SWARMS OF THUNDERBOLTS ROARED BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES BLASTING AT ALL TARGETS WITHIN RANGE.

THE MITCHELLS SCORED DIRECT HITS ON A RAIL BRIDGE AT LIVRON, 105 MILES NORTHWEST OF MARSEILLE. CAPT.HOMER B.HOWARD OF FRUITA, COLO., WHO LED THE FORMATION, SAID "WE HAD TO GO AROUND THREE TIMES TO GET IT, BUT WE SUCCEEDED."

ANOTHER FLIGHT BOMBED A ROAD BRIDGE NEARBY, AND A BRIDGE OVER THE RHONE RIVER AT MONTELIMAR WAS ATTACKED AGAIN.

MOSCOW, AUG. 16-(AP)-A PERNENNIAL WHEAT, THE DREAM OF RUSSIAN AGRICULTURE FOR A GENERATION, HAS BEEN SUCCESSFUL IN PRACTICAL FIELD TESTS THIS YEAR ON COLLECTIVE FARMS RANGING FROM SIBERIA TO THE KUBAN, THE MOSCOW PRESS ASSERTS.

IN EXPERIMENTAL PLOTS AT HIS INSTITUTE NEAR MOSCOW PROF. N.V. TSITSIN ALREADY HAS DEVELOPED SEVERAL VARIETIES OF WHEAT WHICH PERSIST AS LONG AS FIVE YEARS AFTER A SOWING, IT IS ANNOUNCED. THE KERNELS HAVE A GLUTEN CONTENT AS HIGH AS 60 PERCENT--ON A PAR WITH AMERICAN WHEAT--AND ARE WELL-FLAVORED FOR BREAD.

TSITSIN'S IMMEDIATE GOAL, WITH THE FULL COOPERATION OF THE SOVIET AGRIVULTURE COMMISSARIAT, IS WHEAT WHICH WILL GIVE A NORMAL HARVEST FOR TWO YEARS FROM ONE LARGE-SCALE PLANTING.

THE LARGEST SINGLE FIELD OF TSITSIN'S WHEAT IS 1,000 ACRES IN KAZAKSTAN. THE INITAL HARVEST FROM THIS AND THE OTHER FAR-FLUNG PRODUCTION TESTS WAS REPORTED "EXTREMELY SATISFACTORY."

THERE IS NO DATA YET ON THE YIELD PER ACRE.

FOREIGN AGRICULTURAL EXPERTS WHO HAVE EXAMINED TSITSIN'S INSTITUTE AGREED THAT THE CULMINATION OF HIS LIFE'S WORK WAS NEAR AT HAND AND THAT ANOTHER YEAR MAY SEE "NOGOLETNIA PSHENITZA"--MANY YEAR WHEAT--EMERGE AS PRACTICAL COMPETITION WITH THE PRESENT WORLD WIRE VARIETIES.

IT WAS DEVELOPED SLOWLY AND PATIENTLY BY CROSS POLLINATION OF WILD PERENNIAL GRASSES OF THE AGROPYRUM FAMILY WITH WHEAT. THE RESULT, AFTER TWO DECADES OF CAREFUL SELECTION, IS A PLANT WHICH CLOSELY RESEMBLES ORDINARY WHEAT, BUT OUTLIVES IT MANY FOLD.

THE HYBRID WAS SAID TO SHOW HARDINESS AND RESISTANCE TO DROUGHT AND RUST. THE KERNEL IS INDISTINGUISHABLE FROM ANNUAL WHEAT. GROUND INTO FLOUR, IT HAS THE USUAL TASTE OF THE BREAD GRAIN.

THE RUSSIANS' LUTHER BURBANK IS ALSO EXPLORING OTHER POSSIBILITIES OF NATURE. DARK-HAIRED AND MIDDLE AGED, TSITSIN HAS BEEN DEVELOPING PERENNIAL VEGETABLES BY GRAFTING GREEN PEAS AND TOMATOES ON ARBOREAL PLANTS. HE REPORTS HE HAS JUST HARVESTED A SECOND YEAR'S CROP FROM TOMATO GRAFTINGS.

VATICAN CITY, AUG. 16-(AP)-BELIEF IN AN ALLIED VICTORY IN THE WAR WAS EXPRESSED TODAY BY THE VATICAN CITY NEWSPAPER L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO WHICH URGED THAT THE PRINCIPLES OF THE ATLANTIC CHARTER BE TRANSLATED INTO A REALITY IN INTERNATIONAL LIFE.

IN AN ARTICLE ON THE CHARTER THE NEWSPAPER SAID ALLIED ARMIES NOW DOMINATED THE ENTIRE WORLD.

THE ARTICLE REVIEWED DEVELOPMENTS SINCE THE ATLANTIC CHARTER DECLARATION THREE YEARS AGO AND OBSERVED THAT IF THE CHARTER IS LOGICALLY APPLIED IT WILL BRING VAST REFORMS IN NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL ORDER.

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, AUG.16-(AP)-JAPAN'S SCREEN OF PACIFIC ISLANDS HAS BEEN BOMBED AGAIN AT BOTH ITS ENDS AND NEAR THE CENTER--AT THE KURILES IN THE NORTH, IWO JIMA 700 MILES SOUTH OF TOKYO, AND THE SPICE ISLANDS ON THE EQUATOR.

ADVERSE WEATHER LIMITED THE AIR WAR IN THE NEW GUINEA-CAROLINES SECTOR, BUT FAR TO THE WEST, HEAVY BOMBERS FROM CHINA BOMBED TAKAO, FORMOSA, AND SANK THREE FREIGHTERS BETWEEN FORMOSA AND THE CHINA COAST, TO ADD TO HAMMER BLOWS FROM EVERY DIRECTION.

GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT LIBERATOR AND MITCHELL BOMBERS, CONTINUING ATTACKS WHICH HAVE PARALYZED HALMAHERA AS A JAPANESE BASE, RAIDED BOTH HALMAHERA AND TERNATE IN THE SPICE ISLANDS REPEATEDLY MONDAY, THROUGH HEAVY ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE. THE BOMBS SET WAREHOUSES AFIRE AND EXPLODED AMMUNITION DUMPS.

SOUTH OF HALMAHERA, TOWARD CERAM, AIR PATROLS SANK EIGHT COASTAL CRAFT--"SMALL SAILINGHVESSELS, INDICATIVE OF THE EXTENT TO WHICH THE JAPANESE HAVE BEEN FORCED TO PRESS ANY AVAILABLE SHIPPING INTO SERVICE," A MACARTHUR SPOKESMAN SAID.

ADM. CHESTER W.NIMITZ ANNOUNCED MEANWHILE THAT ARMY LIBERATORS HIT JAPANESE SHIPPING NEAR PARAMUSHIRO IN THE KURILES FRIDAY AND ALSO BOMBED THE AIRSTRIP AT SURIBACHI. THEY FOUGHT OFF 15 TO 20 ENEMY PLANES, SHOOTING DOWN AT LEAST THREE AND POSSIBLY EIGHT.

NAVY SEARCH PLANES BOMBED INSTALLATIONS ON SHUMUSHU AND ON ARAITO ISLAND, OFF NORTHERN PARAMUSHIRO, SATURDAY. THEY ALSO SANK A PATROL SHIP.

MARIANAS-BASED BOMBERS RAIDED IWO JIMA, IN THE VOLCANO GROUP, PAGON, IN THE NORTHERN MARIANAS, AND ROTA ISLAND, SOUTH OF SAIPAN, SUNDAY. ONE OF THE LIBERATORS WHICH PLASTERED IWO'S AGGRESSIVE ENEMY FIGHTERS.

DESPITE UNFAVORABLE WEATHER, OTHER PLANES ATTACKED BYPASSED JAPANESE POSITIONS ON NEW GUINEA, NEW BRITAIN, NEW IRELAND, BOUGAINVILLE, PALAU, THE MARSHALLS AND NAURU.

AT HONOLULU, ELMER DAVIS, DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION, OBSERVED UPON HIS RETURN FROM SAIPAN AND GUAM THAT "MORE TOKYO GOVERNMENTS WILL HAVE TO FALL BEFORE THE JAPANESE ARE READY FOR THE UNCONDITIONAL SURRENJER WE SHALL DEMAND."

AGANA,GUAM,AUG.6-(DELAYED)-(AP)-"JOE BLOW" IS THE MAN WHO DOES THE FIGHTING IN THIS WAR EVERYWHERE, INCLUDING GUAM.

JOE IS THE 77TH DIVISION SOLDIER PATROLLING THROUGH THE BRUSH IN THE SKIRMISH LINE YESTERDAY. SUDDENLY SOMETHING GRABBED HIM AROUND THE LEGS, TRIED TO PULL HIM TO THE GROUND. IT WAS A JAPANESE, USING ONE ARM AND BANGING A GRENADE AGAINST HIS HELMET WITH THE OTHER.

THE FOEMAN WANTED TO COMMIT HARA-KIRI AND TAKE THE SOLDIER WITH HIM. BUT JOE KICKED FREE AND ROLLED AWAY AS THE GRENADE EXPLODED HARMLESSLY BETWEEN THE TWO MEN. THEN THE SOLDIER STRUGGLED TO HIS FEET AND SHOT THE JAPANESE AND HIS BUDDY TRYING TO HIDE IN A FOXHOLE. THE SOLDIER WAS SO SCARED HE COULD ONLY YELL IN A SQUEAKY VOICE, "COME ON IN HERE. COME IN HERE, YOU GUYS, AND LOOK." NOBODY GOT HIS NAME.

JOE BLOW MAY BE EITHER OF TWO MARINES, JOHN CROWLEY, 4032 UPTON AVE., S., MINNEAPOLIS, OR CHARLES DOYLE, FORT WORTH, WHO REPELLED TWO ENEMY TANKS WITH ONE SMALL ARTILLERY PIECE AND HAND GRENA

JOE COULD BE PFC ROBERT BANDY OF LOUISIANA, MO., WHO SURVIVED A BRIEF [illegible]EMY TANK ATTACK AND LATER SURVEYED HIS HELMET WITH A SMALL HOLE IN FRONT AND A LARGE HOLE BEHIND. HIS HEAD WAS UNINJURED.

THIS "BLOW" MAN COULD BE ANY OF THREE MARINES WHO ADOPTED A JAPANESE TRICK AND PLAYED DEAD IN A FOXHOLE WHILE SEVEN NIPPONESE PASSED AND THEN KILLED THEM ALL. THEY WERE CPL.SALVATORE MICELI, 28 CARDINAL PLACE, STAMFORD, CONN., AND PFC'S ALONZO FRANCO, MARFA, TEX., AND LOUIS KANE, 3922 N.HERMITAGE AVE., CHICAGO.

JOE IS PFC PAUL FUGATE, 3336 YANKEE ROAD, MIDDLETOWN, OHIO, WHO SENT A PRACTICE BURST FROM A MORTAR INTO A NEARBY TREE. A SNIPER FELL OUT.

JOE COULD BE PFC FREDERICK COSGRO, 103 WHITE ST., ECORSE, DETROIT, WHO ORDINARILY HELPS FIRE MARINE HEAVY ARTILLERY. BUT ONE DAY HE LOOKED UNDER A SHEET OF TIN IN A WRECKED HOUSE AND SAW A "DEAD" JAPANESE WHOSE EYES FLICKERED AT THE WRONG MOMENT. COSGRO KILLED HIM WITH HIS KNIFE.

JOE BLOW IS ANY OF THESE MEN AND THESE ARE A FEW OF HIS THOUSANDS OF BATTLE STORIES.

TININ, MARIANAS ISLANDS, AUG. 4-(DELAYED)-(AP)-HUNCHED BEHIND A GRAY LIMESTONE ROCK, TWO JAPANESE SOLDIERS WATCHED AN AMERICAN MARINE OFFICER DRIVE HIS JEEP INTO NO-MAN'S LAND, PARK IT AND NONCHALANTLY CLIMB OUT TO LOOK AROUND.

THE JAPANESE GRINNED. THIS WAS THEIR CHANCE.

A MINUTE LATER THEY APPEARED BEFORE THE OFFICER, SMILED AND BOWED. EACH SOLDIER WAS HUGGING A SOLEMN LITTLE JAPANESE BABY.

THE BABIES THEY CARRIED WITH FAKED FATHERLY TENDERNESS WERE BORROWED FROM JAPANESE CIVILIANS HIDING NEARBY. BUT THEIR SURRENDER WAS GENUINE. TINIAN'S DEFENSES ALREADY HAD CRUMBLED AND THEY HAD DECIDED IT WAS FOOLISH, UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, TO INSIST ON DYING FOR THE EMPEROR.

BY WALKING OUT WITH BABIES IN THEIR ARMS, THE SOLDIERS MADE CERTAIN THEY WOULD ESTABLISH THEIR PEACEABLE INTENTIONS AND RUN NO DANGER OF BEING SHOT AS SNIPERS.

THE MARINE OFFICER WAS CAPT. LYFORD HUTCHINS, OF BOSTON, MASS., WHO HAD GOT SO INTERESTED IN STUDYING THE TERRAIN THAT HE HAD UNWITTINGLY DRIVEN BETWEEN HIS LINES AND ENEMY TROOPS.

BEFORE HE GOT AWAY FROM THE SPOT FIFTY GENUINE JAPANESE CIVILIANS OF ALL AGES HAD SURRENDERED, COMING OUT OF GROUND HOLES AND FROM BEHIND TREES.

AUG 171944

MORE THAN 4,000 CIVILIANS HAVE BEEN INTERNED ON TINIAN. ON NEARBY SAIPAN, 14,600 JAPANESE AND KOREAN CIVILIANS AND NATIVES ARE BEING CARED FOR. THE NUMBER ON GUAM ALREADY HAS GROWN INTO THE THOUSANDS.

GREATEST PROBLEM ON EACH ISLAND HAS BEEN IN GETTING THE CIVILIANS TO DISREGARD JAPANESE MILITARY PROPAGANDA AND COME INTO COLLECTION CENTERS.

ON TINIAN, AND BEFORE THAT, ON SAIPAN, JAPANESE CIVILIANS WERE TOLD BY JAPANESE MILITARY AUTHORITIES THAT THE AMERICANS WERE BARBARIANS.

"IN TRUTH," THEY WERE TOLD, "THE MARINES ARE THE WORST. EACH MARINE RECRUIT, BEFORE HIS ENLISTMENT IS ACCEPTED, MUST PROVE HE HAS MURDERED EITHER HIS FATHER OR HIS MOTHER."

AN AMERICAN SOLDIER WHO SPEAKS JAPANESE, SERGEANT HOICHI KUBO, OF LAHAINA, MAUI, TALKED THREE JAPANESE SOLDIERS ON SAIPAN INTO SURRENDER. BUT TO DO IT, HE HAD TO WALK UNARMED INTO THEIR CAVE. HE ATE RICE WITH THEM, DISCUSSED THE PROGRESS OF THE WAR, AND IN 30 MINUTES SOLD THEM ON THE IDEA OF GIVING UP.

ALL THREE WERE PRIVATES, KUBO DISCOVERED WHEN HE ENTERED THE CAVE.

"I FELT A LITTLE BETTER WHEN I FOUND THAT OUT," THE SERGEANT SAID. "AT LEAST I OUTRANKED THEM."

THE DIFFERENCE IN RANK MADE THEM MORE RESPECTFUL, AND THE SERGEANT WAS GLAD BECAUSE DURING HIS VISIT THE JAPANESE HAD TWO HAND GRENADES LYING HANDY ON THE FLOOR BESIDE THEM.

ONE JAPANESE, REFERRING TO THE AMERICAN TREATMENT IN THE CAMPS ON SAIPAN, TOLD AN ARMY INTERPRETER:

"IT IS LIKE FINDING PARADISE IN HELL."

BY REMBERT JAMES (390)

SAIPAN,MARIANAS ISLANDS,AUG.9-(DELAYED)-(AP)-AMERICAN INGENUITY HAS DONE ALMOST AS MUCH IN 31 DAYS AS THE JAPANESE DID IN 27 YEARS IN MAKING A FORMIDABLE BASE OUT OF 12-MILE LONG SAIPAN ISLAND WHICH LIES 1,000 MILES NEARER TOKYO THAN PEARL HARBOR HIS FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

AUG 171944

AND THE CONSTRUCTION JOB HERE, AMERICAN LEADERS SAY, HAS ONLY STARTED.

IT WAS AT 4 P.M. OF JULY 9 THAT THE MARINES REACHED THE OCEAN'S EDGE AT THE NORTHERN TIP OF SAIPAN AFTER THE MOST SUSTAINED HEAVY FIGHTING OF THE PACIFIC WAR.

SINCE THAT TIME THE GREAT TASK OF IMPROVING FACILITIES AND BUILDING NEW ONES HAS GONE FORWARD STEADILY. TWO TYPHOONS BRUSHED BY, NARROWLY MISSING THE ISLAND, AND SENDING HEAVY SEAS POUNDING AGAINST THE BEACHES. UNTIL THE LAST FEW DAYS, SNIPERS WERE PART OF THE SAIPAN SCENERY. BUT STILL THE WORK WDNT AHEAD.

IN SUCH A RUGGED ISLAND IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE TO FLUSH OUT AND KILL OR CAPTURE ALL THE JAPANESE SOLDIERS IN THE FIRST SWEEP. MOP-UP SQUADS OF SOLDIERS AND MARINES KILLED MORE THAN 1500 BY-PASSED AND FUGITIVE JAPANESE DURING THE MONTH. IN THE SAME PERIOD THEY TOOK MORE THAN 150 MILITARY PRISONERS.

INTERIOR SAIPAN IS STILL NO PLACE FOR PEACEFUL PICNICS, BECAUSE OF LURKING JAPANESE, BUT MOST OF THE ENEMY NOW HAS BEEN CLEANED OUT.

OF THE FEW LEFT, SOME APPARENTLY HAVE RUN OUT OF AMMUNITION. THEY HAVE TRIED TO DAMAGE THE AMERICAN EFFORT BY AMATEURISH TRICKSN AT NIGHT. ONE SEABEE BULLDOZER CREW REPORTED WRENCHES AND OTHER TOOLS HAD BEEN TAKEN FROM THE TOOL BOX AND PLACED IN THE TREADS IN AN EFFORT TO DAMAGE THE MACHINERY.

THE MILITARY ATMOSPHERE OF SAIPAN HAS GONE THROUGH THE USUAL CHANGES COMMON TO ALL CAPTURED BASES. DURING THE FIGHTING EVERYBODY WAS GLAD TO SHARE RATIONS. ANYBODY WITH A JEEP OR TRUCK WAS GLAD TO OFFER RIDES TO PERSONS AFOOT. MILITARY POLICE WERE BUDDIES TO EVERYBODY. ONLY GENERALS AND ADMIRALS DREW SALUTES.

NOW IT IS TAKEN FOR GRANTED THAT EVERYBODY HAS HIS OWN PLACE FOR MESS. HITCH-HIKING IS A TOUGH JOB. THE M.P.'S ARE STIFF AND MILITARY. FULL INSIGNIA HAS BLOSSOMED ON OFFICERS' UNIFORMS. SALUTES ARE GETTING COMMON.

SAIPAN IS NO LONGER "OUT IN THE BOON-DOCKS"--A MARINE TERM MEANING A ROUGH-AND-READY FIGHTING FRONTIER. IT'S GETTING LIKE PEARL HARBOR. A LOT OF PEOPLE ARE BEGINNING TO WISH THEY WERE SOMEWHERE ELSE.

QUEBEC, QUE., ~~MR~~ AUG. 16--(AP)--- FRENCH CANADA, HAVING EXPRESSED ITS ANNOYANCE OVER FEDERAL WARTIME RESTRICTIONS BY DEFEATING PREMIER ADELARD GODBOUT'S LIBERAL GOVERNMENT IN LAST ~~W~~ WEEK'S QUEBEC PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS, IS CARRYING ON ITS WAR EFFORT AT THE SAME BUSY PACE AS BEFORE.

AFTER ASSERTING ITS TRADITIONAL INDEPENDENCE OF ~~DOMINION~~ CANADA'S DOMINION GOVERNMENT ~~DOMINION~~ IN THE CLIMAX OF ONE OF THE HARDEST-FOUGHT ELECTIONS IN YEARS, QUEBEC HAS RETURNED TO ITS WAR WORK, OF WHICH IT HAS A GREAT AMOUNT.

THE VOTERS TURNED OUT GODBOUT, WHO HAD ASKED APPROVAL OF HIS CLOSE COOPERATION IN THE WAR PROGRAM OF DOMINION PRIME MINISTER W. L. MACKENZIE KING, THE HEAD OF THE LIBERAL PARTY.

Godbout will be replaced by former premier maurice duplessis, the electorate assured this when they returned 86 members of ~~his~~ duplessis' union nationale party, a purely provincial organization, to the ~~4~~ legislature of 91 seats, giving him a ~~large~~ majority. the union's leaders in their appeals to the french canadians made the most of grumbling and discontent over wartime regulations, charging that godbout had made quebec a lackey of ~~DOMINION~~ ottawa.

Duplessis promised to "restore provincial autonomy," and the appeal apparently carried with the french-canadian voter, always quick to rise at the suggestion he is being "run" by the other two-thirds of the dominion. Duplessis in ~~HIS~~ effect was running on what AMERICANS WOULD TERM A "STATE'S RIGHTS" PLATFORM.

AUG 171944

POPULAR
THE/FRENCH VIEW IS THAT ALTHOUGH THEY ARE THE MINORITY, THEY WERE ON THIS CONTINENT FIRST AND ARE THE "REAL" CANADIANS.

THE VOTE MAY NOT HAVE BEEN SO MUCH FOR DUPLESSIS AS AGAINST GODBOUT. AND PROBABLY IT WAS NOT SO MUCH AGAINST GODBOUT, AS A PROTEST AGAINST THE LIBERAL GOVERNMENT IN OTTAWA.

THE VOTE AGAINST THE LIBERAL GOVERNMENT IN OTTAWA, PARADOXICALLY, WAS AGAINST A MAN ATTACKED IN MOST OF THE REST OF CANADA AS HAVING BEEN TOO CONSIDERATE OF QUEBEC. PRIME MINISTER KING'S POLICY OF NOT ENFORCING CONSCRIPTION FOR SERVICE OVERSEAS, AN OUTRIGHT CONCESSION TO QUEBEC, IS THE CHIEF POINT OF CONTENTION.

BUT WHILE KING IS CONSIDERED IN NON-FRENCH CANADA AS BEING TOO SOLICITOUS OF QUEBEC'S FEELINGS, INSIDE THE PROVINCE HE WAS PICTURED AS HAVING BEEN NOT SOLICITOUS ENOUGH.

AUG 171944

DUPLESSIS, LONG EXPERIENCED IN POLITICAL WARFARE, WAS ABLE TO TURN INTO VOTES FOR THE UNION NATIONALE THE AVERAGE FRENCHMAN'S ANNOYANCE OVER RATIONING OF FOOD AND LIQUOR AND OTHER COMMODITIES, OVER WARTIME DEPRIVATIONS, AND OVER THE THOUSAND AND ONE OTHER INCON-

VENIENCES OF MODERN WAR.

IF QUEBEC HAD BEEN [illegible] ELECTING MEMBERS TO THE FEDERAL PARLIAMENT, AND THUS INDIRECTLY ELECTING A FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, THE PROVINCE MIGHT WELL HAVE VOTED FOR KING'S MEN. BUT THIS APPEARED TO BE A GOOD TIME TO TAKE A CRACK AT OTTAWA WITHOUT SERIOUSLY CHANGING THINGS WITHIN THE PROVINCE.

FRENCHMEN AGREE THAT IF LAST WEEK'S ELECTION HAD BEEN FOUGHT ON PURELY PROVINCIAL LINES, THE GODBOUT REGIME PROBABLY WOULD HAVE BEEN RETURNED. MOST PROGRESSIVE OF ITS/PROVINCIAL LEGISLATION WAS HEARD. NO CRITICISM OF

BUT DUPLESSIS KEPT THE VOTERS' ATTENTION RIVETED ON OTTAWA, AND WITH SUCCESS. HIS 47 SEATS OUT OF 91 MAKE ONLY A BARE MAJORITY, AND THE LIBERALS' 37 FORM A POWERFUL OPPOSITION, BUT DUPLESSIS IS BACK IN OFFICE NEVERTHELESS, WITH A PLEDGE TO STRENGTHEN QUEBEC'S AUTONOMY.

IN TURNING AGAINST THE LIBERALS, THE TRADITIONAL PARTY OF

WHIRLWIND DRIVE BY ARMORED UNITS TAKES FOUR CITIES

Chartres, Orleans, Dreux, Chateaudun Fall to Advancing U. S. Troops.

EIFFEL TOWER IN SIGHT

London Reports Troops on Outskirts of Capital; Resistance Melts.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, Aug. 18.—(AP) A new whirlwind American tank offensive, toppling four main bastion cities before Paris, swept within 35 miles of the French capital today and only 20 miles from the Seine river, where a broken German Seventh army was massing barges and ferries in a desperate attempt to escape annihilation.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's hard-driving columns were closing in fast, and the 500 barges and scores of ferries waiting in the Seine for the fleeing German columns faced a terror from the skies, where Allied air might lies in wait worse than any the Nazis inflicted at Dunkerque.

The fortress cities of Chartres, Orleans, Dreux and Chateaudun fell to the triumphant columns which speared on 13 miles east of Chartres and forced the Aunay river, from where the spire of the Eiffel tower could be seen lifting above Paris 35 miles beyond.

[The London radio said United States spearheads had reached "the outskirts of Paris." The Germans declared the Americans were attacking St. Arnoult, 23 miles from Paris, and Epernon, 25 miles from Versailles.]

Meanwhile, the Canadians shattered strong enemy defenses east and south of Caen with a surprise offensive that overran such strongholds as Troarn and Vimont, forced the Dives river as deep as 25 miles southeast of Caen and sent the Germans into a general retreat from positions which had blocked drives toward Paris and Le Havre since D-day.

Paris Hears Guns

(The London radio said U. S. spearheads had reached "the outskirts of Paris," CBS reported. The Germans declared the capital was now "a front line city" with the thunder of distance guns echoing in the streets. Reuters quoted one German report that the Americans had fought to St. Arnoult, 23 miles from Paris).

Of most imminent peril to the battered Seventh German army, fleeing the Falaise trap in Normandy, was a northern column which captured Dreux and burst across the Eure river, only 20 miles west of the Seine, now a formidable moat with its bridges blasted.

Supreme headquarters lifted a week's veil of secrecy to reveal the fresh drive toward Paris, whose spearheads were 65 to 80 miles east of last reported positions around Le Mans and traveling with a bewildering speed that promised to hasten the hour of France's complete liberation.

melted in the fury of the American onslaught along the 65-mile front, and even the great gateway city of Orleans, 65 miles south of Paris, fell with astonishing swiftness.

Here the American armored tide, flanking Paris on the south, was in a position to turn south between the gaps of the Seine and Loire rivers, and catch some German forces in a nutcracker movement in concert with the Seventh army's new invasion drive up from the Riviera 400 miles to the south.

American forces seized Chartres in a seven-hour fight against a reinforced garrison. Then they plowed straight ahead and, once across the Aunay river, were less than an hour's automobile ride from Paris.

Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball said in a dispatch from Chartres that the American forces were "Paris bound."

Their comrades on the north, trying to box the Germans' shattered army against the Seine, also were driving hard against the western flank of the enemy's 15th army, which stands in northeastern France among the robot bomb roosts along the channel coast.

Less than 25 miles northeast of their new-won base of Dreux lay Mantes, whose big bridge across the Seine still stands despite repeated bombings and is one of the few affording the fleeing Germans an easy crossing.

Canadians Seize Falaise

At the same time, the Canadian First army seized Falaise, and blasted the Caen hinge wide open with a "mystery drive" that carried them 10 miles east of Falaise in a powerful thrust across the Dives river, a barrier which has plagued the Allies since D-day.

All German positions in the north appeared crumbling under the shock of the Canadian attack, for Troarn, Dives river fortress east of Caen also fell.

The escape hatch out of the Falaise trap was now narrowed to four miles, and German and American tanks slugged it out above Argentan, where the Doughboys are trying to close the gap.

Driving straight down the shortest road to Paris, the Canadians seized Vimont, graveyard of a British drive a few weeks ago, and St. Pierre-Sur-Dives, 17 miles southeast of Caen. Canadian forces east of Falaise crossed the Dives and were attacking Montreuil.

This drive might be intended to head off the Germans fleeing northeast from their disasters in Normandy and the menace of American tanks pounding east from Dreux.

Those Germans who remained inside the Normandy pocket—no more than 20 miles wide and from four to 15 miles deep—milled about as disorganized guerrilla bands frantically trying to escape, a British staff officer said. They numbered no more than 50,000.

The bulk of the enemy armored force had escaped, but it was under terrific aerial attack, and 30 tanks were knocked out Wednesday by warplanes which bombed five bridges west of the Seine.

Canadians were engaged in some of the heaviest fighting of the Normandy campaign before pivotal Falaise, 21 miles south of Caen, was captured.

In the rubble of the streets the Germans had planted anti-tank guns, machine-guns and snipers, who swept the Ante river on the northern outskirts of the town.

But Sherman tanks moved down the slopes of hills on the north and poured their fire into the ruins while infantry and other tanks forded the stream.

Drive to Heart of France

The American Third army lanced toward the heart of France at a speed which outdid the Avranches breakthrough, and the stakes were even greater. This might well be the battle of France. The other was the battle of northwestern France.

The Avranches stakes were not inconsiderable, for it was announced that in this drive the Third army alone knocked out 100,000 Germans—11,000 killed, 41,300 captured, and 47,500 wounded.

French resistance forces began attacks on the Germans in Chartres eve before the first wave of motorized American infantry rumbled in and prevented the enemy from dynamiting the post office. The Germans managed, however, to blow up the water and power plants and numerous monuments.

But the pride of Chartres, its famed cathedral with the twin spires, was undamaged save for nicks in the stone of its towers. Six German snipers had taken refuge there. They surrendered after their ammunition was exhausted, and were marched off through infuriated, hooting crowds.

The capture of Orleans extended the American southern flank along the Loire for a distance of around 200 miles upstream from Nantes.

Between them and the Allied invasion forces from the Mediterranean was a hapless German army under constant harassing attack from French patriot forces, ranging boldly across the countryside in great strength.

Yanks Take Orleans

Orleans, like the other key cities in the Paris defenses, fell yesterday, and the direction or extent of the drive beyond historic Orleans was not known.

This might be a flanking thrust designed to squeeze the Germans from Paris without costly street fighting which might leave the once-gay capital of France in ruins.

There was no indication whether the capital might be declared an open city by the Germans, as it was when the French yielded it without a fight in the last, chaotic retreat of 1940, when Hitler's army tramped in through the Arc de Triomphe.

Any stand in Paris would be bolstered by the enemy's 15th army to the north, but this army is likely to have troubles of its own with Patton's forces driving for the Seine.

Forces which Field Marshal Gen. Guenther Von Kluge has been able to salvage from his debacle in northwestern France were under heavy attack from the air, were all but blocked off from Paris, and were confronted with the task of somehow getting across the all but bridgeless Seine.

Across the Seine all the way north into Belgium and east of Paris to the German frontier, Lightnings, Thunderbolts and Mustangs divebombed and strafed communications and supply lines.

Americans were known to be a nt 30 miles from Versailles, on the southwestern approaches to Paris, where the peace treaty of the First World War was drafted.

The pocket of Normandy was collapsing, resistance had ceased as far east as Flers, once the center of the trap, and the Americans were moving ahead almost unchecked.

Such strong points as Tinchebray on the west, Conde-sur-Noireau on the north and most of the 18-mile highway from Conde to Falaise were captured by Americans and British.

Americans driving from the south were fighting beyond bypassed Rannes, captured Putanges, less than 10 miles west of Argentan, and were north of La Ferte-Mace.

There was little news from Brittany, but the Germans conceded that resistance at the port of St. Malo was drawing to an end.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—The Third United States Army in lightning thrusts toward Paris sliced to within twenty-seven miles of the western suburb of Versailles today after seizing four key cities and plunging across the Aunay River thirteen miles beyond fallen Chartres.

Versailles is five miles west of the capital menaced by Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's armored avalanche which had enveloped Chartres, Dreux, Chateaudun and Orleans, west and southwest of Paris.

Gen. Patton had struck to within twenty miles of the Seine, threatening to pin against that great river the remnants of the Seventh German Army fleeing from the Falaise pincers.

Foe Retreats on Thirty-mile Front.

DAY

Simultaneously the Canadians, bursting forward, seized Falaise and crossed the Dives River. They took St. Pierre to the northeast in a new eastward offensive, and also toppled Troarn, seven miles east of Caen. The Germans were reported retreating on a thirty-mile front from Falaise north to the channel.

The captured cities of Chartres, Dreux, Orleans and Chateaudon lie in an arc forty to sixty-five miles from Paris. German resistance was weak and gains from Le Mans ranged from sixty to eighty miles.

Paris Itself Outflanked.

Paris itself was virtually outflanked to the south by the fall of Orleans which gave Gen. Patton a fighting foothold inside the Seine-Loire rivers gap.

At least one column of Gen. Patton's vaulted the Eure River barely twenty miles from the Seine in a swift threat to box in the fleeing German Seventh Army against that river. The United States lightning thrusts also carried hard against the inland flank of the German Fifteenth Army holding the Pas de Calais coast above Normandy.

Negligble Resistance Reported

Front dispatches said Patton was meeting only negligible resistance.

Dreux is 40 miles due west of Paris and only 35 miles from the capital's suburb of Versailles. Chartres is 20 miles south of Dreux. Orleans is 65 miles below the capital.

One column speared forward across the Eure river, presumably near Dreux where it curves two miles east of that road center, and then pounded on toward Paris.

Patton had thrown an arc nearly 100 miles long on Paris from the west and south. Dreux, Chateaudun, Chartres, and Orleans, a city of 73,000 on the Loire, all fell yesterday.

It was announced officially that the United States Third Army had knocked out about 100,000 Germans, including 11,000 killed, 41,300 captured and 47,500 wounded.

Strongest Air Oppositon

The air force reported the strongest opposition in weeks from the German airmen yesterday in the Paris area. Eleven German planes were destroyed, and two American fighters were lost.

Dreux and Chartres, a French department capital of 25,000 population, form the western gateway to Paris.

Patton's steel fingers formed a double threat—to take Paris and perhaps also to snare between the Seine and the Channel the German Seventh Army pulling out of the disastrous Falaise pocket.

Falaise fell today to Canadian forces, and the Normandy pocket fast was disappearing, with its neck narrowed to seven miles.

AUG 18 1944

Retreat Into Seine Area

The Germans were retreating into the area below the Seine, which curves from Paris to the Channel.

It was Patton's army which turned north from Le Mans and brought up the southern wing of the Falaise pincers.

Now he could again send his columns beating northward from the Dreux area, possibly forming a trap on the Seine. Seine river bridges have been wrecked by Allied bombs. Five spans on the Risle river west of the Seine were struck overnight. The Nazis would have the greatest difficulty pulling their armor and heavy equipment across the river over temporary bridges which likely would be easy marks for the vast Allied bomber fleets.

Southern Flank Along Loire

The push to Orleans gave the Allies a 200-mile southern flank along the Loire river. This flank is only some 350 miles northwest of the Allied offensive beating in from the French Riviera.

Patton's powerful thrusts again had been blanketed in secrecy until today.

Canadian infantry and tanks which captured Falaise pushed 1,000 yards south, dispatches said.

Supreme headquarters said there was hard fighting east of Falaise.

(One German broadcast asserted the Canadians had crossed the Dives river, which runs five miles east of Falaise, in a southeastern drive. Nazi broadcasts admitted the possibility that the new Allied easward drive might trap Germans against the Seine or the Channel.)

AUG 18 1944

Nazis In Trap Disorganized

Surviving elements of the German Seventh Army are milling around in "complete disorganization," both inside the trap and in the area eastward to the Seine, a British saff officer declared at field headquarters.

Canadian mop-up forces still were mopping up in the Falaise streets and buildings where some Germans were holding out. But for any practical purpose the city was useless to the Germans.

The advance into Falaise started yesterday, putting western Canadians into one of their bitterest fights since the battles just south of Caen.

Guns Among Wrecked Buildings

At the north edge of the Falaise escape gap, the city was first surrounded. Canadians fought through its streets and the final mopping up of snipers soon started. The Germans had anti-tank guns, machine guns and rifles hidden among wrecked buildings.

The Ante river, which swings through the northwestern outskirts of Falaise, was the greatest obstacle, but Sherman tanks were put across and infantry followed.

To hamper Allied air attacks, the Germans are sandwiching French refugees in their army columns fleeing the Falaise trap, Allied flyers reported.

Most Of Armor Out

The escape of the bulk of Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge's armor already has been conceded, leaving only remnants of possibly 14 enemy divisions—some stripped to the bone—still caught west of the Falaise-Argentan escape hatch.

A dispatch from Associated Press War Correspondent Roger D. Greene said that "high British officers reflected tranquillity over the situation, and intimated that Allied high strategy has even greater blows in store for the enemy."

Drive For Tours Reported

(The Paris radio said: "The Allies have now begun their all out drive for the capital." The Germans reported another Allied drive toward Tours, 50 miles south of Le Mans.)

"The picture is very reassuring and the next two or three weeks may be decisive," a British staff officer said.

Although the Canadians below Falaise occupied two commanding hills, desperate German rearguard resistance both there and in Argentan managed to keep the escape hatch pried open.

The pocket itself was closing rapidly. Allied forces controlled most of the 18-mile Conde-Falaise road. The bulge was reduced in width to five miles in many places. It is less than 20 miles long.

Siege Of St. Malo

In Brittany, the siege of St. Malo went into its tenth day and the Germans conceded their stand in the rock-bound Citadel there was "drawing to an end." Pockets of German resistance still are being mopped up on the peninsula.

Reviewing the air force role in the American drive through France, Maj. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, commander of the United States Ninth Air Force, said last night Patton had called it "the greatest bit of air-ground cooperation in the history of warfare."

Vandenburg said delayed-action bombs planted along highways by American dive-bombers had been a big factor in bottling up German military traffic to and from the battlefront.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITION-

AUG 18 1944

London, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—The German broadcast tonight said fighting had reached St. Arnoult, twenty-three miles from the Paris city limits.

DAY

Three Divisions in Battle

4th and 6th, Armored and 8th, Motorized, Units in France

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 17 (AP).—American 4th and 6th Armored Divisions and 8th Motorized Division were disclosed today to be fighting in France.

NIGHT

The 4th Armored Division is commanded by Major General John Wood, the 6th Armored by Major General Robert Grow, and the 8th Motorized by Brigadier General Donald Stroh.

The fourth is made up mostly of men from the East Coast areas, although it has a representation from all States. It was activated at Pine Camp, N. Y., October 15, 1941, and trained later in Tennessee, California and in Camp Bowie, Texas. It reached the training area in Britain January 10. Brig. Gen. Henry Baird commanded it until his retirement in June, 1942.

Midway Between Brest And Rhine

Supreme Headquarters, A. E. F., Aug. 17 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army has plunged halfway from the port of Brest to the Rhine river border of Germany.

It is 270 miles from Brest to Chartres and Patton is already 13 miles beyond that city. The Upper Rhine lies 270 miles from Chartres.

DAY

Patton, breaking out of Normandy, sent columns westward clear through Brittany to Brest's outskirts, and also launched an armored drive eastward toward Paris.

DRIVE IN FRANCE

ARY FORCE, Aug. 17.—(AP) The American Third army's mighty uppercut to the Seine which has knocked the German army out of northwestern France was planned months before D-Day on mapping tables of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and his general staff, who counted heavily on the daring of field commanders and fighting grit of American troops.

Nothing in the attack, it was disclosed tonight by a high officer of Gen. Eisenhower's staff, was improvised or off-the-cuff strategy.

Its whole execution of adapting the original plan to immediate front conditions, which admittedly did not fit with advance plotting, was in the hands of field commanders, through Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley down to Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who saw to it that it worked.

Gen. Patton, who likes to ride out his campaigns right up in the assault wave of tanks, saw it through from as close to battle as he dared get.

The swiftest sweep since the Avranches breakthrough, this week's advance put the weather-hampered invasion at least back on schedule. Location of lines—and of the Falaise pocket—was not exactly the same as that spotted on the advanced plan, but in total miles it was not much different.

Best unofficial information was that the pocket was supposed to have clamped down between Argentan and Alencon, instead of from Falaise to Argentan where it finally developed.

But the fact the plan called for this great supporting sweep in between the Falaise pocket and Paris indicated Eisenhower never had counted on the initial trap completing the destruction of the German Seventh army.

The Germans obviously were fooled. Had they known the new cut-in drive was hidden behind a complete Allied news blackout the past week, there is little likelihood they would have stayed to fight as long as they did in the Falaise sack. They particularly would have pulled out armor which they left to hold open the jaws between Falaise and Argentan.

The Germans had only two choices: Get out of the middle of Normandy earlier or stop both of Patton's cut-in drives from the south. They did neither.

TANKS COMING, PARIS IS TOLD

Allied High Command Sends Instructions To People

WASHINGTON

New York, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Morocco radio, operated by the French Committee of National Liberation, said tonight in a broadcast heard by United States monitors that "the Vatican has opened negotiations with belligerents to protect Paris from eventual destruction, as it did in the case of Rome."

London, Friday, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Allied Supreme Command told the people of Paris and its suburbs today that "you can already hear the guns and soon you will hear the rumble of the tanks," a possible hint that Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's armor, now only 23 miles away, may make the French capital an immediate objective.

"The day is not far off when you will have to rise and chase out the enemy and his accomplices," said the Supreme Command's authorized spokesman over the American Broadcasting Station in Europe (ABSIE) as he issued preliminary instructions to patriots within Paris.

NIGHT

Warns Of Gestapo Traps

"From now on you must group around units of French Forces of the Interior, resistance organizations, clandestine syndicates and secret delegates and follow the directives of resistance. Beware of traps and provocations of the Gestapo. Be brave, united, disciplined, courageous and resolute."

Policemen of Paris were told in case they were ordered out of the city to disobey, "hide in Paris" and refuse to leave "under any pretext."

In southern France the Allies stepped up the tempo of their landing operations and, according to the German official news agency DNB, "established themselves in Cannes," made new landings on both sides of Toulon and drove inland from the St. Raphael area into the Argens Valley. The German report stressed that reinforcements were pouring onto the beaches "day and night" under protection of heavy fire from Allied warships.

Like Front-Line City

"The whole aspect of the French capital is assuming that of a front-line city," said DNB, adding that "for the first time the German command has appealed to the population to remain calm."

A sudden strike of Paris policemen reported by the Berlin radio apparently reflected the popular mood in the capital. The Germans said also that Paris was without gas, coal and transportation.

Transportation Paralyzed

The Paris correspondent for the German Transocean News Service, who apparently was preparing for a quick departure along with the rest of the Germans, said that the city's transportation was completely paralyzed.

In a report broadcast by the Berlin radio this correspondent said that the subway was shut down and people were walking or cycling to work—if they went to work at all.

The Paris police, the correspondent said, have been on strike since Tuesday in protest over appointment of a new high police official. There is no gas or coal for cooking in the capital, and it has ben necessary to supply the populace with hot meals from central communal kitchens, he said.

Trust In Miracle Weapons

Editorials in Nazi papers of the occupied countries warned the populations against wishful dreams of early deliverance and tried to persuade them that Hitler's new miracle weapons soon would change the whole trend of the war.

One Flemish paper promised "a new kind of U-boat" would soon end the shipment of American supplies to Europe and said the V-2 robot bomb soon would be launched against England, "a thousand times more terrible" than the V-1 now being used. "We are convinced," this editorial said, "that not Germany's but Britain's days are numbered."

Significant in connection with such eleventh-hour prophecies was a Swiss report that the Germans were supplying all factory workers with gas masks. The Journal de Geneve, in what it called an eyewitness report, said "mysterious cases whose contents evidently are associated with gas warfare" were being rushed to frontal areas by the Germans.

Sunset-To-Dawn Curfew

In an apparent attempt to combat a popular uprising in southern France the Germans clamped a sunset-to-dawn curfew on the Alpes Maritimes area, banned the sale of all alcoholic beverages and prohibited civilians from "moving about by vehicle or bicycle" or congregating in groups of more than three persons.

At the same time the Germans warned there would be swift punishment for any person helping the Allied invading forces.

The Nazi military analyst Ludwig Sertorius, carefullly sidestepping any prediction of failure for the Allied Mediterranean thrust, contented himself in one Berlin broadcast with insisting that "German resistance is not at all weak," and that "many landing attempts along the invasion coast were frustrated."

Reinforcements Pouring In

He added, however, that "we could not hinder the enemy from pouring in reinforcements because of his terrifice naval bombardment." He said that "obviously the enemy chose to land in this sector because he wants possession of Toulon."

Sertorious admitted that the American armored drive in the Paris direction was developing a "terrific punch," but he said Allied pressure "slackened somewhat" in the Dreux area after capture of that town. He said, however, that the pressure had increased perceptibly in the area of Chartres.

The Oslo radio reported a Berlin announcement that the defense forces of southern France "are included in the army group" under the command of Field Marshel General Guenther von Kluge, who is commander in the west. Previously German reports had referred to Field Marshal General Johannes Blaskowitz as commander in the south.

AUG 18 1944

Germans Report 3 U. S. Spearheads Are Driving on French Capital.

By WADE WERNER

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(AP) The thunder of Allied guns heralding the prospective liberation of Paris reverberated along the boulevards of the captive French capital today. The Germans reported that three armored American spearheads were driving eastward beyond Chartres and Dreux and that violent fighting raged on roads converging on the city.

In southern France the Allies stepped up the tempo of their landing operations and, according to the German Official News Agency DNB, "established themselves in Cannes," made new landings on both sides of Toulon and drove inland from the St. Raphael area into the Argens valley. The German report stressed that reinforcements were pouring onto the beaches "day and night" under protection of heavy fire from Allied warships.

Appeal to Population

"The whole aspect of the French capital is assuming that of a front-line city," said DNB, adding that "for the first time the German command has appealed to the population to remain calm."

Nazi commentaries developed almost an hysterical note as the German army's plight grew worse and the Maquis and other resistance groups took full advantage of the confusion.

A sudden strike of Paris policemen reported by the Berlin radio apparently reflected the popular mood in the capital. The Germans said also that Paris was without gas, coal and transportation.

Frantic editorials in Nazi papers of the occupied countries warned the populations against wishful dreams of early deliverance and tried to persuade them that Hitler's new miracle weapons soon would change the whole trend of the war.

One Flemish paper promised "a new kind of U-boat" would soon end the shipment of American supplies to Europe and said that the V-2 robot bomb soon would be launched against England, "a thousand times more terrible" than the V-1 now being used. "We are convinced," this editorial said, "that not Germany's, but Britain's days are numbered."

Significant in connection with such eleventh-hour prophecies was a Swiss report that the Germans were supplying all factory workers with gas masks. The Journal de Geneve, in what it called an eyewitness report, said that "mysterious cases whose contents evidently are associated with gas warfare" were being rushed to frontal areas by the Germans.

In an apparent attempt to combat a popular uprising in southern France the Germans clamped a sunset-to-dawn curfew on the Alpes Maritimes area, banned the sale of all alcoholic beverages and prohibited civilians from "moving about by vehicle or bicycle" or congregating in groups of more than three persons.

Nazis Warn Frenchmen

At the same time the Germans warned there would be swift punishment for any person helping the Allied invading forces.

The Nazi military analyst Ludwig Sertorius, carefully side-stepping any prediction of failure for the Allied Mediterranean thrust, contented himself in one Berlin broadcast with insisting that "German resistance is not at all weak," and that "many landings attempts along the invasion coast were frustrated."

He added, however, that "we could not hinder the enemy from pouring in reinforcements because of his terrific naval bombardment." He said that "obviously the enemy chose to land in this sector because he wants possession of Toulon."

Chaos Reigns as Paris Hears Roar of U. S. Guns

AUG 18 1944

London, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—Paris is now a "front line city" and the thunder of the approaching American guns can be heard in the city, the German radio said at 4 P. M. today.

The German report pictured the French capital as a city of chaos—without food, transportation or police. The police were said to be on strike. "The churches are overcrowded, and special prayers are being said at Notre Dame," Transocean, the German propaganda agency, declared in a broadcast from Berlin.

DAY

"For the first time, the intermittent thunder of guns was heard in Paris this afternoon. The whole aspect of the French capital is assuming that of a front line city. For the first time the German Command has appealed to the population to remain calm."

Food Shortage Acute.

The food shortage was declared acute. The whole city was reported dependent on community kitchens for meager meals.

The striking policemen were said to have ignored appeals to return to duty, after walking out in protest over the appointment of a new high police official.

The capital was also said to be without gas or coal, and with electric current available only from 10:30 P. M. until midnight.

Paris was spared the ravages of war in the fall of France in 1940, although some German bombs dropped in the outskirts. Le Bourget airfield, where Lindbergh landed, Parisian factories on islands in the Seine, and numerous factories and railways around the city have been frequent targets of American and British bombs.

Appeal for Food.

"More and more the face of the French capital is changing as it is being converted into a city close to the front," another Berlin broadcast said. "The whole of Paris is walking or cycling to work because the last traffic means has now ceased functioning.

"Gas service stopped on Thursday, so the population is now getting its food from community kitchens. Barges carrying coal to Paris on the Seine are being attacked by enemy planes, or they become the prey of saboteurs."

The appeal of Police Prefect Busisir to the striking policemen to return to work had been ignored, Berlin continued, adding: "The serious food situation has induced the Secretary of State for Food to appeal to peasants to send their grain as speedily as possible to the capital."

FRENCH FIGHT CHARTRES FOE

First Americans Find Patriots Already Battling Garrison

DAY

Chartres, France, Aug. 17 (AP)—The fighting has swirled on eastward beyond this cathedral city toward Paris.

The troops who swarmed in yesterday to find the German garrison already hotly engaged by roving bands of Patriots, were last reported some 35 miles from the capital and within 30 miles of Versailles.

Behind Tank Spearhead

The first wave of motorized infantry swept into Chartres at 9 A. M. yesterday from the east behind a spearhead of tanks bent on cutting off and eliminating any of the enemy left behind by the retreating Germans.

Within five hours they had the situation well in hand, and all organized resistance was wiped out within two more hours.

NIGHT

The liberating forces found a hungry but happy population. These Frenchmen had been without meat and vegetables for eight days, because Allied air power had throttled communications.

Burned Trains On Lines

Bombed and partly burned trainloads of German equipment littered the electrified railway lines leading into the city, and power lines sagged or were a tangled mass every mile or so from near bomb hits.

The Germans began blowing up magazines last week and officers decamped over the week end. Two travelers from Paris said they passed a long convoy of vehicles loaded with officers and tons of baggage, but no guns.

French resistance forces swung into action as the American columns approached Chartres and stormed the basement of the post-office, where they caught enemy demolition squads in the act of fixing fuses to explosives.

But they were unable to keep the Germans from dynamiting the waterworks, the power plant and many ancient monuments.

Cathedral Only Chipped in Places.

AUG 18 1944

By EDWARD D. BALL.

Chartres, France, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—The Paris-bound Americans occupied Chartres, an hour's auto ride from the French capital, after a five-hour street fight yesterday with a reinforced German garrison, and sped on today.

American forces entered from the east behind an armored spearhead which sped on through Chartres to meet another armored column driving down from the north after taking Dreux.

The Americans outside Chartres cheered when a truck convoy of Army nurses arrived—the first American girls they had seen since Normandy.

The first wave of motorized infantry moved in at 9 A. M. yesterday and had the situation in hand five hours later, although sporadic firing still was going on in the outskirts. Our artillery was firing across the city into German positions to the north.

DAY

Cathedral Undamaged.

In one brisk battle in the shadow of the famous Chartres Cathedral, German machine-gunners killed two Frenchmen—but forty Germans died in the pocket battle.

The twin-spired cathedral was undamaged except for nicks in the stone around an aperture in the Gothic tower, from which six Germans were sniping, and some chunks taken out of the Romanesque tower. The snipers surrendered at 3 P. M. when their ammunition gave out, and were marched off through an infuriated, jeering crowd.

After the Germans came down, Lieut. A. F. Hicks of Lexington, Ky., climbed the tower and ascertained that there were no more in hiding.

French resistance forces began fighting the Germans before the Americans entered the city and prevented destruction of the post office by storming into the basement where enemy demolition squads were fixing fuses on explosives.

Madame Olga and Her Rifle.

Despite the courageous fight put up by patriots, the Germans succeeded in dynamiting the waterworks, the electric power plant and numerous ancient monuments.

After the Americans got in, the French joined them in cleaning out snipers and enemy nests. Even before the fighting ended the patriots had taken over municipal control and restored order.

A wispy, middle-aged woman wearing blue sailor pants told today in her own brand of English how she had "made boom, boom against the Germans all night."

Mme. Olga of the resistance forces she was, and slung over her shoulder was the weapon with which she had done her boom-booming. It was an old Belgian Army rifle made in Norwich, Conn.

Collaborators Get Clipped.

Out in the square the resistance people were shaving the heads of women accused of being collaborationists. As extra punishment, some were dunked in the water fountain.

Lieut.-Col. Leslie Allison of Paris, Ky., led the first troops into Chartres.

"Here's to my Paris address—the Kentucky one—may I soon be receiving my mail there," he said.

"We have been dumping snipers all over town," said Major Ted Johansen, New London, Conn. "Those we don't get the French will."

Private Ralph Adams of Audubon, N. J., jumped off his half-track to get a long and luscious kiss from a chic mademoiselle.

Russian Women Cheered.

Then he took her around and introduced her as "My bon petite gal" to Sergt. Henry V. Peterson, 494 East 138th street, the Bronx, and Corporal Edward Bankush of Cleveland, Ohio. All Ralph could understand was that her name was Jacqueline.

East of Le Mans the advancing Americans had passed a camp occupied by 400 Russian women used by the German Todt organization as construction laborers. Standing barefoot on the scorching hot asphalt road, the women cheered the doughboys fervently.

Historic Notre Dame Cathedral Unharmed by Yanks at Chartres

AUG 18 1944

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The beautiful twin-spired cathedral of Notre Dame, known to tourists the world over, escaped serious war damage when American forces liberated the city of Chartres in their push across northern France.

The only damage was the nicking of the stone around an aperture in the Gothic tower from which six Germans were sniping, and the knocking out of some chunks of the Romanesque tower, Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball reported from the front.

When the six snipers ran out of ammunition they surrendered and were marched off through an infuriated, hooting crowd.

Noted for its beautiful stained glass windows, some of the finest existing today, the cathedral is one of the oldest, most historic in France. Its windows earlier had been removed to prevent their being damaged in event the war swept through Chartres.

The present structure was completed in 1240 except for minor alterations and repairs, but parts of it date back to the 11th century and tradition has it that the site was venerated by the ancient druids.

Its stained glass windows, dating back to the 13th century, contain 3,889 figures.

The archaeologist Visconti said of the cathedral: "If elsewhere may be found more beautiful parts, nowhere else is there a more beautiful whole."

Tradition says that early Christians found at the site an altar surmounted by a statue representing a woman seated with her child upon her knees, presumably built by the Druids. A church was built over the grotto but later was destroyed by fire. In the 11th century Bishop Fulbert established the cathedral of Notre Dame and erected a new edifice.

However it, too, was destroyed. Re-building of the cathedral was undertaken about 1120 amid popular religious enthusiasm and peasants yoked themselves to carts to haul materials. The cathedral preserved the crypt of the previous edifice.

In 1194 another fire destroyed much of the cathedral and the present one was undertaken. However, the principal tower was rebuilt in 1507-1514 and a fire in 1836 made rebuilding of the upper woodwork necessary.

Of the Gothic architecture, the cathedral is 440 feet long, its choir measures 150 feet across and the vaulting is 121 feet high. Its spires are 351 and 377 feet high.

Among pilgrims who visited the cathedral, Chartres history mentions St. Louis who traveled on foot, Philip the Fair, Charles the Fair, John the Good, Charley V of France, Louis XI, Henry III, Henry IV who was crowned there, and Popes Pascal II, Innocent II and Alexander III.

Nazis Quit in Normandy, Berlin Agency Admits

D. N. B. Says Germans Retreat, Allies Seek to Encircle Them

LONDON, Aug. 18 (Friday) (AP).—The German official news agency, D. N. B., announced early today that the Germans had given up in the Battle of Normandy.

"The Normandy front has been liquidated by the Germans," Dr. Max Krull, D. N. B. military correspondent, said in a Berlin broadcast.

NIGHT

"German forces are retreating and swift Allied troops are trying to gain new positions to outflank and even encircle them.

"An attempt of this sort is being made at Dreux, where thrusts in several directions, including Paris, are being made. The lines are everywhere dented and interwoven to an extraordinary degree."

Crashes Behind Nazi Lines, Sneaks To Safety

A United States Ninth Air Force Base in France, Aug. 17 (AP)—Capt. Walter E. Knudsen, Holyoke, Mass., a Thunderbolt pilot, survived a crash landing behind the German lines yesterday and worked his way back to Allied positions.

JAMESON

In less than eight hours he strafed a German airfield near Chartres, destroyed an ME-109 on the ground, damaged another in the air, crash-landed in a wheatfield after his engine stalled, crawled an hour and a half through German front lines, ran through enemy small arms and artillery fire, hitch-hiked tank and jeep rides and finally landed back at his base in a Piper Cub.

INVADERS DRIVE INLAND 30 MILES TO MARITIME ALPS

KENNEDY

Seventh Army Seizes Five Important Road Centers Beyond Beachheads.

DRAGUIGNAN TAKEN

Troops Hold Coastal Strip With Assault on Toulon in Prospect.

ROME, Aug. 17 — (AP) Surging forward on a great 30-mile arc deep in Southern France, the American Seventh army today seized five important road centers deep behind the original beachheads, and forward elements plunged more 30 miles into the Maritime Alps in the drive to join with Allied forces in northern France.

Along the coast the invasion armies drove through La Napoule, a village only four miles southwest of the famous resort town of Cannes, Allied headquarters announced late tonight.

Nazis Claim Cannes Lost

(The German high command communique said the Allies already had penetrated Cannes, and German broadcasts indicated the Nazis had little hope of holding the town. The reports spoke of airborne landings northwest of the city and entrance of the city itself after sanguinary fighting.)

The greatest pincers movement in the Nazi way was under way as the American sledge-hammer drive moved into Draguignan, 18 miles inland in a north-northwesterly direction from captured St. Raphael on the coast.

NIGHT

The town, a communications center with 11,000 population, lies on a main highway 40 miles northeast of the great naval base of Toulon, and was the farthest inland of any towns specifically announced by headquarters as having been captured.

The advancing Seventh army also seized Vidauban, seven miles southwest of Draguignan, and in a southwesterly direction, the towns of Le Luc, Besse and Cuers, the latter 11 miles northeast of Toulon, and all road centers.

This formed a 30-mile arc stretching from Cuers to Draguignan and bulging in a general northwestward direction, well beyond the firmly established 500-square mile Allied-held segment on the Riviera, where punctures have formed a continuous front with anchor points more than 50 air line miles apart.

Enemy Withdraws

(The German radio said early Friday that German defense forces were withdrawing to new positions on high ground behind the beaches and the Allies had succeeded in "joining up some of their beachheads and are landing further troops and heavy weapons" under the protection of guns and warships.)

Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's troops had seized a coastal strip extending almost to Toulon on the west to Cannes on the east today, and it was possible that already the assault on Toulon had begun.

Headquarters said the opposition thus far encountered in southern France consisted of elements of two German divisions. About 40 per cent of the enemy holding the assault area were battalions composed mostly of Russian war prisoners, Czechs and Poles, under German officers, and headquarters said "their combat efficiency and morale is not high."

The main assault of the Seventh army was made in the boundary area between the two divisions holding the region where the landings were made, and "this factor together with the preliminary bombing contributed to the enemy's confusion," headquarters said.

French resistance groups have contributed largely to the success of the American drive by supplying information on German dispositions, the Allied command announced.

Wilson Praises Progress

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied supreme commander in the west, sent a message to Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Mediterranean commander, stating that evidently the southern France operation had "gotten off to a flying start." Wilson replied that he had been "very gratified by the progress so far."

An official Allied announcement, which likely was behind frontline developments, said today that invasion forces were 10 miles from Toulon and 10 miles from Cannes.

They had driven inland through the Argens valley and along the main road and rail lines leading to Marseilles, chief seaport of France.

This drive had taken the coastal ridge known as Chaine des Maures. Other columns had penetrated into this mountain mass, taking Collobrieres, nestled in the valley of the same name.

The invasion was firmly established on a 500-square-mile segment of the French Riviera. A continuous stream of reinforcements, supplies and equipment was pouring in and the beachhead was expanding steadily.

The Allied command said the invasion had swept up the coastal towns of St. Tropez, Ste. Maxime, St. Raphael, Frejus and Le Lavandou and the inland towns of Le Muy, Le Luc, Lorgues Collobrieres.

"The swift advance of American and French troops continues inland," said Patch's communique. "Numerous additional villages and towns have been taken. All elements of the beachhead forces have been joined to form a continuous front arching inland with anchor points over 50 airline miles apart."

Little Resistance Encountered

Although determined resistance was encountered at some places—a landing party was held by German guns at one beach near St. Raphael until warships silenced them yesterday—there was yet no evidence of any general effort by the enemy to hurl the invaders back.

On the basis of official reports and word brought back by fliers, there so far was no massing of enemy troops preparatory to launching of fierce counterattacks such as the Germans made at Salerno and Anzio in Italy, which almost drove the Allies back into the sea.

On the contrary, airmen reported a complete lack of antiaircraft fire except at Marseilles and Toulon. This indicated the Germans may be pulling back guns which survived the terrific bombings preceding the landings.

As three veteran American infantry divisions which spearheaded the invasion pressed ahead, more American troops and a great French force were pouring ashore unmolested by enemy attack. Tanks and big M-10 tank destroyers were among the equipment landed.

Vast stores of ammunition, food and other supplies already were ashore. Hospitals and many other rear establishments already were in full operation on the beachhead.

Of the coastal towns taken, St. Maxime and St. Raphael are resort towns facing the sparkling sea of the French Riviera and framed by mountains. Le Lavandou is a fishing village and Frejus, one mile from the coast, is one of the old towns of Provence which has withstood modern trends.

Has Historical Background

It was from St. Raphael that Napoleon was deported to Elba and the Chaine de Maures is so called because it was the last stronghold of the Moors in France in the Middle Ages. Cannes is the point where Napoleon landed in 1815 to begin his famous 100-day campaign.

The Allied command announced the forces landed on the beachhead had joined with airborne forces dropped far inland. This likely meant the Allies were in possession of inland communication lines which the parachutists had been assigned to block. Thus these lines could be used henceforth for speedily pushing troops and supplies into the drive to the north.

French forces were in position in the line and eager for their first contact with the enemy.

The astonishing early success of the invasion was due in large measure to the Allies' complete air supremacy.

The Germans sent very few warplanes over the battle areas and these were quickly driven off by Spitfires and other patrolling fighters.

Establish Airfields

The Allies were far enough inland to establish airfields for tactical support of their operations. Air operations included the dropping of ammunition to parachute troops who had sent out an emergency call.

Thunderbolts destroyed several enemy planes on the ground in attacks on two airfields south of Avignon, cut the Cannes-Avignon rail line at five points and knocked out bridges and cut tracks between Toulon and Marseilles.

Lightnings destroyed 17 enemy enemy vehicles and a locomotive south of Nimes.

There were signs that the Germans were hastily preparing for extensions of the Allied landings.

It was announced that Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, who as overall commander in the Mediterranean is in general command of the new invasion, visited the assault area yesterday in a British destroyer with Admiral Sir John Cunningham, commander-in-chief of the Allied fleet in the Mediterranean.

Area Of 500 Square Miles On Riviera Held By Allies

AUG 18 1944

NO RELEASE

Rome, Aug. 17 (AP)—Allied troops have punched out a solid front 50 miles broad and up to 30 miles deep along the coast of southern France, Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army headquarters announced today.

On the west the invasion forces drove within ten miles of the historic old fortified naval base of Toulon. On the east they were within ten miles of the picturesque resort of Cannes. The invaders, spearheaded by three veteran American divisions and supported by heavily armored French forces, had seized an area of approximately 500 square miles.

(The German communique said the Allies already had penetrated Cannes. German broadcasts reported air-borne troops had landed northwest of Cannes and entered the town after bloody fighting. Although the Germans declared they were shelling the town from nearby heights, broadcasts indicated they had little hope of holding the town where Napoleon landed in 1815 to begin his famous 100-day campaign.)

DAY

The Allied announcement listed nine other towns in Allied hands—the coastal towns of St. Tropez, Ste. Maxime, St. Raphel, Frejus and Le Lavandou, and the inland communities of Le Muy, Le Luc, Lorgues and Collobrieres.

Strike 27 Miles Inland

Lorgues, the farthest inland, is 27 miles from the coast at Cap Camarat, near St. Tropez, in the approximate center of the beachhead front.

It was probable that the Allied vanguards were well beyond all these points, and there was a possibility that the assault on Toulon might already have begun, since the enemy still was offering only limited resistance.

Nazis May Make Stand

The Germans may have concentrated considerable forces in that naturally strong base for a desperate stand.

The Allies already have a front deep enough to establish airfields

"The swift advance of American and French troops inland continues and numerous additional villages and towns have been taken," Patch announced.

"All elements of the beachhead forces have been joined to form a continuous front arching inland with anchor points over 50 airline miles apart. The beachhead itself now embraces some 500 square miles."

Casualties Light

"Junction with strong airborne units dropped far behind the enemy lines before dawn on D-day has been effected.

"French and American reinforcements, including armor, are pouring ashore. Casualties continue exceptionally light."

The junction of assault infantry which landed from the sea and the huge air-borne force indicated that the Allies had reached inland communication arteries which the parachute troops had been assigned to block, and that these henceforth would be available for the swift flowing of men and supplies into the rugged Alps of Provence in the drive northward.

American infantry previously linked up with French commandos who had landed on the flanks of the main invading force to block side avenues to the beachheads.

Astonishing Success

It thus was evident that the Allies within 48 hours after their landing had achieved an astonishing success in seizing the primary requisites for a large scale operation.

With tanks and mighty M-10 tank destroyers ashore it was also evident that Patch was in a position to weather the greatest danger ahead—the period in the first 72 hours when the enemy might mass armored reserves to make a counterattack.

Truck Convoy Destroyed

But so far there was little evidence to show that the Germans were massing for such counterattacks.

Thunderbolts intercepted and destroyed one convoy of 50 enemy motor trucks towing field guns toward the battle area, leaving at least 42 of the vehicles in flames and the others damaged.

On the contrary, there were signs that the Germans nervously were preparing for an extension of Allied landings.

Nazis Move Out Of Genoa

Crews of British Bostons and Baltimores reported fires early today in Nice harbor (which the Germans already have said they were evacuating). These apparently were from German demolitions near the Italian border.

Enemy transport columns also were seen moving out of Genoa, the historic port of northern Italy where there were heavy Allied preinvasion bombings. These were going westward, apparently to protect Nazi-held Italy behind the Gothic Line.

Smaller scale enemy movements also were seen between Nice and Imperia, on the coast just inside the Italian border.

Other fires were reported roaring along the Italian Riviera.

Action seemed to be centering around the small gulfs of Frejus and St. Tropez, approximately mid-way between Nice and Toulon. Frejus, a town of 9,000 two miles west of San Raphael, is a mile inland.

The effect of the Allied penetration inland was to put Gen. Patch's forces astride important communication routes between Toulon and Nice and leading to the Italian frontier, while the capture of the ports gave protected anchorages from which to disembark troops and supplies.

Gen. Patch disclosed that the landings were conducted by the United States Sixth Army Corps, which included veteran divisions from Italy as well as Tunisia and Sicily.

Front line dispatches said the Americans were taking but fifteen minutes to knock out each inland German strongpoint, so fast was the drive proceeding.

"All seacoast defenses have been silenced through effective air and naval bombardment." Patch's headquarters reported from the Riviera beachhead.

New Landings Reported

(The Vichy radio said new Allied landings had been made under a heavy naval barrage, and reported heavy fighting west of St. Raphael, about 20 miles southwest of Cannes.

(DNB said the Allies attempted new landings on both sides of Toulon, but declared they were repulsed. Last night the German radio said Nazi forces were carrying out demolitions in Cannes and were withdrawing.)

Prisoners Put At 3,000

Although enemy resistance has been light, "it has not been as slight as first thought," it was said officially.

Reconnaissance reports appeared to substantiate German reports that the Nazis had wrecked harbors at Nice, Cannes and St. Tropez.

Unofficial estimates places prisoners at about 3,000.

Unloadings of men, guns, tanks and supplies exceeded expectations, an official announcement said.

Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied Mediterranean commander and Admiral Sir John Cunningham, commander of the Allied fleet, visited the southern France assault area aboard a British destroyer.

Convoys Still Arriving

"Latest reports received from the naval commander on the south coast of France, Vice Admiral Hewitt, say disembarkation of troops on various beaches are proceeding according to plan," an announcement said.

"Convoys with reinforcements continue to arrive, empty convoys to leave."

Allied headquarters last night declared enemy air opposition remained negligible. Allied planes provided an umbrella over the beachheads and ranged far inland, blasting a path for the advancing troops.

Headquarters permitted disclosure that Prime Minister Churchill witnessed the Allied landing operations from a destroyer off the French coast. Others aboard the warship were United States Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commander of the United States Army Service Forces.

"The Prime Minister was greatly impressed by the clockwork precision of the operations," headquarters said.

Gen. Williams Heads New Air Troop Action

Rome, Aug. 17 (AP)—Troop carrier operations in the invasion of southern France are directed by Brig. Gen. Paul L. Williams, of Los Angeles, chief of the United States Ninth Troop Carrier Command.

Headquarters disclosed today his role in the new attack.

In November, 1942, Williams led the longest parachute troop haul in history—the dash from England to North Africa. He also participated in the air-borne attack on Sicily.

DAY

Williams commanded the transports which carried parachute troops into Normandy and then moved his command to the Mediterranean theater for the present operation.

All U. S. Units in Southern France Join Together into Solid Force

By REYNOLDS PACKARD
Representing The Combined American Press

WITH THE SEVENTH ARMY ON THE RIVIERA, Aug. 17—(AP) All units participating in the D-Day assaults on the French Riviera have joined together, forming a solid beachhead.

After landing with the first H-Hour assault wave at the extreme left flank I have for two days travelled the entire length of the beachhead base from that point. I am able to confirm the juncture of all points, completed after two days fighting.

The last remaining wedge of resistance between units was wiped out last night with further German losses in prisoners and casualties.

Travelling from one flank to another on the beachhead I was impressed with how comparatively little damage was done to the towns themselves from the preliminary navy rocket broadsides and how inadequate were the German defenses.

St. Maxime, which I had known in peacetime days, still was a gay and colorful resort. French women and girls all dressed in sports costumes still were cheering the smiling Americans although already there had been two days of enthusiasm.

Along the route I found hundreds of Daughboys enjoying their first Riviera swims, bathing in their underclothes when they were near towns, or just in their birthday suits along the deserted beaches.

The French people also started to return to swimming, having been forbidden to go near the beaches by the Germans since the Americans landed at Salerno in Italy.

Along the coastal Riviera road I found supplies and reinforcements flowing into the beachhead with even greater speed than was achieved in any other landing in the Mediterranean area.

I saw many hundreds of German prisoners who must have totaled well over several thousands, already confined in areas near the coast for shipping off to the United States.

The Doughboys already have taken a liking to the Riviera and many can be heard saying "now we understand how people can live in Europe."

One of the most fashionable resorts along the Riviera coast, St. Raphael, was taken by the Americans after a four-hour battle on the outskirts which proceeded while street and roof-top fighting occurred in the nearby road junction town of Frejus.

Although the town itself virtually was undamaged by the preliminary D-Day bombardments, I found the hangars and the airfield smashed to bits.

I arrived at St. Raphael late this evening as hundreds of German prisoners were being marched through one street and American Doughboys were passing through on another.

After taking St. Raphael the Doughboys continued to press forward and took the surrounding heights.

Frejus, an important road junction of 10,000 inhabitants three miles inland from St. Raphael, fell Wednesday to American troops after fierce street and housetop fighting that lasted 15 hours. While fighting progressed at St. Raphael other Americans swung around to the rear of Frejus. The Germans were so surprised their officers had to leave their breakfasts untouched and dash out to take charge of the fighting.

When I entered the town two hours after the fighting ended French girls and women were in the streets waving French and American flags.

A large unit of black Senegalese soldiers, whom the Germans had disarmed and kept more or less as prisoners in Frejus lined the streets grinning happily.

fortress. From our altitude the French countryside looked as serene as New England farmland. The only difference was that thousands of parachutes littered the meadows and plowed fields, presenting quite a holiday pattern.

The crew of the C-47 in which I rode was without exception the swellest bunch of guys I have yet met. The pilot and co-pilot, Lieut. Roger Coleson of Fairbault, Minn., and Lieut. Gene Feckler of St. Louis, were veterans of the troop-carrier trade despite their extreme youth. The navigator, Lieut. Alex M. Pakowitz of Brooklyn, slept most of the time on what he called the "milk run." All carried the Distinguished Flying Cross with Oakleaf cluster buried away somewhere in their barracks bags. They had won these medals for their job in Burma, supporting the legendary Major-Gen. Charles Wingate's army on the Imphal drive.

The crew had only one gripe. They knew Joe Louis was somewhere around, but the invasion was pulled before they had a chance to see him.

Just before take-off time the pilot of the glider to be towed by our ship appeared with a cherry pie he had captured on a foray the night before. He rushed up and smacked me in the pit of the stomach, and shouted: "Well, I'll be damned if it isn't Press! Where in hell have you been?"

I recognized hi mas an old friend, Lieut. Ed Hansen of Alhambra, Cal., one of the hottest glider pilots in the business. I hadn't seen him for months. He had picked up the D. F. C. and a heap of other decorations in Burma. We parked in the shadow of a plane and munched the pie.

Then he and his co-pilot, Lieut. Jerry Sonken of New York, insisted I ride in their glider. I had a job explaining to them that there were a couple of gremlins in the front office back in Pittsburgh who would be foaming at the mouth if I didn't hurry back on the C-47 in time to write the invasion stuff. When we reached the target I looked back through the open door of our ship as the glider pulled away in a slow bank. I could see Hansen and Sonken grinning at me, jerking up their thumbs in the So-long sign. I returned it and hoped they would be O. K. America needs guys like that.

Allies Reported in Cannes

LONDON, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Allies in southern France, according to the German official news agency D. N. B., have "established themselves in Cannes," made new landings on both sides of Toulon and have driven inland from the St. Raphael area into the Argens Valley. The German report stressed that reinforcements were pouring onto the beaches "day and night" under protection of heavy fire from Allied warships.

In an apparent attempt to combat a popular uprising in southern France, the Germans clamped a sunset-to-dawn curfew on the Alpes-Maritimes area, banned the sale of all alcoholic beverages and prohibited civilians from "moving about by vehicle or bicycle" or congregating in groups of more than three persons.

At the same time the Germans warned there would be swift punishment for any person helping the Allied invading forces.

The Nazi military analyst, Ludwig Sertorius, carefully sidestepping any prediction of failure for the Allied Mediterranean thrust, contented himself in one Berlin broadcast with insisting that "German resistance is not at all weak," and that "many landing attempts along the invasion coast were frustrated."

French Aid Praised By 'Chutist

St. Tropez, Aug. 17 (AP)—The aid given parachute troopers by French interior forces as they assembled to attack this Riviera town was praised today by a Brooklyn private. He said the Germans killed and wounded a number of the men as they descended.

"There goes one of those guys," exclaimed Private Julius Carp, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was among the parachutists who captured St. Tropez Tuesday after 14 hours of fighting.

"Swell Guys," He Says

He pointed to a young Frenchman going by dressed in ragged clothing, shirt open at the neck, wearing a tricolor armband with the letters FFI (French Forces Interior) and carrying a German rifle with a well stuffed German cartridge belt.

"They really were swell guys," he said. "And helped us a lot. They covered up while we were getting out of our parachutes and joined forces with us. It's funny the way they had to kiss us on both cheeks first before they started to fire at the Krauts."

Women Helped, Too

Carp said "French women in the town also helped to the fullest, risking their lives to help us, too. But these French patriots really fought hard throughout the day, helping to quell both the citadel and the blockhouse."

The blockhouse and citadel were the two main enemy strongpoints.

PRIEST TAKES NAZI CAPTIVES

Major Brown of New York Gets Two on Riviera.

By HERBERT L. MATTHEWS.
New York Times correspondent, representing the combined American Press.

In Southern France, Aug. 16 (Delayed—(A. P.).—Typical of this paradoxical day was the capture of two Germans by an unarmed American chaplain from New York city, Major Gordan E. Brown of St. Francis Priary, 135 West 31st street.

Major Brown and a few others took over a villa and he strolled into its garden. Without realizing what he was doing he almost stepped on two Germans who were sleeping. They were heavily armed with grenades beside them, but he jumped between them and shouted at the top of his voice. They started to run, but he pointed his hand at them with his finger cocked, and they surrendered.

Many FFI's (French forces of the interior) were in St. Tropez, and parachute troops said they helped take the town when the Nazis held out in the citadel on the hill and in a blockhouse.

Many hidden dramas were coming to light. I saw the cure of the town booed and hissed and virtually driven away by his fellow townspeople. He was pro-Vichy, they said.

I saw a woman screamed at and later she told me it was because she had worked for the Germans as a stenographer.

By JOSEPH DYNAN.

With the French Forces in the South of France, Aug. 16 (Delayed) (A. P.)—A reborn and rearmed French army has struck its own first amphibious blow for the liberation of the motherland. This heavily armed combat unit disembarked on the Riviera behind veteran American divisions and is lending heavy support to the Allied drive inland.

The American infantry assault was well under way when the ships bearing French units from North African ports arrived at the assembly area offshore near a picturesque resort. After months of waiting and training, the French landed under a curtain of more than 1,000 aircraft and a concentrated naval barrage. For many it was the first sight of their homeland in four years.

Many of the officers and men had fought in the ill-fated campaigns of 1939 and 1940, and escaped. With American tanks, tank destroyers and artillery, they have been training in North Africa for more than a year.

Giraud's Sons on Hand.

The officers included two sons of the former French Commander in Chief—Capt. Henri Giraud, a reconnaissance officer, and Lieut. Bernard Joseph Giraud, a tank corps officer. Their father, Gen. Henri Giraud, saw them off from Oran.

The French who for weeks had been voicing fear that the Germans might be defeated before the south of France landings had a common feeling: "We're glad we got here in time."

Disappointment swept through the entire unit shortly before arriving on learning that a French armored division had entered combat in Normandy. Those Frenchmen had been promised long ago that they would constitute the first French fighting unit to return to their homeland. But from the divisional general on down, they expressed satisfaction that they were the first to disembark in France to face the enemy.

"We are glad of the Allied assaults," one lieutenant declared, "but we want the liberation to be our own effort, at least in part. We want to even our scores with the Germans for the defeat of 1940."

Unloading Lasts All Night.

The French unit that landed here was heavily armored and came ashore dry shod over floating wharves from an armada of warships and landing craft that stretched off to the horizon. Seabees already had their bulldozers at work clearing the beach area and hinterland, where shellfire had overturned the barbed wire obstacles in the mud and left only the burned stumps of trees. Buildings all along the shore were battered.

A group of sixty German prisoners goose-stepped into a stockade at the other side of the road. There were some civilians among them. Frenchmen helping the German, an American private explained.

French officers stared in amazement and disgust.

The first French civilian the French troops encountered failed to recognize them as such in the gathering gloom. In shorts, he calmly rode a bicycle by without turning his head.

But the next was enthusiastic—in fact, he was drunk. In a torn, dirty shirt he stood in front of the wreckage of a beachside restaurant waving a bottle of wine, then tried to embrace and kiss the French soldiers.

The unloadings of ships, with the clank and rumble of a great, mechanized war machine, continued all night.

Large French Fleet Aids Riviera Landing

Algiers, Aug. 17 (AP)—A strong French fleet commanded by Vice-Admiral Le Monnier, adjutant to Vice-Admiral H. K. Hewitt, commander of United States naval forces in the northwest Africa area, participated in operations in south France, an official announcement by the French Admiralty said today.

The French force included the battleship Lorraine, the cruisers Montcalm, Georges, Leygues, Gloire, Emile, Bertin, Duguay, Trouinjeanne and Dure and the light cruisers Le Terrible, Le Fantasque and Le Malin. They were accompanied by many auxiliaries.

The French Minister of the Navy received a message of congratulations for the brilliant results of the French fleet from Secretary Forrestal of the United States Navy.

MAQUIS OFFENSIVE GAINS MOMENTUM

MADRID, Aug. 17 — (AP) France was a nation in arms today. The general uprising ordered by Algiers, against German invaders, their collaborationists and satellites gained momentum.

Direct dispatches to Madrid said regular armies of Frenchmen, lacking heavy arms but well equipped with light weapons — including shotguns and hunting rifles hidden since the French armistice — had taken to the field for vengeance against the Nazis.

Germans in southern France from Montpellier to the Atlantic finally have begun to realize their plight. The French are astride all escape routes.

A Bordeaux dispatch to the newspaper Arriba said that only a few German military trains, "guarded as if trying to cross through enemy lines," were able to function and that they could make no through connections.

Pedro Carreno Arribas Bordeaux representative, said that French patriot resistance "is reaching its maximum intensity" French forces, he said, are in constant close contact with the Allied command and "what we called the "Maquis" have been transformed into a real army."

Curious battles were reported raging throughout Southern France between French patriots and the collaborationists and German Elite guard forces.

"In French towns there is celebrating in honor of immediate liberation," Carreno concluded his article. "The expressions on German faces are graver than ever before."

Nazis Make Stand In Haute Savoie

On the French-Swiss Frontier, Aug. 17 (AP)—About 1,000 German troops, the last organized resistance group in the Saleve district of Haute Savoie, took up positions in Annemasse today in an effort to ward off French forces which are clearing the frontier.

A 39-man Nazi garrison at St. Gingloph, 30 miles northeasat of Annemasse near the south shore of Lake Geneva, surrendered to a Fighting French detachment which surrounded it at 10 A. M.

Rout Out Germans

In the action the French, armed with light artillery, mortars and machine guns, rooted the Germans from a hotel. (The absence in this dispatch of a mention of casualties suggested that the Germans gave up without a fight.)

Some of the patriots were men of St. Gingolph who returned after hiding since the Germans burned part of the town July 23. About 250 others came from Evian and Thonon, now fully under French control.

Barricaded In Hotel

Advices from across the border said the Germans moved reinforcements to Annemasse from Port Lecluse and barricaded the Hotel Pax for the impending attack. The garrison also manned positions near the City Hall.

But the Partisans were reported holding the upper hand in the city, which lies about five miles southeast of Geneva, and improving control and manning frontier posts in other areas of Haute Savoie.

PLANES DROP ARMS TO FRENCH

Patriots' Revolt Spreads as They Get Weapons.

London, ug. 17 (A.P.)—Supplied with guns and ammunition dropped by Allied planes, Frenchmen have risen in armed revolt against the Nazis throughout Haute Savoie province in southeast France, reports from the French frontier at Geneva said today.

Street fighting also has broken out in the important German bastion of Toulouse, where French Partisans have demanded surrender of the Nazis there, according to dispatches from Irun, Spain.

The Irun dispatches gave this picture of the growing revolt against the harassed Nazi overlords:

The Partisans have occupied the Pyrenees railway towns of Oloron and Mauleon. Heavy fighting is in progress between German occupation troops and Maquis around Pau and Tarbes, between Oloron and Toulouse.

Nearly 10,000 Partisans from the Mediterranean foothills are moving eastward toward the Riviera battleground to join Allied forces.

Advices from Spain quoted French Partisan reports as saying the principal German reserves for the whole Mediterranean front were concentrated in the Lyon region, where 300,000 men were garrisoned.

The Germans may have trouble in moving these southward to oppose the Allies now in southern France because the Maquis control a belt of land extending from Pau in the west to the Swiss frontier, their advices said.

SWISS REPORTS SAY VICHY HEADS FLEE TO BERLIN

LONDON, Aug. 17 — (AP) Swiss reports said tonight that most members of the Vichy government had fled to Berlin, leaving 5,000 mobile guardsmen of doubtful loyalty guarding the panicky "Laval-Petain capital" menaced by Allied liberating armies and a multitude of patriots storming ahead of them.

The Maqui resistance groups and others began a systematic destruction of German and Vichy defenses in France — derailing trains, surrounding isolated German garrisons in southern France and along the Swiss frontier, cutting down notorious Axis sympathizers on their "black lists," and in general moving in well-defined courses laid out by Allied chieftains.

Newspaper Discloses Flight

A dispatch to Der Bund, Bern newspaper in Switzerland, told of the flight out of Vichy by French cabinet ministers, but no specific information was given regarding Pierre Laval, chief of government, nor of Marshal Henri Petain, the chief of state who took over when it appeared France and the Allied cause was lost in 1940.

Brig. Gen. Joseph Koenig, head of the French Forces of the Interior, said in a communique tonight that his men were attacking German convoys with "considerable losses" to the enemy's men and material.

Specialized teams, he reported, cut eight important bridges and forced the Germans to abandon "many" important railroad lines, including the Toulouse-Orleans and Montlucon-Bourges routes.

Among the successes listed by the communique were the surrender of a German garrison of 500 men at Brieve Tuesday.

The French patriots were fighting across much of France, in some cases with armor, in many with mortars and other heavy arms.

A frontier dispatch to the Lausanne (Switzerland) Gazette said Maquis forces had launched an attack on the Fort De L'Ecluse in the Ain department near the French-Swiss frontier, and that factory workers in response to orders from Gen. Charles de Gaulle had gone on strike in Montbeliard, 35 miles west of Basel.

Maquis Meet Forces

Maquis armed only with rifles and sub-machineguns and wearing tri-colored brassards as their only uniform swarmed down from the hills to meet the French forces which landed on the south coast of France Tuesday morning, delayed dispatches from the invasion front related today.

"We saw the fleets coming in from our lookouts in the hills, so we came down to help," said one Maqui leader at Ste. Maxime south west of Cannes.

These Maquis attacked the German positions from the rear, killing many and taking some prisoners. Others met the Americans on the beaches and guided them through minefields and pointed out pillboxes for destruction.

In connection with reports that the Vichy government was disintegrating, its officials were said to be transferring authority in many places to persons who had held office before the armistice with the Germans in 1940.

The Morocco radio said the Germans had ordered martial law in the Maritime Alps. The defiance spread to civilian laborers, with the French press reporting railroad workers of the north and east striking.

Drive To Szeszuppe River Brings Nazi Counter-Thrust At Flank

Moscow, Aug. 17 (AP)—Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky, Russia's youngest general, has reached East Prussian soil along the Szeszuppe river in a historic victory.

For the first time since 1914 Russian forces are fighting tonight on the edge of the German province.

After more than two weeks of bitter struggles in which the enemy command used fresh infantry and hundreds of tanks, Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian Army smashed German resistance and reached the border.

Germans Hit Right Wing

The Germans, meanwhile, in a desperate gamble, launched an offensive against the extreme end of Cherniakhovsky's right wing, attacking northwest, west and southwest of Siauliai.

Big waves of enemy Panzers and infantry were thrown into the attack in an effort to inflict serious damage and if possible to break through into Cherniakhovsky's rear, but Soviet reports said German losses were heavy.

Gen. Ivan D. Bagramian's First Baltic Army combined with Cherniakhovsky's Third Army flank guards in the stubborn defense.

Drive Almost Due West

No guns or rockets were fired in Moscow tonight to mark the victory, but the news the Russians had reached German soil was broadcast throughout the Soviet Union and had an exhilarating psychological impact.

The direction of Chernaikhovsky's master drive was almost due west toward the East Prussian coast, Insterburg and Koenigsberg stand squarely astride this route, which runs south of Tilsit.

Cherniakhovsky knocked the enemy from more than 30 settlements in the past 24 hours and overran a strong zone of fortifications.

Soviet Forces Carry War to German Border for First Time

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 18 — (AP) Russian troops for the first time in 30 years carried the war to the German border yesterday, smashing across a battlefield littered with Nazi dead, burned-out tanks and battered gun platforms and reaching the East Prussian frontier along the Szeszuppe river in western Lithuania.

Led by Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky, 37-year-old Jewish tank expert and youngest full general in the Red army, this historic honor achieved after months of grueling campaigning fell to the Third White Russian army.

Smash Enemy Defenses

Moscow's midnight bulletin said the Red army battered down "Powerfully built defenses" in order to reach the frontier, and wiped out isolated German troops pinned against the river.

The Russian communique mentioned heavy German resistance, supported by tanks and artillery, and said the enemy was launching constant counterattacks with supporting fire from "heavy catapult appliances." This was believed to mean platforms for rocket guns.

The enemy still was hurling in reserves from Heinrich Himmler's German home army, ordering them to "fight to the death" to protect the "holy soil" of Germany, Moscow said.

In one area the Russians wiped out 1,000 Germans yesterday and blew up 60 tanks and self-propelled guns, the bulletin said.

The Russians apparently surged onto the frontier in the area of Schirwindt, German border town 42 miles southeast of Tilsit, East Prussian rail center, and 90 miles east of Konigsberg, East Prussian capital. The Szeszuppe river flows northward along the frontier from Schirwindt, and at one point is only about 30 miles east of Tilsit. It flows into Schirwindt from the east.

Moscow dispatches said a crossing into East Prussia was imminent, but there was no indication the Red army already had smashed into Germany's easternmost province.

That the Russians had reached the border was announced without fanfare in the daily communique which said "northwest of Mariampole our troops fought their way to the frontier of East Prussia on the river Szeszuppe, capturing more than 30 localities."

Fight Near Mariampole

The captured villages were not identified. Mariampole, a road junction in Western Lithuania, is 25 miles southeast of Schirwindt, and Cherniakhovsky's troops have been fighting for weeks in the intervening area — bombarding East Prussia's defenses and grinding down large Nazi reserves flung into desperate battles.

The last German word on the fighting in the area was a late broadcast last night in which a military commentator declared "no major advances have been made by the Russians toward the frontier though all interests of the Russian command seem to go in that direction."

This peril to East Prussia, cradle of German militarism, highlighted all the action along the Eastern front, but other Soviet armies which had broken across the Vistula river in central Poland 110 miles south of Warsaw also captured 20 localities in their fan-like sweep. The sweep threatened not only to outflank the German held Polish capital but also threatened a break-through toward German Silesia, last reported only 75 miles beyond Soviet spearheads.

Continued street fighting was reported in Sandomierz, west bank stronghold 110 miles southeast of Warsaw, as the Russians sought to secure another key crossing.

Repulse Nazi Thrusts

East of Praga, industrial suburb of besieged Warsaw, Russian troops successfully beat off attacks by infantry and tanks, the Moscow bulletin said, as the Germans continued a bitter effort to weaken the noose closing on the old Polish capital.

North and west of Petseri in Estonia, another Soviet army rolled on toward the Baltic sea, chopping into scattered fragments the 200,000 German troops estimated to be trapped in Latvia and Estonia. More than 150 localities we...

seized, the communique said.

German East Prussia, where decisive battles of the First World War were fought, now was imminently threatened by three powerful conquering Soviet armies along a front nearly 200 miles long, extending from Northern Poland at a point below the annexed Suwalki triangle northward beyond the Niemen river in northern Lithuania.

RUSSIANS PRESS ON EAST PRUSSIA

Nazis Admit Fierce Fighting Three Miles From Border.

London, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—The Russians are within three miles of the East Prussian frontier, attacking on both sides of the Lithuanian town of Virbales with strong tank and plane support, the German High Command announced today, and "fierce fighting continues."

Virbales lies forty miles east of the East Prussian railroad center of Insterburg, where iron foundry and machine tool products are made and five railroads come together.

The Russians have been engaged in a violent battle with the Germans within seven to ten miles of the East Prussian frontier for more than two weeks, and today's German announcement was the first intimation that they had started moving forward after reducing the German reserves. Other Russians imperil the wild, Masurain Lake country of East Prussia on the south, and were last reported knifing through a fifteen-mile fortified belt to within twenty-seven miles of the communications hub of Lyck.

DAY

Other Red Gains.

The enemy also reported Russian progress in the Carpathian slopes, saying that the Reds are attacking northwest of Krosno, a south Polish city twenty-one miles north of the Czecho-Slovak border. That advance threatened the Polish cities of Tarnow and also posed a flanking menace to Krakow. Other troops to the northwest of Krosno are within thirty-five miles of Krakow, fifth city and ancient capital of Poland. Bitter offensive and defensive fighting was reported in the Big Bend of the Vistula.

Continued Russian advances were reported by the Germans west of Lake Pskov, where the Russians are compressing and hacking away at a trapped German force estimated at thirty divisions. Some evidence that the Russians were attempting a flanking thrust across Lakes Peipus and Pskov was found in the German assertion that eleven fully laden ferry boats were sunk by Nazi planes.

Battle Near Warsaw.

Moscow, Aug. 17 (A. P.)—The Russians today smashed back with hundreds of field guns at the narrow wedge driven by the Nazi tanks and infantry into Ossow, seven miles northeast of Warsaw, in the first Soviet setback since the start of the summer offensive.

The Army newspaper Red Star said that the Nazis were under severe pressure after losing sixty-eight tanks and suffering several thousand casualties in a two-day counter-attack from the Praga district, just opposite Warsaw on the Vistula's east bank.

At least one SS (Elite Guard) division was reported put out of action.

LUCE

This and other Red Army successes elsewhere on the long eastern front balanced the withdrawal from Ossow.

Smash Into Sandominerz.

Soviet forces west of the Vistula south of Warsaw smashed into the city of Sandominerz in the battle to expand a bridgehead that threatens to outflank the Polish capital and imperil the Nazi defenses of German Silesia.

This development was viewed in some Moscow quarters as more significant news than the giving of ground northeast of Warsaw.

Russian troops in Estonia captured seventy additional places in the drive beyond Lake Pskov toward the Baltic Sea.

Hurling in large groups of infantry and tanks north and northwest of Siauliai in Lithuania, the Germans also mounted a large counter-blow there. A Russian war bulletin, however, announced that the Nazis were repelled in that sector and military men apparently were not concerned over the situation there.

In the last twenty-four hours the Red Army was said to have destroyed 118 German tanks in fighting all along the front.

Polish Council Charts Long-Range Program

Moscow, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Soviet-recognized Polish Council, functioning at Lublin, on Polish soil, today pressed forward with a program for increasing the army, effecting land reforms and restoring trial by popularly elected juries.

The program was sanctioned by the first plenary meeting of the national council and Committee of National Liberation last night with Boleslaw Berut, council president, presiding.

NIGHT

Sponsored by General Zymierski, commander in chief of the United Polish Army, a proposal was adopted to call up four classes of recruits and register ten other classes in liberated territory, Lublin dispatches to the Soviet press reported.

No mention was made during the session of the Emigre Government in London. But measures to hasten agricultural relief, liquidate the Polish police system that collaborated with the enemy and revive trial by jury were calculated to broaden the committee's popular support.

PLANES BOMB ESCAPE ROUTE

Medium Craft Pound Roads Used By German 7th Army

GOLDBERG

London, Aug. 17 (AP)—Heavy forces of Allied medium bombers struck 40 miles behind the Troarn-Falaise battle line in cloudy weather today, ranging along the Risle river for the second straight day in an attempt to seal off the retreat route of the German Seventh Army.

Fighter-bombers stabbed deeper inland over France and Belgium and into Germany itself. They struck at enemy supply lines as far east as Brussels and Reims, and continued into Germany, strafing and dive-bombing enemy communications.

Unfavorable weather retarded daylight operations after heavy night blows by the RAF against the Baltic ports of Kiel and Stettin. The RAF dumped 70,000 incendiary bombs and a great weight of high explosives against these ports, while Mosquito bombers dropped block-busters into Berlin for the third consecutive night.

During the day the RAF returned to bomb shipping in German-held Brest.

NIGHT

Rail Lines Attacked

As weather improved later in the afternoon over the Continent, Lightnings, Mustangs and Thunderbolts struck at the quadrangle formed by Rouen, Brussels, Reims and Orleans, aiming principally at rail lines and communications but also strafing opportune targets in direct support of the Allied ground armies. Six fighters were missing against the ME-109's destroyed and three damaged on the ground.

Ten bridges across the Risle river were the principal targets. Marauders and Havocs, in ten separate waves, dropped more than 400 tons of explosives on similar targets through dense clouds. All planes returned safely, hampered neither by flak nor enemy aircraft.

From Italy, Mediterranean Air Force planes, which flew more than 6,000 sorties Tuesday and yesterday over the southern French front, lashed out today against Ploesti in Romania, one of the few remaining major oil sources for the Germans, and at rail traffic in Yugoslavia. Heavy bombers made the attacks.

Inactive During Day

The British-based United States Eighth Air Force Fortresses and Liberators were inactive during the day. It was more than two years ago that the first dozen United States heavies crossed the Channel and dropped 18 tons of bombs on rail yards at Rouen. Since then about 301,000 sorties have been made.

Flying Fortresses and Liberators made 162,000 of the sorties; Mustangs, Lightnings and Thunderbolts, 139,000. The heavies in that period unloaded about 300,000 tons of bombs on targets throughout Europe.

8,500 Enemy Planes Destroyed

In the two years more than 8,500 enemy planes were destroyed in the air by Eighth Air Force airmen, 5,668 by bomber gunners, 2,913 by fighter pilots.

In addition, fighter pilots destroyed about 1,150 enemy planes on the ground.

Because of Tuesday's attack by the RAF on night fighter bases, an official report said, the percentage of loss last night in the attacks on Kiel and Stettin was low. The attacking force, which went nearly 650 miles to Stettin, was larger by more than 100 Lancasters than in any previous attack on the area. The loss was 16 bombers.

U. S. BOMBERS RAID PLOESTI

BEALMEAR

Others Fly Ammunition to Yanks in South France.

London, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—Heavy bombers of the Italian-based Fifteenth United States Air Force attacked the great Romanian oil center of Ploesti today and also attacked German airfields and the Yugoslav railroad center of Nis, 120 miles south of Belgrade.

At the same time Allied air forces again threw their support behind the Seventh United States Army in the south of France, and twenty attack-bombers under Major Gene C. Vance of Pueblo, Col., and Capt. Charles V. Greffet of Charleston, S. C., flew ammunition to American parachute troopers which had exhausted their supplies and sent out an emergency call for more. The flyers found the American positions despite clouds and haze.

Medium bombers roved far inland also, attacking bridges, trains and road traffic. Marauders struck at guns 150 miles north of Marseille, got direct hits on a bridge across the Rhone at Tarascon and smothered gun positions around Toulon. Supply dumps at Orange and other places up the Rhone Valley were hit. A convoy of fifty enemy trucks towing artillery toward the beachhead was blasted off the road by American Thunderbolts and forty-two vehicles were left in flames by the bombing and strafing. The others were badly mauled.

Smash Bridges in North France.

Weather limited aerial support on the Norman front although American Marauders and Havocs bombed ten more bridges in front of the retreating Germans, and fighter bombers ranged over Germany, France and Belgium, attacking communications deep behind the lines. They battered bridges across the River Risle, west of the Seine, and helped the ground troops bottle up remnants of the mauled Seventh German Army against those streams in northern France.

DAY

Yesterday they had bombed six bridges across the Risle.

Between them, fighter-bombers of the Ninth United States Air Force and the British Second Tactical Air Force knocked out forty-six German tanks and 470 motor vehicles yesterday.

Kiel and Stettin Blasted.

Before dawn today nearly 1,200 heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force plunged 5,600 tons of explosive into the German Baltic ports of Stettin and Kiel. The German radio announced that "major damage was caused" in the old center of Stettin.

At the same time Mosquitoes pounded enemy aircraft behind the western front and dumped blockbusters on Berlin for the third successive night.

The heavy bombers encountered unusually light fighter opposition at the widely separated ports—proof of the effectiveness of the tremendous attack on airfields and parked planes in western Germany and the low countries by nearly 2,000 American and British bombers only thirty-six hours earlier.

Stettin is the chief Baltic port used by the Germans for supplying their troops in Finland and is on the upper flank of the Russian front. Kiel, some 200 miles west of Stettin, is a naval base and shipbuilding center.

far beyond the combat area, chiefly bridges in the Rhone valley—the lifeline connecting German forces in southern France with northern France and Germany.

DAY

Bridges, Trains Attacked

Medium bombers roved far inland also, attacking bridges, trains and road traffic. Marauders struck at guns 150 miles north of Marseille, got direct hits on a road bridge across the Rhone at Tarascon and smothered gun positions around Toulon.

Supply dumps at Orange and other places up the Rhone Valley were hit.

A convoy of 50 enemy trucks towing artillery toward the beachhead was blasted off the road by Thunderbolts led by First Lieutenant R. W. Welp, Bancroft, Iowa, and 42 vehicles were left in flames by the bombing and strafing. The others were badly mauled.

Crews of British Bostons and Baltimores saw fires early today in the Nice harbor.

ROBOT BOMBS CAUSE DAMAGE AT BUCKINGHAM

8th Air Force Destroys 9650 Planes And Loses 4900 in Two Years' Action

AUG 18 1944

London, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—Two years ago today, the first Fortresses and Liberators of the English-based Eighth United States Air Force ventured across the channel and dropped eighteen tons of bombs on the railroad yards at Rouen. Since then, the Eighth has flown 301,000 sorties, has unloaded nearly 300,000 tons of high explosive and fire bombs on the Germans throughout Europe, and has destroyed more than 9,650 German planes, 8,500 in combat and 1,150 aground. Since January 1, last, the Eighth has loosed on the Germans an average of 1,600 pounds of bombs a minute, every minute of the day and night.

On the other hand, the Eighth has lost some 31,000 Americans killed or missing in action, and 2,900 of its bombers and 2,000 of its fighters have also been lost.

Flyers Hit Rhone Bridges

Rome, Aug. 17 (AP)—Mediterranean Allied air force planes, flying more than 1,800 sorties yesterday mainly in support of the Seventh Army's invasion of southern France encountered no air opposition and ran into flak only at Toulon, Allied headquarters said today.

Royal Family Away at Time Flying Projectile Hit in Palace Area.

AUG 18 1944

KASTSCHKE

London, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—Flying bombs have blown out windows in Buckingham Palace and have damaged two other landmarks—Dr. Samuel Johnson's house and Butchers' Hall, it was disclosed today.

The King and the remainder of the royal family were absent when a bomb fell less than a half mile from the palace early in the morning.

DAY

Gliding into a tall ash tree, the robot exploded before it reached the ground. The blast tore out window frames in the palace and seared the gardens and a half-dozen beautiful ash trees.

A small summer house on the royal grounds was wrecked, and the tennis court on which the King used to play before the war was ruined.

It was the second time robot bombs hit near the palace. Previously a bomb landed in a road outside the Buckingham grounds but caused no damage.

Butchers' Hall, the home of the Worshipful Company of the Art or Mystery of Butchers, is one of the city's oldest livery companies, dating back to 1605. The building was shattered, but its ancient archives escaped damage.

The blast tore the roof from Johnson's house, in Clough Square, off Fleet street. Dr. Johnson lived there for ten years, during which he compiled most of his dictionary. Most of the relics in the house had been removed and the building was used recently as a social center for National Fire Service Workers.

Rescue squads removed dead from the debris of houses and shops, from wrecked buses and street pavements today after one of the heaviest night barries of flying bombs in two weeks.

The attacks were resumed at dawn as the rescue work continued.

For several hours last night the Nazis sent waves of robots across the Channel at frequent intervals. [illegible] fighters stopped some of the missiles.

At some places on the southeast coast, bathers and picnickers seeking respite from the heat carried on while anti-aircraft shells sprayed the sea for a mile or so offshore.

One Robot fell on the busy cross streets of one South England town at shopping time yesterday. Some persons stood in line to purchase fish while others waited for buses. The bomb killed a number of them and injured others. Many were trapped under the wreckage of a bus. Two drivers were killed.

In another town women waiting for a shopping line rushed to a narrow alley for shelter when a flying bomb plunged toward them. As they reached the alley the bomb struck a wall above and they were buried in the wreckage.

A robot that fell five yards from a children's hospital blasted every window in the building, but the children and the staff were safe in the basement. Members of the staff left their charges to attend the many injured brought to the hospital.

REPORT ALLIES LAND IN ALBANIA

AUG 18 1944

Ankara Radio Claims Invasion at Durazzo, No Official Confirmation.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 18—(AP) The Ankara radio said today "Allied forces have landed at Durazzo in Albania."

The report was without Allied confirmation.

NIGHT

The broadcast said it was quoting a special Allied Mediterranean radio bulletin. BBC monitors said they heard the Turkish broadcast, beamed to Bulgaria.

Durazzo is the principal port of Albania. It lies about 20 miles west of the capital of Tirana which was bombed by the Allies on Tuesday. It is across the Adriatic from Brindisi and Bari in Italy.

There has been widespread guerrilla activity within Albania, linked with Marshal Tito's Yugoslav partisan activities.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill on his recent trip to Italy conferred with Marshal Tito.

The Prime Minister also talked with high Allied leaders, and after the invasion of southern France it was disclosed that planning of that operation was one of the main purposes of the Prime Minister's visit.

When Churchill conferred with Tito, Dr. Ivan Subasic, premier of the Yugoslav government-in-exile, was reported present. Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, American chief of the army services of supply and U. S. Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson also were said to have been present at the sessions.

Recent reports from Bari, Italy, said the national army of liberation in Albania now was 40,000 strong, although badly in need of more arms and ammunition. Col. Bedri Spahui, head of the Albanian army's military mission to the Allies at Bari, said his forces were standing alone against one to three German divisions, two big nationalistic elements, the Albanian gendarmerie and a new German-trained SS (Elite guard) division.

In Washington, both the United States War and Navy departments said they had heard nothing of the report and had no comment to make.

Bulgarian Premier in Peace Bid, Says It's What His People Want

LONDON, Aug. 17 (AP).—Premier Ivan Bagrianov, addressing an extraordinary session of the Bulgarian Sobranye (Parliament) threw out a peace bid today, declaring "the government is determined to remove all obstacles which stand in the way of the Bulgarian people's love for peace."

"The majority of the Bulgarian people," the Bulgarian radio quoted him as saying, "never wanted to interfere in a large-scale conflict between great powers. The government declares it fully recognizes this."

NIGHT

First to Crack in 1918

Reports have circulated in Allied circles for weeks that Bulgaria, first of the Central Powers to crack in the first world war, was trying to find a way out of this one. She was for a time under considerable pressure from Soviet Russia, with whom she is not at war, to get out while there still was time, but German forces [illegible] side the Balkan country have been a major obstacle.

Premier Bagrianov, as his address was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, declared Bulgarian forces of occupation in Greece and Yugoslavia would conduct themselves so as not to cause new suffering and conflict among the Bulgars "or any other national near and far."

Criticizing the policies of previous Bulgarian governments, he declared the country now was in a "state of economic chaos." He said it would be "difficult" at this stage to "put everything in order" and called on the people to have "patience."

"Peace will be dependent on justice, a humanitarian outlook and the farsightedness of those who will make it," he said.

Col. Eric T. Bradley, of Mystic, Conn., headed the party of American captors who flew to inspect the station. At the gates they found 550 Nazi troops and 14 officers arguing with three French Maquis, who were demanding their surrender, now that they were long since bypassed by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's sweep cutting off Brittany.

The Germans surrendered after a movie-like discussion over a bottle of brandy in which they were assured treatment as regular prisoners. They had refused to surrender to the French, asserting they were not regular troops.

Kin Of Von Richthofen Captured In Brittany

London, Aug. 17 (AP)—A nephew of Baron von Richthofen, leading German ace of the last war, was captured with 563 other enemy troops at a radar station in Brittany by two Americans officers and two unarmed civilians, it was announced today.

He is Freisherr von Richthofen, aide to Lieut. Huber Schmitz, commander of the station. The station was taken intact.

Less Paper for Bad News

Nazis Cut Newsprint Use to 7 Per Cent of Pre-War Level

LONDON, Aug. 17 (AP).—With practically nothing but bad news and propaganda left to print, German newspapers will be cut to 7 per cent of their pre-war newsprint consumption as a "total mobilization" measure. This reduction was disclosed today in a Berlin broadcast listing a large number of newspapers to be discontinued or merged.

DAY

Reich Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's "National Zeitung," for instance, will absorb five other newspapers. All Sunday editions were abolished, except for a few of the most important Nazi organs. Only two illustrated newspapers will continue, the official Nazi "Illustrierte Beobachter" and "The Berliner Illustrierte."

U.S. Air Power Triple Japs'

London, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Tokyo radio quoted a Japanese Army spokesman today as saying that American air power in the Pacific is now triple that of the Japanese. "Nevertheless," he added, "we still feel confident that victory will be ours."

Daily Worker Writer at Front

LONDON, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Communist Daily Worker published today its first dispatch from a war correspondent at the front. The correspondent was accredited to French forces in the south after having failed to get permission to report British Army activities.

First Group Of Negro Nurses In England

London, Aug. 17 (AP)—The first contingent of Negro nurses to be assigned to the European theater as members of the Army Nurse Corps has arrived in England for active duty, it was disclosed yesterday.

DAY

The units' 63 young women were selected from various army hospitals in the United States and are headed by Capt. Mary L. Petty, of Chicago, who was chief nurse at Station Hospital No. 1, Fort Huachuca, Ariz., before coming overseas. Fifteen have had previous foreign service, in the African campaign.

GERMAN EX-CONSUL SENTENCED TO DEATH

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 17 (AP)—Otto Kiep, who retired as German Consul General in New York in 1933 and lived in the United States until the outbreak of the war, has been condemned to death for defeatism by a Nazi court, a reliable informant from Germany said today.

NIGHT

Herr Kiep is "just one of the very many Germans being executed these days," said the informant.

One report from Berlin said approximately 20 per cent of Joseph Goebbels' vast Propaganda Ministry staff had disappeared from offices in recent weeks because they had wavered in their Nazi convictions.

KIET CONDEMNED TO DEATH

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 17—(AP) Otto Kiet, former German consul general in New York, has been condemned to death for defeatism by a Nazi court, a reliable informant from Germany said today.

"He is just one of the very many Germans being executed these days," the informant added. Kiet, who retired from his post in 1933, lived in the United States until the outbreak of the war with Germany.

DAY

Nazis to Get Less Iron Ore

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 17 (AP).—The Swedish War Insurance Board has decided no longer to insure Swedish iron ore cargoes destined for German North Sea ports, it was disclosed today. As a result, important ore traffic will be reduced further, the Swedish newspaper "Aftonbladet" reported, adding that the same decision applied to coal and coke shipments from North Sea ports to Sweden.

Keitel Sees Mannerheim

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 17 (AP).—Reports in Stockholm said today Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and other high German officers currently in Helsinki had called on Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustav Mannerheim.

New Gestapo Unit 'Dogs Officials'

At the German Frontier, Aug. 17 (AP)—Nazi Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler has established a new secret service to make daily reports on all important German civil officials, it was reported today through trustworthy channels.

The elite Gestapo was formed after the abortive attempt to assassinate Hitler and in Berlin alone embraces 2,000 operatives, these advices said.

DAY

Visitors Listed

It trails and reports upon the more important civilian officers daily from home to office and back again. Every visitor received by the officials is listed and the officials must make a written report of what the visitors said.

Some officials reportedly refused to receive manufacturers engaged in war production for fear that talking with anybody might be misconstrued by the new Gestapo.

ALLIES FIGHT TO CLEAR FLORENCE OF GERMANS

ROME, Aug. 17.—(AP) Eighth army troops fought today for the 14th day to clear Florence of Germans as patriots, filtering through the lines, reported Nazi terrorism in the no-man's land of the ancient art city.

NIGHT

Although the Allied military government was hauling in tons of food for residents of that part of the city in Allied hands, the patriots told of a grave food situation in the disputed area, where flying bullets kept all indoors.

Nazis once turned tank guns on civilians, refugees related.

An Allied communique said reconnaissance patrols were active along the Arno river from Florence westward to the sea. There was no major change in the disposition of troops along the front in the mountains east of the upper Tiber valley. Advanced forces now occupy a number of highpoints until later held by the enemy, the communique said.

Nazis Turn Tanks' Guns On Florentines

Rome, Aug. 17 (AP)—Official reports today from the Italian front said that the Germans turned tank guns against Italian civilians and police in a section of Florence still under German control yesterday. Several persons were reported killed.

Patriots coming through the lines told of the reign of terror and said the food situation was grave.

The bloody business of trying to nudge the Germans out of Florence without a pitched battle that would mar further the ancient city proceeded for the 14th day.

The Allied Military Government already controls the city's main architectural treasures. A few blocks away Partisans and Fascists are fighting it out from windows, housetops and in narrow alleys.

It was disclosed officially that the 351st Infantry Regiment, commanded by Col. Arthur S. Champeny, of Wellington, Kan., was among the 50 army units which played a major part in the Italian campaign.

The regiment was the first element of the 88th Division to go into combat. It saw first action along the Garigliano and when the offensive for Rome began it swept forward with the rest of the 88th through the mountains which led to the Pontine plain on to Rome and then forward to the Arno river.

Former Envoy to U. S. Arrested

ROME, Aug. 17 (AP).—Fulvio Suvich, former Italian Ambassador to the United States, was arrested today in the roundup of pro-Fascists carried out by Count Carlo Sforza, Minister without Portfolio in the government of Premier Ivanhoe Bonomi. He was charged with active support of the regime of Benito Mussolini and with leading Fascist squads in the Trieste region during the early struggles of the party.

U. S. And Jap Philippine Policies Are Contrasted

Vatican City, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano contrasted United States and Japanese policies toward Philippine independence today and concluded that "the reciprocal promises of independence and aid" between the Americans and Filipinos were a "certain guarantee" that their relations "will always become stronger."

The newspaper said the relations "draw their inspiration from the American administration which by treating Filipinos as equals gradually has led them toward independence."

Wavell Rejects Gandhi's Plea For Interview

Viceroy Says He Will Study Any 'Constructive Policy'; Stands on Cripps's Views

NEW DELHI, India, Aug. 18 (Friday) (AP).—Field Marshal Lord Wavell, Viceroy of India, has rejected a request for an interview by Mohandas K. Gandhi, who offered to urge full nationalist support of the war effort if India be granted immediate independence, it was announced today.

The Viceroy said that because of their sharp differences nothing could be gained by such a meeting now, but he added he would be glad to consider any "definite and constructive policy."

An exchange of letters between Lord Wavell and the aged Indian nationalist leader, made public today, disclosed that Gandhi sought a conference July 17.

He offered to advise the All-India Congress (Nationalist party) to give full support to the war effort "if a declaration of immediate Indian independence be made and a national government responsible to a central assembly be formed, subject to the provision that during the pendency of the war military operations should continue as at present, but without involving any financial burden on India."

The Viceroy said preliminary work could begin now on framing of a new constitution, but that Indians must first reach a "genuine agreement" among themselves for "a transitional government established and working within the present constitution."

The British government's position, the Viceroy said, is the same as it was when Sir Stafford Cripps tried to reach an agreement with the Indians in 1942: that the offer of unqualified freedom after the war is made conditional upon the framing of a constitution agreed to by the main elements of India's national life and upon the negotiation of a treaty with Britain.

The British view is that it is impossible to bring about a change in the constitution during hostilities by which a "national government" could be made responsible to a central assembly, the Viceroy said.

Talk With Jinnah Delayed

A projected meeting between Gandhi and Mahomed Ali Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, which was scheduled for Saturday, has been postponed because of Jinnah's illness, the British radio reported yesterday from Bombay. "The purpose of the meeting was to explore the possibilities of a settlement between the Moslem League and the Congress party," said the broadcast.

Gandhi And Jinnah To Discuss Partition

Bombay, India, Aug. 17 (AP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi and Mahomed Ali Jinnah, two of India's foremost political leaders, will meet Saturday to discuss a proposal to partition India into separate autonomous Hindu and Moslem states.

Observers say their conference, the first in five years, may turn out to be the most important event in the last two centuries of Indian history.

The conference is believed unlikely to produce a solution of the Hindu-Moslem problem in detail. But it may result in a "treaty" setting forth the broad principles for [illegible] of the country. It is expected that such a treaty would be indorsed by Gandhi's All-India Congress Party and the Moslem League, of which Jinnah is president.

The Congress party leader recently virtually conceded the partition principle, but suggested that small districts in which Moslems predominate should be defined and should vote on whether they want a divided or undivided India.

LAST JAPANESE TROOPS DRIVEN FROM INDIA

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 17.—(AP) The last straggling groups of the Japanese 33rd division were chased across the India-Burma border toward Tiddim yesterday, completing the repulse of the invasion of India launched by the enemy's 15th army last March 8.

It was said officially tonight that all enemy resistance in the state of Manipur, India, had ceased with the exception of possibly a few stray shots fired in the mopping up of sick and wounded stragglers.

Allied forces pursuing the Japanese advanced two miles southward from the Burma border toward Tiddim, about 40 miles away.

In the Mogaung valley campaign Allied forces advancing below the Mandalay railroad were 22 miles southwest of Mogaung and two miles north of Pinbaw.

Allies Clear India Of Japanese

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 17 (AP)—Allied troops have cleared all Japanese except stragglers from India, it was announced today.

They advanced two miles across the Burma frontier toward Tiddim.

Other Allied forces in north Burma, pushing south along the Mandalay railway, are two miles north of Pinbaw and 22 miles west of Mogaung.

CHINESE BEGIN NEW DRIVE SOUTH OF YANGTZE RIVER

CHUNGKING, Aug. 17—(AP) The Chinese army has begun fresh operations north and south of the Yangtze river in the vicinity of Tano lake in central China, the high command announced today.

Apparently these new movements were designed to prevent the Japanese from consolidating their holdings in Hunon province and prevent them from using the Canton-Hankow railroad. At the same time Chinese forces continued another new push toward Ichang, Hupeh province.

The high command reported unusually heavy fighting in the Japanese "outer ring" of defenses about captured Hengyang. Warplanes of the U. S. 14th Air force were pressing incessant attacks which already had blunted the enemy's striking power in the Hengyang area.

Ten miles south of Hengyang the Japanese launched a series of fierce assaults, but they made no progress against stiff Chinese resistance.

The Chinese said that on Tuesday Chinese troops south of the Yangtze advanced along different routes on enemy positions southwest of Hwajung and in the vicinity of Owchinkow, overrunning enemy defenses in spirited fighting.

North of the Yangtze other Chinese forces began a drive against the Japanese rear and defeated an enemy unit encountered northwest of Kiangling, near the Yangtze port of Shasi.

In their western Yunnan drive to clear the Burma road in the Salween river area Chinese troops on Tuesday launched attacks from all four sides on Tengchung, main Japanese base and secured new positions on the northwest and southwest.

The eastern outskirts of the Burma road city of Lungling were penetrated by other Chinese forces. Japanese were repulsed in a drive out of Lungling intended to relieve their forces isolated on a fortified hill in the southeast sector of the city.

Chinese Seize New Tengchung Footholds

Chungking, Aug. 17 (AP)—Chinese troops surrounding the walled city of Tengchung, principal Japanese base in western Yunnan province, launched attacks on all four sides before dawn Tuesday and by nightfall had gained additional footholds on both the southwest and northwest, the Chinese high command said today.

Other Chinese forces penetrated into the eastern outskirts of the Burma Road city of Lungling. Enemy troops were driven back after plunging from Lungling in an attempt to relieve Japanese isolated on the peak of a fortified hill commanding the southeast portion of the city.

Japanese Study B-29's

CHUNGKING, Aug. 17 (AP).—A Japanese broadcast asserted today that the Japanese had made a complete study of Superfortresses brought down in their territory, and said: "In the near future our long-distance bombers will achieve glorious results in Hawaiian skies."

HALMAHERA BASE RAIDED

23 Jap Planes On Miti Field Hit By Bombers

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Friday, Aug. 18 (AP)—A sizable force of Allied heavy and medium bombers dropped 87 tons of bombs Wednesday on Miti airdrome, northern Halmahera Island, in the most concentrated assault yet delivered against any single point in this area. Headquarters announced the raid today.

Twenty-three parked planes were destroyed or damaged during the raid, as Allied planes continued attacks which the communique said rapidly were "reducing the enemy's potential strength in the Molucca Islands."

Large Fires Started

Large fires were started in personnel and supply areas adjacent to Miti, one of the key Japanese airfields on Halmahera, southern guardian of the Philippines. Liberators and Mitchells attacked the island in midmorning, but no Japanese planes arose.

This was the [illegible] raid reported in August communiques on Halmahera, approximately 300 miles south of Mindanao, main island in the southern Philippines.

An army Liberator the previous night sank a 1,000-ton freighter in Davao Gulf, Mindanao.

Foe Can't Risk Shipping

"It is apparent," said the communique, that the enemy "no longer can risk his heavy shipping forward of the line, Philippines-Celebes-Ceram.

"His outlying garrisons on Halmahera, in the Ceram, Banda and Arafura seas are now forced to depend for their supply on small ships, on sailing vessels and luggers and local small craft.

"The capacity of this makeship shipping is not sufficient for even essential items, such as munitions and aviation gasoline."

Must Rely On Barges

South and east of Halmahera, the communique said, the Japanese are compelled "to rely upon an inadequate barge traffic, which is subject to heavy attrition in an attempt to evade our extensive air and naval patrol net. The strategic effect of this rapid shrinkage of his sea communications is to further threaten the enemy's vital Philippines-Halmahera defense line."

Reports from recent scattered patrol actions in the Sarmi area of Dutch New Guinea listed an additional 362 enemy killed or found dead. The total known Japanese dead is 2,748 in that region, where the Nipponese were reported attempting to escape through interior jungles.

Planes Of 3 Areas Hit Jap Isles

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Aug. 17 (AP)—Allied bombers from three theaters of combat joined in new blows, reported today, at enemy-held islands ringing the Philippines and at the Philippines themselves.

Bombers from the Australia-New Guinea theater struck at Halmahera, 300 miles south of Mindanao, Tuesday, and at Mindanao's principal port, Davao, two nights earlier.

Planes from central Pacific bases pounded Truk atoll in the Carolines with 57 tons of bombs Sunday, and also hit Ponape in the Carolines, Wotje, Maloelap and Mili in the Marshalls, and Nauru Island, Sunday and Monday.

China-based planes bombed the Pescadores Islands between Formosa and the China coast, for the first time Wednesday. They struck at night at the Mako naval base, 400 miles north of the Philippines. They also hit Takao harbor, southwestern Formosa, for the second day in a row.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 17.—(AP) Liberators of the 7th AAF bombed Chichi Jima again on Tuesday in a fresh neutralization campaign against Japan's Bonin Island bases less than 600 miles from Tokyo.

A seaplane base was the major target on Chichi Jima, key enemy position in the island chain. Maug island near the northern end of the Marianas was bombed for the first time the same day.

Once a single, rocky island, Maug has been split by earthquakes into three islets 314 miles north of American-occupied Saipan. Surrounding a collapsed volcano cone, Maug forms the only protected ship anchorage in the northern Marianas.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander in chief, reported also that other bombers struck Paramushiro at the northern end of the Kurile islands reaching northward from Japan. They hit that north Pacific base on Sunday, attacking enemy supply facilities. Only meager anti-aircraft opposition was encountered.

The Pacific fleet report told of bombings also against the Japanese positions on Maug island, northernmost island in the western Pacific Marianas group. Results of that attack were not reported.

Liberators of the Seventh Army air force bombed the seaplane base and adjacent installations on Chichi island in the Bonins Tuesday, Nimitz announced today. They met moderate to intense anti-aircraft fire in this second strike within five days on Chichi, 630 miles below Tokyo.

Eleventh army Liberators made a predawn attack Sunday on Paramushiro in the Kuriles, extending the raids on those northern Japanese islands through the fourth consecutive day.

Maug island, in the northern Marianas group south of the Bonins, got its first raid of the war Tuesday. Pagan, farther south in the Marianas, was smacked the same day. Maug has a protected harbor.

Other aerial strikes were made

18 U. S. Bombers Raid Chichi Jima: Tokyo

New York, Aug. 17—The Tokyo radio today said 18 American heavy bombers had raided Chichi Jima in the Bonin Islands, some 550 miles from Japan, yesterday morning (Japanese time).

While asserting the raiders had been repulsed, the Tokyo broadcast warned the Japanese people that "increasing attacks upon the Bonins by the enemy's heavy bombers require serious attention."

United States Government monitors recorded the broadcast.

Nimitz for Powerhouse Blows

AUG 18 1944

Pledges Nonstop War Against Japan—Praises Workers on Home Front.

DORING AUG 18 1944

Guam, Aug. 11 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, promising Japan a dose of powerhouse tactics, emphasized today on his first visit to reconquered Guam that the great fleets under Admirals Spruance and Halsey were ready to wage nonstop war against the Japanese.

He praised the home front for providing the tools necessary for the job.

(This dispatch, delayed for security reasons, is the first exposition of Admiral Nimitz's frank discussion of prospects in the Pacific war. Admiral Raymond A. Spruance commands the mighty Fifth Fleet and Admiral William F. Halsey has been assigned to lead the Third Fleet.)

The Marianas, said Nimitz, will be strategic springboard, adding that while one of the fleet teams is striking the other can be planning new blows. He said the seizure of Saipan, Tinian and Guam furnished excellent bases "to move in various directions we have in mind."

DAY

Likes Powerhouse Tactics.

"We believe in powerhouse tactics. We carry along all we have. We want what we undertake to go through. We have not reached the stage where we can hold anything back."

He foresaw in the favorable European situation that reinforcements from that area were not too far in future.

"But we cannot sit and wait. We never have. We have used what we have had all the way through."

Admiral Nimitz inspected many battlefields in the Marianas with Admiral Spruance, Marine Lieut.-Gen. Holland M. Smith, commander of fleet Marine forces in the Pacific, and other high officers. As the party was leaving a 77th Division command post near Mt. Santa Rosa on Guam, machine-gun and rifle fire rattled through the brush and a bullet whined over one of the ten cars trailing Nimitz, who was escorted by two half-tracks loaded with Marines.

The Admiral rode on unconcerned.

Nimitz expressed admiration for the Marines and doughboys for their rapid conquest.

"We have a schedule and we are interested in getting this war won quickly. The way to beat the Jap is to keep on his tail." He said Saipan, Tinian and Guam were large enough to mount many troops and their facilities would be developed to carry the war to the Japanese.

"We are not handicapped by lack of appropriations for the development of Guam harbor and you will see it developed as rapidly as the Seabees can do it. The Seabees have given us a number of examples of developing facilities in a short time."

Praises Workers.

"In spite of the troubles you hear about back home you've got to admit they've built a tremendous fleet and air force, a tremendous merchant marine and equipped a tremendous army," Nimitz continued.

Long-range air units probably will be the first reinforcements shifted from Europe to this theater after the Nazis are defeated, he said.

As soon as ships can be spared they will come, too, he continued.

Asked if he needed more troops in the Pacific, Admiral Nimitz said: "When we get more transports we'll feel we need more troops and when we get more troops we'll probably feel we need more troops. I guess people are never satisfied."

Discusses Leapfrogging

Discussing leap-frogging tactics, Nimitz remarked: "I never was quite able to understand what they meant when they wrote about it. Actually, we never had any idea of moving from one island to another. We've rather been moving from one area to another to get naval bases, simply extending our sea power and control westward to enable us to go on."

Asked why he thought the Japanese made no attempt at air interference in the Guam campaign, he replied that they had tried it at Saipan but Spruance "completed what we think was the destruction of their naval air force."

Marines "Carried The Ball"

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airforce, he emphasized, had hit Truk, Woleai and Palau (in the Carolines south and east of Guam, contributing to the success achieved in the Marianas.

When General Smith jokingly asked if he was running out of marines in the Pacific, Nimitz shot back: "Oh, no. As long as there is one marine there'll be one fight."

Of the marines, one high-ranking marine officer, who referred to Guadalcanal as a skirmish to Saipan, said:

"I'm as proud of them as can be and I'm not kidding. They certainly carried the ball at the most critical time."

FRASER BACKS ROOSEVELT

New Zealand Premier Endorses Pacific Collaboration Plan

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Aug. 17 (AP)—Prime Minister Peter Fraser today expressed "cordial endorsement" of President Roosevelt's references to the Pacific Ocean at the Puget Sound Navy Yard last week.

"Within the framework of world organizations now under discussion," Mr. Fraser said, "effective machinery could and would be devised to insure the nations of the Pacific would not be threatened again by any repetition of Japanese aggression."

Gen. Emmons Takes Command Of Alaska

Headquarters, Alaskan Department, Aug. 17 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Delos Carleton Emmons, former commander of the Hawaiian Department and Western Defense Command, is commanding the Alaskan Department, it was announced today. He succeeds Lieut. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, Jr., and has been so serving since June 21.

Brig. Gen. Robert M. Bathurst, who came here as General Emmons' chief of staff, served with him in Hawaii and in the Western Defense Command post.

General Emmons served in Alaska for two years as an infantry lieutenant prior to the last war and was an observer in the Aleutians last year.

Canadian Corvette Sunk

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (AP)—Loss of the Canadian corvette Regina with two dead and 26 missing was announced today by Navy Minister Macdonald. He said the sinking occurred when the Regina went to the assistance of a merchant ship "in difficulties in invasion waters."

Canada Decorates Queens Flier

OTTAWA, Aug. 17 (AP)—Air Force headquarters announced today the awarding of the Distinguished Flying Medal to Flight Sgt. D. D. Salmon of 22-47 Forty-second Street, Astoria, Queens, for "displaying skill" in his task in a RCAF air crew overseas and for "devotion to duty of a high order."

Nazis Transfer Subs To Norway, Swedes Say

New York, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Swedish newspaper Svenska Dagbladet, as reported to the Office of War Information, said today that the Germans are believed to be transferring submarines from western French bases to Norway.

"Various signs indicate that the last stage of the war will increase the activities along the Norwegian coast," it added.

GERMAN GENERAL CITED

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(AP) The German Transocean news agency, recorded by the Federal Communications commission, broadcast today that Adolf Hitler personally had awarded to Field Marshal Walther Von Model, commander-in-chief of the central Eastern front, the highest German decoration for bravery—oak leaves with swords and diamonds to the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross.

NIGHT

FDR Demands Occupation Of German, Japanese Soil

AUG 18 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—(AP) President Roosevelt, back in the capital today from his Pacific tour, informed the world that Germany and Japan will be occupied by Allied troops regardless of when or how they surrender.

There will be no repetition, he said, of the 1918 situation, when Germany escaped full occupation by quitting when her homeland was menaced.

Returns from Trip

The President began catching up on routine business at the White House tonight after returning from a 35-day trip that took him to Pearl Harbor and to Adak, in the Aleutian islands.

He was met at the station by Secretary of State Hull and later he conferred with General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff.

Tomorrow he will have his first fourth term campaign strategy talk with his vice presidential running mate, Senator Harry S. Truman of Missouri, whom he has not seen since they were nominated by the Democratic National convention a month ago.

Mr. Roosevelt's special train passed through 21 states during the two crossings of the continent, but he laughed at suggestions that some people thought his journey was political.

There were no political things in it, he said, adding that those who think they found politics in the trip know more about it than he does.

On the westward crossing shades were drawn and every precaution taken to prevent the public from knowing who was aboard. But on the return from Bremerton, Wash., where the President made a broadcast speech last Saturday night, he waved and nodded occasionally at crowds which gathered at railroad stations along the way.

Immediately upon his return speculation arose that he might be thinking of another conference soon with Prime Minister Churchill. The two leaders have not seen each other since last December, and it has been their practice to meet about every six months.

The rapid pace of the war in France lent further weight to the suggestion, voiced in diplomatic and military circles, that another war and postwar council might be in order.

There had been reports, later proved erroneous, that Mr. Churchill might show up at the Honolulu conferences which Mr. Roosevelt held with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Adm. Chester Nimitz. As is developed, that conference was an all-American affair.

Revealed at News Conference

As it developed, that conference aboard train, during the last lap of the 15,000 mile journey, that Mr. Roosevelt made his first definite assertion that Germany and Japan cannot hope to avoid Allied occupation, even by the unconditional surrender that is demanded of them.

Berlin, he recalled, dodged occupation after the last war by negotiating an armistice. If we let them quit this time, he said, the next generation will be told that Germany won the war.

There is an interesting psychology study not only of the German people but of their military command, he said, a characteristic to throw up the sponge when their borders are menaced because they don't want Germany overrun.

As for Japan, the Chief Executive declared that nation must be sealed off from the peace-loving world until she proves herself willing and able to live with peaceful countries.

He repeated that American defense bases must be established in the Pacific to thwart any future aggression.

On his trip north at Adak aboard a cruiser the President went within 900 miles of Japanese territory.

Will Discuss Observations

He will discuss his observations tomorrow morning with Congressional leaders, but he said he does not expect to make a formal report to Congress.

The President returned tanned and jovial from a trip which began the night of July 13. After one day at Hyde Park, his special train moved westward to Chicago, where Mr. Roosevelt conferred briefly with Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan, and thence to San Diego, where he made his fourth term acceptance speech on July 20. Then he sailed for Pearl Harbor.

Through the three reporters one radio representatives who accompanied him, he expressed appreciation to the country's newspapers and radio stations for preserving the secrecy of his journey, in accordance with the voluntary censorship code.

on July 13.

They kept the story from the public for security reasons, he said, though many received letters from service men reporting that they had seen him in Hawaii or Alaska. Only one paper broke the story, Mr. Roosevelt said—a small one in Texas which he didn't identify further.

BRITISH PLEDGE WAR ON JAPAN

Campbell Says Empire Has Score to Settle.

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 17 (A. P.).—Sir Gerald Campbell, British Minister to the United States in Washington, declared today that Great Britain had a score to settle with Japan "and the British intend to take a personal hand in settling it." Sir Gerald told the New Bedford Standard-Times in an interview at the summer home of Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, in nearby Nonquitt, where he is vacationing, that some facts should make it self-evident that the British have no intention of leaving it to the United States to "finish off Japan alone."

"We have some bitter memories," he said. "Memories of Singapore and Hongkong and Burma, and of how, in the early days of the war and even today, the Japanese have violated all the international rules for treatment of prisoners, even though they did not subscribe to the international code. Their treatment of helpless captives is unforgivable.

"We fully realized before the war broke out that the make-up and the mentality of the Japs would make them more ruthless than any foe we ever had met in history. This forecast has been more than justified.

Will Play Out Game.

"We took a bad licking from Japan. It isn't in the British character to take a bad licking in a ball game one year and refuse to play the game again the next."

"This is our fight, as well as your fight," he added. "Had it not been for your presence in the Pacific, Canada, the senior dominion, would have been practically defenseless against Japan, owing to the fact that she had sent virtually all her fighting ships across the Atlantic.

"We are delighted to have such a large and effective force in the Pacific, but we want to do our bit in that fight. That is a matter of British pride and practical policy. The sooner we finish the Jap, the better for all concerned. The Dutch feel just as we do about it. We regard the whole war—Atlantic and Pacific—as one United Nations' effort."

ARGENTINA DENIES EXPROPRIATION AIM

AUG 18 1944

Washington, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—The Argentine Embassy announced today that it was authorized by the Argentine Government to issue the following statement: "In view of current versions which may affect the traditional prestige of Argentina, derived from the faithful and uninterrupted fulfillment of all her contractual obligations and the respect of all legitimately acquired patrimonial rights, the Argentine Government, in a Cabinet meeting held today, has resolved to issue the following statement:

"'Argentine or foreign capital invested in the country will in no case be expropriated except by negotiation and through legal processes. All versions of unilateral procedures in connection therewith must be considered absolutely unfounded.'"

Hawaiian Prince a Cadet

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 (AP).—Edward Keliiahonui Kawananakoa, son of Kapiolani Kawananakoa and grandson of Princess Abigail and the late Prince David Kawananakoa, was appointed to West Point today by Delegate Joseph R. Farrington, of Hawaii. Mr. Kawananakoa is the great-grandnephew of King Kalakaua and Queen Kapiolani of Hawaii and the grandnephew of Prince Kalanianaole, delegate to Congress from Hawaii for twenty years. He is now in the Army Air Forces, stationed at Santa Ana, Calif.

RED CROSS OFFICER SEES WAINWRIGHT

Bataan General, Others Tell Of Captives' Condition

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, commander on Bataan when it fell, and a prisoner of the Japanese since, has told a Red Cross interviewer that conditions in his camp in Formosa are "as good as can be reasonably expected."

Red Cross headquarters said today General Wainwright and two other officers, Brig. Gen. Lewis C. Bebbe and Capt. George T. Schooley, have been visited within the last 90 days by a delegate of the International Committee of the Red Cross. They were interviewed as spokesmen for the men held in their respective camps, all in Formosa.

Gave Camp Number

The delegate was permitted to give the numbers of the camps, but not their locations.

General Wainwright, at Camp V, said relief supplies received from the American Red Cross via the diplomatic exchange ship Gripsholm were useful. He added that more canned food and warm clothing would be appreciated. Other prisoners in the same camp also voiced the need for more relief supplies and better mail service.

General Beebe, at Camp IV, said the diet was deficient in proteins and fats and that one Red Cross food parcel per month was needed for each prisoner. At Camp III, Captain Schooley said towels, socks, raincoats and toilet articles were needed.

Basil O'Connor, chairman of the American Red Cross, said the needs of all prisoners held by Japan are fully understood by the Government and the Red Cross and that efforts still are being pressed to make possible the clearance of supplies through a Russian Pacific port. Thus far only shipments via diplomatic ship have been completed.

HUNGARY JEWS WILL BE AIDED

United States And Britain To Care For Budapest Exiles

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—The State Department announced tonight that the United States and Great Britain have accepted the offer of the Hungarian Government for the release of Jews and that Anglo-American authorities will arrange to take care of Hungarian Jews who reach neutral or United Nations territory.

The announcement, made jointly with the British Government in London, said the International Committee of the Red Cross had transmitted to the governments of the United Kingdom and the United States an offer of the Hungarian Government regardig the emigration and treatment of Jews.

Temporary Havens Assured

"Because of the desperate plight of the Jews in Hungary, and the overwhelming humanitarian considerations involved, the two governments are informing the Government of Hungary through the International Committee of the Red Cross, that, despite the heavy difficulties and responsibilities involved," they will arrange to take care of Jewish refugees from Hungary and see that they find temporary havens of refuge.

The State Department said "the governments of the United Kingdom and the United States emphasized that in accepting the offer which has been made, they do not in any way condone the action of the Hungarian Government in forcing the emigration of Jews as an alternative to persecution and death."

Notification of these assurances, the department said, is being given to the governments of neutral countries who are being requested to permit the entry of Jews who reach their frontiers from Hungary.

GEN. WHARTON KILLED IN ACTION IN FRANCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 — (AP) The Army announced today that Brig. Gen. James E. Wharton was killed in action in France Aug. 12.

Wharton's assignment has not been announced. He was assistant commander of the 80th Infantry division at Camp Forrest, Tenn., before he was ordered overseas last October.

He is survived by his widow, who lives at Staunton, Va.

New Shermans— And Patton, Too!

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—The biggest punch ever packed in a medium tank is carried by the army's new General Sherman.

The War Department reported today that some of the 33-ton, 24-miles-an-hour tanks with which Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army is blasting its way through central France are armed with 105-mm. howitzers. That's the biggest gun ever mounted in a medium tank.

In addition, the new General Shermans also carry two .30-caliber machine guns, a .50-celiber machine gun, a mortar, a .45-caliber submachine gun, hand grenades and smoke bombs.

All this and Patton too!!

Carrier Task Force Head Gets Navy's DSM

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—Award of the Distinguished Service Medal to Rear Admiral Alfred E. Montgomery, 53, for services as commander of a carrier task force in operations against the Japanese in the Central and South Pacific areas in November and December, 1943, was announced today by the navy.

The navy also announced award of the Legion of Merit to Rear Admiral Charles W. Fisher, Jr., for outstanding services as director of the shore establishments division.

M'CLOY DECLARES EUROPEAN WAR IS NEARING CLIMAX

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP) A blunt declaration by Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy that the past two weeks "have been a decisive period in the war against Germany" showed plainly today that the Allied high command believes the war in Europe is moving rapidly to a climax.

Summarizing the swift developments of the four-front war against the Nazis, McCloy told a news conference:

Two German armies, the Fifth and Seventh, have been defeated in Normandy, suffering huge losses in men and equipment. Forced to withdraw, they can hardly regroup for a new stand anywhere west of the Seine.

In one of the most efficiently conducted mass maneuvers in military history, a huge Allied force has invaded the south of France against meager German opposition, and is consolidating its strength for a campaign of which only the first step has been taken.

French Interior Forces are in the fight throughout France, blowing up bridges, demolishing Nazi transport, and engaging the Germans openly on a scale that amounts virtually to a national uprising.

Pressure against the weakened Nazi forces in Italy is being maintained by Allied armies coordinating their action with developments in France.

German resistance has stiffened against the Soviet armies in the East, but the Russians, while consolidating their supply lines, are splitting the remnants of Nazi armies in Latvia and Estonia, pressing the siege of Warsaw, and expanding their Vistula bridgehead towards Silesia.

"All of this sounds optimistic, and there is no reason to disguise the fact that the trend of military affairs is favorable," McCloy said.

"But even where the Germans have been cornered, they have fought stubbornly. When they were finally compelled to withdraw, they fought bitterly at points of the most danger.

"They have large forces in the West not yet in battle."

The cost of the successful battle of Normandy to American forces alone up to August 6, without reference to British and Canadian losses, McCloy said, has been 112,673 casualties—16,434 killed, 76,535 wounded and 19,704 missing.

"Under the circumstances," said McCloy, "nothing is more repugnant and dispiriting to the soldier than to hear his people far from the battle lines saying with an outburst of super-optimism that the battle is all won and the war will end tomorrow or the next day."

U. S. CASUALTIES NUMBER 300,000

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP) Approximately 300,000 battle casualties among United States armed forces have been reported to next of kin thus far in World War II, the War and Navy departments announced today.

From the start of the war until July 29, the army casualties totalled 244,775, Acting Secretary of War McCloy said, while the navy listed casualties totalling 54,699, or a total of 299,474 for both services.

Army casualties were subdivided thusly: 45,491 killed; 113,977 wounded, of whom 57,956 have recovered and returned to duty; 42,102 missing and 43,205 are prisoners of war.

From June 6 through Aug. 6; the Normandy campaign cost 112,673 casualties, with 16,434 killed, 76,535 wounded and 19,704 missing. One week's casualties, not broken down, were included in the Normandy figure, and not included in the summary of all army casualties.

Navy casualties were subdivided as follows: Navy 34,414, Marines 19,530 and Coast Guard 755. These included 22,665 dead, 17,819 wounded, 9,746 missing and 4,469 prisoners of war.

The army's casualties total (was an increase of 26,320 over the latest previous report, made August 3, of 218,473. The Navy total increased 2,828 from 51,871.

16,434 Killed in Normandy

American Invasion Losses Cover Period From Landing to August 6.

Washington, Aug. 17 (A. P.).—American losses in the Normandy sector of France from the landing on June 6 to August 6 were 16,434 killed, 76,535 wounded and 19,704 missing, Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy said today.

Bringing out the cost of defeating the German forces in this area, Mr. McCloy commented at a news conference:

"Under the circumstances, it is sometimes repugnant and dispiriting to the soldier to hear that the war is over or is going to end tomorrow."

Mr. McCloyd said that the German armies in Normandy now have been "pretty well shredded in a trap closed on them near Falaise, and there seemed little likelihood that they could make a fresh stand anywhere west of the Seine River."

The operation in the south of France, where Allied forces landed the morning of August 15, is now one day ahead of schedule in its penetrations, and is closely co-ordinated with the Normandy front, the acting secretary said.

He added that the operation was one of the most efficiently co-ordinated and conducted in military history, and while opposition has not been uniformly as light as first reports indicated, Allied casualties have been quite small.

Mr. McCloy indicated that the active co-operation of French resistance forces throughout the interior of France has become so extensive as to amount almost to a general uprising against the Nazis. The enemy has suffered a decided defeat in the Normandy area, said Mr. McCloy and all the operations—in Normandy, on the south coast, and by resistance forces in the interior—add up only to the first steps in the battle of France.

"All of this sounds pretty optimistic," said Mr. McCloy, "and there is no reason to deny that the course of the war is favorable. Germany seems to be definitely on the toboggan.

"But the Germans have fought bitterly, and they still have large forces in western France which have not yet been committed to action."

Battle casualties in the United States armed forces thus far reported to next of kin have reached a total of 299,474.

Acting Secretary of War McCloy today listed Army casualties of 244,775 from the start of the war until July 29. Navy, Marine and Coast Guard casualties totaling 54,699 were announced by the Navy.

Of the Army total, 45,491 were killed, 113,977 were wounded (57,956 of the wounded have recovered and returned to duty), 42,102 are missing and 43,205 are officially reported prisoners of the enemy.

Navy casualties alone totaled 34,414, with the Marines reporting 19,530 and the Coast Guard 755. For the three naval services, the total of dead was 22,665; wounded 17,819; missing 9,746, and prisoners of war 4,469.

Reports Allied Guns Killed 7,500 French

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—A Congressman back from the Normandy front reported today Allied shelling of German-occupied Caen killed 7,500 French civilians in that cathedral city of 60,000 population.

The French had been warned to vacate the coastal area, but Representative Hugh D. Scott, Jr., Philadelphia, related that after one Allied barrage took 2,500 lives, civilians who had fled to the countryside returned and were caught in another, which killed 5,000 more.

Scott, in an interview, told of his experiences in France, where he met Prime Minister Churchill. Scott and a fellow-Republican, Representative Gordon Canfield, of New Jersey, had worked their way across the Atlantic incognito aboard a tanker.

Post-War Immigration Study

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 (AP).—A resolution authorizing a study of post-war immigration policies was submitted to the House today by Representative Samuel Dickstein, Democrat, of New York. Mr. Dickstein, Immigration Committee chairman, said Congress had done "absolutely nothing" in the matter and that study was essential for the "enactment of

EX-SERVICEMEN TO GET SPECIAL RAILROAD RATES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP) Ex-servicemen and women will be granted a special railroad rate of one and one-fourth cents a mile from the point of their release to destinations in the United States and Canada, effective Sept. 1.

John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, announced this today "as the railroads' contribution to the reintroduction of service people to civilian life."

'Yes, We Have No Jeeps,' Is Rep. Manasco Song

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—"Yes, we have no jeeps for sale" is the current theme song of Chairman Carter Manasco (D., Ala.) of the House Expenditures Committee.

Manasco, whose committee is in charge of the bill for disposition of surplus war goods, has been deluged with letters from customers who want to buy everything from PT boats to bath towels.

Surplus Property Bill Survives House Test, Faces Amendments

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP) The House backed up the administration's idea of how surplus war property should be disposed of today, voting down proposals to replace the proposed disposal director with a seven-man board and to restrict his term to coincide with that of President Roosevelt.

The surplus property bill rode through its first major tests unchanged as the House drove toward a final vote which probably will be taken tomorrow.

Hopes for a quick decision faded rapidly after scores of members offered amendments. The widespread interest in proposed changes in the measure coincided with another drive to rewrite the surplus property bill's twin—the measure to ease the reconversion to a peacetime economy. A bi-partisan bloc was organized in the House in a fresh effort to provide $25 a week unemployment compensation for civilians and $35 for veterans for a maximum of 52 weeks over a two-year period.

Action on the surplus property amendments led to sharp exchanges on the floor of the House. Representative Poulson (R-Calif) urged the board idea for administering the program, contending that the director of a $100,000,000,000 merchandising job would be a "czar with more power and influence than the President."

Representative Cochran (D-Mo) observed that "we have an example in Washington how a board operates when the District of Columbia commissioners can't decide whether to build one or two bridges over the Potomac and they put it in the lap of the President who hasn't a second's time he can call this own."

Representative Bender (R-Ohio) asserted "no one man knows all the answers" but the amendment was beaten, 110 to 76, on a teller vote.

Representative Church (R-Ill) offered the amendment to strike out the provision for the director to serve two years. Other Republicans observed that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey may be elected President in November and they questioned whether the director then could be removed. Rep. Whittington (D-Miss) said the President, no matter who he would be, has the authority to remove the director at any time and the proposal was defeated, 61 to 28.

In both cases, a number of Republicans joined with the Democrats against the amendments.

Later, the House adopted tentatively an amendment providing that advisory committees are to be set up, representing various lines of industry including small business, to guide the director in proposed sales. Rep. Patman (D-Tex), the author, declared this would be the best way to channel the ideas of the businesses concerned into the administration of the law. The amendment is subject to a roll call vote later.

The House shouted defeat of an amendment requiring the director to submit copies of his regulations to Congress and another prohibiting such regulations to go into effect until Congress approved. Rep. Gossett (D-Tex) observed that these proposals "would drive Congress insane."

8 U. S. Leaders Called In Probe Of Surpluses

AUG 18 1944

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—Eight top-ranking Federal officials were summoned today by the Senate's War Investigating Committee in an effort to get an inventory of military surpluses and a preview of facilities for their disposal.

The committee threw its hearing open to the public after a closed session yesterday in which Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board reiterated that the lifting of a ban against production of hundreds of vital civilian articles in non-critical labor areas would not be permitted to interfere with military needs.

Points Of Inquiry

The committee, convinced that there is occasion for neither excessive optimism over a "magnificent" over-all production picture nor fear that the production program is breaking down because of critical shortage in specific military necessities, including heavy artillery, sought to determine in its new inquiry:

1. The extent to which some military articles have been overpurchased and the totals of surpluses this accumulated.

2. The steps taken to limit purchases to those articles for which there is some reasonable expectancy for their use.

3. The procedure under which Government agencies are now disposing of surplus machine tools and plants already accumulated.

William L. Clayton, Surplus Property Administrator, topped a list of witnesses due to be heard.

Probe Checks Ex-U. S. Workers Now With PAC

AUG 18 1944

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—Former high-salaried Government employes now working for the CIO Political Action Committee will figure in the forthcoming investigation of PAC by a special House subcommittee.

Chairman Starnes (D., Ala.) disclosed today his subcommittee plans to summon a personnel official of the War Manpower Commission to explain why several Government officials have been released this year to jobs with what he termed a "pressure group."

Two Women Named

Starnes contended that release of the Government workers, despite tight WMC controls over job-switching, is an example of "the tremendous power of this labor group to get what it wants from our present Administration."

Two of the former Government employes, Charlotte Carr, New York director of the PAC, and Mrs. Verda Barnes, director of the PAC women's division, were with the WMC itself before their release this year, Starnes said.

Miss Carr is listed on subcommittee records as former assistant to the deputy chairman of WMC, at an annual salary of $6,500, and Mrs. Barnes, as former senior informatoin specialist, at $4,500 annually.

Nine Others Listed

Starnes said his group has a list of about 11 former Government officials employed by PAC since the first of this year.

Hearings, Starnes said, await the arrival of another subcommittee member, Representative Costello (D., Cal.). Defeat of both Starnes and Costello in their recent campaigns for renomination has been widely attributed to activities of the CIO group.

States Urged to Broaden Unemployment Programs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP) To cushion the shock of reconversion from war to peacetime economy, the House Postwar Economic committee today urged state governments to broaden their unemployment programs by widening coverage and increasing payments.

The Committee, headed by Representative Colmer (D-Miss.), filed its report as the House began debate on surplus property disposition, one of three subjects in the pending three-point reconversion program that broke up Congress' Summer vacation.

It recommended immediate establishment of machinery to handle reconversion matters generally through a director of war mobilization and reconversion, appointed by the president.

In general the committee steered clear of the "states' rights" unemployment compensation fight that rocked the Senate last week, although it indicated that it favored handling of the jobless pay program by the states.

Most war workers, the committee said, are covered by state unemployment compensation systems which will have reserves estimated at $6,000,000,000 by the end of this year.

"In general," it added, the funds "are adequate to pay the benefits provided by the plans but in a few instances the individual state funds might not be sufficient to meet demands during the transitional period. . . . If adequate protection is to be provided, there should be increases in the duration of benefits and in the weekly amounts in most states."

The Social Security board, the Committee said, estimates that funds are adequate in most states to provide the increased benefits. It urged, however, that the Federal government take "prompt action" to protect state funds against "the threat of depletion."

The Committee said it found "general agreement" that industry, commerce, the service trades and agriculture must provide from 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 more jobs than during the peace year of 1940 in order to keep unemployment at a minimum.

"The principal backlog of protection" to individuals against declining incomes in the postwar period, it added, will come from an increase of $65,000,000,000 in individual savings accumulated during the last three years.

The committee recommended extension of unemployment pay to include groups not now covered, such as federal employes, maritime workers and employes of concerns hiring less than eight workers. The George Bill passed last week by the Senate extended coverage to some 3,500,000 Federal workers.

Republican Nominee to Follow Up With Speech at Louisville Next Day.

BRICKER MAPS TALK

G.O.P. Nominee 'Hopes' Minorities Will Be Recognized in Peace.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 17—(AP) Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, still jousting with the national administration over aims of the Washington four-power security conference, announced tonight he would make major campaign speeches at Philadelphia Sept. 7 and Louisville, Ky., Sept. 8.

The Republican presidential nominee thus may begin his active speaking drive in two states listed in the politically doubtful column. However, James C. Haggerty, executive assistant, said another speech might be scheduled prior to the Philadelphia engagement.

The Dewey plans were disclosed in a statement by Paul Lockwood, the governor's secretary, that the nominee had accepted an invitation from the Pennsylvania Republican State committee, headed by State Senator Harvey Taylor, for the Philadelphia address.

Dewey will speak in convention hall at Philadelphia, where in 1940 he lost the Republican presidential nomination to Wendell L. Willkie.

The address will be broadcast nationally, as will the Louisville speech. Whether Dewey will continue on a campaign swing or return to Albany had not been determined, Hagerty said.

Bricker to Speak Sept. 9

Dewey's running mate, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, will open his speaking campaign at French Lick, Ind., Sept. 9. He will address the Indiana Republican Editorial association.

Dewey will speak in the Louisville armory at the close of a two-day biennial conference of the National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, headed by Mrs. W. Glenn Suthers of Chicago.

Lockwood announced the federation, which he said consisted of 4,000 clubs with a membership of 300,000, would inaugurate in connection with the address a series of "neighborhood listening-in parties" throughout the nation for club members and friends.

No subjects were announced for the two speeches, but there was speculation that the Philadelphia address would deal generally with preservation of American liberties.

At Louisville, Dewey is expected to make a strong appeal for the feminine vote.

The governor replied today to an assertion of Secretary of State Hull that no world ruling alliance of the "Big Four" Allied powers was contemplated at the Washington security conference. Dewey expressed hope that Hull's assurances of protection of the rights of minorities and small nations were sufficient.

Hull Replies

Hull let it be known he would "welcome" a conference with Dewey "and any others who come solely in a non-partisan spirit and with a will to offer any feasible cooperation entirely free from any personal, political partisanship."

There was no immediate reply to this from Dewey, who had declared yesterday he was disturbed by reports the "Big Four" diplomatic conversations, to begin at Dumbarton Oaks next week, were pointed toward formation of an alliance between the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China, which would rule the world through spheres of influence.

Calling these fears "utterly and completely unfounded," Hull said no such arrangement "is contemplated or even has been contemplated by this government, or as far as we know, by any of the other governments."

Hull Would 'Welcome' Parley With Gov. Dewey

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP) Secretary of State Hull said today that if the other nations agree, a conference of all United Nations, large and small, may be called this fall to establish a world security organization.

At the same time, Hull declared he would "welcome" a meeting on peace plans with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, "free from personal political partisanship."

Speaks at News Conference

Hull permitted quotation of his willingness to see the Republican presidential nominee after an hour-long off the record news conference, during which he reasserted this country's stand on consulting with small as well as large countries on security plans, and what he called his own determination to keep peace out of domestic politics.

Earlier, he had replied to a statement by Dewey in which the New York Governor expressed fear that the United States, Britain, Russia and China are planning permanent domination of the world.

The Secretary called Dewey's fears "utterly and completely unfounded."

Dewey, in Albany, had no comment on Hull's willingness to see him, but his executive assistant, James C. Hagerty, told reporters that "the Governor earnestly hopes that Mr. Hull's assurances of protection of the rights of minorities and small nations are sufficient."

At the informal news conference with Hull, on which publication restrictions later were removed, Hull was asked if he would see Dewey. He replied that he welcomed talks with people who come "solely in a non-partisan spirit and offer any feasible cooperation."

"I would welcome such a conference with Governor Dewey," he said.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee termed Dewey's statement "a Luftwaffe air attack" on the forthcoming Dumbarton Oaks conference at which the United States, Britain, Russia and China will discuss preliminary plans for a world peace organization.

"Upon the basis of mere unconfirmed rumor," Connally declared in a statement, "Governor Dewey's statement is calculated to handicap the conference in advance and threatens the injection of partisan politics."

On the other hand, Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) High-ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations committee, said:

"Most Americans will agree with Governor Dewey in his forthright statement that ultimate peace with justice in a free world can never be founded on permanent military alliance or power politics."

In another statement, Chairman O'Mahoney of Wyoming of the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee said he regarded Dewey's remarks as "a cynical and shocking act of political sabotage against the peace of the world."

All Countries to Meet

Hull, elaborating on his assurance that all countries will have their say in forming a peace organization, said the next step after the Dumbarton Oaks sessions would be a meeting of all the countries fighting the war.

The present timetable envisages about three weeks of talks, beginning next Monday, between Britain, Russia and the United States, and then one week between the Western Allies and China. The resulting final document will go back to each capital for approval.

When the four governments have approved theid delegates' conclusions, the document will be sent to all the other United Nations with a view to calling a full dress conference, which Hull said should take place this fall. It is contemplated that the plan will be made public at the same time that it is distributed to the United Nations generally.

Tracing the background of the plan for world peace, as it has developed thus far, Hull quietly but eloquently reiterated the American tradition of liberty and the need for all peace loving nations to work together.

The welfare, safety and prosperity of the large nations are irrevocably tied in with the small nations, and vice versa, he declared.

Concerned Over U. S. Interest

He expressed deep concern over what he termed a lack of informed American public interest in establishment of a peace agency and the possibility that efforts in that direction might be wrecked over domestic political issues. Since this government first began studying peace plans, he said, he has worked to keep them non-partisan.

The human race is now confronted by the gravest hour in all its experience, the Secretary declared, and we who are on the scene of action at this critical period have the responsibility of saying how the work is going in years to come.

Hull said he was more and more convinced that no one political party could handle the responsibility alone. It must be recognized that changes occur in American politics, he said, and the whole bottom would drop out of the drive for lasting peace if it depended on political issues.

Veteran Delivers Gifts For Buddy Killed in Italy

Takes Bracelet and Rosary to B-24 Gunner's Mother

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Aug. 17 (AP).—A few months ago in Italy, the ten-man crew of a B-24 bomber agreed that, should anything happen to any one of them, one of those left would deliver gifts they had purchased for "the folks at home."

In that crew was Technical Sergeant Normand George Brouillette, nineteen years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Brouillette, of Woonsocket. Another crewman was Staff Sergeant Temple Bentley, of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

The crew went on a shopping spree in Italy, between bombing missions. Sergeant Brouillette purchased a bracelet, a necklace and a rosary for his mother, packed them carefully and stored them in his barracks.

Over the Italian coast, enemy fire wrecked the big plane. Nine of the ten aboard got away. Three died later. But waist-gunner Brouillette went down with his ship, pinned under a fallen turret.

Back in the barracks, Sergeant Bentley, recuperating from a broken leg, gathered together the gifts Sergeant Brouillette had bought for his mother. Now back home, Sergeant Bentley has delivered them to Mrs. Brouillette. "This is the only time I've had to do anything like this, and I certainly hope it never happens again," he said.

Army Returns Philadelphia's Transit System

Hayes Withdraws Troops, Hopes Workers Will Not Again 'Let Nation Down'

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17 (AP).—Major General Philip Hayes turned control of the Philadelphia Transportation Company back to its owners today and announced that troops who seized the strike-bound system on Aug. 3 would return to their main job of "fighting Japs and Germans."

General Hayes said his mission, that of getting the transit system back in operation, had been accomplished, and expressed confidence that P. T. C. workers would not "let their country down" and would not again "shoulder the responsibility for delaying further the departure of thousands of men for the battlefronts."

The strike, ascribed by its leaders to upgrading of eight Negroes to operating jobs, deprived 1,500,000 persons of their normal means of transportation for six days and crippled war production severely in the nation's second largest war-industry area.

A Federal grand jury is currently engaged in seeking underlying causes of the strike. Federal Judge George A. Welsh told them as they started their investigation that he did not believe the racial dispute was the real reason for the walkout.

Seven of the Negroes have continued training for operating jobs since the Army took over. The eighth resigned, saying he wished to devote all his time to his work as a minister.

In returning the system to private control, General Hayes said, "the P. T. C. has been operating for more than a week without incident. . . .

"'I am confident that the employees of the P. T. C. realize the vital role they have in the war effort and will accept full responsibility for seeing to it that Philadelphia's transit system continues to play its part in winning the war.

"If I did not feel this, I would be compelled to remain and keep a large number of troops away from the work for which they have been trained. I hope and trust that my faith in the patriotic spirit of the P. T. C. workers is justified and that they will not let their country down."

AUTHORITIES CHECK 4 RUSSIAN CREWMEN

SEATTLE, Aug. 17—(AP) Four crewmen of a Russian ship, which sailed without them, are being held by U. S. immigration authorities for routine investigation, Raphael P. Bonham, district director, said today.

Bonham said the men, two of them officers, had refused to return to their ships after being taken into custody and that the Russian government had made no demand they be returned.

The four were identified as Alexis Starkos, 30, second mate; Alex Terentieff, 39, third engineer; Alexander Nikitin, 21, and Georgi Sereda, 23, seamen.

Bonham said the seamen were picked up last month and a few days later the officers arrived at the immigration station, with their luggage, carrying out intentions they earlier had announced in a letter to Bonham. He quoted them as saying they "didn't like conditions on the ship."

Navy Plans To Wire Pictures From Guam

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 17 (AP)—Installation of high-frequency wireless equipment at Guam may make possible receipt in the United States of pictures of Pacific battle actions two or three days or even 12 hours after they are taken, Rear Admiral A. S. Merrill, navy public relations director, said today. It took 19 days for the bulk of the Saipan pictures to reach Washington, D. C., though a few were transmitted in six days.

He said he had just returned from a three-week tour of Kwajalein, Eniwetok and Honolulu, during which he arranged for installation of facilities to speed transmission of war news and photographs.

"They will be relayed to Guam from the flagships of the officer in command of each successive operation. The material will be censored at the flagship and sent on from Guam direct to the States," he said. "The only delay will occur in getting the material from the fronts to the flagships."

(A BROADCAST FROM NORMANDY SAID THE WITHDRAWAL WAS ON A 30-MILE FRONT FROM FALAISE NORTH TO THE ENGLISH CHANNEL, AND THAT TROARN EVACUATED).

ONE OF THE TWO THRUSTS REACHED MONTREUIL LA CAMBE, TWO MILES NORTH OF TRUN, WHERE FIGHTING IS GOING ON. MONTREUIL IS 10 MILES EAST OF FALAISE.

THE OTHER THRUST TOOK VIMONT, ADVANCED FIVE MILES TO THE NORTHEAST, CROSSED THE DIVES RIVER AND CAPTURED ST.PIERRE-DU-DIVES, FIVE MILES BEYOND VIMONT AND THREE MILES EAST OF TROARN.

AS A RESULT OF THE GERMANS' RETREAT, THE CANADIANS CAPTURED TROARN AND BAVENT, WHICH HAD BEEN STRONGLY HELD BY THE GERMANS SINCE FIVE DAYS AFTER THE INVASION.

COMPLETE CUTTING OF THE FALAISE-LISIEUX ESCAPE ROUTE OUT OF THE GERMAN POCKET WAS ASSURED BY THE CAPTURE OF LOUVAGNY AND DAMBLAINVILLE. THE VILLAGES OF BAROU AND NORREY-EN-AUGE ALSO WERE TAKEN. THE THRUST CUT ACROSS THE MOUTH OF THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN GAP.

BRITISH FORMATIONS WITH THE CANADIAN ARMY TOOK ST.PIERRE-SUR-DIVES, AND PUSHED A FEW MILES FARTHER EAST. BATTLES WERE TAKING PLACE AS FAR EAST AS THE MEZIDON SECTOR. FROM THERE NORTH TO THE SEA THE GERMANS WERE FALLING BACK. NORTHEAST OF TROARN ALLIED TROOPS TOOK BASSEN VILLE AND BURES.

THE ADVANCE INTO FALAISE STARTED YESTERDAY, PUTTING THE CANADIANS INTO ONE OF THEIR BITTEREST FIGHTS SINCE THE BATTLES JUST SOUTH OF CAEN.

AT THE NORTH EDGE OF THE FALAISE ESCAPE GAP, THE CITY WAS FIRST SURROUNDED. CANADIANS FOUGHT THROUGH ITS STREETS AND THE FINAL MOPPING UP OF SNIPERS SOON STARTED.

THE GERMANS HAD ANTI-TANK GUNS, MACHINEGUNS AND RIFLES HIDDEN AMONG WRECKED BUILDINGS.

THE ANTE RIVER, WHICH SWINGS THROUGH THE NORTHWESTERN OUTSKIRTS, WAS THE GREATEST OBSTACLE, BUT SHERMAN TANKS WERE PUT ACROSS AND INFANTRY FOLLOWED.

A CANADIAN ARMY SPOKESMAN SAID IT WAS BELIEVED THAT A NUMBER OF ARMORED AND INFANTRY DIVISIONS WERE STILL IN THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN POCKET.

RAF SUPPORT FOR THE CANADIAN ARMY DRIVE, THE FULL EXTENT OF WHICH WAS CLOAKED IN ARMY-IMPOSED SILENCE, INCLUDED 16 TANKS DAMAGED OR FOUR DESTROYED AND WRECKING OF 85 VEHICLES AND SMASHING OF A REPORTED GERMAN HEADQUARTERS ESTABLISHMENT UNDER A HAIL OF ROCKETS.

DOMFRONT, FRANCE, AUG.16-(DELYD)-(AP)-THIS TURRENTED MEDIEVAL TOWN--THE HOME OF GEN. SIR BERNARD L. MONTGOMERY'S NORMAN ANCESTRORS--BEARS BUT SMALL SCARS COMPARED WITH THE WOUNDS THAT HAVE BEEN INFLICTED ON TOWNS THAT HAVE FALLEN BEFORE IT.

IT ILLUSTRATES PERFECTLY THE CHANGE IN THE ALLIED CAPAIGN THAT HAS COME WITH THE GREAT ACCELERATION OF OUR ADVANCE.

THIS CHANGE HAS BEEN THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH. BECAUSE THE ENEMY IS RUNNING, 60 PER CENT OR MORE OF THIS TOWN IS STANDING AND HABITABLE. THOSE TO THE REAR ARE HEAPS OF BROKEN MASONRY AND PILES OF ASHES.

THERE IS HEAVY DAMAGE AT THE MIDDLE OF THE TOWN. BUT THE BULK OF ITS PEOPLE ARE STILL SHELTERED. ITS ANCIENT CHURCH--A MASS OF GOLD INLAID MOSAIC INSIDE AND OUT WITH RICHNESS RARELY SEEN OUTSIDE A CATHERDRAL--STANDS INTACT.

ABOUT MIDDAY A SINGLE BLAST BROKE THE STILLNESS.

IT WAS A PLATOON OF U.S. ARMY ENGINEERS DESTROYING THE TOWN'S OID LOUIS XIV ARCHED BRIDGE, DEEMED UNSAFE FOR MILITARY TRAVEL.

LT. A.M. EDDY, 9 HILLSIDE PLACE, SEA CLIFF, LONG ISLAND, N.Y., THE OFFICER IN CHARGE, SAID THE BRIDGE WAS UNSAFE FROM FISSURES SO OLD THAT THE GRASS WAS GROWING BETWEEN THEM. HE SAID THE CRACKS WERE ALMOST CERTAINLY CAUSED MONTHS AGO BY ALLIED STRATEGIC BOMBING.

HE ASSURED THE TOWNSPEOPLE THAT THE BRIDGE HAD TO GO IN ORDER YO PERMIT THE FORWARD MARCH OF ALLIED TANKS, AND THEY GAVE HIM A 100 PER CENT VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

FOR THE DEMOLITION HE USED NAZI BOMBS SNATCHED FROM ANOTHER BRIDGE WHERE AN ENEMY SQUAD HAD PLACED THEM.

"IT WAS THOUGHTFUL OF THOSE FELLOWS," HE REMARKED AND HIS SERGEANT, TOM JAMES OF DELAWARE, OHIO, GRINNED IN AGREEMENT.

EDDY SAID IT WOULD TAKE TWO HOURS TO PUT ANOTHER BRIDGE IN ITS PLACE, "AFTER WE GET THIS STUFF OUT."

THE OTHER PRINCIPAL EXCITEMENT IN DOMFRONT TODAY WAS WATCHING THE MOVEMENT OF TWO ILL-SORTED COLUMNS OF REFUGEES WHO STRAGGLED THROUGH TO OUR REAR.

ONE WAS AN OLD FARMER WHO HAD GOT OUT OF A GERMAN "POCKET" BACK OF ARGENTAN.

HIS HEAD WAS BANDAGED BUT HE HELD IT HIGH AS HE STOOD BEFORE THE TOWN HALL--NOW THE CIVIL AFFAIRS HEADQUARTERS COMMANDED BY LT. COL. EDWARD E. ROBINSON OF THE ELKS CLUB, HAZELTON, PA.--AND WITH FIERCE GESTURES TOLD HOW HE ESCAPED.

WITH AMERICANS ON THE ROAD TO PARIS, AUG 17-(AP)-AMERICAN TROOPS HAVE OCCUPIED CHARTRES, DREUX, ORLEANS AND CHATEAUDUN AND OUR PATROLS NOW ARE APPROACHING PARIS FROM CHARTRES, ON THE SOUTHWEST.

ONE AMERICAN COLUMN HAS CROSSED THE RIVER EURE, PRESUMABLY IN THE VICINITY OF DREUX, AND IS PROCEEDING TOWARD THE CAPITAL. DREUX IS 40 MILES DUE WEST OF PARIS, AND THE RIVER RUNS A COUPLE OF MILES EAST OF THE TOWN.

THE SMASHING AMERICAN ADVANCE IS MEETING WITH NEGLIGIBLE ENEMY RESISTANCE.

ORLEANS ON THE LOIRE RIVER 65 MILES BELOW PARIS, CHATEAUDUN TO THE NORTHWEST OF ORLEANS, AND DREUX 20 MILES NORTH OF CHARTRES WERE TAKEN YESTERDAY.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED OFFICIALLY THAT THE U.S. THIRD ARMY OF LT.-GEN. GEORGE S.PATTON, JR., HAD KNOCKED OUT ABOUT 100,000 GERMANS, INCLUDING 11,000 KILLED, 41,300 CAPTURED AND 47,500 WOUNDED.

ORLEANS WAS TAKEN AFTER NEGLIGIBLE RESISTANCE.

PRISONERS ACTUALLY TAKEN IN THE POCKET OPERATION ARE ESTIMATED AT NOT LESS THAN 8,200 IN THE HANDS OF THE FIRST ARMY ALONE, NOT INCLUDING UNCOUNTED GERMAN DEAD. THOSE WHO ARE FLEEING ARE SUFFERING VERY HIGH CASUALTIES.

THE NAZIS ARE THROWING ARMOR AGAINST U.S.ARMOR-- A TACTIC OF FRENZY SINCE IT IS MILITARILY WASTEFUL TO TRY TO USE ONE TANK TO STOP ANOTHER RATHER THAN REGULAR ANTI-TANK WEAPONS.

THE ENEMY IS GAMBLING HIGH TO KEEP OPEN AN EXIT LINE HOWEVER THIN, AND THROUGH IT SOME GERMAN ARMOR AND INFANTRY STILL ARE ESCAPING EASTWARD THROUGH A STORM OF ARTILLERY AND AIRPLANE FIRE.

HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES ARE AMONG THOSE TRYING TO RUN THIS LANE.

I PARACHUTED INTO SOUTHERN FRANCE AT 4:30 A.M. WITH A FAMED PARATROOP BATTALION CHOSEN TO LEAD THE AIRBORNE ASSAULT. WE ARE 10 MILES BEHIND THE BEACHES, WITH THE GERMANS PRESUMABLY ALL AROUND US. OUR MISSION IS TO BLOCK THE GERMAN LINE OF RETREAT FROM THE BEACHES AND BATTLE AS LONG AS ONE MAN IS STILL LIVING AGAINST ANY GERMAN ATTEMPT TO RUSH REINFORCEMENT SOUTHWARD.

THIS WAS OUR ASSIGNMENT WHEN WE LEAPED FROM TROOP CARRIERS IN PREDAWN BLACKNESS THREE AND A HALF HOURS BEFORE H-HOUR.

HOWEVER, THE PICTURE HAS CHANGED SINCE WE LANDED. THE GERMANS FAILED TO COME AFTER US AND DURING THE DAY AMERICAN AND BRITISH PARATROOPERS AND GLIDERS HAVE BEEN SWARMING INTO THE VALLEY BELOW US IN OVERWHELMING NUMBERS.

AFTER SEVERAL HOURS OF STUBBORN RESISTANCE, THE AMERICANS REPORTED SUCCESSES AGAINST BOTH OBSTACLES, WHICH HAD PROVIDED THE MOST SERIOUS ORGANIZED RESISTANCE TO THE PACE THE AMERICAN FORCES HAD MAINTAINED FROM THE MOMENT OF H-HOUR YESTERDAY.

CPL. RICHARD BOEHM, ST. JAMES, MINN., SCHOOL TEACHER, AND PVTS. FREDERICK REID, ERIE, PA., AND JAMES BEALE, PETERSBURG, VA., WERE OUT ON A THREE MAN RECONNAISSANCE PATROL AND NOTED THE COUNTERATTACK BY SOME 100 TO 150 GERMANS, SUPPORTED BY ARTILLERY FIRE FROM HIGH GROUND.

THE PATROL CALLED FOR ARTILLERY FIRE ON THE ENEMY COLUMN, AND SINCE NO ARTILLERY OBSERVERS WERE THERE THE TRIO PERSONALLY DIRECTED THE FIRE. THEY DIRECTED THE ARTILLERY ON THE COLUMN WITH THREE TEST SHELLS, AND THE GUNS DID THE REST. A BATTERING BARRAGE OF 110 ROUNDS WAS SLAMMED ON THE POSITION. BOEHM REPORTED THE COLUMN HAD DISPERSED WHEN THE SMOKE CLEARED.

MEANWHILE, FORCES UNDER MAJ. CARTHEL M. MORGAN, 520 N.E. THIRD AVE., AMARILLO, TEX., TRAVELLING ALONG COASTAL ROADS AND ENCOUNTERING ONLY SCATTERED SMALL ARMS RESISTANCE, SUDDENLY FOUND THE GOING ROUGH AND HOT AS THEY COLLIDED WITH A LONG SERIES OF FORTIFIED PILLBOXES. MACHINEGUNS BLAZED AT THE AMERICANS FROM A PEAK JUST OFF THE PICTURESQUE SHORELINE.

AS PART OF THE COLUMN ADVANCED, MORE FIRE AND MORE CONCRETE STRONGPOINTS TO THE NORTH WERE ENCOUNTERED.

COUNTERING FIRE FROM MORTAR UNITS UNDER LTS. ABBOTT D. ABBOTT, 361 E. MAIN ST., NORTH ADAMS, MASS., LOUIS HAFENEISTER, 409 CLEVELAND ST., MENOSHA, WIS., AND JOHN M. SCRIVNER, 920 OSCEOLA ST., ST. WITH AN AIRBORNE TASK FORCE IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, AUG 16-(DELAYED) (AP)-AN HOUR AND A HALF BEFORE THE SEVENTH ARMY WAS DUE TO STRIKE THE COAST OF FRANCE WE JUMPED.

IT WAS A RELIEF, AFTER THREE HOURS OF SITTING IN TIGHT ROWS IN OUR C-47 BURDENED BY OUR 'CHUTES AND EQUIPMENT, TO SEE THE RED LIGHT GO ON NEAR THE DOOR.

WE STOOD UP, STUMBLING SOME BECAUSE THE PLANE LURCHED A GOOD DEAL, AND HOOKED OUR LIFE LINES TO THE CABLE. I WAS NO.7 IN THE 15 MEN TO JUMP.

THERE WAS NO MOON BUT IT WAS NOT A DARK NIGHT. PEERING OVER THE SHOULDERS OF THE MEN IN FRONT OF ME I SAW THE COASTLINE OF FRANCE SLIP PAST, THEN SOME MIST AND SOME BLACK HILL TOPS PROTRUDING, THEN THE GREEN LIGHT FLASHED AND THE DISPATCHER SHOUTED "GO!"

WE SHUFFLED FORWARD AND WENT OUT THE DOOR.

THERE WAS NO SENSE OF FALLING. A TERRIFIC JERK WHEN THE 'CHUTE OPENED THREE SECONDS LATER TORE MY TYPEWRITER FROM ITS BINDINGS UNDER MY EMERGENCY 'CHUTE AND SENT IT HURTLING DOWN BY ITSELF--BUT I WASN'T AWARE OF THAT UNTIL I HAD LANDED.

AUG 18 1944

AROUND ME I COULD SEE OTHER 'CHUTES DRIFTING DOWN TOWARD A WHITE BLANKET OF MIST. THE DRONE OF THE PLANES FADED AND I WAS SUDDENLY CONSCIOUS OF THE SOUND OF HUNDREDS OF CRICKETS BUZZING AWAY SHARPLY ON THE GROUND SOMEWHERE UNDER THAT MIST.

THE 'CHUTES BELOW ME SANK SILENTLY INTO THE MIST AND WITH LEGS TOGETHER AND KNEES SLIGHTLY BENT I PREPARED TO HIT THE GROUND. BUT I CAME OUT OF THE MIST AGAIN WITHOUT HITTING ANYTHING.

THE FIELD BELOW WAS A COMBINATION OF FRUIT TREES AND ROWS OF VINES BETWEEN. I HIT THE GROUND BETWEEN THE VINES, GENTLY TUMBLED AND LAY ON ONE SIDE FUMBLING TO GET OFF THE HARNESS.

SHOOTING STARTED UP A QUARTER OF A MILE AWAY, DIED DOWN AND OPENED UP AGAIN SPORADICALLY.

THE CRICKETS IN THE FRUIT TREES KEPT UP THEIR PERSISTENT SCRAPING. THE GRAPES WERE NOT QUITE RIPE BUT THEY TASTED GOOD.

THIS WAS FRANCE.

BY THE END OF THE FIRST DAY ONE REGIMENT ALONE HAD MORE THAN 750 PRISONERS. ONE BATTALION CHECKED IN FOUR HOURS AFTER H-HOUR WITH 300. THESE NAZIS WERE PRACTICALLY POP-EYED WHEN THEY SAW THE SMASH THROUGH THEIR SOUTH WALL.

"IT'S JUST LIKE ROUND-UP TIME IN TEXAS," RECKONED ONE OLD COWHAND, LT.JAMES SHAMBURGER, 915 WEST FIRST ST., FORT WORTH.

"SHAM" REACHED THIS PROFOUND CONCLUSION WHILE SITTING ON TOP OF A JEEP HERDING SEVEN PRISONERS TOWARD THE REAR.

HE AND CORPORAL LLOYD FREEMAN OF RISING STAR, TEX., PRIVATE NORWOOD WHITMORE, OF BRYCEVILLE, FLA., ANDREW EAST OF WOODLAWN, MD., AL KOHN, STARS AND STRIPES CORRESPONDENT FROM MIAMI BEACH, FLA., AND MYSELF WERE OUT TRYING TO FIND A BATTALION WHICH LANDED BY ITSELF AND HAD BEEN UNREPORTED FOR FOUR HOURS. FOR INSTANCE, CORP.JOE LEAP OF ELKTON, VA., AND PRIVATES CHARLES BURNS OF STERLING, VA., AND HOMER LONG OF REAMSTOWN, PA., WERE SITTING AGAINST A TREE TRUNK AT A REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS MUNCHING PLUMS. ONE NEARLY SWALLOWED HIS PITS WHEN 21 JERRIES STREAMED DOWN FROM A HILL THREE MILES BEHIND THE FRONT WITH THEIR HANDS IN THE AIR SHOUTING, "KAMERAD."

AFTER THEY HAD TURNED THEM OVER TO M.P.'S I ACCOMPANIED THE TRIO BACK UP THE HILL AND FOUND FIVE MORE HIDING IN A CAVE AND ANXIOUS TO CALL IT A DAY.

EVEN AN ARTILLERY BATTERY COMMANDED BY CAPT.THOMAS F.HAYES, 511 WEST WILLIAM ST., CHAMPAIGN, ILL., CHECKED IN WITH 14.

AS SOON AS THEY HAD PARKED THEIR GUNS A FRENCHMAN CAME OUT WAVING A WHITE FLAG. HE AND SEVERAL NEIGHBORS HAD ROUNDED THE JERRIES UP AND HERDED THEM INTO A PILLBOX.

A COMPANY COMMANDED BY CAPT.JAMES E.MCNEIL, 704 WEST 35TH ST., AUSTIN, TEX., PROBABLY HAD THE BIGGEST FIELD DAY. SEVEN HOURS AFTER H-HOUR HIS COMPANY HAD 190 PRISONERS, AT A LOSS OF JUST ONE MAN.

FRENCH FRONTIER, OUTSIDE GENEVAN, AUG. 17-(AP)-A DIMINISHED AND WEAKENED NAZI ARMY OF OCCUPATION LAUNCHED A DESPERATE EFFORT TODAY TO TRY AND REGAIN A FOOTHOLD IN EXUBERANTLY REVOLTING HAUTE SAVOIE AND LATE TONIGHT AT LEAST TWO SIZEABLE BATTLES WERE IN PROGRESS IN

30. 24— 18095

THE REGION OF ANNEMASSE.

THE BATTLE MARKED THE MOST IMPORTANT EFFORT THUS FAR BY PARTISAN TROOPS IN EASTERN FRANCE, AN EFFORT TO PREVENT NAZI REINFORCEMENTS FROM REACHING THE FRONTIER CITY OF ANNEMASSE WHERE GERMAN OFFICERS CAUTIOUSLY RE-ESTABLISHED A FRONTIER GUARD THIS AFTERNOON WHILE THIS WRITER LOOKED ON FROM THE ADJOINING NEUTRAL VILLAGE OF MOILLESULAZ.

SPORADIC MACHINE GUN FIRE COULD BE HEARD TONIGHT FROM ANNEMASSE. TWO WOUNDED GERMANS WERE BROUGHT ACROSS THE FRONTIER AND THEIR CAPTORS SAID OTHERS WERE COMING. THE GERMANS THERE WERE IN A DIFFICULT POSITION WITH FREE FRENCH PATROLLING THE SURROUNDING TERRITORY INCLUDING HILLS ABOVE THE TOWN.

FROM SAINT GINGOLPHE, FOR APPROXIMATELY 60 MILES WESTWARD ALONG THE LAKE OF GENEVA, THE PARTISANS HELD CONTROL. THEY HELD THE UPPER HAND ALSO FROM THE LAKE SOUTHWARD FOR A DISTANCE OF 50 TO 75 MILES.

THE GERMANS WERE AT ANNEMASSE, BELLEGARDE AND ANNECY.

THE TWO BATTLES WERE IN PROGRESS AROUND LA ROCHE, WHERE A NAZI CONVOY FROM ANNECY WAS TRYING TO BREAK THROUGH TO ANNEMASSE, AND AROUND BONNEVILLE WHERE THE MAQUI SOUGHT TO CONSOLIDATE ITS POSITIONS. LATE REPORTS WERE THAT THE FREE FRENCH HELD BONNEVILLE.

THE ENTIRE FRONTIER WAS UNDER FREE FRENCH CONTROL FOR A BRIEF TIME JUST AFTER NOON WHEN 39 GERMANS WERE CORNERED AT ST. GINGOLPHE AND SURRENDERED TO THE MAQUI. THE NAZI CAPTAIN WHO HAD TOLD HIS MEN THEY MUST FIGHT TO THE END BROKE INTO TEARS UPON SURRENDER.

THE GERMANS SHOWED UP AGAIN AT 3:25 THIS AFTERNOON, 25 OF THEM, AT THE CUSTOM STATION OF ANNEMASSE. CAREFULLY THEY DESCENDED FROM A TRUCK. THREE PATROLLED THE STREET; ALL CAREFULLY STUFFED THEIR POCKETS WITH GRENADES. THE TRUCK DEPARTED SOON AFTER WITH THREE ARMED GUARDS. THEY HAD GONE SCARCELY A BLOCK WHEN A HALF DOZEN SHARP AUTOMATIC PISTOL SHOTS WERE HEARD. BUT FROM WHERE AND WITH WHAT RESULTS COULD NOT BE DETERMINED. REFUGEES SAID SEVERAL HUNDRED GERMANS HELD MOMENTARY CONTROL OF THE CENTER OF ANNEMASSE FOR THEY HAD LITTLE CHANCE UNLESS REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVED.

A FRECHMAN AND HIS WIFE I MET IN A CAFE OUTSIDE ANNEMASSE GAVE THE STORY OF THE NAZI EFFORT TO SEND NEW TROOPS. A CARAVAN OF AROUND 800 HEAVILY ARMED GERMANS FOUGHT THEIR WAY OUT OF ANNECY AND HEADED NORTHWARD. THEY FOUGHT SUCCESSFULLY AT THE LITTLE TOWN OF LE PLOT AND GAINED CONTROL OF LA ROCHE WHICH THEY WERE DRIVING TO BREAK THOUGH THIS AFTERNOON.

THERE WAS BITTER FIGHTING ALSO AROUND BONNEVILLE BUT THERE GERMANS WERE SAID TO BE RETREATING. A DISPATCH OF REINFORCEMENTS WEAKENED ANNECY BUT NEW TROOPS WERE SAID TO BE EN ROUTE FROM AIX-LES-BAINS.

THE COMMANDING MAQUI CAPTAIN OF THE ANNEMASSE REGION, LUNCHING IN A NEUTRAL PUB AND WHO HAD JUST COME OVER THE LINE FOR AN HOUR OR SO, TOLD ME WITH SMILING CONFIDENCE HE WAS SURE HIS MEN COULD SUCCESSFULLY DO THEIR JOB.

ABOUT 700 GERMANS SEEKING TO ESCAPE SOUTHWARD FROM PORT L'ECLUSE, A SHORT DISTANCE OUTSIDE GENEVA, ROUNDED UP 500 WOMAN AND CHILDREN AND FORCED THEM TO MARCH AS A PROTECTING SHIELD. THEY WERE TRYING TO EVADE A UNIT FROM THE OLD SPANISH INTERNATIONAL BRIGADE INCLUDING FRENCHMEN, SPANIARDS, POLES, AND RUSSIANS. REACHING VALLERY EAST OF BELGRADE, THE GERMANS SHOT SIX CIVILIANS.

GERMAN DETACHMENTS RETREATING FROM RHONE SOUTHEAST OF BELGRADE FIRED THE VILLAGES OF CHEVRIER, VULBENS, CHENE, LAJOU, VIRY.

ROME, AUG. 17-(AP)-FLIGHT OFFICER ALBERT J.DERRINGER OF PITTSBURGH, PA., IS NEEDLED BY GERMAN PINPOINT MARKSMANSHIP.

AS HIS MARAUDER WAS APPROACHING ITS TARGET IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, THE BOMBARDIER GLANCED AT HIS CHART TO MAKE A LAST CHECK OF HIS PINPOINT OBJECTIVE. SUDDENLY A BURST OF FLAK ROCKED THE BOMBER. A FRAGMENT RIPPED THROUGH THE CHART, NEATLY CLIPPING AWAY THE PINPOINT.

DERRINGER, WHOSE PITTSBURGH ADDRESS IS 851 STANTON AVENUE,

MILLVALE, ADJUSTED HIS SIGHT AND PLANTED THE BOMBS IN THE TARGET AREA.

ROME, AUG 17-(AP)-ALLIED AIR FORCES AGAIN THREW THEIR SUPPORT TODAY BEHIND THE SEVENTH ARMY IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, WITH OPERATIONS INCLUDING THE DROPPING OF AMMUNITION TO AMERICAN PARACHUTE TROOPS WHO HAD SENT OUT AN EMERGENCY CALL.

U.S. HEAVY BOMBERS TURNED EASTWARD, BOMBING THE PLOESTI OIL CENTER IN ROMANIA FOR THE 17TH TIME, AND ATTACKING GERMAN AIRFIELDS AND THE YUGOSLAV RAIL CENTER OF NIS, 120 MILES SOUTH OF BELGRADE.

TWENTY ATTACK BOMBERS UNDER MAJ.GENE C.VANCE OF PUEBLO, COLO., AND CAPT.CHARLES V.GREFFET OF CHARLESTON, S.C., FLEW AMMUNITION TO THE PARACHUTE FORMATIONS WHICH HAD EXHAUSTED THEIR SUPPLIES, FINDING THE POSITIONS DESPITE CLOUDS AND HAZE.

REPORTS FROM SOUTHERN FRANCE INDICATED THE GERMANS HAD WITHDRAWN MOST OF THEIR ANTIAIRCRAFT GUNS FROM THE AREA.

GERMAN SOIL HAS BEEN TOUCHED UPON PREVIOUSLY IN THIS WAR, BUT IN NO DECISIVE FASHION. FRENCH TROOPS PENETRATED INTO GERMANY IN THE WARNDT FOREST AREA WEST OF FORBACH IN SEPTEMBER, 1939, BUT THAT WAS A NO-MAN'S-LAND BETWEEN THE MAGINOT AND SIEGFRIED LINES AND OF NO IMPORTANCE--AS LATER EVENTS TESTIFIED.

POLISH TROOPS ALSO FOUGHT BRIEFLY AND SKETCHILY ON EAST PRUSSIAN SOIL DURING THE PRELIMINARIES IN SEPTEMBER, 1939, WHEN THAT COUNTRY WAS CRUSHED. BUT THIS WAS THE FIRST TIME STRONG AND MODERNLY-EQUIPPED UNITS OF GREAT VERSATILITY AND COMBAT EXPERIENCE, RANGING FROM THE CRUCIBLE OF STALINGRAD TO THE FATEFUL MOMENTS JUST AHEAD, HAVE REACHED THE "SACRED SOIL" OF GERMANY. AUG 18 1944

CHERNIAKHOVSKY'S TANK-TIPPED SPEARHEADS WERE FOLLOWING THE ROUTE TAKEN 30 YEARS AGO IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR BY GEN. PAVEL K. RENNENKAMPF, CZARIST LEADER WHOSE TROOPS SHOCKED ALL OF GERMANY BY AN INVASION OF EAST PRUSSIA IN AUGUST, 1914.

RENNENKAMPF'S TROOPS AND ANOTHER ARMY UNDER GEN. ALEXANDER SAMSONOV, THE LATTER STRIKING UPWARD FROM POLAND IN THE MASURIAN LAKES AREA, LATER WERE TO COME TO GRIEF, PARTICULARLY IN THE HISTORIC BATTLE NEAR TANNENBERG. AUG 18 1944

BUT THE REASONS LEADING TO THE DEFEAT OF THE CZARIST ARMIES ARE NOT COMPARABLE TO THE PRESENT SITUATION. SAMSONOV AND RENNENKAMPF WERE TORN BY PERSONAL JEALOUSIES, COMMUNICATIONS WERE POOR, AND GERMAN ARMIES IN THAT DAY WERE AT THE CREST OF THEIR POWER. NO RESPONSIBLE MILITARY ANALYST IN THESE DAYS CAN DETECT IN THE RED ARMY TROOPS THE FLAWS THAT RENT THE CZARIST FORCES OF THAT DISTANT DAY.

RUSSIAN TROOPS ADMITTEDLY ARE AT THE HEIGHT OF THEIR POWER--GERMAN MILITARY ANALYSTS IN THEIR RADIO BROADCASTS ADMITTING THIS. GERMANY, HER STRENGTH EBBING BY ATTACKS ON AT LEAST FOUR STRONG LAND FRONTS--EAST, WEST, AND SOUTH IN ITALY AND FRANCE--IS IN A PRECARIOUS POSITION.

THE INTENSITY OF THE FIGHTING WAS INDICATED BY MOSCOW'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT 200 GERMAN TANKS HAD BEEN WRECKED WEDNESDAY, A FIGURE WELL ABOVE THE RECENT DAILY AVERAGE.

IN ADDITION TO CHERNIAKHOVSKY'S DRIVE, EAST PRUSSIA ALSO WAS ENDANGERED BY GEN. IVAN BAGRAMIAN'S FIRST BALTIC ARMY. THE COMMUNIQUE SAID HIS TROOPS FOUGHT STUBBORN ENGAGEMENTS AGAINST "LARGE FORCES OF ENEMY INFANTRY AND TANKS WHICH HAVE GONE OVER TO THE OFFENSIVE" IN THE AREA NORTHWEST, WEST AND SOUTHWEST OF SIAULIAI IN NORTHERN LITHUANIA.

RUSSIAN TROOPS IN THIS SECTOR LAST WERE REPORTED WITHIN 62 MILES NORTHEAST OF TILSIT, EAST PRUSSIA, AND ABOUT THE SAME DISTANCE EAST OF THE PROVINCE'S BALTIC PORT OF MEMEL.

THE GERMAN ATTACK THERE, WHICH MOSCOW SAID COST THE ENEMY HEAVILY IN MEN AND EQUIPMENT, MIGHT BE AN ATTEMPT BY THE GERMANS TO BREAK THE BROAD CORRIDOR WHICH BAGRAMIAN'S TROOPS DROVE NORTHWARD THROUGH LATVIA TO THE BALTIC, THUS SEALING OFF TWO GERMAN BALTIC ARMIES.

IN ESTONIA, WHERE GEN. IVAN MASLENNIKOV'S THIRD BALTIC ARMY WAS PRESSING IN FROM THE EAST IN AN EFFORT TO ANNIHILATE THE TRAPPED GERMANS, THE RUSSIANS DROVE TO WITHIN 16 MILES SOUTHEAST OF TARTU WITH THE CAPTURE OF HIMMASTE, AND ALSO REACHED A POINT ONLY 25 MILES SOUTH OF THAT MIDLAND ESTONIAN CITY WITH THE CAPTURE OF KANEPI.

VOOPSU, 16 MILES EAST OF HIMMASTE ON THE EDGE OF THE CHANNEL CONNECTING LAKES PSKOV AND PEIPUS, AND 18 MILES NORTH OF PETSERI, ALSO WAS TAKEN, THE BULLETIN SAID.

MURPHY AND BUCEK ARE MEMBERS OF A CRACK ENGINEERING UNIT OF THE VETERAN FOURTH DIVISION. PETERS IS THE CORPSMAN ATTACHED TO THE OUTFIT. ALL SAW 25 DAYS OF CONSTANT FRONT LINE DUTY FURING THE BATTLE AGAINST JAPS ON BLOODY SAIPAN.

THEY WERE WITH THE ENGINEERS ON THE FINAL DAY OF FIERCE FIGHTING ALONG THE NORTHERN BEACHES ON THE ISLAND, MURPHY " AND BUCEK TOOK PART IN BLASTING JAP HELD CAVES WITH HIGH EXPLOSIVE CHARGES. THEY HAD SEALED A SCORE OF CAVES WHEN THEY CAME TO ONE IN THE SIDE OF A SHEER CLIFF.

THE MOUTH OF THE CAVE WAS APPROXIMATELY 30 FEET FROM THE FOOT OF THE CLIFF, BUT ONLY ABOUT 10 FEET FROM THE TOP. THE MARINE ENGINEERS COULD FIND NO WAY TO BLAST THE CAVE FROM THE FOOT OF THE CLIFF, PARTICULARLY IN THE FACE OF HEAVY ENEMY SNIPER FIRE.

MURPHY AND BUCEK THEN WORKED THEIR WAY TO THE TOP OF THE CLIFF AFTER MAKING A WIDE DETOUR DURING WHICH THEY FREQUENTLY WERE TARGETS OF SNIPERS.

AUG 18 1944

EN ROUTE, THEY REACHED ON VANTAGE POINT WHERE THEY WERE ABOVE A JAP SNIPER SIGHTING IN ON A MARINE. MURPHY FINISHED HIM OFF WITH ONE SHOT. THE SNIPER, IT DEVELOPED LATER, HAD AN AMERICAN RIFLE.

ONCE ON TOP OF THE CLIFF, BUCEK SAID; "HOLD ME, MURPHY." WITH THAT HE CRAWLED FORWARD TO THE EDGE OF THE CLOFF, AND STARTED OVER IT, WITH MURPHY HOLDING HIS FEET.

"I DIDN'T THINK HE WAS GOING TO STOP," MURPHYSIAD.

BUCEK CRAWLED AHEAD UNTIL HE WAS DANGLING HEAD DOWNWARD OVER THE CLIFF. AT THIS POINT, PETER, THE CORPSMAN, CAME ALONG AND HELPED MURPHY HOLD BUCEK, FIGURING THAT IT WOULD BE BETTER TO PREVENT A CASUALTY THAN TO TREAT ONE LATER.

HANGING DOWNWARD, BUCEK TOSSED SEVERAL GRENADES INTO THE JAP CAVE, AND PUT A FINISHING TOUCH TO IT WITH A HEAVY CHARGE OF EXPLOSIVE.

BUCEK, WHEN HE WAS PULLED BACK TO SAFETY OVER THE LEDGE REMARKED: "I FELT LIKE THE MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE."

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS,PEARL HARBOR,AUG 17 (AP)-
A WAR OF-TRIP-HAMMER BLOWS FROM MIGHTY AMERICAN FORCES BASED IN THE STRATEGIC MARIANAS ISLANDS IS THE OUTLOOK FOR JAPAN.
IT WILL BE A NON-STOP AFFAIR, SAYS ADM.CHESTER W.NIMITZ, AND THE THRUSTS IN VARIOUS DIRECTIONS WILL BE IMPELLED BY "POWERHOUSE TACTICS."
THE ADMIRAL, WHO IS SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE PACIFIC OCEAN AREAS AS WELL AS COMMANDER OF THE PACIFIC FLEET, MADE THESE OBSERVATIONS AT GUAM AUGUST 11, TWO DAYS AFTER THE END OF ORGANIZED JAPANESE RESISTANCE ON THE RECONQUERED AMERICAN INSULAR POSSESSION.
A DISPATCH FROM AP WAR CORRESPONDENT AL DOPKING, AT GUAM, DELAYED FOR SECURITY REASONS, DISCLOSED TODAY THAT NIMITZ MADE HIS STATEMENTS AT A PRESS CONFERENCE DURING AN OPEN DISCUSSION OF THE WAR IN THE PACIFIC.

THE POWERFUL FIFTH FLEET, UNDER ADM.RAYMOND A.SPRUANCE, AND THE THIRD FLEET, LED BY ADM.WILLIAM F.HALSEY, ARE READY, NIMITZ SAID, TO WAGE THE KIND OF WAR HE HAS IN MIND. WHILE ONE STRIKES, THE OTHER WILL PLAN A NEW OPERATION. SAIPAN, TINIAN AND GUAM IN THE MARIANAS WILL SUPPLY THE BASES "TO MOVE IN VARIOUS DIRECTIONS."

"WE BELIEVE IN POWERHOUSE TACTICS," NIMITZ TOLD CORRESPONDENTS. "WE CARRY ALL WE HAVE. WE WANT WHAT WE UNDERTAKE TO GO THROUGH. WE HAVE NOT REACHED THE STAGE WHERE WE CAN HOLD ANYTHING BACK."

FORESEEING RAPID TRANSFER OF REINFORCEMENTS FROM THE EUROPEAN THEATER BECAUSE OF THE FAVORABLE SITUATION THERE, NIMITZ NEVERTHELESS MADE IT CLEAR THERE WOULD BE NO PERIOD OF WAITING IN THE PACIFIC. HE SAID:

"WE CANNOT SIT AND WAIT. WE NEVER HAVE. X X X WE ARE INTERESTED IN GETTING THIS WAR WON QUICKLY. THE WAY TO BEAT THE JAP IS TO KEEP ON HIS TAIL."

AS IF TO ILLUSTRATE THOSE WORDS, ALLIED WARPLANES WERE KEEPING ON JAPAN'S "TAIL" THROUGHOUT THE VAST PACIFIC WAR THEATER. ACTIVE ENEMY BASES, SUCH AS HALMAHERA, LAST GUARDIAN TO THE SOUTHERN APPROACH TO THE PHILIPPINES, AS WELL AS BYPASSED ENEMY POSITIONS, WERE BEING HAMMERED RELENTLESSLY.

LIBERATORS OF THE SEVENTH ARMY AIR FORCE BOMBED THE SEAPLANE BASE AND ADJACENT INSTALLATIONS ON CHICHI ISLAND IN THE BONINS TUESDAY, NIMITZ ANNOUNCED TODAY. THEY MET MODERATE TO INTENSE ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE IN THIS SECOND STRIKE WITHIN FIVE DAYS ON CHICHI, 630 MILES BELOW TOKYO.

ELEVENTH ARMY LIBERATORS MADE A PREDAWN ATTACK SUNDAY ON PARAMUSHIRO IN THE KURILES, EXTENDING THE RAIDS ON THOSE NORTHERN JAPANESE ISLANDS THROUGH THE FOURTH CONSECUTIVE DAY.

MAUG ISLAND, IN THE NORTHERN MARIANAS GROUP SOUTH OF THE BONINS, GOT ITS FIRST RAID OF THE WAR TUESDAY. PAGAN, FARTHER SOUTH IN THE MARIANAS, WAS SMACKED THE SAME DAY. MAUG HAS A PROTECTED HARBOR.

OTHER AERIAL STRIKES WERE MADE TUESDAY ON NAURU ISLAND AND MALOELAP ATOLL IN THE MARSHALLS.

MEXICO CITY,AUG 17 (AP)-A CONFERENCE OF SILVER PRODUCERS AND CONSUMERS OF THE UNITED STATES, MEXICO AND OTHER NATIONS TO DISCUSS STABILIZATION OF SILVER PRICES WAS PROPOSED TODAY BY SECRETAR OF FINANCE EDUARDO SUAREZ.

UNDER THE PLAN, DISCLOSED IN AN INTERVIEW PUBLISHED BY MEXICAN NEWSPAPERS, MODIFICATION OF THE UNITED STATES SILVER PURCHASING LAW WOULD BE ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL POINTS OF DISCUSSION.

IF THE UNITED STATES SILVER STOCKS "WERE USED TO REGULATE COMMERC IN THE METAL, THE UNITED STATES AS WELL AS OTHER NATIONS THAT USE SILVER IN THEIR TRANSACTIONS AND SAVINGS WOULD BENEFIT," SUAREZ IS QUOTED AS SAYING.

THE FINANCE MINISTER ADDED THAT IF THE UNITED STATES COULD SELL AS WELL AS PURCHASE SILVER, OPPOSITION TO THE PURCHASING LAW IN SOME U.S.FINANCIAL CENTERS WOULD DISAPPEAR.

HE SAID THAT IN MANY COUNTRIES, AS FOR EXAMPLE CHINA, WHERE THE POPULACE IS ACCUSTOMED TO SILVER COINS, THE WHITE METAL WILL BE NEEDED IN DEALING WITH POST-WAR INFLATION.

TORONTO, AUG. 17-(AP)-THE SUPREME COUNCIL OF THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS AT THE FINAL SESSION OF THEIR INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION TODAY ADOPTED A RESOLUTION CONCERNING THE LIBERTY AND WELFARE OF THE POLISH PEOPLES AND MAKING A PLEA FOR THAT NATION'S POST-WAR INDEPENDENCE.

NOTING "THERE ARE EFFORTS BEING MADE TO AGAIN PARTITION POLAND," THE RESOLUTION SAID: "IT IS UNTHINKABLE THAT THE THE POLISH PEOPLE WHO STRUCK THE FIRST BLOWS OF THIS WAR AGAINST TYRANNY SHOULD FAIL TO GAIN BY THEIR COURAGE AND SUFFERING THE FULL LIBERTY AND FREEDOM WHICH THEY CHERISH SO PASSIONATELY AND IN ACCORD WITH ALL THE DEMOCRATIC PEOPLE OF THE WORLD."

WASHINGTON,AUG.17-(AP)-THE BRITISH BELIEVE THEY HAVE NEARLY DOUBLED THE EFFICIENCY OF FIGHTER PLANES AS THE RESULT OF A NEW GYROSCOPIC GUNSIGHT WHICH CORRECTS FOR DEFLECTION AND SPEED BY THE TWIST OF A THROTTLE HANDLE.

THE AIR MINISTRY, ANNOUNCING THE NEW SIGHT IN LONDON LAST NIGHT, SAID IT IS "ALMOST UNCANNY IN ITS ACCURACY."

FIRST DETAILS MADE AVAILABLE HERE TODAY BY THE BRITISH INFORMATION SERVICES DESCRIBE THE DEVICE AS HAVING A REFLECTOR SCREEN THROUGH WHICH THE FIGHTER PILOT OBSERVES HIS ENEMY. REFLECTED ON THE GLASS SCREEN ARE A CENTER, OR AIMING, DOT SURROUNDED BY SIX DIAMONDS ARRANGED IN A CIRCLE WHICH EXPANDS AND CONTRACTS AS THE PILOT INCREASES OR DECREASES HIS RANGE. THE PILOT FEEDS INTO THE SIGHT A SETTING FOR THE WINGSPAN OF THE ENEMY PLANE.

"COMBAT RESULTS SHOW THAT THE EFFICIENCY OF THE FIGHTER AIRCRAFT IN RESPECT OF KILLS TO COMBATS HAS BEEN NEARLY DOUBLED BY THE INTRO-DUCTION OF THIS SIGHT," THE BRITISH INFORMATION SERVICES SAID, "AND IT MAY, THEREFORE, BE SAID THAT FIGHTERS ARE NOW DESTROYING NEARLY NICE THE NUMBER OF LUFTWAFFE AIRCRAFT THAT THEY WERE SIX MONTHS AGO."

THE SIGHT WAS DESCRIBED AS "NOTABLE FOR ITS SIMPLICITY IN USE DESPITE THE COMPLEXITY OF ITS INTERNAL CONSTRUCTION." THE STATEMENT SAID FIGHTER PILOTS ARE ABLE TO OPEN FIRE AT MORE THAN 400 YARDS RANGE AT SPEEDS OF OVER 400 MILES AN HOUR.

(ADVANCE)..WASHINGTON,AUG.17-(AP)-TEXT OF STATE DEPARTMENT STATEMENT ON HUNGARIAN JEWS. (ABOUT 180)

APR 18 1944

"THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS HAS COMMUNICATED TO THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM AND THE UNITED STATES AN OFFER OF THE HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT REGARDING THE EMIGRATION AND TREATMENT OF JEWS. BECAUSE OF THE DESPERATE PLIGHT OF THE JEWS IN HUNGARY AND THE OVERWHELMING HUMANITARIAN CONSIDERATIONS INVOLVED THE TWO GOVERNMENTS ARE INFORMING THE GOVERNMENT OF HUNGARY THROUGH THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS, THAT DESPITE THE HEAVY DIFFICULTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES INVOLVED, THEY HAVE ACCEPTED THE OFFER OF THE HUNGARIAN GOVARNMENT FOR THE RELEASE OF JEWS AND WILL MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE CARE OF SUCH JEWS LEAVING HUNGARY WHO REACH NEUTRAL OR UNITED NATIONS TERRITORY, AND ALSO THAT THEY WILL FIND TEMPORARY HAVEN OF REFUGE WHERE SUCH PEOPLE MAY LIVE IN SAFETY. NOTIFICATION OF THESE ASSURANCES IS BEING GIVEN TO THE GOVERNMENTS OF NEUTRAL COUNTRIES WHO ARE BEING REQUESTED TO PERMIT THE ENTRY OF JEWS WHO REACH THEIR FRONTIERS FROM HUNGARY. THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM AND THE UNITED STATES EMPHASIZED THAT, IN ACCEPTING THE OFFER WHICH HAS BEEN MADE, THEY DO NOT IN ANY WAY CONDONE THE ACTION OF THE HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT IN FORCING THE EMIGRATION OF JEWS AS AN ALTERNATIVE TO PERSECUTION AND DEATH."

ALLIES DRIVING ROUTED GERMANS TO SEINE; BERLIN HINTS NAZIS READY TO QUIT FRANCE

Driven Toward Seine With Remnants of 7th

Retreat on Paris Blocked By Patton—Eisenhower Calls Urgent Conference of Commanders—Dutch, Belgians Fighting With Allies—Airmen Deluge Barges on Seine.

By James M. Long

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Saturday, Aug. 19—(AP)—The bulk of the German 15th Army guarding the North French rocket coast has been thrown into an eleventh hour attempt to avert a Normandy debacle and has gone down to a defeat that may spell an Allied victory in the battle for France, it was disclosed officially last night.

Mighty Allied forces were driving the beaten 15th and Seventh armies toward the all but bridgeless Seine, and Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's tanks smashing to the vicinity of Paris—only 12 miles away by German accounts—had blocked off their retreat toward the French capital.

NIGHT

Eisenhower Calls Conference

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower summoned his field commanders to an urgent conference which soon may be reflected in new and overwhelming blows to break the German grip on the whole of France.

The surging lines were developing a great envelopment movement west of Paris, where a senior British officer disclosed the Germans had rashly committed roughly half their crack 15th Army.

This was the first intimation that Field Marshal Gen. Guenther Von Kluge had brought across the Seine important elements of his Army guarding the channel coast and the rocket roosts to try to extricate the already battered Seventh from the pitfalls of Normandy.

Dutch and Belgians in Fight

Americans, British, Canadians, Poles, Dutch and Belgians—the last two disclosed for the first time to be in action—were in hot pursuit of the estimated 40,000 to 100,000 enemy troops who had squeezed from the Normandy pocket with the bulk of their tanks and were heading toward Rouen.

The staff officer declared their offensive power was spent, that from here on these German forces were capable only of rearguard action, and that in winning the battle of Normandy the Allies will have won the battle of France.

Both the Seventh and 15th—the only striking force the Germans had along the Atlantic wall—were estimated to have had up to 25 divisions at D-day.

Half of the 15th Army, it is estimated, was thrown into the lost battle of Normandy in the last two weeks and has been badly mauled. Replacements brought in to guard the Channel are believed to be low grade and spread all the way through the Low Countries.

400,000 Germans Out of Action

(The United Nations radio at Algiers said 400,000 Germans had been put out of action in northern France and 60,000 more were surrounded in the ports of Brittany.)

The hesitant German command, not knowing where Allied blows were coming from, sent these important elements of the 15th into the cauldron of battle "in pieces and too late," the British officer said.

The German command was forced to this hard decision, he asserted, by Patton's drive to the Orleans gap south of Paris, through which the Germans were reinforcing their Normandy positions.

Supreme Headquarters, lapsing into silence to mask possible new lightning blows, found occasion to announce officially that it was "unable to confirm" earlier reports that American forces were near Versailles, seven miles outside Paris.

It did report, however, that American forces had widened their bridgehead over the Eure river both northeast and southeast of Dreux, only 20 miles from the Seine, a drive which apparently prompted the Germans to check their rush toward Paris and veer north toward Rouen.

Supreme Headquarters said the Falaise-Argentan gap now had been narrowed to two miles—a frontline broadcast said it had snapped shut entirely around Trun, southeast of Falaise—and that Allied advances from the north threat to split up what remained of the pocket into three parts.

Already those that could get through the gap had to straggle out southeast from Argentan, then move northeast toward the Seine, and before them was a position fraught with peril.

All But One Bridge Blasted

The sea was on the north, American armored might was on the south, the British and Canadians with their Allies were plunging in from the west, and the Seine, with all but one bridge blaster, was ahead.

The Germans were backing into a "Dunkerque" of their own at the Seine and, like the British in those black days of 1940, were summoning a motley fleet to try to get their forces away to fight again.

But it was difficult to see how the Germans could get much of their armor, on which they must rely for the show-down battle for France, across the river, which around Rouen is tidal, wide and deep.

Airmen Do Great Work

Allied air might was loose under fair skies, and at least 23 of the 500 or more barges waiting to ferry the Germans across were destroyed within 24 hours along with 33 armored and 612 other vehicles trying to get them there.

Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball declared Patton's forces, blocking off this harried army on the south, were "driving forward on the last lap toward Paris" from Chartres and were "rapidly shaping a wall of steel" on the outer approaches from Orleans to Dreux.

"Following the occupation of Chartres," he said, "our drive slackened somewhat to consolidate and let supplies catch up with forces whose spectacular gains made Hitler's blitzkrieg look like horse cavalry."

American patrols ranged through the vicinity of Paris, where aerial reconnaissance had disclosed forces of German armor deployed west and northweast of Chartres, he reported.

Germans Show Fight In Air

The long-dormant German air force came to life and attempted to strike with its old fury against this menace around Dreux, and 50 enemy fighters were knocked down.

(German broadcasts, writing off forces left in the Normandy pocket, said a war of movement had begun before Paris, with Americans 12 miles away at one unspecified point, and with tanks attacking Rambouillet, 23 miles west of the capital and Etampes, 28 miles south.)

Once more Supreme Headquarters covered its movements with a blanket of secrecy, the usual signal that armor is loose and traveling fast again, but the capture of Authon, only 30 miles south of Paris, was confirmed.

To the west of this new enveloping movement, the Argentan-Falaise neck of the Normandy trap was drawn shut, according to one beachhead broadcast, and Allied artillery was shelling remnants left there while attacking forces drew back out of the line of fire.

All St. Malo in Allied Hands

In Brittany the citadel of St. Malo on the north coast surrendered with its remaining garrison of 560 and its commander, Col Andreas Aulock, who had declared he would fight to the death.

In the vicinity of Orleans the Americans met only the weakest resistance, suggesting that the great break-through had caught Field Marshal Gen Guenther Von Kluge with almost no fighting force in the great region of central France.

While the American forces were lashing out to the north and east, they also were looking after their southern flank and it was announced that they have captured Vendome, 43 miles southeast of Le Mans.

The junction of Canadians from the north with Americans from the south was reported at Trun, 10 miles southeast of Falaise.

But already the pocket had dwindled to such insignificance that great forces of British and Canadian troops were released and were driving straight east after the enemy, hurdling one river barrier after another. At one point they were no more than 55 miles from Rouen.

The British, pouring across the tidal Dives river, lashed out four to six miles east of fallen Troarn, seven miles east of Caen, in a drive along the coast toward the mouth of the Seine. Such towns as Bassenville, Varaville, St. Julien-Le Faucon, and Ecots fell in quick succession.

Poles Seize Les Champeaux

Farther south, and in the vanguard of the eastward push were the Poles, who struck out 15 miles east of Falaise and seized Les Champeaux, about 55 miles southwest of Rouen.

Between the British and the Poles, other Allied forces swept up Mezidon, 14 miles southeast of Caen, and were spurred ahead by the spirited words of Lt. Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander of the First Canadian army, to deliver a knockout blow to the enemy.

"The advance across the Dives has shaken him," Crerar declared. "We must now fully exploit this decisive situation. The enemy must be allowed no respite . . . We now have him very groggy."

Behind these forces other Polish units closed to Chambois, six miles northeast of Argentan, and effectively narrowed the escape gap from the Normandy trap.

(The Germans said American armor of the Third army had swung north to Gace and Laigle, astride the main road east from Argentan to Dreux, which if true would sever all remaining highways out of the pocket.)

Vanguard of Third Army Reported to Be Only Twelve Miles Away From City.

GALLAGHER

London, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's tanks thundered into the immediate environs of Paris today in what appeared to be a new galloping roundup of German forces retreating toward Rouen, on the Seine.

"American armored patrols are operating in the vicinity of Paris," said a correspondent with Gen. Patton's forces, and the German radio declared that the fiery general's columns were waging a war of movement within twelve miles of the French capital.

The Paris radio had been off the air twenty-four hours, a possible indication that the Germans either were destroying communications facilities in Paris, or that the situation was so chaotic that regular radio channels were unable to operate. The Americans were within sight of the Eiffel Tower, and Parisians continued to hear the roar from the gunfire which would spell their liberation from four years of Nazi rule.

Northward Swing.

Berlin said that other strong American formations suddenly had swung north in a drive aimed at encircling escaped remnants of the German Seventh Army, south of the Seine. The Germans were retreating in the direction of Rouen—the city where Joan of Arc was tried and burned. Rouen is on the Seine, seventy-five miles northwest of Paris.

By Berlin account, the American spearheads of the northward swing were at Gace and Laigle, fourteen and twenty-nine miles east of Argentan. It was announced from the Allied side that a bridgehead had been established over the Eure River at Dreux.

These represented barbs fifty to twenty miles south of the Seine which might be stabbed into the side of German forces reported jamming the roads in flight from the Falaise pocket, now rapidly dwindling. With but one good bridge available for flight over the Seine, the shift of the German retreat toward Rouen was taken to mean that their escape route to Paris already had been closed, and that the Seventh Army was unable to defend Paris.

Along with the reported northward turn of Gen. Patton's forces, the whole Allied line in the Caen area, to the west, began moving to the northeast, toward Le Havre and the mouth of the Seine, thirty-five miles away. From there a stab might be made toward the rocket-bomb coast.

Canadians virtually sawed off the Falaise pocket by stabbing to within two miles of Chambois, seven miles northeast of Argentan and nine miles west of Gace. These attacks by British, Canadians, Poles, Belgians and Dutch had the effect of lengthening the funnel through which the Germans were attempting to escape.

Air Forces Lash Out.

Lifting clouds allowed air forces to strike at the Germans at will as they tried to cross the Seine and they smashed at barges massed for a small-scale "Dunkerque" across the river. British troops advanced four to six miles beyond Troarn, along the Norman coast toward Le Havre, taking Varaville, four miles beyond the Orne, and two miles from the coast, and two other villages, St. Julien-le-Faucon and Ecots.

Poles, advancing six miles northeast out of Trun, captured Les Champeaux, while the Canadians pushing southeast out of Trun approached Chambois. Nazi Black Guards were in the van of the flight, ahead of them.

In the bottom of the pocket, meanwhile, American and British troops rapidly closed out the gap, crossing the Rouvre River against only slight resistance. Gen. Patton's lightning armored smashes appeared to have the Germans in a state of complete disorganization around Paris, with Berlin hourly reporting clashes in different directions from the capital, ranging from twelve to twenty-two miles outside the city.

German Army Groggy.

One German report said that the Americans had reached Etampes, thirty miles south of the center of Paris, on the road from Orleans. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters maintained almost complete silence, announcing only the capture of Authon, twenty-two miles southwest of Paris and nine miles west of Etampes.

The German Seventh Army was estimated to have been reduced to between 40,000 and 100,000 men and was declared to be very groggy from the attacks on all sides.

A new trap is closing and "the circle is being completed," a British staff officer said.

Lieut. Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander of the Canadian First Army, declared in a message to his troops on their successful jabs against the enemy that "we shall shortly knock him out."

Authon Captured

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's supreme headquarters maintained almost complete silence on the dazzling thrusts of General Patton in the Paris vicinity, and announced only the capture of Authon, 21 miles due east of Chartres, 22 miles southwest of Paris and nine miles west of Etampes. St. Calaise, bypassed in the rush to Chartres, also was mopped up.

Associated Press War Correspondent Edward D. Ball said the tanks were grinding along the "last lap toward Paris" in a broad 70-mile arc from Dreux on the west to Orleans on the south.

The only resistance he reported was from a few Germans still intrenched in a cemetery just outside Chartres, and some German armor which had been discovered between Paris and Chartres.

German Accounts

The Germans, more specific on exact locations, said the Americans were driving through St. Arnoult, 23 miles southwest of Paris and 17 miles from Versailles, western suburb of Paris, on a secondary road from Chartres.

They also said American armor had reached Rambouillet, 15 miles southwest of Versailles, on the main highway from Chartres.

DNB, German official news agency, said this was Patton's main thrust and that it had led to a series of heavy battles. The rapidity of Patton's movements, as reported by the Germans themselves, however, appeared to belie their assertions that important resistance was being offered.

Riveting Attacks

The Berlin news agency Transocean declared that German "formations which were extricated from the Argentan-Falaise bag are obviously to be riveted by new American attacks from the south at Laigle and Gace. American attacks at Laigle so far have broken down."

This indicated a Nazi fear that Patton again was feinting at Paris under a cloak of official silence, while actually intending a lightning drive northward to the Seine to form a second pocket as he did at Argentan last week.

Gace is 14 miles east of Argentan and 50 miles south of the Seine. Laigle is 29 miles east of Argentan and 40 miles south of the Seine. Thirty-five miles farther east the Americans were known to be at Dreux, only 20 miles south of the Seine.

Three Spearheads

Thus, the Allies seemed to have three spearheads in series pointed northward in the area west of Paris and east of Argentan which might chop off the German line of retreat from the Falaise area.

Dispatches from the British-Canadian sectors told of sweeping eastward advances, ranging up to 10 miles.

The entire Allied flank appeared in motion along the Normandy coast toward Le Havre, at the mouth of the Seine.

APR 4 1944

Nazis Mass Barges

The effect was to lengthen the neck of the pocket from which the Germans are withdrawing.

Front line reports said the Germans abandoned their efforts to escape due eastward out of the Falaise bag this morning and wheeled northeastward toward the Seine, but a great fleet of Allied bombers and fighters streaked across the Channel early today toward the river, where the Germans were said to have massed a fleet of hundreds of barges for a "Dunkirk" crossing.

Sixteen bridges spanning the Risle river west of the Seine, across which the Germans must withdraw, were hammered yesterday in an effort to plug the line of retreat.

Bulk Of Armor Out

A Canadian officer said there were signs the Germans had been able to get "a fair amount of stuff" through the gap and that all roads were jammed with German traffic.

But, he said, "there still is a sizable packet inside with the bag just about closed. We should seal it off today.

But Field Marshal General Guenther von Kluge apparently had extricated the bulk of his armor.

German broadcasts today declared Nazi counterattacks had prevented the narrowing of the Falaise escape neck and resulted in the capture of several towns.

Street Battles Reported

They said fighting for Chartres still was going on and that bitter street battles were taking place at Orleans.

Lorient and St. Nazaire, besieged U-boat bases in Brittany, were heavily bombed by Allied planes, Berlin said.

Toward Paris, the Americans easily were within sight of the Eiffel tower.

In the eastern surge the Allied forces captured Bures, one and one half miles northeast of Troarn, and plunged across the Dives river occupying Bassenville, three miles from Troarn and five from the coast.

Mezidon Captured

Other towns captured in this drive on the heels of fleeing remnants of the German Seventh Army included Mezidon and St. Pierre-sur-Dives, on the Dives river, 14 and 18 miles southeast of Caen. Above Mezidon the Allied troops reached the Dives north to beyond Troarn. A bridgehead was established over the river La Vie, two and a half miles from the Dives.

American, British and Canadian forces steadily reduced the Falaise pocket. While patrols had closed the escape hatch armored columns striking south reached the vicinity of Chambois, just north of American forces at Argentan.

British infantry battered through stubbornly defended German hedgehog positions and captured a three-mile-long spur of high ground southwest of Falaise. Canadian troops were cleaning up the last enemy snipers in Falaise itself.

Tommies Take Athis

At the western end of the Normandy bulge British Tommies captured Athis, three miles southsoutheast of Conde-sur-Noireau, after a mile thrust across deep wooded terrain. Other Second Army forces swept across the river Rouevre, east of Du Rouchen, and advanced a mile beyond the river.

Canadians and Poles captured Trun, ten miles southeast of Falaise, and then moved on toward Chambois. Americans and British advancing along the bottom of the Normandy pocket encountered only light German rearguard action and the cleanup appeared near at hand. The pocket now is so small that air force operations are strictly limited because of the danger of bombing Allied troops.

The taking of Trun was described by a senior Canadian officer as completing the "plugging of our portion of the escape gap, and we are driving the cork in tighter and tighter."

Withdrawal Urged

(London newspapers printed German frontier reports saying Hitler's highest military advisers had urged him to withdraw German troops from all of France in the next four weeks or risk destruction of most of his forces.)

While it was apparent that General Eisenhower could not overlook a chance to capture Paris quickly, it also was apparent that the Allies are not going to commit the same error as Hitler did when he concentrated on the French capita instead of sticking strictly to the military opportunity of turning west on Channel ports for a quick invasion of England.

Vendome Overrun

Among towns overrun as Patton's army surged southward was Vendome, 43 miles southeast of Le Mans.

(Reuter reported that the German communique today said that German troops in the salient west of the Orne have been withdrawn across the river.)

The American advances placed nearly a dozen key airfields in France within Allied possession.

The total number of prisoners taken by the First Army alone reached 81,156 this morning, with the addition of 312 counted up to midnight.

In Brittany, the long siege of St. Malo ended when the rock-bound Citadel finally sent up the white flag and 560 prisoners were taken. Brittany now is cleared of Germans except for garrisons in Brest, Lorient and St. Nazaire.

Instructions To Paris

Giving instructions to Patriots within Paris, a supreme command spokesman said over the American Broadcasting Station in Europe (ABSIE) that "the day is not far off when you will have to rise and chase out the enemy and his accomplices."

"You can already hear the guns and soon you will hear the rumble of the tanks," the spokesman added.

Headquarters announced last night that the Fourth and Sixth Armored divisions and the Eighth Motorized Division are among the American forces in France.

Great Air Fleets Hit Fleeing Nazis

Death and Destruction Rained Upon German Troops, Airfields and Communications—35 Enemy Fighters Blasted From Skies.

By Austin Bealmear

APR 19 1944

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 19—(AP)—Great fleets of Allied planes blasted air fields in Northern France yesterday, rained death and destruction on the retreating Germans, shot from the skies 35 enemy fighters of a temporarily resurgent German Air Force and were out again early today for more blows at the enemy.

51 Planes Destroyed on Ground

In addition to the 35 planes downed, the Allied airmen destroyed at least 51 on the ground. Allied losses for the day in which 6,000 planes flew from the west and south in eight attacks over four European countries, totaled 21 fighters and two bombers.

American Marauders escorted by RAF Spitfires got in the day's final blow yesterday, bombing rail lines northeast of Paris, and returned without loss despite heavy flak.

Indicative of the damage inflicted, the Eighth Air Force fighters alone reported destroying or damaging 739 railroad cars, 38 locomotives and 215 motor vehicles.

From British Bases

From British bases American heavy bombers lashed out three times at airfields, oil depots and transportation routes and R. A. F. Lancasters matched this gruelling pace. Some 750 U. S. heavies from the Mediterranean area hammered anew at Ploesti oilfields.

Six airfields and a plane engine works in the area stretching 70 miles north and 175 miles east of Paris were pounded by two formations of up to 750 American heavy bombers from Britain. In their third operation of the busy day American Flying Fortresses swung over to Holland and Belgium, battering bottlenecks on transport routes, along which the German armies poured four years ago in their blitzkreig of the low countries.

Bridges Hit

Bridges were hit in Maastricht in Holland and Huy and Namur in Belgium.

It was announced officially that attack was made not only to interrupt the flow of flying bombs to launching sites but also to hamper any efforts to reinforce and supply Germans north of the Seine and to impede any attempt by them to establish defenses there or north of the Somme.

Despite sustained attacks against the inland airfields to which the Luftwaffe has been forced to retreat by the capture of its best fields in Northwestern France, German fighters contested today's assaults with unusual ferocity.

Aerial Dogfight

One Mustang group tangled with a flock of ME109s 20 miles northeast of Paris and another battled a squadron of FW190s in the Beauvais area. Seven German planes were downed in these two fights but there was no announcement of American losses, if any.

But the day's best bag fell to a Polish Mustang squadron of the R. A. F. which took on 60 FW190s over the battlefield early in the day and downed 16. The Poles lost only one plane.

A small force of Liberators with a Mustang escort opened the airdrome attacks, smacking a field at Roye, 70 miles north of Paris this morning with what was officially described as good results.

Later in the day around 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators returned to France and unloaded explosives on airdromes at Metz, Nancy, Essy, St. Dizier and Fomilly-Sur-Seine. The Wolppy plane engine works near Metz and fuel storage deposits at Pacy-Sur-Armancon, east of St. Florentin, and Laneuveville, near Nancy, were also raided.

Ploesti Hit Again

Italian based fortresses and Liberators for the 13th time blasted Ploesti oil installations and hit oil targets at Campina, 19 miles to the northwest. The heavies and their Mustang escort saw only a few enemy planes and no encounters were reported.

British-based American Marauders, switching to the Paris area after a series of repeated attacks on bridges east of the battle zone, bombed enemy fuel stores at Valenton, seven miles south of Paris, starting great fires.

American fighters and fighter-bombers bombed and strafed rail and highway vehicles in the area immediately north of Paris while other tactical squadrons concentrated on Germans fleeing northeastward from the Falaise-Argentan-Trun triangle.

Rail Lines Strafed

American Thunderbolt fighter bombers blasted German tanks and transport retreating between Flers and Argentan and bombed and strafed railroad tracks and cars on the lines to Paris. The tracks were cut in several places between Paris and Mantes-Gassicourt.

Bomber crewmen raiding enemy airfields said the Germans put up an extremely heavy flak barrage.

In its initial announcement U. S. S. A. F. E. said the airfield attacks were "planned to destroy aircraft and interfere with operations on installations to which the Luftwaffe had been forced back by our capture of fields in northwestern France."

Flyers Scourge Foe Along Seine

London, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Allied warplanes today scourged the retreating German troops on both sides of the Seine, where the Germans were reported concentrating hundreds of barges for an attempted Dunkirk across the river.

In a frantic effort to stem the merciless air attacks upon the retreating Nazi columns the German air force at the eleventh hour threw up an unusually large number of fighters, but the Allied pilots took them on and, in a series of air battles, shot down twenty-three.

At the same time Allied heavy bombers, campaigning against the German forward air bases, made two big raids. A force of Liberators bashed the Roye field, seventy miles north of Paris and a second force of several hundred Fortresses and Liberators bombarded four bases at Metz, Nancy-Essy, St. Dizier and Rommilly-sur-Seine, and also hit an airplane factory near Metz.

Heavy and medium bombers together then attacked three fuel dumps in the Paris area in continuance of the campaign against critical German oil supplies.

In all, 6,000 Allied planes, striking from west and south, pounded German air defenses, oil supply and other vital installations in eight attacks spread over four European countries.

Poles Get 16 Nazis.

The enemy, in a vain effort to stop Allied air attacks on the German Seventh Army's retreat toward the Seine, threw several hundred fighters into the air. American fighters met swarms of twenty or more around Paris and Beauvais and shot down seven, and a Polish Mustang squadron of the Royal Air Force took on a swarm of sixty Focke-Wulfe fighters and shot sixteen of them out of the air. The Poles lost one plane.

Last night Mosquito squadrons of the Royal Air Force attacked the West German industrial center of Mannheim.

Yesterday the Mosquito fleets plunged a profusion of bombs into German troops fleeing toward the Seine from the Falaise-Argentan gap in France, and American Thunderbolt fighter-bombers spread great carnage among other German units retreating in columns three abreast on three highways leading from Argentan. Headquarters of the Ninth United States Air Force announced that hundreds of Germans were killed as they sought refuge in hedges and ditches. At least 100 vehicles were destroyed. Horses stampeded overturning carts. The planes dropped down through the overcast, sending streams of 50-caliber bullets into the panic-stricken masses.

"The shooting was the best we ever had," one pilot said, "the scene looked like a three-lane highway leading from a football stadium back home on a Saturday afternoon in the fall."

In all Allied planes destroyed or damaged more than 400 vehicles yesterday despite poor weather, and these attacks on the retreating Germans, their highways and bridges continued overnight. In addition, a fuel dump near La Mailleraye-sur-Seine was bombed, rail lines from Belgium to France were patrolled systematically, transport targets southeast of Paris and in Normandy were attacked, and east of the Seine, 1,000 locomotives and railroad cars were destroyed or damaged complicating the German defenses.

The German air force staged a desperate eleventh-hour attack over the battle front of northern France, but met a jolting setback.

In a frantic move to stem the Allied raking of retreating German columns from the air, the enemy threw up an unusually large swarm of fighters.

Polish and RAF Mustang squadrons swiftly shot down 16 with a single loss.

Roye Airfield Bombed

A small force of American Liberators, beginning the United States Eighth Air Force's third year of operations, continued a drive against the Germans' few remaining front-line air bases with an attack on the field at Roye, 70 miles north of Paris.

British Mosquitos attacked the western German industrial center of Mannheim last night and bombed Germans fleeing toward the Seine from the Falaise-Argentan gap. Allied planes destroyed or damaged more than 400 vehicles yesterday despite poor weather.

Heavy bombers attacked shipping at besieged Brest, where elements of three trapped divisions might be attempting an escape.

Only one bridge is believed left standing over the Seine—at Conflans Ste. Honorine, 15 miles north of Paris. The big stone bridge at Mantes-Gassicourt now is shattered. Since Wednesday evening, 22 bridges across the Risle, which flows west and parallel to the Seine before their confluence, have been bombed.

A fuel dump near La Mailleraye-Sur-Seine was bombed; rail lines from Belgium to France were patrolled systematically; transport target southeast of Paris and in Normandy were attacked. East of the Seine, 1,000 locomotives and railroad cars were destroyed or damaged, complicating the German defenses.

Planes Kill Hundreds

American Thunderbolt fighter bombers spread great havoc among Germans retreating in columns three abreast yesterday on three highways leading from Argentan, the United States Ninth Air Force announced.

Hundreds of Germans were killed as they sought refuge in hedges and ditches. At least a hundred vehicles were destroyed. Horses stampeded, overturning carts. The planes dropped down through the overcast, sending streams of 50-calibre bullets into the panic-stricken masses.

Von Kluge's Horde Heads for Rouen With Death or Surrender as Its Fate Within Next 48 Hours.

APR 19 1944

On the Falaise Front, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Battle of annihilation on the grand Russian scale blazed toward a climax tonight in the Norman trap. The next forty-eight hours probably will witness the final destruction by death or surrender of Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's doomed horde.

"The Germans are being knocked to bits as they try to escape," a British headquarters officer said. Estimates this morning were that 40,000 to 100,000 Nazis of the broken Seventh Army were being sealed in a new trap by a wide encircling maneuver.

[Merrill Mueller, reporting for the combined American networks in a pool broadcast from Normandy heard here by the Columbia stations, said today that Gen. Eisenhower spent the entire day in the immediate battle area replanning the campaign to take full advantage of the new situation.]

From a hilltop overlooking the battle arena south of rubbled Falaise, the massed guns of British, American and Canadian armies are raining a storm of steel into the ranks of the trapped enemy. The Germans are milling around chaotically in a triangle of death defined by Falaise, Argentan and Trun.

Enemy Herded Into Pockets

Guns blasted at the heart of the Nazi pocket. Allied troops kept back a safe distance from the central "killing grounds."

In other marked-off areas, however, three enveloping Allied armies began herding the enemy into isolated slaughter pens and hotly pursued the Germans who managed to slip out of the bulge during darkness.

"We are giving the Boche no rest," a spokesman at forward field headquarters said. "Our troops are at the top of their form and keyed up for the chase.

"If the German plan is to stand on the Seine, as I think it must be, then they will undoubtedly fight for Paris, but we have yet to see whether Marshal Von Kluge has enough strength left to make more than a shadow defense wherever he decides to halt and fight again."

German rearguards are battling savagely, but their resistance is weakening by the hour in a hell of Allied artillery and aerial bombardment.

Battle of Normandy Won

Twenty-first Army Group Headquarters, France, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—The battle of Normandy definitely has been won and the German Army's power to resist effectively again in France is gone, a senior British staff officer said today. Since yesterday the enemy forces trapped behind Falaise and Argentan have been making convulsive efforts to get out, with very large quantities of vehicles, tanks and artillery massed in the Trun area, he added.

Disorder has appeared, he continued, with part of the trapped forces struggling to escape and others trying to fight disengaging actions. Elements of twelve infantry and four armored divisions were in the area, but their escape gap has been cut to four miles. Having guessed wrong about Allied intentions from the beginning, the officer said, the Germans will be able to fight only pursuit battles from now on.

The German Fifteenth Army was held across the Seine too long, he added. When it finally was sent to reinforce the Seventh, it "arrived in pieces and too late," the officer declared. This army was described as so thinned out that it no longer constituted an effective force.

The American drive reduced the Germans' supplies by 60 per cent, it was estimated, as the enemy's Normandy front was being supplied through the Orleans-Paris gap.

FRENCH PATRIOTS AWAIT SIGNAL FOR UPRISING IN PARIS

LONDON, Aug. 18—(AP) A mysterious voice broke in on the long-silent wavelength of the Axis-controlled Paris radio today and shouted in German, "they're coming," as strong French underground warriors awaited the signal for an uprising timed with the entry of American tank columns now probing the French capital's environs.

Paris, anticipating deliverance, has the biggest and most well-knit force of all the resistance groups in France, Col. Jean Drumont, a blond 33-year-old French underground leader, told a Press conference here today.

But he said Paris' patriots were the largest group of a total force stronger than the pre-war French standing army of 500,000 men.

The Swiss radio quoted a Vatican report that the Pope might intervene in an effort to spare destruction of Paris.

Frenchmen here were grimly expectant that the Germans would both put up a fight and try to damage the city as much as possible, in retaliation for the bombings of Berlin.

In Vichy, the "city of shame," French collaborators apparently had their bags packed for flight if they had not already gone to Germany.

Rumors persisted that French Forces of the Interior were in action on the outskirts of Vichy, and a communique from Brig. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, FFI commander, said his men had captured Gueret, 75 miles west of Vichy, forcing the "whole German garrison, 500 strong, to surrender." The Communique, broadcast by Algiers radio, said open war was underway in the Creuse department, of which Gueret is the capital.

Along the French-Swiss frontier the French patriots controlled a 75-mile-deep section of French soil in the area between St. Gingolph and Bellegarde, climaxed by a three-hour morning battle in which Annemasse was captured.

Three hundred Germans surrendered at Annemasse after expected Nazi reinforcements had failed to break through from Annecy. One hundred and twenty Germans fled into neutral Switzerland, half of them Elite SS troops.

A Swiss frontier report said German troops were preparing to leave Lyon, Rhone valley city.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 19—(AP) A Berlin broadcast quoted a German War Ministry official statement today as saying "we must be prepared for a German withdrawal from France."

"We must expect the loss of places with world famous names," the statement said with a scarcely-veiled reference to Paris.

The broadcast, by the German news agency Transocean, was recorded by the Ministry of Information.

The same agency quoted a military spokesman in Berlin as saying "no fresh German divisions can be sent to France. The troops in battle have been warned of this and have been ordered to fight to the Germans Told Of Setback in France

Hint at Removal of Puppet Govt. From Vichy — Talk of "Mobility Of Defense."

By Wade Werner

LONDON, Aug. 18—(AP)—Nazi propaganda agencies began preparing the German people for the shock of wholesale flight—on the Eastern front pattern—from large sections of France today and announced that Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's armored spearheads had already reached within 12 miles of Paris.

Removal Of Puppet Govt.

The early removal of the puppet French government to some place safer than Vichy was hinted at on the German Foreign Office.

The German agency Transocean said Patton's main thrust was along the "high road leading to Versailles," a western suburb of Paris.

"The war of movement in the greater area neighboring Paris has led to a series of heavy battles during the last few hours," it reported.

Hitler's Newspapers

Hitler's personal newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter frankly said the German army would pull out wherever necessary to "maintain operational freedom" and to keep the forces in being until miracle weapons could "change the whole aspect of the war."

The paper said, "This final goal is more important than holding on to French towns and departments."

Sertorius Comment

The Transocean military commentator Ludwig Sertorius said that "the strategy of German defense will be changed or already has been changed" as a result of rapid Allied advances between the middle Seine and middle Loire.

"As during the various phases of the Eastern campaign, elastic defense in deep space now seems also applicable in the West," he said. "Mobility of the enemy will be counteracted by mobility of defense. In this defense there will be no striving rapidly to use available reserves, but rather to keep them back and concentrate them for counter blows when the opportune moment arrives."

With Eastern Front

This comparison with the collapse of the Eastern front suggested that the Germans were preparing withdrawals on a much vaster scale than retreats thus far.

A German foreign office spokesman, meanwhile, hinted that Vichy chief of government Pierre Laval would soon join Benito Mussolini as Hitler's guest inside Germany.

The spokesman said the removal of the Vichy government to some safer place was being considered and "it is possible that an announcement will be made tomorrow."

This was interesting in the light of the strange behavior of the French radio network. Since yesterday some stations were broadcasting music instead of news and others were omitting from their newscasts the usual preface, "There is no other policy for us than that of Marshal Petain."

Black Picture

In line with what appeared to be a German policy of giving the whole black picture to the German people, the official news agency DNB in a report heard by Reuters said, "Americans have brought up reinforcements to the Brest sector and a new onslaught on that port is imminent."

The gloomy reports of the German news services was supplemented by a new wae of last-ditch appeals. The Front Und Heimat (wire service for the troops) urged soldiers to follow "the wonderful example set by the defenders of St. Malo" where Col. Andras Von Aulock held out 11 days, saying he yielded then only because the garrison was starving.

"Not Speculation"

"What matters for us is not speculation as to the end of the war, but the statement that no German will ever capitulate," the service said. It exhorted troops to hang on grimly until miracle weapons can win "the gigantic race between new German weapons and older ones of our enemies."

Nazi rabble-rousers at total mobilization rallies got tougher. The Magdeburg gauleiter demanded immediate "reeducation of the unnecessarily large number of sick people" on the home front and "quicker resumption of work by convalescents in war vital factories."

The Voelkischer Beobachter, seeking consolation from the flying bomb salvos falling on southern England, said "many" London ministries had been evacuated.

Allies Being Reinforced

Sertorius said that on the southern French front the Allies were being constantly reinforced by sea and air and have succeeded in joining their many bridgeheads along the Riviera into "one big bridgehead from Cannes to the Bay of Hyeres."

He stressed the mass landings of Allied tanks between St. Raphael and the Bay of Hyeres which, he said, "confirms the German view that the first large scale Allied advances are to be expected from this sector." He said there were strong airborne landings in the Argens valley, southeast of Draguignan.

Other German reports mentioned heavy fighting in the hills back of the coast as airborne units tried to join troops advancing from the beachhead.

BERLIN HINTS AT RETREAT

Also Says Reich Industry Will Be Revamped.

London, Aug. 18 (A. P.)—Frankly admitting that the German army has lost the battle of Normandy, the Berlin radio today forecast further large-scale Nazi withdrawals in France, but asserted the High Command was gaining time for a revolution in German armament production which would change the whole aspect of the war.

Dr. Max Krull, D.N.B. military correspondent, declared in a broadcast that "the Normandy front has been liquidated by the Germans."

Transocean quoted Adolf Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter as saying:

"The situation in France has changed from June to July, and this confronts the German High Command with decisions of a new kind. No longer can the High Command attempt to hold the present front lines by improvised means of throwing in rushed-up reserves. Decisions of a major scale are impending—taking into account the inter-relation of the campaign in the west and the general course of the war."

The paper asserted the Allies were making the most of their "present superiority in men and material" in an effort to end the war by autumn. It reasoned that as a stop-gap measure German commanders in the west could use divisions in France "which so far have not taken part in the invasion battles," but that revised strategy was necessary—as it was on the Russian front when German retreats began.

Beobachter then said the Germans were going to pull out of large sections of France. The reason for this, it added, was to "maintain operational freedom" pending a "revolution in German armament production."

"German commanders in France above all are trying not to let operational freedom slip from them before total mobilization on the home front bears first fruits," the paper went on. "Germany is conducting mobile warfare in France with the aim of one day changing the whole aspect of the war with a revolution in German armament production. This, the final goal, is more important than holding on to French towns or departments."

Paris Radio Silent

London, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Paris radio went silent today after reporting yesterday that the Allies had started an all-out drive for the capital.

During a silence lasting 24 hours the British Broadcasting Corporation, instead of getting Paris during regular news periods, heard a voice on the Paris wave length shouting in German:

"The Yanks are coming." The Yanks, of course.

The Vichy radio, which long ago quit prefacing news bulletins with the slogan "there is no other policy for us but that of the Marshal (Petain)," was not heard during several scheduled periods. At one news period Vichy broadcast dance music.

cries. Periodically the French broke into "La Marseillaise," singing with fierce revolutionary fervor of Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" characters.

One small court yard was covered with the hair of sheared women collaborators. Each new suspect was dragged in and sat in a chair. Her head was shaved by a barber. "He makes no charge," laughed a pretty French girl onlooker.

They looked sadly funny, these stolid, ugly women with knobby legs, ungainly bodies and heads like newborn pelicans. Most went through the ordeal in silence but one 18-year-old girl afterwards ran behind a door and sobbed, "I have no mother, no father. I am alone. I have not been with Germans."

"She lies," said a woman with a rifle slung over her shoulder. Men forcibly led the girl through the streets so all could see her shame.

Rifles were discharged accidentally at intervals by milling amateurs-at-arms. One bullet slightly wounded an American correspondent in the leg.

Snipers Are Routed.

The snipers, soon routed, were led through muttering, jeering throngs. French men and women immediately came out of the shelter of their nearby homes and swept up fallen rubble from streets around the Cathedral, disregarding an occasional wild bullet. They wanted this ancient showpiece to wear its dignity even during battle.

After the snipers were captured, the Cathedral's Vicar-General, Mgr. Leon le Jards, showed me the damage to the exterior of the building, whose crypts date from the eleventh century. A plain Romanesque thirteenth century spire had a few scattered bullet marks, but the sixteenth century Gothis tower, which is considerably taller, had suffered more. This tower had lost a gargoyle and one small statpe, and one arch had been ruined, Mgr. Le Jards said. He added, "the damage isn't at all serious. We have been very fortunate."

'Okay,' Says Priest.

The assistant to the gray-haired, fine-featured prelate was a boyish, general priest with a slight knowledge of English.

"Okay," he said, pointing up at the Gothic tower. Inside the cathedral, Vicar Jean Guedou and Father Gilbert Finet, professor of the seminary, took me for a tour of the great, bare structure, whose spacious arches are the despair of modern architects who work by the year instead of by centuries. Five small windows in the south transept had been broken and several small window sections behind the main altar were destroyed.

"These are nothing" said Father Finet. "At the start of the war, we removed all the colored glass from the windows and stored it in the cellar, where it is still safe."

Happy French Mobs Celebrate End of Nazi Rule in Chartres

By HAL BOYLE

CHARTRES, Aug. 16—(delayed)—(AP) French mobs, celebrating the end of four years of Nazi rule, ran mad with freedom today.

Towns folk beat up collaborationists, shaved the heads of 30 women who consorted with German troops and clashed in bloody street battles with enemy snipers.

Some 150 resistance leaders seized arms and began attacking Germans inside the city at 7 p.m. yesterday as American troops assaulted the town's defense perimeter with antitank guns.

Five resistance patriots were killed in running street fights with the last hundred Germans in Chartres but their uprising forced the enemy to abandon his delaying stand. At 7 p.m. today Chartres was free.

All day gendarmes were busy restraining men, women and children of this city of 25,000. They surged around the gates of the iron-barred prefecture. Each new German prisoner marched into the enclosure was greeted with jeers, catcalls and derisive "Heil Hitlers."

These prisoners, looking dazed like punchdrunk boxers, showed fear of the crowd and walked silently through the storm of out-

But French Who Collaborated With Hated Boche Are Shot in Courtyard.

Chartres, Aug. 16 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The lofty Chartres Cathedral, a masterpiece of Gothic art, survived the battle for this city with superficial damage, despite a machine-gun and rifle attack which routed six German snipers barricaded in one of its two towers.

The soldiers sent in to mop up Chartres were ordered to use no weapons larger than a machine gun to spare the Cathedral which, before the war, was visited by thousands of worshipers and architectural students from many countries. When the Germans began firing machine pistols from an aperture high in the sixteenth century Gothic tower, French and American troops blanketed the position with small arms fire.

EISENHOWER TALKS WITH COMMANDERS

By HOWARD COWAN

Associated Press Correspondent representing the combined press)

AN ADVANCED COMMAND IN NORMANDY, Aug. 18—(AP) Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and his field commanders conferred this afternoon as Allied patrols pushed toward the Seine, and momentous decisions are believed to have been made.

The Supreme commander emerged tight lipped from a lengthy session at the field headquarters of Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley. With him were Maj. Gen. K. W. D. Strong and Maj. Gen. R. B. Bull, ranking officers on his staff in charge of intelligence and operations, respectively.

This group conferred with Eisenhower's other field commanders by phone during the afternoon.

What the Allied command had decided was not indicated. The Germans themselves probably will be the first to know the answer.

An air of confidence and optimism attended the general's meeting—part of it held under an apple tree which shielded their bare heads from the hot Normandy sun.

Mad Colonel Surrenders St. Malo

London, Aug. 18 (AP)—The mad Col. Andreas von Aulock has surrendered the Citadel of St. Malo after holding out 11 days under heavy American fire.

The German high command announced today that "the garrison of St. Malo succumbed to enemy superiority."

A wounded veteran of the Caucasus fighting who pledged to turn the battle of the Breton port into "another Stalingrad," Aulock was reported in a DNB broadcast to have messaged the Fuehrer: "Further resistance had to cease as a result of lack of food. The fight is over. Heil Hitler."

Fight To End Pledged

Earlier the colonel had reported: "One fortification after another is being reduced to rubble under very heavy fire. If we perish it will be only after a fight to the end."

St. Malo was cut off and placed under attack August 7 during the lightning jab of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's United States Third Army across the Brittany peninsula.

Honored By Hitler

The Berlin radio announced that Hitler had conferred the Oak Leaves to the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross upon Aulock for his fight. He had won the Knight's Cross for his work on the Eastern front.

Allied headquarters confirmed that the St. Malo Citadel had fallen, but gave no indication whether Aulock was captured.

Yanks In Le Mans Pass Statue To Wright Bros.

Le Mans, France, Aug. 17 (AP—Delayed)—There is a striking stone statue near the Cathedral in this town which arouses the curiosity of many American troops as their convoys wheel north to battle.

But they speed by so fast they are unable to read the inscription on the monument, which was erected in honor of one of the men responsible for development of the planes circling protectively over their heads—Wilbur Wright.

Airplane Experiments

Early in the century, Wright and the distinguished French scientist, Leon Bollee, collaborated in a series of airplane experiments in a field near Le Mans.

The monument is a white marble shaft topped with the statue of a kneeling man with uplifted hands—symbolizing the human yearning to fly. On the base in bas relief are likenesses of Wright, his brother, Orville, and Bollee.

The memorial has been kept neat through four years of German occupation. The townspeople have planted a border of red geraniums about the base and the monument is surrounded by a padlocked iron gate.

No Signs Of Defacement

This monument shows no sign of defacement, but several miles outside the town stands another to Wilbur Wright which has been struck, but not badly damaged, by machine-gun bullets and small shells. The latter stands near the site of early flying tests, and was erected by the Aero-Club de France.

It is a large box-shaped chunk of dark granite bearing on one side the inscription: "Wilbur and Orville Wright, Kittyhawk, December, 1903."

Capture Two Towns.

London, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Units of the French Army of the Interior have captured the Pyrenees cities of Pau and Tarbes, Spanish border reports said today, while Berne dispatches told of desperate Nazi attempts to quench the revolt flaming in Haute Savoie.

Other Swiss reports said that most members of the quaking Vichy government had scurried to Berlin in the face of mounting Allied successes and patriot uprisings. There was no specific information concerning Chief of Government Pierre Laval and Chief of State Marshal Henry Petain.

HUGE NEW TANK USED BY GERMANS IN FRANCE

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Germans have thrown a huge new, heavily armored tank into action on both the Russian and northern French fronts in an effort to stem the Allied advances but first reports denied it was a "super weapon."

One of the new monsters weighing over 65 tons and with six-inch armor plate—an inch and a half thicker than anything the enemy yet has put into action—was taken by the British on the Orne river front.

The tank was a victim of a mechanical breakdown and never had fired a shot in battle.

Christened the "Pantiger" by its captors, the tank combines the best features of the Nazi Tiger and Panther tanks, which weigh 45 tons each.

The Pantiger, 23 feet long and over 11 feet wide, has an extra wheel on each side of its tracks and a huge, clumsy-looking turret.

Great Striking Force Continues to Build Up on French Riviera.

YANKEE PLANES HIT FOE'S LINES

Plaster Germans in Rhone Valley—7,000 Prisoners So Far—U. S. Losses 300.

By Noland Norgaard

ROME, Aug. 18—(AP)—American Seventh Army troops smashed 20 miles inland behind the great naval base of Toulon today, threatening a wide outflanking movement along a main highway leading to the Rhone Valley, while behind them a great striking force was being built up on the French Riviera.

Toulon also was threatened by a coastal drive which smashed into the vicinity of Soilles-Pont, only six miles northeast of the stronghold.

7,000 Prisoners Already Taken

Headquarters announced the known American assault casualties for the southern French invasion were only 300, an almost incredibly low figure, and said 7,000 Germans had been taken in a count still far from complete.

Battled-hardened veterans of Africa, Italy and Sicily under Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, hero of Guadalcanal, punched inland to the vicinity of Brignoles, 20 miles due north of Toulon. The city is on the main highway leading to Marseille and Aix-En Provence, and ultimately to the wide Rhone valley leading to northern France.

(A German radio military commentator said the first major Allied thrusts into the interior probably would be along the big road leading to Aix-En-Provence in a general western direction aimed at outflanking Toulon).

Planes Strike Behind Nazi Lines

American planes struck behind the German lines in the Rhone valley, intenton choking lines of retreat or reinforcement, and other American bombers smashed at the French battleship Strasbourg in Toulon harbor, where it was being used by the Nazis as a coastal fortress.

Farther to the east other forward elements of the Seventh Army drove against only slight opposition three miles west and southwest of captured Draguignan, the road center 16 miles west-northwest of Frejus.

Second Enemy General Taken

Headquarters announced the drives inland had brought capture of a second Nazi general in two days, and said this general professed amazement at the news of the Normandy and Brittany campaigns in the north and the German reverses near East Prussia.

The 7,000 prisoners taken probably numbered fully half of the original enemy force which faced the Allied invasion waves Tuesday.

German defenses crumbled in many sectors, and as yet the Nazis had mustered no big-scale resistance. There was no indication of what the hard-pressed Nazi command might be able to do to reinforce its fast fading units for a real stand.

"Embracing more than 500 square miles, the beachhead area is believed to be the largest created in a combined operation in less than three days during this war," Allied headquarters said.

Losses Create Record

The total losses of 300 in killed, wounded and missing for the three veteran American divisions and other units forming the initial assault force also appeared to be an unchallenged record of the Unhampered on the beaches, the war.

Allies were building up their forces and supplies with surprising speed.

"The roads are clogged with Army traffic in unending streams," reported New York Times correspondent Herbert L. Matthews for the combined American press.

"We are pouring in troops and materiel at a faster rate probably than any other amphibious operation. This campaign is geared for speed and tremendous power although it had to begin on exceedingly narrow beachheads."

Beachhead 50 Miles Wide

Headquarters was silent on the exact present size of the beachhead. The latest official report was that it extended 50 miles air line from east to west, and front dispatches placed Allied units more than 30 miles inland.

French and American units had driven to four miles from Cannes on the east, where they captured La Napoule, a coastal village. Allied headquarters made no comment on a German report that the invaders had driven into Cannes.

German general and his staff were among the prisoners taken. The elements of only two German divisions, the 242nd and the 148th, have been identified as opposing the Seventh army. Prisoners from their ranks largely were a dispirited lot.

Against these Gen. Patch threw three of the toughest and most experienced American divisions in the whole European war zone.

Joined with these was the largest airborne force ever thrown into operations in this theater, and the largest French army to see action since 1940, including both infantry and armored divisions as well as special assault units and commandos.

APR 19 1944

Continuing their efforts to isolate the whole battle area, American bombers hammered two large highway bridges over the Rhone river, one 70 miles and the other 85 miles north of Marseilles. The Mediterranean air force called this "strategic to slow up the German troops which may be headed for the southern France front."

It was announced in a naval communique that aircraft carriers were being used in the operations with both British and American planes operating from them, giving protection to Allied warships as well as bombing and strafing enemy positions.

and the wounds inflicted the French scuttled her rest of their fleet at To in 1941, the Germans had b able to use her guns to shell the Allied troops advancing on the city.

[The Strasbourg, launched in 1936, originally had eight 13-inch guns and sixteen 5.1-inch guns.]

Meanwhile today Major-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh United States Army moved swiftly toward the encirclement of the mountain-girt base with its ring of numerous land forts. The troops advanced to the Sollies-Pont area, only six miles northeast of Toulon, on one of the city's main line of communications, and gained nearly seven miles in reaching the area of Brignoles, twenty miles to the north of the base.

In the eastern sectors, where crumbling Nazi resistance was more evident, the Allies moved three miles or more west and southwest of the Argens Valley road center of Draguignan in an area where they already had penetrated eighteen or more miles inland.

Rome, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—American airmen today bombed the French battleship Strasbourg, whose guns the Germans had been using to defend Toulon harbor, and Allied troops closed in swiftly on that French naval base from their expanding foothold in the south of France.

Fires and explosions were started after a wave of Mitchell bombers sought out the 26,500-ton Strasbourg, partly dismantled and half-submerged in Toulon harbor. The airmen scored several direct hits on her and also on the 7,600-ton cruiser La Gallissonniere, a destroyer and a submarine.

Despite the damage inflicted in a fight with the British in the historic Mers-el-Kebir battle of 1940, d German g by the Allies in rance. He was found in a foxhole, hiding from American artillery shells which seemed, the captive asserted, to be seeking him out personally.

The known American casualties thus far total fewer than 300, Allied Headquarters said, while an estimated 7,000 German prisoners were taken, including a general and his staff—and the count of prisoners was still incomplete.

Last official reports placed them within 10 miles of the once great French naval base of Toulon and within six miles of Cannes. German broadcasts hinted that the resort town already had been penetrated.

The doughboys already possess a big chunk of the main lateral road across southern France, which in this area parallels the coast about a dozen miles inland. They were a considerable distance up the road that runs into the Rhone valley by way of Aix-en-Provence, 14 miles north of Marseille.

New Landings Reported

Fresh Allied landings on both sides of Toulon were reported by the German Transocean news agency, according to a London dispatch.

The United States 3d, 45th and 36th divisions are taking part in the invasion of southern France, it was announced today.

The situation in southern France was going so well that Mediterranean air forces were able to divert heavy bombers to Balkan targets again. Tactical aircraft swept over the skies in support of ground troops without meeting any opposition.

Drive Between Nazi Units

The Nazi command had entrusted the defense of the invasion area to two German infantry divisions, the 242nd and the 148th. The main Allied thrust was made between those two divisions, creating considerable confusion among enemy troops already badly battered by bombing.

While the invaders have extended their beachhead 50 airline miles along the coast, actually it is double that distance because of the extremely tortuous shoreline.

Officially the troops were reported 25 miles inland, but unofficial reports put them beyond 30 miles.

The last pocket of resistance on the Hyeres Islands off the coast was eliminated when big guns of an Allied battleship pounded the thick walls of a medieval fort on the island of Port-Cros.

Aircraft Carriers Used

Fall of La Napoule, coastal village four miles southwest of Cannes, gave the troops a full view of the resort city across the Gulf of Napoule.

A naval communique disclosed that aircraft carriers were being used with American and British planes operating from them, not only to give cover to warships but to bomb and strafe enemy positions.

Use of the carriers permitted far more effective fighter support than otherwise would have been possible at the time of the landings, since the nearest land fighter bases were in Corsica, almost 150 miles away.

Breakthrough Reported

A stream of reinforcements and supplies continued to pour into the beachhead from the sea without interference, naval officials said.

The warships that bombarded the shore in the invasion operations fired almost 16,000 shells of 5-inch caliber and above, and of these 12,500 were 12-inch or larger. Results were reported as "most effective in neutralizing enemy artillery."

Front dispatches said last night that infantrymen had broken through German anti-invasion defenses before Toulon, which had been swung against them at right angles to the shoreland.

(BBC monitors in London reported hearing a Turkish broadcast today which said "Allied forces have landed at Durazzo in Albania," a report indicating an Allied thrust into the Balkans. There was no confirmation.)

(The Turkish broadcast, beamed to Bulgaria, said it was quoting from a special Allied Mediterranean radio bulletin.

(Tirana, capital of Albania, 20 miles inland, was bombed by Allied planes Tuesday. Guerrillas have been carrying on warfare against the Germans in cooperation with Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisans.)

Five Road Centers Seized

Surging inland in a great arc, Patch's troops yesterday seized five strategic road centers, cutting two main highways linking the Germans in the eastern Riviera sector with those in Toulon and Marseille.

Draguignan, 18 miles inland in a northwesterly direction from captured St. Raphael on the coast, was the largest town engulfed in yesterday's advances. The others were Vidauban, Le Luc, Besse and Cuers—all on a trunk highway leading southwestward to Toulon. Cuers is a bare 11 miles from Toulon.

"Gratified" By Advances

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied supreme commander in the west, told Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Mediterranean commander, in a "best of luck" message yesterday that "every step of your progress will bring wailful dismay from the Hun." Wilson replied he was gratified by the advances.

French resistance groups, which gave valuable help on D-day, still are helping in the American-French drive, the Allied command said.

The Allies now are far enough inland to permit establishment of airfields for tactical support of their operations. One large airport in the Frejus area already has been captured.

3 U. S. DIVISIONS IN RIVIERA ACTION

Rome, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Three American infantry divisions that spearheaded the Seventh Army's drive into the south of France were identified today as the Third, Thirty-sixth and the Forty-fifth, all veterans of Mediterranean campaigning and all formerly units of the Fifth Army in Italy.

The Third Division, commanded by Major-Gen. John W. O'Daniel of Washington, D. C., has carried its ensigne—a square patch of blue with white diagonal stripes—into the thick of actions in Morocco, Tunisia, Sicily and Italy. It is made up largely of soldiers from the Pacific Coast.

The Thirty-sixth (Texas) Division, with "T" patches on the shoulders, got its baptism of fire on the beaches of Salerno on September 9, 1943, and finally unlocked the road to Rome by a bold infiltration of the enemy rear in the Alban Hills. Major-Gen. John E. Dahlquist of Minneapolis, Minn., is the commander.

The Forty-fifth (Oklahoma) Division, is headed by Major-Gen. W. W. Eagles of Indiana. The Forty-fifth cut its combat teeth in the Sicilian invasion and promptly won praise as one of the war's outstanding outfits. It also took part in the battle of Salerno and served at Anzio.

Joined with these are the largest airborne forces ever sent into action in this theater, commanded aground by Major-Gen. Robert P. Frederick, and the largest French Army to see action since 1940, including both infantry and armored divisions, as well as special assault units and commandos.

Nazi Prisoners Create Traffic Jam On Riviera

By Sydney A. Feder

APR 19 1944

[Associated Press Correspondent]

[Representing Combined American Press]

With the American Forces Near Cannes, Aug. 16 (AP—Delayed)—So many prisoners were being taken on this west flank of the Riviera beachhead today that one road leading back to the cages had a full-fledged 42d street traffic jam.

One regiment which captured 850 prisoners yesterday added another 751 today and the end was not nearly in sight. The Nazis were giving up in batches.

DAY

At one spot on this road Sergeant Joe Fullier, of Houston, Texas, was guarding a line of prisoners stretching more than 300 yards.

Slides Into Germans

The doughboys captured them all over the hills. For example:

Private Tommy Cartright, of Corpus Christi, Texas, separated from his company and roaming around the hills, decided to slide down one slope to get to the bottom. He slid into two enemy machine guns manned by seven Germans.

More surprised than Cartright, they gave up immediately. Then they showed him the way back to his headquarters.

Sergeant Stanley Kellar, of Library, Pa., climbed down off a tank and walked along the road, chucking rocks over the side of a cliff. He ambled forward a few yards after throwing his last rock.

"Kamerad!" was the shout from behind him.

Flushed By His Stones

He turned to see seven capitulating Germans coming over the top of the cliff, flushed by his stone throwing.

Walking down the road leading 35 prisoners were Sergt. Virgil Cork, of near Tuscaloosa, Ala., and three other Americans.

"They just came out of a draw with their hands up," said Cork.

Yesterday, Cork's platoon, headed by Capt. Alfred E. Makins, former newspaperman at Abilene, Kan., and Lieut. Carl J. Storm, of Grand Rapids, Mich., in addition to taking 41 prisoners, captured a battery of 80 German mortars, complete with ammunition and gun crews.

Surrender After One Shot

Before Cork finished talking, 45 more Germans were led around the corner by Sergt. James Clark, of Charlotte, Mich., and five other Americans.

"We saw 'em in a railroad cut," said Clark. "We hollored at them to come on up. They wouldn't. We fired one shot and up they came, as pretty as you please."

Capt. D. L. Mooney, of Fall River, Mass., heard a shout from a man whose leg had been broken by a machine-gun bullet and who had fallen from the crest of a hill to a ledge a third of the way down.

Rides On Lap

Mooney and Sergt. George R. Martin went to the man's aid, placing a splint on his leg. Then Mooney wondered how to get the man back down.

"That's easy," said Martin.

He sat down, put the wounded man on his lap, and slid to the bottom without mussing his patient's hair.

The sergeant got a new pair of pants for his stunt. And he needed them.

U. S. PARATROOPS CLEAN UP A TOWN

APR 19 1944

By RICHARD MOWRER.

Chicago Daily News Correspondent. Representing the Combined U. S. Press.

An Airborne Task Force in Le Muy, France, Aug. 17 (Delayed) (A. P.).—A glider infantry battalion is taking Le Muy today. They were pretty mad. Last night they had tried to get in and failed. Today the word was: "Get in there or don't come back."

They were getting in when we drove our jeep down the road into Le Muy, past two dead Germans and their motorcycle, past a dead horse near the town's first house.

After a four-hour flight from an Italian airdrome on D day, we had jumped into the night, drifted like ghostly mushrooms through a thick layer of ground mist and landed on French soil —in trees, vines, plowed fields, gardens. Some landed in the hills miles off the DZ (dropping zone), and others landed in German-held Le Muy, where they fought and killed or got killed or were taken prisoner. Now we are taking Le Muy and, except for nests of snipers, it is about over.

A column of Germans appeared, escorted by Americans. The prisoners marched with their hands clasped behind their necks. They stopped in front of a world war monument. "See that they are disarmed," Lieut.-Col. William J. Blythe of Point Blank, Tex., told the guards, and the Germans' web equipment clattered around their feet while the French people looked on in ecstasy.

"All right, move 'em out," the Colonel said, and the column of prisoners marched out of Le Muy. Then another column of prisoners marched into the square. An automatic weapon suddenly crackled. Civilians ran into their houses. The German prisoners collapsed on the ground and began to crawl away in all directions as bullets spattered in the street.

"He's in the church steeple."

A group of Americans went into the church and the firing ceased. People came out of their houses and a woman put a crate of fruit on the sidewalk for the Americans to help themselves. The German prisoners regrouped, were marched out of the town.

12 ITALIANS SHOT BY RIVIERA NAZIS

DYNAM

Sainte Maxime, France, Aug. 17 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Singing lustily and smiling, a group of former Italian soldiers ended more than eighteen months under the German Army's fist today and embarked for Naples and home. Numbering about 200, they came to the Riviera as occupation troops. After the Italian armistice, the Germans interned them and impressed them into labor battalions.

When the Allied attack on the South of France was imminent, the Germans ordered them to help in the defense of the city, whereupon most of them discarded their uniforms and escaped into the hills.

Last night and today the Americans rounded up the fugitives and proposed using them to help clean up the port, but the French authorities requested that they be evacuated.

A Civil Affairs official reported that the German garrison lined twelve Italians against a wall at St. Tropez and fired a machine gun on them when the Allies began landing.

Allied Civil Affairs Unit Aids In France

Rome, Aug. 18 (AP)—A carefully organized civil affairs division has begun operation on the new beachhead in southern France in cooperation with local French civil officials, headquarters of Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch announced today.

The civil adminstration will follow precedents established in Normandy. Any crimes against Allied forces will be tried in French military courts.

Higher Food-Ration Planned

"Initial steps have already been taken to bring in food and supplies, principally from the United States and North America," headquarters reported.

The new supplies were expected to make possible an average ration of 2,000 calories per person daily. For two months, the effective bread ration in southern France has been 100 grams daily. The Allied command proposed to triple this shortly.

Emergency medical supplies for civilians have already reached the beachhead.

lesulaz for internment and then at 6:30, attacked the remaining Germans who had barricaded themselves in the Hotel Pax in the center of the town.

Reinforcements Held Up.

The Nazis, harassed by snipers throughout the night, gave up when expected reinforcements from Annecy were unable to break through the partisan lines.

About seventy-five Gestapo men were the only Germans remaining to be mopped up. The Maquis surrounded their house and demanded their surrender.

French activity also has expanded in the Doubs and Jura regions. A number of Germans were killed at Cure. In Jura men from 18 to 45 have been called up in a general mobilization. In the Doubs sector the resistance forces seized trucks and automobiles in preparation for an offensive.

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Tokyo radio asserted today in a domestic broadcast that Japanese diplomats and other Japanese nationals had left Paris for Berlin yesterday as the Allied armies neared the French capital. The broadcast was recorded by the United States Government monitors.

Partisans Win Battle of Annemasse

Nazis Are Driven Into Switzerland When Patriots Block Their Reserves.

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS.

APR 19 1944

The Swiss-French Frontier at Annemasse, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Three hundred Germans of Annemasse capitulated to French Partisans and 120 others fled to internment in neutral Switzerland after a sharp three-hour battle early today.

The victory gave the Maquis full control of the Haute Savoie frontier along the south shore of Lake Geneva from St. Gingolph, westward to a point just outside Bellegarde, and inland to a depth of almost 75 miles.

The exuberant population of approximately 5,000 paraded the streets singing "The Marseillaise."

With shouts of "Vive De Gaulle," the tricolor was hoisted on every house. Excited women tossed stones at German prisoners.

The Maquis, well armed, starting moving into Annemasse at 6 A. M. They chased the Nazi frontier guards into Swiss Moillesulaz for internment and then at 6:30, attacked the remaining Germans who had barricaded themselves in the Hotel Pax in the center of the town.

A communique from Brig.-Gen. Joseph Koenig reported the French forces of the interior were "waging open war in the Creuse Department." The department's capital Gueret, seventy-five miles west of Vichy, was surrounded and the German garrison of 550 men was forced to surrender, the report said.

Capture Vistula

Bastion

Sandomierz Falls After Three Days of Bitter Street Fighting.

ANOTHER DOOR TO POLISH PLAINS

Second Powerful Soviet Army Masses on E. Prussian Frontier — New Fighting at Warsaw.

By Noland Norgaard

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 19—(AP)—Russian troops yesterday overwhelmed the west bank Vistula River stronghold of Sandomierz in Central Poland after a bitter three-day street battle, and trapped three German divisions of 30,000 men, while another powerful Soviet Army massed on the German East Prussian frontier threatened momentarily to spill onto German soil for the first time.

Prussian Towns In Flames

Schirwindt, East Prussian border town, and other villages inside Germany's imperilled province were reported by Soviet naval fliers to be in flames, and Berlin said the Russians had hurled more than 150,000 men into the battle on an 80-mile front from Augustow in Northern Poland and the Niemen River in Western Lithuania.

Both Moscow and Berlin dispatches suggested great events were imminent, and Axis broadcasts said Soviet troops on the long-dormant Romanian front had attempted to cross the lower Dnestr River—suggesting the emergence soon of another offensive directed toward the Ploesti oil fields, last big German fuel reservoir.

Again On Attack At Warsaw

The Russian daily communique said Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army also had gone over to the offensive in some sectors just east of Praga suburb of Warsaw, after it had established a bridgehead on the east bank absorbing the impact of savage German counterattacks.

The Russians last were fighting within seven miles of the city.

Inside Warsaw the Poles reported their guerrilla forces were holding their own in furious street fighting. From rooftops the Poles hurled gasoline-filled bottles down on German tanks, and from cellar gunslits they picked off German troops.

Moscow was silent about the East Prussian front, but Berlin said heavy fighting was going on with the "center of gravity" at Virbalis, western Lithuanian town three miles from the border on the Kaunas-Konigsberg highway.

Spotlight Shifted to Sandomierz

The Russians said their troops had reached the border Thursday, but last night Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin shifted the spotlight to the Warsaw and Sandomierz sectors, where many military men believe the decisive struggle of the eastern front will unfold.

Stalin's order of the day addressed to Marshal Ivan S. Konev, commander of the first Ukraine army, disclosed that the Russians since Aug. 3 when they crossed the Vistula—last natural Axis defense barrier before Germany—had advanced up to 31 miles and widened their western bridgehead to a length of 75 miles.

The capture of Sandomierz gave the Russians another important river crossing with which to pour men and material into the Polish plains leading to highly industrialized German Silesia, last reported only 75 miles beyond Soviet spearheads.

21 Localities Seized

Twenty-one more localities were seized in the Sandomierz area, and the three German divisions were trapped just north of that city, which is 110 miles southeast of embattled Warsaw. The captured villages were in a triangle formed by Opatou, 18 miles northwest of Sandomierz, Ozarow, 15 miles north of Sandomierz, and the Vistula's bank.

The Russians already hold Lagow, 30 miles northwest of Sandomierz and only 20 miles from Kielce, German communications center linking the Krakow-Warsaw front, and the bridgehead area has been expanded to approximately 1,600 square miles. Its lower end is at Goryslawice, 53 miles southwest of Sandomierz, and only 35 miles from Krakow, last big German position before Silesia.

In Estonia units of Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's third Baltic army yesterday crossed the narrow channel linking akes Pskov and Peipus, seized a six-mile-wide strip of territory on the west side and drove nine miles inland in a push toward Tartu, Estonia's second city with a population of 60,000.

The units that made the crossing linked up with other forces driving on Tartu along the western side of Lake Pskov, and the capture of Kastemekoda put these troops within 12 1-2 miles southeast of Tartu, and 73 miles below the Baltic Sea. This increased the difficulties of German forces holding out along the Sea above Lake Peipus in the sector west of Narva.

In Latvia, another Soviet Army captured 30 localities, including Rami, 5 miles southwest of the rail junction of Madona and nearby Marciena, 73 miles east of Riga. These troops and those under Maslennikov were engaged in a steady chopping up of the 200,000 Germans who have been cut off for weeks.

West of the Lithuanian town of Sialiai the Russians admitted that German forces "at the cost of enormous losses" had driven a slight wedge into Russian lines. This is the area where Gen. Ivan Bagramian's first Baltic army poises a threat on the northeastern side of East Prussia.

A Berlin broadcast late last night said that Gen. Ivan Chernikhovsky's Third White Russian army offensive toward East Prussia "is crystalizing more and more." The announcement said "a major part of the present Soviet fighting force had been shifted to this area," and acknowledged the loss of Vilkaviskis, 12 miles from the border the Germans had claimed its recent recapture.

"Schirwindt is burning," one Soviet flier reported. "Let them burn it. Now ther are burning their own, not ours."

Russian artillery poured shells into German territory, and Soviet planes pounded the enemy inside East Prussia, but there was no specific information that even Russian patrols had yet crossed the frontier under Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin's instructions to "finish the crippled beast in his lair."

Moscow military men did not necessarily expect an immediate Russian crossing into East Prussia, now threatened on the northeast in the area of Schirwindt, 43 miles southeast of the rail city of Tilsit, and also in the southeast near the Biebrza river.

They said this reaching of the frontier might be a Russian dramatic screen for something even bigger in another sector—perhaps northeast of besieged Warsaw in Poland or west of the Vistula river below Warsaw. A powerful break-through across the Polish plains beyond Warsaw might produce disaster for the badly-battered enemy.

Powerful Soviet contingents are locked in furious combat just east of Warsaw near Praga, industrial suburb on hte east bank of the Vistula river stronghold.

A Rome dispatch disclosed that Allied night bombers from southern Italy have been dropping supplies, weapons and ammunition to Polish patriots fighting inside Warsaw, and the Polish government in exile here said the underground warriors were holding their own in bitter street fighting. One entire German infantry platoon was said to have surrendered to the Poles.

The Germans have introduced their new "King Tiger" tanks into the battles west of the Vistula river 100 miles south of Warsaw, Pravda said. The new tanks are part of the 16th Panzer division which, along with others, have been ordered by Adolf Hitler to destroy this menacing Russian bridgehead which Hitler described as "a pistol aimed at the Reich."

The Russians in this sector last were reported within 75 miles of German Silesia, and 35 miles from Krakow, last big Axis bastion in southern Poland before the Silesian frontier. Captives taken from the 16th Panzer Division were quoted as saying they had passed many exhausted Nazi troops and wounded ones in Krakow on their way to reinforce the German lines.

When they asked the wounded Germans how the battles were going at the Vistula the answer was "to hell with battles," Pravda said.

treating Germans are burning their own towns and villages along the East Prussian border to prevent their being of use to the advancing Russians, the Moscow radio said today.

(An NBC broadcast from Moscow said the Red army was reported to have crossed into Germany. The Red army reached the East Prussian boundary yesterday.)

The German communique said the Russians—mopping up an estimated 200,000 Germans trapped in the Baltic States—had crossed Lake Peipus and are established on the west shore in Estonia.

Tartu May Be Outflanked

The drive across the lake, 30 miles wide in places, possibly outflanked the second largest Estonian city of Tartu (population 60,000). Russian troops were 16 miles southeast at last reports.

The Germans also announced they had lost Vilkaviskis, in Lithuania, 12 miles from East Prussia, in a heavy tank battle in which large air formations participated.

The Moscow broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor, said Soviet flyers spotted fires along the whole East Prussia frontier.

"Let Them Burn It"

Moscow, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—The Germans are setting fire to East Prussian frontier villages in the path of the Russian divisions drawn up at the border, advices from the front said today. Russian flyers declared that the torch had been put to Schirwindt, among other villages, and that angry columns of smoke and flames were licking the East Prussian skies.

Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian Army Group was reported massing for a crossing of the Szeszuppe River, which forms part of the German boundary.

[An NBC broadcast from Moscow said the Red Army was reported to have crossed into Germany. The Red Army reached the East Prussian boundary yesterday.]

German Losses Heavy.

The Germans, in a desperate attempt to check the Russian advance, launched a futile assault against the extreme end of Cherniakhovsky's right wing, attacking northwest, west and southwest of Siauliai in Lithuania.

Soviet front reports said that enemy losses were heavy as the Nazis threw in waves of tanks and infantry in an unsuccessful effort to break through into Cherniakhovsky's rear. Gen. Ivan Bagramian's First Baltic Army joined Cherniakhovsky's flank guards in the stubborn defense.

East Prussia, where decisive battles of the first world war were fought, was threatened by three powerful Russian armies along a front nearly 200 miles long, extending from northern Poland at a point below the Suwalki triangle northward beyond the Niemen River in northern Lithuania.

Meanwhile Soviet offensives in Estonia and west of the Vistula bend below Warsaw scored new successes, while east of the besieged Polish capital continuing Nazi counter-attacks were repulsed.

The Vistula bridgehead task forces snared twenty more populated places, steadily increasing

A terrific tank battle continued east of Warsaw and to the north and south of the Polish capital. Any breakthrough in the bulge area across the Vistula, 110 miles south of Warsaw, would imperil a large part of the German Army.

New German Tank

In the region northeast of Warsaw, where the Russians also were threatening the southern boundaries of East Prussia, a deep penetration would menace other thousands of Nazis. West of the Vistula, the Germans introduced a new "King Tiger tank," which Pravda said was a cross between the Tiger and Panther but no superweapon.

The Russians waited expectantly for news of a crossing onto German soil, but dispatches from the East Prussian frontier said German resistance was furious and that the Red army was opposed by a profusion of infantry and self-propelled guns.

"Enemy resistance has stiffened but he is unable to consolidate by taking advantage of favorable defense positions," Lieut. Col. Nikolai Prokofiev reported from the frontier.

Nazis Switch Tank Units

The "Greater Germany" tank division was defeated at the border, Izvestia said, adding that 100 tanks were knocked out in 24 hours. Izvestia reported the arrival of tank units "which until recent days had operated in Italy." Yesterday, the Russians reported units recently in France. A front correspondent said the Germans were hurrying up every kind of unit available, seeking to block a penetration into East Prussia.

In the Sialiai region of west Lithuania, 12 miles from the frontier, the Germans mounted a counterattack with three tank and one infantry division supported by small groups of planes.

Red Star said 55 tanks were knocked out and that "several thousands of soldiers" were killed. German parachutists dropped into Russian positions to "scout anti-tank defenses" were rounded up swiftly.

14 Russian Divisions

The German communique said the main Russian attack against East Prussia was mounted by 14 infantry divisions, several tank brigades and numerous aerial formations, a total of perhaps 225,000 or more men.

Fresh fighting was reported on the long dormant Romanian sector in the Balkans, where the Germans told of Russian attempts to cross the "lower Dnestr" river. Intensified fighting also was reported on the slopes of the Carpathians in the west end of the 1,500-square mile bulge the Russians have captured west of the Vistula river.

The Russians were said to have attempted to raid Kirkenes in northern Norway, suggesting that the Germans might be moving their divisions in Finland to a more active front.

Red Troops Feel No Fatigue

MOSCOW, Aug. 18 (AP).—A front-line correspondent asked a Russian general if his troops were not tired after their long marching and fighting to the East Prussian frontier. He replied: "How can they be? The German border is before us. How can one feel tired under such circumstances?"

Radio Heard

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—The British radio said today that for the first time since the German occupation of Poland, transmissions were heard yesterday morning from a broadcasting station "operated by Poles in Warsaw."

The BBC broadcast, recorded by the OWI, said the Polish radio in Warsaw declared that 30 Polish newspapers "now appear in the capital." BBC also quoted the Warsaw station as reporting that "yesterday the Polish home forces held their positions against heavy and continuous German attacks."

The Turkish radio in a broadcast tonight, also heard by government monitors, said the Sofia population in the streets were hailing Bagrianov as "The savior of Bulgaria."

LONDON REPORTS CLAIM BULGARIA SEEKS PEACE

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 19—(AP) Unconfirmed reports reaching London today said Bulgarian emissaries were dealing with the Allies for peace in the wake of a declaration by Premier Ivan Bagrianov that his government was "determined to remove all obstacles" in the way of peace.

One report said Bulgarian representatives were talking in a neutral country with American, British and Russian representatives. Another said Stoicho Moshanov, former speaker of the Bulgarian Parliament and consistently anti-German, had arrived in Ankara on what might be a peace mission.

Bulgarian Premier Quoted On Peace Aims

London, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Bulgarian radio quoted Premier Ivan Bagrianov last night as telling the Bulgarian Parliament his Government was "determined to remove all obstacles" standing in the way of his country's "love for peace."

The majority of the Bulgarian people never wanted to interfere in a large-scale conflict between great powers," he was quoted as saying. Reports have been circulating for weeks that Bulgaria was trying to find a way to make peace.

Finnish Peace Steps Indicated

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 18 (AP)—Sources closely following the Finnish situation said tonight that very intensive secret activity by the Mannerheim government indicated concrete steps toward an armistice with Russia may be in the making, perhaps within two weeks.

Speculating on the political activity on the basis of information seeping through Finnish censorship, these contacts reasoned Baron Carl Gustave Mannerheim, Finland's new president, was very busy on a move toward pulling out of the war.

He was reported to have obtained assurances from each cabinet member that each would support Mannerheim's efforts to extricate Finland from the war.

Reds Accuse Finns Of A 'Lublin Incident'

London, Aug. 18 (AP)—Russia's "extraordinary state commission for investigating crimes committed on Soviet soil" today accused the Finnish Government of "deliberately seeking to wipe out the population of the Karelian republic" in order to turn the area "into a Finnish colony."

The accusation was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

Pravda, the Communist party organ, was quoted as saying: "There is no difference between the two-legged beasts of a Lublin (Poland) camp run by German Fascists and Finnish two-legged beasts of the Karelo-Finnish camps of death."

Bulgars Start Peace Debate In Parliament

Two Deputies Endorse Major Features of Bagrianov's Address.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—(AP)—The Sofia radio said tonight that the Bulgarian parliament had begun debate on Premier Ivan Bagrianov's "peace" speech, and quoted two deputies as endorsing major features of the address.

Call for Quick Action

One deputy, said the broadcast heard by U. S. government monitors, called upon Bagrianov to "act quickly" after asserting that "this speech was a revelation and expression of the Bulgarian nation's desire and firm determination to remain out of the war."

(Unconfirmed reports from Cairo reported from London said Bulgarian emissaries already were dealing with Allied representatives in a neutral country for peace. One report said Stoicho Moshanov, former speaker of the Bulgarian parliament and an anti-German, had arrived in Ankara on what might be a peace mission.

There was no word on whether Bagrianov's speech, in which he said his government was "determined to remove all obstacles" in the way of peace, had drawn any adverse comment.

Robots Cause Damage But No Fatalities

LONDON, AUG. 18—(AP)—Flying robots penetrated home defenses of Southern England and the London area today and caused damage but no fatalities.

Fighters and anti-aircraft guns brought down some of the robots. RAF Lancasters with fighter cover again attacked a new robot underground supply depot at L'Isle Adam, about 15 miles north of Paris.

Robots Attack London

London, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Germans made a short flying-bomb attack on London and the southern counties early last night and a terse official announcement this morning said both casualties and damage were caused.

DRAWS NAZI FLAK TO SAVE FORTRESS

London, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Lieut. Robert Callahan of Cleveland, Ohio, acted as bait for a German flak battery in his Mustang fighter recently to save a crippled Flying Fortress, American headquarters announced today. He drew the ground fire upon himself and the Fortress safely flew on to Britain.

The Fortress was shot up over Munich, and the navigator, Lieut. Robert Coogan of 7320 Austin street, Forest Hills, Queens, was wounded. Faltering on the return trip, because of a smashed-up compass, and rapidly losing altitude, the cripple was spotted by four Mustangs. Three took up positions above Lieut. Callahan, who flew in close to give the Fortress pilot directions. Then, spotting a Nazi flak nest on the French coast, Lieut. Callahan darted ahead to divert its fire.

"I have never seen such courage in a man," said the co-pilot of the Fortress, Lieut. Robert McGrath of St. Petersburg, Fla. "He flew up there like crazy, teasing hell out of those gunners down below. Just begging them to fire at him."

The fighter planes guided the fortress to a Royal Air Force base near a hospital, where Lieut. Coogan is now recovering. Also aboard the Fortress was Sergt. Gunner Milton Wughalter of 180 East 163d street, New York.

NAZIS PUT PRICE ON HEAD OF FRITZ LINDEMANN

LONDON, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Nazis have put a price of 500,000 marks (about $160,000 pre-war) on the head of Fritz Lindemann for his part in the July 20 attempt on Adolf Hitler's life demonstrating by the size of the reward their fear of a new attempt to overthrow the regime.

Beyond a physical description of the man "wanted," which was broadcast by the German radio and recorded by the ministry of information, there was no clue to the identity of Lindemann, but he probably is the "general of artillery Lindemann" named by Hitler's headquarters Aug. 4 as one of the plotters. He was reported to have deserted to the Russians.

U. S. Ace Gets D. S. C.

LONDON, Aug. 18 (AP).—Major George E. Preddy, Greensboro, N. C., Mustang fighter, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross today for shooting down six German Messerschmitt-109's in the Hamburg area Aug. 6, setting a new American record for one action in this area. Major Preddy has 24½ victories aloft and had destroyed five aground.

Nazi Snipers Still Active In Suburbs of Florence

Allied Occupation Is Delayed. Rest of Front Is Quiet

ROME, Aug. 18 (AP).—German snipers were active in the northwest and northeast suburbs of Florence today, delaying complete Allied occupation of the city.

The situation in northern Florence was reported officially to have improved since yesterday when German tanks were believed to have penetrated the area.

Minor patrol clashes and artillery duels comprised virtually all the activity on the remainder of the Italian front. The Germans abandoned Rosano, one and one-half miles south of Pontassieve in the upper Tiber Valley, and apparently pulled out of other outposts farther east.

Lieutenant General Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander's headquarters, meanwhile, disclosed that the American 91st Infantry Division under command of Major General William G. Livesay now is in the line as part of the 5th Army on the western end of the front.

Tiber Valley Posts Yielded By Nazis

Rome, Aug. 18 (AP)—The tense situation in the northern portions of Florence, into which German tanks yesterday were reported to have penetrated, was described officially as much easier today, but there still was a certain amount of enemy sniping from the northwest and northeast suburbs.

Activity along the rest of the Italian front as a whole remained slight, being limited almost entirely to minor patrol clashes and artillery duels. The enemy along the north bank of the Arno, however, showed increased sensitivity to probing American patrols, bringing down artillery concentrations at a number of points.

Base Abandoned

Indian patrols of the Eighth Army found Rosano, a mile and a half south of Pontassieve, in the upper Tiber Valley, had been abandoned by the enemy, who also appeared to have given up some outposts farther east.

Lieutenant General Sir Harold Alexander's headquarters, meanwhile, disclosed that the United States 91st Infantry Division, under command of Maj. Gen. William G. Livesay, now is in the line as part of the American Fifth Army on the western end of the front.

American mortar fire destroyed four enemy boats in the Arno river north of Lalotta and shellfire knocked out one German self-propelled gun.

Spies Rounded Up

Earlier Allied authorities announced 95 per cent. of the Italian spies and saboteurs sent by the Germans to liberated Italy have been rounded up.

The announcement said their arrest had been made easier by "the cynical disregard displayed by the Germans" for the lives and safety of those whom they employed.

Sixteen of those arrested have been executed, many more have been sentenced to death and a large number still are awaiting trial.

Yanks Bomb Ploesti Twice In 24 Hours

Rome, Aug. 18 (AP)—The Mediterranean air force struck the Ploesti oil field installations in Romania again last night in the wake of a daylight attack yesterday by about 500 American heavy bombers and a large number of fighters.

The American attack caused fires and explosions in the big Romano Americano refinery. Bomb hits on other Ploesti targets, obscured by smoke screens, sent flames towering into the sky.

Airdrome Attacked

A German fighter airdrome at Nis, Yugoslavia, also was hit by the heavies in yesterday's operations, which included hundreds of sorties in support of landings in southern France.

The MAAF lost 37 planes in yesterday's operations, apparently most of them victims of ground fire, since the only air opposition reported was an attack by a small formation of fighters on the heavy bombers leaving Ploesti.

Ploesti Hit Again.

Rome, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Up to 750 heavy bombers of the Italian-based Fifteenth United States Air Force today blasted the German oil installations at Ploesti and Campina, Romania. It was the war's eighteenth attack on the Ploesti region from bases in Italy.

Wavell Denies Gandhi Request For Interview

Viceroy Says Nothing Could Be Gained Because of Differences.

NEW DELHI, Friday, Aug. 18—(AP)—Field Marshal Lord Wavell, the Viceroy of India, has rejected a request for an interview by Mohandas K. Gandhi, who offered to urge full nationalist support of the war effort if India be granted immediate independence, it was announced yesterday.

Nothing to Be Gained

The Viceroy said that because of their sharp differences nothing could be gained by such a meeting now, but he added that he would be glad to consider any "definite and constructive policy."

An exchange of letters between Lord Wavell and the aged Indian Nationalist leader made public today disclosed that Gandhi sought a conference July 17.

He offered to advise the Nationalist Congress to give full support to the war effort "if a declaration of immediate Indian independence be made, and a national government responsible to a central assembly be formed, subject to the provision that during the pendency of the War Military Operations should continue as at present, but without involving any financial burden on India."

The Viceroy said that preliminary work could begin now on framing of a new constitution, but that Indians must first reach a "genuine agreement" among themselves for "a transitional government established and working within the present constitution."

The British government's position, the Viceroy said, is the same as it was when Sir Stafford Cripps tried to reach an agreement with the Indians in 1942: That the offer of unqualified freedom after the war is made conditional upon the framing of a constitution agreed to by the main elements of India's national life and upon the negotiation of a treaty with Britain.

The British view furthermore is that it is impossible to bring about a change in the constitution during hostilities by which a "national government" could be made responsible to a central assembly, the Viceroy said.

Gandhi Advocates 'Wresting Power' From British

New Delhi, Aug. 18 (AP)—Field Marshal Lord Wavel has rejected Mohandas K. Gandhi's request for a conference to discuss immediate independence, it was announced today, and the Nationalist leader said the only way to aid India of British power was to develop enough strength to wrest it from them."

The Viceroy said nothing could be gained by such a conference now, but that he would be glad to consider any "definite and constructive policy."

By Moral Means

"It is clear as a crystal that the British Government do not propose to give up the power they possess over 400,000,000 Indians unless the latter develop enough strength to wrest it from them," Gandhi said at Wardha. "I shall never lose hope that India will do so by purely moral means."

Gandhi had offered full Nationalist support for India's war effort in exchange for immediate independence.

Commenting on his coming meeting with the Moslem leader, Mahomed Ali Jinnah, Gandhi said an "agreement between us can induce a revision of the firm refusal of the British Government" to grant independence.

HEAVY TOLL TAKEN OF JAPS IN BURMA

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 18 — (AP) Allied forces took a heavy toll today of Japanese remnants retreating from Manipur along the Tiddim road, stretching southward below the Burmese-Indian border.

Three hundred Japanese dead and wounded were counted in one five-mile section of the Tiddim road and captured booty since the Allied push south from Moirang started a month ago mounted to 200 motor vehicles, 10 tanks and 12 artillery pieces, communique said.

The Japanese also were forced back on the Sittaung Trail, 18 miles east of Tamu by Allied ground troops. Fighters and bombers ranged virtually the entire length of the Chindwin river, ripping Japanese installations and sinking or damaging 50 enemy river craft.

Without loss, Allied fliers also raked the Mogaung-Mandalay railway in North Burma and strafed Japanese planes on the ground at Lashio.

The north Burma drive on Pinbaw edged forward as units of the 36th Indian division pushed on from captured Thaikwagon.

JAPANESE SEND 2 DIVISIONS INTO HENGYANG AREA

CHUNGKING, Aug. 18 — (AP) The Japanese have brought up two new divisions in an effort to close a vise on Chinese forces attacking toward Hengyang from the southwest, and heavy fighting is raging in the entire area of that enemy-held rail junction in northern Hunan province, the Chinese announced today.

Street fighting was in progress in Leiyang, south of Hengyang, and the Chinese attacked and dispersed with heavy casualties a group of Japanese reinforcements bound for Leiyang, a high command communique said.

Other Chinese forces drove against Kingmen, important Japanese strong point 55 miles northeast of Ichang, Hupeh province, and one of the connecting links in the enemy's overland supply route between Hankow and Ichang. Ichang, northernmost Japanese stronghold in central China, has been the objective of a Chinese offensive started early in the week.

Heavy fighting was in progress in the Kingmen area today and the Chinese were reported making progress.

In western Yunnan province Chinese units fighting to clear the Burma road encountered bitter Japanese resistance in their campaign for Tengchung, Lungling and Mangshih, another High command communique said.

A communique from Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters reported attacks throughout the Chinese battle areas by fighters and bombers of the U. S. 14th air force.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, Chinese army spokesman, said today that the Japanese, trying to cut off Chinese forces attacking Hengyang from the southwest, had brought in two divisions from the Honan and Nanking areas and now have 10 1-2 divisions south of Changsha—210,000 men.

Japanese appear to have shifted the bulk of their strength west of the Siang river, he said, indicating they intend to push toward Kweiin, provisional capital of Kwangsi.

He estimated the Japanese suffered 30,000 casualties in Hunan up to the fall of Hengyang Aug. 8. Out of 16,000 Chinese defenders of Hengyang, 14,078 were killed or wounded up to the day before the city was lost to the enemy, Tseng said. He estimated more than 430,000 troops were engaged on both sides in the battle for Hunan, with the Chinese having a slight preponderance.

New Nippon Drive Perils Hunan Army

Chungking, Aug. 18 (AP)—Japanese forces in Hunan province, striking simultaneously from north and south, are making a determined effort to cut off the retreat of Chinese troops which have been attacking the vital rail junction of Hengyang from the southwest, a Chinese army spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, declared the enemy had brought two more divisions into Hunan from the Honan and Nanking areas, giving them a total strength of more than ten divisions—or about 210,000 men—in the area southward from Changsha.

Attacks Continued

He said the Chinese were continuing their attacks in the Ichang area and the ricebowl segment north of Tungting Lake to prevent the Japanese from sending further reinforcements to Hunan, where he estimated the invaders would need three more full divisions before they could renew their offensive southward.

Meanwhile, Chinese forces have run up against determined Jajanese counterattacks in fighting for Tengchung and the Burma road towns of Lungling and Mangshih, three main objectives of the western Yunnan offensive, a Chinese communique said.

The enemy made four night attacks northeast of Mangshih but all were repulsed, the announcement today said.

Night Blows Repulsed

The Chinese were reported preparing to exploit six footholds on the city walls of Tengchung and trying to eliminate strongly fortified Japanese positions outside the city from their flanks.

The Chinese continued attacks on strongly fortified hills forming the last major enemy held positions east and south of Lungling.

Bombers Hit Jap Airdromes In Banda Sea

Liberators and Mitchells Pour Explosives On Key Bases.

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Saturday, Aug. 19. (AP)—Smashing raids in force at Japanese airdromes in the Banda Sea, with concentrated attacks on the strongpoints at Amboina and Ceram islands, were announced today by headquarters.

Key Island Bomb-Combed

Liberators and Mitchells Thursday bomb-combed key island objectives west of New Guinea in a day of aerial activity stretching more than 1,000 miles from the Philippines to Timor.

Escorted heavy bombers in force pounded the Liang airdrome on Amboina and Halmahera airfield on Ceram—the latter about 300 miles southwest of American-held Noemfoor. They destroyed an unestimated number of grounded aircraft, starting fires and explosions.

Lightning fighters pursued 15 fleeing Japanese Zeros, shooting down nine. Two lightnings were lost in all operations.

Four Planes Destroyed

Liberators, supported by Mitchells, rocked the Namlea airdrome on Boeroe island, west of Ceram, destroying four parked planes.

All of these key objectives in the Molucca Islands have been hit frequently. But these were the first raids "in force" for months.

They followed Gen. Douglas MacArthur's statement yesterday that air power was "reducing the enemy's potential strength in the Moluccas" and already had forced heavy Japanese shipping back by the attacks on Halmahera island.

Patrol planes bombed Kaoe township on Halmahera at night and sank a supply-laden sailing vessel to the south. Other patrol planes scored three hits on a merchantman in Davao Gulf, Mindano island of the Philippines.

Landing on Wardo

Units of the Allied force on Biak island, off northern Dutch New Guinea, landed at Wardo, on the island's west coast, to pursue mopping-up operations of Japanese remnants. The Americans, who first landed in late May control the entire eastern half of the island. The Wardo landing was the second subsequent ship-to-shore movement against Nipponese holding out in remote sectors.

On Noemfoor island, 50 miles west of Biak, the "Japanese forces have been practically eliminated as of Thursday," a headquarters spokesman said. An additional 487 counted dead, 163 prisoners and 137 released Japanese prisoners of the Nipponese have been reported.

The Japanese total losses on Noemfoor, which the Americans invaded July 2, are: Counted dead, 1,457; prisoners, 633; freed captives, 405. American losses: 61 killed; 289 wounded, two missing. The total of captured Japanese is proportionately the highest of any Pacific campaign.

Japs' Philippine Lines Periled By Blockade

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Aug. 18 (AP)—An Allied air and naval blockade spread creeping paralysis today across vital sea lanes below the Philippines, posing an ultimate threat to all Japanese holdings south of China.

Already enemy garrisons on islands scattered along a distance of 800 miles are forced to rely on "makeshift shipping," inadequate "for even essential items such as munitions and aviation gasoline."

Halmahera Hit Again

A graphic picture of this mounting disaster for Nippon was presented today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur in a communique reporting the fifth air raid this month on the Philippines and the knocking out of 23 planes at neutralized Halmahera.

MacArthur said Japan's big ships no longer dare venture southeast of a line curved from the Philippines through Celebes and Ceram.

Only small ships supply outlying garrisons in Halmahera and in the Ceram, Banda and Arafura seas.

"The strategic effect of this rapid shrinkage of his sea communications is to further threaten the enemy's vital Philippines-Halmahera defense line," the communique said.

Today's communique reported the sinking of a 1,000-ton freighter in Davao Gulf, southern Philippines, by aerial bombing. It also told of an 87-ton bombing of Halmahera where 88 planes have been destroyed or put out of action, practically all of them on the ground, in half a month's time.

Seaplane Base Hit

At Pearl Harbor, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz yesterday announced another in a steadily growing series of strikes by land-based bombers on the Bonin Islands, 600 miles south of Tokyo. The Liberators attacked a seaplane base at Chichi Jima Tuesday.

He also reported a continuation of air raids north of Japan on Paramushiro in the Kuriles.

NAVY PILOT BEHEADS JAP SOLDIER IN TREE

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 18—(AP) Spotting a Japanese sniper in a tree on Tinian island, Lt (jg) Raymond Globokar, of Chisholm, Minn., "buzzed" the tree-top with his plane, and beheaded the Nipponese.

The Lieutenant's feat with a torpedo plane on Aug. 6 was disclosed here today by Marine Capt. H. Grady Gatlin, of Nashville, Tenn., flying observer with Globokar.

Pay Day in the Marianas, And Nothing There to Buy

Pilots and Ground Crews Put It Into Money Orders

SEVENTH ARMY AIR FORCE BASE IN THE MARIANAS (Delayed)—(AP)—It was the first pay day in months for many pilots and ground crewmen, and they wanted to splurge.

Here was the situation—

Cigarettes—One package per man per day, issued free.

Candy—One bar per man per day, also free.

Beer—Not a drop at any price.

Shaves, shines, haircuts—Self-service only.

Travel—No place to go, no time to go if there were.

The Army Postal officer did a flourishing business. He nearly sold out of money order blanks.

U. S. FLIERS SMASH AT IWO, NEAR JAPAN

Island Airfields Are Target—Rota, Pagan in Marianas Also Hit in Wide Sweep

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—Striking the Japanese throughout the western Pacific area, American planes pounded enemy bases in the Volcano, Marianas and Caroline Island groups Wednesday, blasting airfields, storage dumps, gun positions and other defense installations, a Navy bulletin said today.

Big Liberator bombers of the Seventh Air Force, the Navy said, hit Iwo Island in the Volcanos, less than 650 miles from Tokyo.

Several enemy fighters were in the air but did not damage the bombing flight, which chose as targets the airfields, storage facilities and other installations at the enemy base.

All of the planes returned after meeting only meager anti-aircraft fire. [The Liberators took off for the 1,300-mile round trip from bases in the Marianas, The United Press stated.]

Farther south, fighter planes sped in at Rota and Pagan Islands in the Marianas to strafe and bomb gun positions and enemy air strips. They met only light anti-aircraft fire at Rota, although at Pagan there was slightly heavier opposition.

The Seventh Air Force sent out another flight of Liberators the same day to pound Dublon Island in Truk atoll.

Six Japanese fighter planes attempted to intercept the bombers. One of the enemy planes was shot down and three damaged before the bombers returned to their base, leaving fire blazing after large explosions.

Navy and marine bombers on Wednesday also attacked Nauru Island and Mili atoll, the latter in the mid-Pacific Marshalls.

RANKIN'S RAIDERS HARRIED JAP SHIPS

Washington, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Rankin's Night Raiders, a squadron flying Navy Catalina flying boats, has returned from the South Pacific with a tale of success in operations against Japanese night shipping, the Navy disclosed today.

The raiders, who took their name from their commanding officer, Commander Eugene P. Rankin of 1021 East Thompson street, Sapulpa, Okla., killed thousands of Japanese soldiers and sent tons of Japanese supplies to the bottom in attacks co-ordinated with PT-boat operations over a six-month period.

Commander Rankin, who headed the unit until last June 15, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for outstanding leadership. The present commander is Lieut.-Commander Thomas L. Conroy, 460 G avenue, Coronado, Cal.

The raiders, in planes painted pitch black, flew 1,777 sorties, dropped 5,483 bombs and expended 2,000,000 rounds of machine-gun ammunition. They rescued seven downed airmen in open sea landings.

One of the rescue missions was accomplished, despite heavy anti-aircraft fire, by Lieut. Robert L. Fleming of Mystic, Conn., and his crew.

On one combat mission Lieut. Henry J. Kellogg of Nebraska City, Neb., made a bombing and strafing run, crippling three Jap barges, then moved up the coast and bombed a 130-foot craft and two more barges, leaving all ships burning and leaking.

Curtin's Post-War Power Issue At Polls

Canberra, Aug. 18 (AP) — Australian voters will be called upon tomorrow to decide whether the government of Prime Minister John Curtin should be given additional power for five years after the war to handle post-war problems.

When the war started the Commonwealth Government passed the National Security Act giving it wide powers, many of which in peacetime would be within the jurisdiction of state governments. The measure terminates when the war ends.

Some States In Accord

The Commonwealth Government and many of the state governments feel that the wide powers of the central government should be continued in the post-war period. The coming election will determine just how far these powers will go.

Involved is the extent of government jurisdiction over transport, price fixing, national health, markets, public works, employment and production of some essential commodities.

New Zealand Air Losses

Wellington, N. Z., Aug. 18 (AP)—Casualties among New Zealand airmen since the war's beginning to the end of March total 3,062. Killed on operations dead, 2,210; missing and believed dead, 93; missing, 314; prisoners of war or interned, 445.

CORRESPONDENT IN HAVEN

AP Man at La Paz, Bolivia, Takes Refuge in Chilean Embassy

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 18 (AP)—Julio Valdes, 28-year-old Associated Press Correspondent, at La Paz, Bolivia, has taken refuge in the Chilean Embassy there, diplomatic circles reported here tonight.

Detailed information was not immediately available. Efforts to communicate with Senor Valdes, a Bolivian citizen, by cable and telephone have been unsuccessful since he reported Aug. 16 the reappearance of the tin mine owner, Mauricio Hochschild, whose whereabouts had been unknown to the public for several weeks.

The telephone company reported that the military censor at La Paz had refused to permit Senor Valdes to accept calls.

YOUTHS, 16, TAKEN BY ARMY

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 18—(AP) A presidential decree today authorized admission of youths to signal units of the army at age 16. They will be permitted to acquire technical training under five-year contracts. The age limit was reduced from 18.

Foreign Pilots Banned In Mexico

Mexico City, Aug. 18 (AP)—Foreign pilots may not operate foreign planes over Mexican air routes, the Communications Ministry has announced.

The Ministry said that permission had been given to Aerovias Braniff, a Mexican company, to rent planes belonging to Braniff Airways, Inc., but that the rental arrangements must cease after the war.

As for North American pilots, they can only be employed as technical advisers, the Ministry said, and for not longer than six months.

New Automatic Device Controls Flyers' Oxygen

R. C. A. F. Valve Gives Supply to Airmen 'on Demand'

TORONTO, Aug. 18 (AP).—A "demand valve" which supplies oxygen for high-altitude combat according to the airman's need has been developed by the clinical investigation unit of the Royal Canadian Air Force and aeronautical engineers, an Air Force press release said today.

The scientists had to evolve a valve which would turn on oxygen when the airman breathed in and turn it off when he breathed out. It was necessary also for the valve to deliver the proper proportion of oxygen, since considerably more is required at high altitudes.

In the new device a diaphragm regulates the frequency of oxygen intake. As the airman breathes, the diaphragm presses a tiny spring, releasing the right amount of oxygen. As the aircraft rises, a metal bellows expands and makes the mixture inhaled richer in oxygen.

Military aviation long has tried to produce a satisfactory demand valve. Pilots zooming and diving at 500-miles-an-hour speeds have no time to fiddle with control dials. A flow of oxygen satisfactory at 15,000 feet, for example, brings unconsciousness at 30,000 feet.

The German Air Force introduced the demand-valve principle in 1933 and has been working on it ever since. The R. C. A. F. valve, weighing fourteen ounces and small enough to be slung around a pilot's neck, is half the size and weight of the Nazi type. Its Canadian inventors say it is more efficient.

Hull Will Confer With Dewey Adviser

APR 19 1944

Move to Include GOP in Postwar Negotiations Strengthens U. S. Position In Relation to Other Nations.

By John M. Hightower

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—(AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today proposed and Secretary of State Hull accepted direct participation by Dewey's foreign relations adviser in American preparations for organizing postwar world security.

Strengthens U. S. Position

This dramatic turn of political events in the backgrounds of big four security talks beginning here next week was immediately interpreted in diplomatic quarters as strengthening the United States' position in relation to the other conferees — Russia, Britain and China.

Dewey had wired Hull earlier today suggesting that John Foster Dulles, who probably would be his secretary of state if Dewey is elected president, confer wth Hull on postwar foreign policy.

The Republican nominee's move followed a Hull conference statement yesterday that he would be glad to meet with Dewey or any one else who same in a mood of cooperation rather than one of political partianship.

Hull Replies

After receiving Dewey's telegram tday, Hull responded with this message:

"I am in receipt of your telegram of August 18 in which you say 'I am happy to accept your proposal for consultation made at your press conference yesterday and to designate Mr. John Foster Dulles as my representative.'

"I am immensely gratified to receive your assurance of bo-partisan cooperation in the effort to establish lasting peace.

"I shall be delighted to see Mr. Dulles and to confer with him on any date or dates convenient to him'."

GOP Had Conferred Before

Hull previously had put a Republican leader, former Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, one-time chairman of the Republican national committee, on the American delegation to the four-power meetings, of which Undersecretary Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., is chairman.

Fletcher, however, while he brought a Republican point of view to the delegation, did not necessarily represent the Republican leadership of this year's political campaigns. Dulles, on the other hand, is a recognized part of that leadership, and while there is no evident intention of making him a part of the delegation, Hull's and Dewey's decision to count him in on current developments evidently strengthened their mutual pledges of bi-partisan cooperation.

Regarded Highly

Dulles already has conferred with some State Department officials on postwar organization and he is regarded highly by them. Should he now come as the man who likely would be Dewey's secretary of state if the Republican aspirant wins the presidency, it would be in a somewhat more formal capacity than he has had in the past.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) called Dewey's proposal to send Dulles here "a notable contribution to effective, non-partisan consideration of peace organization plans.

Meanwhile it appeared that another Democratic-Republican talk on foreign policy might be held relatively soon by President Roosevelt and the 1940 Republican nominee, Wendell L. Willkie. Mr. Roosevelt was asked at a news conference today whether he would like to meet with Willkie for a foreign policy discussion and he carefully refrained from closing the door to such a talk by saying that that was a personal matter and declining to go into it any further.

FDR Would Not Confirm

The President would not confirm, as had been reported in the press, that he had actually written Willkie a letter inviting him to a foreign policy discussion, but reports persisted that overtures already have been made.

Meantime, plans were perfected for the conference, opening here Monday, at which representatives of the United States, Britain and Russia will discuss a postwar peace-enforcing agency.

China is to discuss the subject with Britain and the United States later.

No Conflict With Russia

Russia's plans for the world organization were understood on good authority to offer no serious conflict with the views of the United States and Britain, even on the points of the rights of small nations and the organization of force.

This is true, it was reported, despite the emphasis which has recently been laid on an unofficial Russian analysis which said that the "directive organ" of the world security organization should be composed only of the big four powers. The analysis also called for creation of an international air force which would be at the disposition of the big powers in their capacity of controlling the world organization.

Not Official Views

Actually, it is understood that the views as presented in the analysis published in a Leningrad magazine are not necessarily those which the Russian government intends to back up at the Dumbarton Oaks four-power meetings here. The official Russian ideas for the Dumbarton Oaks sessions were set forth in a five-page memorandum commenting on American proposals for world peace organization which previously had been submitted to both Moscow and London.

While the Russian document remains a closely guarded secret, it was learned that it offers no inevitable conflict between Russia's position and that of the United States and Britain, the British having already subscribed to stated American plans.

Russia Willing

It is this fact—implying an evident willingness on Russia's part to take the small nations into full counsel so long as responsibilities are kept equal to national power—which is behind the optimism of officials over the prospects for the Dumbarton Oaks talks.

Secretary Hull is expected to open the initial Dumbarton meeting Monday morning with a statement which may reemphasize his expressed belief that one of the keys to success of the world organization is close cooperation and mutual confidence between the large nations and the small.

Peace Agency By Fall Aim Of Hull

APR 19 1944

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—The possibility that a world peace agency can be established even before the end of the war in Europe arose today with Secretary of State Hull's disclosure that a United Nations conference on security plans may be held this fall.

American officials say it has not yet been decided whether the new world organization should be set up by treaty or ordinary legislation in each country.

This point will probably come under discussion at the talks between Russia, Britain and the United States opening at Dumbarton Oaks here Monday.

In Contrast To Paris Parley

However, it is now clear that in contrast to the Paris conference after the last war, the long-range peace settlement including boundaries and territorial adjustments will come after the establishment of a new association of nations.

Diplomats who remember the deluge of claimants from all over the world on Paris, demanding increased territories or independence, are encouraged at the one-step-at-a-time process being used to make the peace after World War II.

Hull has made it clear that this time establishment of the machinery for settlement of international disputes will come first, and then the disputes can be taken up as they arise.

Expresses Concern

Hull's deepest concern, he indicated yesterday, is not over the willingness of other nations to participate in world cooperation but involves what he termed a lack of informed American public interest in the estabilshment of a peace agency. He told reporters at a news conference:

"I wish I could burn this into your minds and memories for the next 50 years at least, and that is, the human race this hour, this day, this week, this year is confronted by the gravest crisis in all its experience and that we who are here on the scene of action at this critical time have the responsibility of saying which way the world is going for 50 years to come."

He pleaded for a revival of the fiery spirit of liberty which moved American revolutionaries, and expressed his conviction that American participation in the peace agency must be on a nonpartisan basis.

Reich Occupation Hint

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today there was a rather general understanding among the Allies for occupation of Germany regardless of how or when the Nazis give up.

The President told a news conference that while there were no detailed arrangements there was a general understanding with Russia and Britain on the question. He said you could not plan all of the details in advance, but everything was going along all right.

Responding to a question, he expressed the belief that it would be just as easy to reach an understanding with China for occupation of Japan.

FDR EXPECTS TO CONFER WITH CHURCHILL SOON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—(AP) President Roosevelt told reporters today that he expected to have another conference with Prime Minister Churchill soon, but would not become more specific as to the date.

At a news conference the President elaborated somewhat on his recent remark that Germany and Japan would be occupied regardless of whether they surrender before being over-run by Allied troops.

He said there was a rather general understanding with Russia and Britain on the question of occupying Germany, although all of the details cannot be planned in advance; and added in response to questions that it would be just as easy to reach an understanding with China for occupation of Japan

President Suggests Year of Military, Civil Work for 17 to 23 Group.

USE FOR ARMY CAMPS

Program Would Be Non-Compulsory, He Says, Asking Public Study It.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 — (AP) President Roosevelt said today public opinion should be gradually formed on the idea of offering a year's postwar training—both military and civil — to 1,000,000 or 1,250,000 youths between 17 and 23.

He told a news conference that excellently built service camps in the United States, Alaska, the Aleutians and elsewhere — capable of housing 5,000,000 men — could be utilized for the purpose.

He said it would not constitute compulsory military training, but some military and some civilian training, including vocational and stenographic courses to prepare young men for civilian jobs, some of them in the government service.

Benefits would be both physical and mental, he said, citing improvements in the makeup of thousands of youths who trained in the Civilian Conservation Corps. Muscle building resulting from ditch-digging is a good thing for some, he declared.

Sees Discipline Needed

Saying he personally has studied the matter and that it warrants public study, the Chief Executive said such training would teach [illegible] the special art of living together in groups, and also teach them cleanliness and discipline. He remarked parenthetically that discipline is rather a good thing for the nation, that it is not to be sneezed at.

Such a program also might make for an improvement in law and order, he added, saying we are not such a law-abiding people though we are not so bad on order.

The President's remarks were prompted by a question whether study was being given to compulsory military training in peacetime.

Emphasizing that the study was not wholly along military lines, he replied that the nation would have a postwar problem in deciding what to do with all the housing put up to train servicemen. He said these houses had 5,000,000 beds and, unlike First World war housing which had to be scrapped a few years after the war, probably would last 25 years.

He offered three suggestions for utilizing these camps in peacetime:

1.—Caring for a large number of non-ambulatory sick veterans.

2.—Housing vocational trainees so it will not be necessary to build new structures to carry out a program already legislated for.

3.—Housing for many other trainees—some military, some not.

F. D. R. Threat Seen Shocking Japs

APR 19 1944

By Morris J. Harris

[Chief of the former Associated Press bureau at Shanghai and long-time resident of Japan]

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt's statement that Japan is to be occupied, surrender or not, will jar that vain country to its heels.

When Japan's proud overlords hear this they are going to be fit to be tied, for they have always thought of themselves as masters.

Heretofore they have bowed to no one. Japan has not even been so much as invaded, much less occupied by a foe.

Strange things await that deluded empire and it's going to take some time for the Sons of Heaven to become reconciled to them.

Books List Successes

From the dawn of history their folklore and books have been filled with glowing accounts of thundering successes against "barbarians" who sought to invade the sacred isles.

"We are invincible and the Gods stand with us when a foe dares cast hostile eyes at our land of the Rising Sun," a Japanese battlecry centuries old.

This White House pronouncement that our GI Joes are going to walk over Tokyo will cause a greater unheaval in the Japanese mind than did the great earthquake of 1923, and that was something.

Defeat in battle is bad enough to a Japanese, something that is not admitted, regardless of facts to the contrary. But to have Americans patrolling Tokyo's Ginza (Japan's Michigan Boluevard, Fifth Avenue or Market street), well, Roosevelt's statement will shake the scared shrines at Ise in west Japan where lie the remains of all Japan's emperors since the time of the Sun Goddess and the beginning of the empire.

APR 19 1944

Chinese Occupation

To make matters worse for the Japanese peace of mind, it is talked around here more and more that the Chinese are going to have a hand in this occupation of Japan.

And the Chinese are thinking that way, too. Only a few days ago a Chungking leader said the Chinese are willing to undertake the expulsion of the Japanese from China and occupation of Japan, once they get the tools to work with.

Contrast that with Japanese talk for decades of their superiority over the Chinese and their "destiny" to lead all oriental peoples, if not the whole world.

Japanese-Americans In Italy Cited

Washington, Aug. 18 (AP)—The army has reported that its Japanese-American 100th Infantry Battalion has fought through almost every major battle in Italy, and has not had a single case of desertion or absence without leave.

The nearest to AWOL was accomplished by two soldiers who left a field hospital behind the lines before their wounds were healed, and hitch-hiked back to the outfit on the battlefield.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, Fifth Army Commander, recently gave the unit a citation. Among the soldiers of the battalion, most of whom are from Hawaii, there are 1,000 Purple Hearts, 44 Silver Stars, 31 bronze Stars, 9 Distinguished Service Crosses, and 3 Legion of Merit medals. Fifteen enlisted men have received commissions on the battlefield for displaying outstanding leadership.

Generals Now Using A 'Sam Browne' Belt

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—The Army now issues a Sam Browne belt to generals so that they can pack their pistols.

Made of russet-colored calfskin, it has a shoulder strap and two holsters for .45-caliber weapons. It is worn over the regulation web service belt, to which it can be attached by concealed loops.

Snaps make it adjustable, so that it can be worn over any number or combination of coats, blouses, field jackets and other garments. It has decorative value also with an interlocking buckle stamped with the coat of arms of the United States.

It is issued to all generals. Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, who always carries two pistols, has been photographed wearing his.

NavyForms Pontoon Battalions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP)—Formation of pontoon battalions, consisting of 1,153 Seabees and officers for operation of pontoons in amphibious landings was announced by the Navy today. The Seabee battalions will be trained to man pontoon ferries and to transport equipment to beaches in invasion operations.

Lieutenant General's Rank Asked for Patch

Roosevelt Seeks Promotion for Captain McCrea, Also

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt today nominated for promotion to lieutenant general Major General Alexander M. Patch jr., commander of the 7th American Army now invading southern France.

General Patch holds the temporary rank of major general and his present permanent rank is colonel of infantry.

President Roosevelt also nominated Captain John L. McCrea, U. S. N., of Mariette, Mich., who was his naval aide from January, 1942, to February, 1943, to be a rear admiral. McCrea left his White House assignment to become the first skipper of the battleship Iowa.

The President also nominated Brigadier General James G. Christiansen, of Portland, Ore., chief of staff of the Army Ground Forces, for promotion to major general.

Brigadier General William Frazer Tompkins, of Richmond, Va., chief of the Army's special planning division for the post-war period, also was nominated to be a major general.

Among those nominated for promotion from colonel to brigadier general was Arthur G. Trdeau, of Leonia, N. J.

Naval Captains Frank J. Wille, Denver; Albert M. Penn, Laredo, Tex., and Carl A. Trexel, Des Moines, Iowa, also were nominated to be rear admirals.

Naval Captains Virgil E. Korns, Pittsburgh; Edmond J. Moran, Eufala, Ala., and Oliver O. Kessing, Indianapolis, were recommended for promotion to commodores.

Other brigadier generals of the Army nominated for promotion to major generals included:

Donald A. Stroh, Harrisburg, Pa.; Ben M. Sawbridge, Yakima, Wash.; Clinton F. Robinson, Toledo, Ohio; Paul L. Williams, South Pasadena, Calif.; Walter A. Wood jr., Sacramento, Calif.; Samuel E. Anderson, Greensboro, N. C.; Verne D. Mudge, Fellsmere, Fla., and Sidney P. Spalding, Lowell, Mass.

Mrs. Luce Sees 'Imperialism' In Demands for Island Bases

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 — Representative Clare Boothe Luce (R-Conn) tonight admonished against "demands" for permanent acquisition of Atlantic and Pacific islands, other than Japanese mandated islands, "lest America become involved in imperialism."

"I believe," the blonde Congresswoman said, "the British will allow us what military, naval and aviation facilities we need to keep the peace in the Altantic and Pacific," and then declared:

"Demands for anything more would be interpreted as an imperialistic grab, and in my opinion would be precisely that."

She gave her views to newspapermen after Senator McKellar (D-Tenn), author of a resolution favoring United States acquisition of island outposts, told the Senate that "in two great World Wars we have been more than generous to Great Britain." He said Britain should grant this country permanent possession of Bermuda and West Indian islands.

In the case of Japanese mandated islands of the Pacific, the Tennessee senator said "we are entitled to them under the rules of war."

McKellar emphasized to the Senate that he introduced his resolution without any consultation with President Roosevelt or Secretary of State Hull.

Mrs. Luce, who frequently addresses the House on foreign affairs, said she believed this country would be "loath to take over land with large native populations, even if they were offered to us," and she asked: "Why take them over since we are going to free them anyway?"

She said she felt the Japanese mandated islands "should come to us" so far as America needs them for military purposes.

As to other islands of the Atlantic and Pacific she voiced confidence that "Australia, Britain and America will be able to arrange their defenses," adding, "the safety of the United States, as of Britain, depends of the closest cooperation, militarily and economically."

Mrs. Luce outlined a three-point program on the acquisition of islands, as follows:

1. Wait until the military says what our needs are for island bases.

2. Try to arrange purely military and naval facilities, cooperating with the owners of these islands, on an amicable basis solely on a "keep-the-peace program."

3. Acquire no native populations.

By acquiring native populations, she said, America would only create racial problems for itself.

In his Senate speech McKellar said French possessions in the Caribbean area should be taken because "France owes us an enormous sum for the last World war and she has not paid us, and in this war deserted us."

SENATE WARNED OF BIGGER ROBOTS

Washington, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—Establishment of an "Air Policy Commission" was proposed today by Senator Murray (D.-Mont.), who cautioned that science soon may turn out robot bombs capable of flying the Atlantic and hitting a specific skyscraper. The commission would be a policy-making body charged with recommending to Congress steps designed to further both military and civil aviation.

Mr. Murray in a statement released with introduction of his resolution, said:

"I am reliably informed that in the progress of aeronautical science it may soon be possible to produce an electronic controlled robot bomb which could fly the Atlantic from any section of Europe, select the island of Manhattan as the general target, and then select the Empire State Building as the specific target."

The robot bombs are coming in for attention on the other side of the Capitol, too. Representative Wadsworth (R.-N. Y.) suggested yesterday that post-war expansion of military research would be needed to combat such innovations.

Bomber Losses So Low Production Being Cut

APR 19 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 — (AP) — America's losses in heavy bombers have been so much less than anticipated that production is being cut back gradually and 294,000 workers will be laid off in the aircraft industry by next July, Major Gen. Oliver P. Echols said today.

Willow Run Reduced

At the vast Ford Willow Run plant in Detroit a reduction of 50 per cent will be effective by December, said Echols who is assistant chief of air staff.

Testifying before the Senate National Defense Committee on disposal of surplus war property, he said that more than 1,900,000 aircraft workers are now employed, and that "we figure approximately 100,000 will be cut out by the first of the year."

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) said the committee heard that 200,000 more men are needed in other phases of war production, and asked Echols why this number could not be released by the aircraft industry to "other employers right now."

Shifting Manpower

"I don't think they could place them properly," Echols replied, adding that "it's a question of shifting manpower."

He also said that while Willow Run employment will be reduced to roughly 15,000 by December, "we want to keep something" there in order to adjust production plans "if we're wrong," as in the recent instance when a shortage of tanks developed.

Willow Run is "not counted on" for the production of B-29's, Super Fortresses now being used to bomb Japan, "because of labor shortages," Echols said.

Surplus Material Disposal

Since June, the air force reported $109,500,000 worth of surplus material for disposal, Echols reealed, including approximately $96,000,000 in aircraft and $13,500,000 in other items, one-third of which was "sheep shearing" for flying suits. About $4,000,000 worth of the material has been disposed of, he said.

About 8,000 "obsolete" planes have been turned over to the surplus War Property Administration for disposal and additional planes will be added the "next two or three months," he said.

Full Publicity

Before a long list of army witnesses began testifying, Senator Hatch (D-NM), acting chairman, released a committee statement declaring that the "full white light of publicity" will be thrown upon disposal of war properties to prevent any "skullduggery and wrongdoing."

Without reflecting upon officials charged with the responsibility of such disposals, Hatch said that "opportunities which exist for wrongdoing, if not actual fraud, are tremendous and the temptations to profit materially will be great."

Transport Board Proposed

Senate Bill Would Create 3-Man Co-ordinating Agency

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP).—Creation of a permanent three-member Federal transporation authority, charged with co-ordinating rail, motor and water transportation throughout the country, was proposed in a bill introduced today by Senator Lister Hill, Democrat, of Alaska.

The bill also would assure that all transportation rates and charges "shall be free from discriminations, preferences, prejudices and inequalities," a provision which was interpreted as aimed at the present rail freight rate structure, which the South claims discriminates against its industrial progress.

New Radios When Nazis Fall

W. P. B. Says Quotas Will Be Eased But War Output Must Rise Now

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP).—Manufacture of civilian radio receiving sets will be resumed after the surrender of Germany, but not before, the War Production Board said today.

Charles E. Wilson, executive vice-chairman, has notified radio manufacturers that the curtailment of arms production after the Nazi collapse might release enough materials to make possible the lifting of quota restrictions on the radio industry.

In the mean time output of radio and radar for war purposes must climb through next December, Mr. Wilson said, to about 16 per cent above the July production.

House Debates Disposal Of Surplus War Property

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 —(AP) Ding-dong debate over proposals to give soil conservation districts, schools and public institutions prior access to surplus war property tied the House in such a knot today that Rep. Manasco (D-Ala) said the bill creating surplus disposal machinery may not reach a vote until next Tuesday.

As administration managers anticipated, these proposed changes split House forces wide on the overall measure to handle the sale of an estimated $100,000,000,000 in plants, tanks, jeeps, planes and other equipment.

In a surprise move, the Senate Military Affairs committee late in the day approved a proposal to substitute an eight-member board to direct Surplus War Property disposal for other pending legislation calling for a single administrator.

By a vote of seven to four, it tentatively accepted an amendment by Senator Johnson (D-Colo) inserting the board provision in the Murray-Taft-Stewart Property Disposal bill now under committee consideration. The committee deferred final action, however, until tomorrow.

In the House Rep. Poage (D-Tex) rounded up some support for his plan to give the Agriculture department access to surplus equipment so it could be used in soil conservation and flood control but the amendment was shouted down on a voice vote. Rep. Taber (R-N.Y.) voiced the objection that it was "nothing more than an unlimited appropriation" for the Agriculture department.

Rep. Tarver (D-Ga) offered the amendment to give schools and institutions some of the surplus equipment but Manasco, floor manager of the bill, protested it as a "gift" of material that should be sold for as much as the government can get.

The Tarver plan was voted down, 69 to 31, after more than an hour's debate.

The House then adopted on voice votes amendments requiring public notice before any surplus property may be destroyed, rewording one section to "guarantee" against making "gifts" of any of the property and prohibiting the dumping of surplus crops and food on the market at less than the parity prices.

While the House decided against a Saturday session and prepared to resume final work on the legislation Monday, the national farmers union came out with a statement sharply critical of Will L. Clayton, the present Surplus Property Administrator. James G. Patton, union president, said President Roosevel should remove Clayton because o "his demonstrated hostility to th true interests of farmers, sma business and labor.

"He is now selling this propert off as fast as he can without regar for the views of farmers, sma business and labor. He is too ex pensive a luxury for the America people," Patton said.

Meanwhile an amendment by Rep Voorhis (D-Cal) was adopted ten tatively which requires the ad ministrator to sell in small lots where practical to the small opera tor before the big business interests may bid.

FDR Claims Agreement Reached On Postwar Merger of Army, Navy

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—(AP) President Roosevelt said today there is general agreement on the need for postwar merger of the Army and Navy into a single department under unified command.

But nothing will be done about it, he said at a news conference, until after the war.

The President's remarks were made while commenting on a magazine article in which his vice presidential running mate, Senator Harry S. Truman, urged unification of the services.

The President did not elaborate, but his comment indicated that opposition to the idea, largely within the Navy, has been overruled at the top command level.

At hearings before a special House committee several months ago, Navy witnesses were generally skeptical of the value of merger, while the Army witnesses supported the idea.

Truman, in an article in Collier's magazine, said evidence obtained by the special Senate committee of which he was chairman showed a division of power and function in the field, competition in procurement of essential materials, rivalry in claiming credit for new developments and wastage and conflict inimical to efficient conduct of the war.

Nelson-Sponsored Bill Protects Trade Secrets

Would Guard Information Given to War Agencies

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP).—Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Priorities Board, asked Congress today to provide stiff penalties for any one who discloses any of the vast amount of confidential information industry has given to government agencies. Representative Hatton W. Sumners, Democrat, of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, promptly introduced the legislation Mr. Nelson proposed, and said he thought it should be adopted.

"We are very anxious that this information shall not be used for purposes other than war production," Mr. Nelson wrote to Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas.

His request for a law followed by several months the less drastic action of ordering W. P. B. personnel not to divulge industrial data and not to take it home with them.

Laws now on the books, Mr. Nelson told Representative Rayburn, hold no protection for a business man who imparts trade secrets to the War Production Board; for example, against disclosure of those same facts to perhaps a competitor. The only bars raised are against revealing information of a military character.

"Much confidential information regarding business and industry has been made available by manufacturers with the understanding that this information is for war-production purposes only," Mr. Nelson wrote.

PRESIDENT SAYS WILLKIE HAS NO BID TO SEE HIM

Tells Press Conference Matter of a Meeting Is a Personal One.

NOTHING TO ADD AS TO HULL

Asserts Secretary Has Taken All Into His Confidence on Plans for Post-war World.

Washington, Aug. 18 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt said at a news conference today that there was nothing to published reports that he had invited Wendell L. Willkie, 1940 Republican presidential candidate, to a White House conference on post-war security questions.

When asked whether he would like to talk with Mr. Willkie on that subject, the President replied that that was rather a personal matter. There were published reports that Mr. Roosevelt had written Mr. Willkie, asking him to call at the White House to discuss foreign policy. In New York Mr. Willkie said he had no comments.

The President had nothing to add to Secretary of State Hull's statement yesterday describing as "utterly and completely unfounded" Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's expressed fear that the Allied Big Four were headed for a permanent military alliance that would coerce small nations and dominate the post-war world.

When asked whether there was any truth to reports that he might propose an international organization to be set up prior to the end of the war—separately from any peace treaties—the President shrugged and said he was not here to answer all things that newspapers are printing and had no time to comment on all fool questions.

Mr. Roosevelt said Secretary Hull had taken all into his confidence on what has been done to date.

Occupation of Germany.

Turning to another subject, the President said that there was a rather general understanding among the Allies for occupation of Germany regardless of how or when the Nazis give up.

He said that while there were no detailed arrangements there was a general understanding with Russia and Britain on the question. He said you could not plan all of the details in advance, but everything was going along all right.

Responding to a question, he expressed the belief that it would be just as easy to reach an understanding with China for the occupation of Japan.

He added that in this instance, too, there was nothing on paper and that only verbal exchanges had taken place between himself and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on the matter so far.

The President said that certainly he was going to confer with Prime Minister Churchill again, but when asked whether it would be this year, he replied only soon, adding that the question was the same old story brought up in earlier conferences.

Mr. Roosevelt said earlier in the week on his return from a thirty-five-day trip that took him into the Pacific that it was the intention to occupy both Germany and Japan regardless of the circumstances of surrender.

The President declared today that everybody is practically agreed now on the need for a consolidated Army and Navy setup but emphasized that nothing is going to be done about it until after the war.

He made this comment at his news conference when informed about a statement by his fourth-term running mate, Senator Truman of Missouri, urging a merger of the Army and Navy departments into one department of national security.

The President did not elaborate in his comment further than to say that the matter has been studied and that nothing would be done on it until the war ends.

TRUMAN TO ACCEPT AT HIS BIRTHPLACE

Washington, Aug. 18 (A. P.)—President Roosevelt today approved plans for his fourth-term running mate, Senator Harry S. Truman, to accept the Vice-Presidential nomination on August 31 in an open air speech at the courthouse in Lamar, Mo., Mr. Truman's birthplace.

Senator Truman disclosed this after a visit to the White House, where he held his first conference with Mr. Roosevelt since he was nominated for Vice-President.

The Senator said that he also would make a campaign speech on Labor Day at Detroit, but beyond that his political speech-making was in the hands of the Democratic National Committee. He said that he hoped the committee would not call upon him to make too extensive a campaign as he still is busy with three of the most active Senate committees — Military, Appropriations and Interstate Commerce.

He said he discussed campaign plans with the President only briefly because most of the talk concerned reconversion legislation. He said that he would see the President on this subject soon.

Senator Truman accepted today the vice-presidential nomination of the Liberal party of New York State. He told a delegation which visited his office that "I feel that all the liberal elements in the country will be united behind the Democratic ticket."

The Liberal party was formed by right wing elements of the American Labor party. It circulated petitions to put the names of President Roosevelt and Vice-President Wallace on the New York State ballot, but announced that Mr. Wallace had declined the nomination and that Mr. Truman's name would be substituted. Party spokesmen said the petitions, filed in Albany earlier this week, bore 175,000 signatures.

F. D. R. To Seek New League, Paper Says

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt plans to submit a new "League of Nations" to the Senate and later to ask it for power to enforce peace treaties, the New York Times says in a dispatch from Washington.

The newspaper says that by separating the world security organization from peace treaties, the Administration hopes to get the new league operating possibly before the end of the war.

Present plans, it added, aim for a treaty establishing the new security organization for presentation to the Senate before the first of the year with hopes that it will be ratified before spring.

Responsible Officials Quoted

Thus, says the Times, it is expected that the new league and World Court would be ready to deal with problems which might arise at the peace conference. Terms of the peace treaty and the security set-up would complement each other under Administration plans, the Times adds.

Quoting "responsible officials," the Times says the Administration would not rely entirely on the new organization to deal with future aggression by present enemies, but would ask the Senate in the peace treaties "to authorize them not only to demobilize the Germans and Japanese and to control their industries, but to enforce those terms even if they have to take military action to do so."

Gov. Saltonstall's Son, 23, Dies in Action in Pacific

Marine Sergeant Left College to Enlist in Corps

BOSTON, Aug. 18 (AP).—Marine Sergeant Peter B. Saltonstall, twenty-three years old, one of three children of Governor Leverett Saltonstall serving in the armed forces, has been killed in action in the Pacific.

The Governor, a veteran of the World War, received official notice of his son's death as he left the State House for the day. He drove home alone to his home in Dover to inform his wife.

The Governor canceled a speaking engagement he had for this evening at a Millbury war bond rally. His place was taken by Lieutenant Governor Horace Cahill.

However, Governor Saltonstall said, through his secretary, that he would endeavor to keep all other engagements. He is scheduled to participate tomorrow in the posthumous presentation of the Medal of Honor to the parents of First Lieutenant Robert M. Hanson, twenty-five, who shot down twenty-five Japanese planes.

Peter Saltonstall left Harvard in his junior year to enlist in the Marine Corps in February, 1942. He has been on active service for many months and associates of the Governor expressed belief that he "soon was due for a furlough home under the rotation plan."

Peter's brother, Leverett jr., is a lieutenant in the Army Engineers and their sister, Emily, is a Wave stationed in Washington.

Canadian Vacationists 'Abuse Gas Ration'

Augusta, Maine, Aug. 18 (AP)—Vacationists from Canada, stranded at Old Orchard and nearby resorts, "are creating a black market of their own," F. Scott Brown, chief of the Maine OPA legal division, said yesterday.

Brown said visitors had abused the special rations of 15 United States gallons a year offered under a reciprocal plan allowing United States visitors in Canada a similar amount, and were offering as high as $20 for a tankful of gasoline to get them back home.

Tips from filling-station operators, offered 75 cents a gallon and in some cases [illegible] 20 for 15 gallons for gas, led to [illegible]ery of the condition, Brown [illegible]. Names of vio[illegible] be sent to the Provincial [illegible]s for possible action.

Texan's Plan to [illegible]eat Roosevelt Is [illegible]osed

Unpledged Electors Urged to Vote Against Ticket

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 18 (AP).—A Mississippi Democrat, pledged to support the Roosevelt-Truman ticket, brought into the open today what he described as an effort by a Texas Democrat to unite the party's electors of Mississippi, Texas and Louisiana for "defeat of President Roosevelt."

Judge Rich Russell, of Magee, one of Mississippi's Democratic Presidential electors who voluntarily bound himself to the party's leaders, made public a letter he said was written by E. B. Germany, of Dallas, one of Texas's Democratic electors involved in a party split in that state.

Mr. Germany, describing the letter as confidenial, told "The Dallas News" he wrote it to the Democratic electors of the three states. Mississippi's eight electors were not bound by their state convention to support the party's nominees and the position of Louisiana's electors has been disputed.

Judge Russell said the letter urged the electors to use their Electoral College votes as a balance of power in "a common program" to "remedy some of the evils that were perpetrated" against the South as the Democratic National Convention. Judge Russell said the letter suggested this block of votes would "spell the difference between the Democratic and Republican control of patronage during the next four years" and that "those in control of the Democratic party would be willing to bargaain with the South rather than allow the Republicans to gain control of the patronage . . . ."

MERCHANT SHIP SUNK IN SOUTH ATLANTIC

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 18—(AP) A medium-sized United States merchant ship was sunk in the South Atlantic by two torpedoes late in July without loss or injury to any of the 66 men on board.

Lt. (jg) Haerold J. McCormick, in command of the 26-man gun crew, said the use of two flashlights and a couple of knives to cut boats and rafts free prevented loss of life. Fifty-three men still aboard the craft when the second torpedo exploded got safely away before the ship sank two minutes later.

McCormick credited a seaman, Walter J. Smith with saving the lives of 14 men by getting a raft overboard and then hacking apart a one-inch rope which fastened it to the vessel. The ship slid under the water a few seconds after the rope parted.

The attacking submarine was not seen. The crew spent more than 30 hours adrift. A patrol plane sighted them and called a rescue vessel, which landed them at a Brazilian port. None of the men knew that all had escaped until they were assembled aboard the rescue craft.

3 JAPANESE SISTERS SENTENCED TO JAIL

DENVER, Aug. 18 — (AP) One of three Japanese-American sisters convicted of conspiracy to commit treason, Mrs. Tsuruko "Toots" Wallace, 35, today was sentenced to two years in the Federal Women's reformatory at Alderson, W. Va., and fined $1,000.

Her sisters, Mrs. Florence "Flo" Otani, 33, and Mrs. Billie Shitara Tanigoshi, 32, were given 20-month terms at Alderson and fined $1,000 each by U.S. District Judge J. Foster Symes.

Mrs. Wallace was described by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Ivor O. Wingren as the leader of a plot by the sisters to help free two German prisoners of war from the Trinidad, Colo., internment camp last October. They were convicted by a Federal Court jury a week ago.

SOLDIERS HALT REVOLT OF ITALIAN PRISONERS

SEATTLE, Aug. 18—(AP) United States troops, swinging night sticks, subdued a minor revolt at Fort Lawton July 10, by Italian prisoners who objected to being sent to Hawaiian work camps, a Seattle port of embarkation spokesman said today.

Some of the Italians suffered minor injuries but none was hospitalized and all were put aboard a ship for Hawaii.

"The prisoners still were under the impression that the Axis was winning the war," the official said, "and believed Hawaii to be under constant attack, and a few of them resisted going because the Geneva convention forbids keeping prisoners of war in combat areas."

The prisoners involved, army officers said, were in a different category than members of the Italian service unit at Fort Lawton who were attacked by negro soldiers in an incident this week. The service unit members are volunteers for work battalions, with the status of co-belligerents.

An army spokesman at U. S. Army Pacific headquarters said today that more than 3,000 Italian war prisoners already in the Hawaian area "are adequately performing their duties at an army laundry" and said it was expected additional Italian prisoners would largely relieve the manpower shortage in the territory.

Own Chute Stuck, He Descends on Another's

ADD

VANCOUVER, Wash., Aug. 18 (AP).—Second Lieutenant John J. Egger jr., of Seattle, told today of riding to earth on the parachute of another jumper after his own had failed to open.

He was on maneuvers in England, he said, and the last to leave the plane. After a 100-foot fall he found himself on top of the chute of a jumper from another plane, he said.

Realizing that both men would be killed if he held his position, he slid off at seventy-five feet. A leg was broken. The other chutist was not hurt. Lieutenant Egger is in the Army hospital here.

TWEED LEAVES WEST FOR WASHINGTON, D. C.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 18—Chief Radioman George Ray Tweed, U.S.N., whose 31-month game of hide-and-seek with the Japanese on conquered Guam Island, made him a hero, left Portland by air today for Oakland, Calif.

Orders for him to report to the San Point Naval station at Seattle were cancelled, and he was sent south instead. He is to leave immediately from Oakland for Washington, D. C., to report on his experiences to the Navy department, the Navy Public Relations office announced.

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS FRONT DISPATCH SAID BRITISH, AMERICAN AND CANADIAN ARTILLERY WAS RAINING A STORM OF STEEL INTO THE RANKS OF THE ENEMY TRAPPED IN THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN-TRUN TRIANGLE, WHERE GERMAN TANKS WERE REPORTED THURSDAY TO BE FIGHTING TO HOLD THE GAP OPEN.

APR 191944

"THE GERMANS ARE BEING KNOCKED TO BITS AS THEY TRY TO ESCAPE," A BRITISH HEADQUARTERS OFFICER SAID. IT WAS CONSIDERED LIKELY THE BATTLE OF THE POCKET WOULD BE OVER WITHIN 48 HOURS, AS THE ENEMY MILLED AROUND TRYING TO FIND A WAY OF ESCAPE.

IT WAS REPORTED THAT THE REAR GUARDS WERE GERMAN REGULAR ARMY TROOPS, WHILE NAZI SS DIVISIONS WERE IN FLIGHT.

TTHE WHOLE WESTERN END OF THE POCKET CAVED IN , INDICATING THAT EXCEPT FOR POSSIBLE ISOLATED POCKETS ALL THE GERMANS HAD NOW BEEN COMPRESSED INTO THE ARGENTAN-FALAISE-TRUN TRIANGLE.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN FORCES MET AT BRIOUZE, NINE MILES EAST OF FLERS, WHICH REPRESENTED THE WESTERN END OF THE POCKET YESTERDAY. ATHIS, TEN MILES NORTHWEST OF BRIOUZE, WAS TAKEN BY THE BRITISH EARLIER, AND THESE FORCES THEN CROSSED THE ROUVRE RIVER WITHOUT DIFFICULTY. H

CANADIANS AND POLES CAPTURED TRUN, 10 MILES SOUTHEAST OF FALAISE, AND THEN MOVED ON TOWARD CHAMBOIS. AMERICANS AND BRITISH ADVANCING ALONG THE BOTTOM OF THE NORMANDY POCKET ENCOUNTERED ONLY LIGHT GERMAN REARGUARD ACTION AND THE CLEANUP APPEARED NEAR AT HAND. THE POCKET NOW IS SO SMALL THAT AIR FORCE OPERATIONS ARE STRICTLY LIMITED BECAUSE OF THE DANGER OF BOMBING ALLIED TROOPS.

A FIELD DISPATCH SAID THE GERMAN ARMOR HAD ABANDONED EFFORTS TO BREAK OUT DUE EAST AND HAD WHEELED TO THE NORTHEAST IN AN ATTEMPT TO PLUNGE THROUGH.

THE AIR FORCES NOW ARE HAMMERING GERMAN COLUMNS FLEEING NORTHWARD TOWARDS THE SEINE. IF THE AMERICANS PLUNGE TO THE SEINE WEST OF PARIS AND GOOD WEATHER ALLOWS AIRCRAFT TO OPERATE IT APPEARED UNLIKELY THAT THE GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY COULD GET MANY TANKS OR GUNS ACROSS THE RIVER.

HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED LAST NIGHT THAT THE FOURTH AND SIXTH ARMORED DIVISIONS AND THE EIGHTH MOTORIZED DIVISION ARE AMONG THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE.

THE FOURTH, MADE UP MOSTLY OF MEN FROM THE EAST COAST, IS COMMANDED BY MAJ.GEN.JOHN WOOD. THE SIXTH, WHICH WAS ACTIVATED AT FORT KNOX, KY., IS COMMANDED BY MAJ.GEN.ROBERT GROW. THE EIGHTH IS LED BY BRIG.GEN.DONALD STROH.

A HIGH OFFICER OF GEN.EISENHOWER'S STAFF SAID LAST NIGHT THAT THE AMERICAN THIRD ARMY'S MIGHTY UPPERCUT TO THE SEINE WAS PLANNED

NOTHING IN THE ATTACK, IT WAS SAID, WAS IMPROVISED OR OFF-THE-CUFF STRATEGY.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, AUG.18-(AP)-LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S THIRD U.S.ARMY, RIDING RELENTLESS HERD ON THE HARRIED GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY, HAS ALL BUT CORRALED IT IN A NEW ENCIRCLEMENT SOUTH OF THE SEINE RIVER.

PATTON'S DRIVE, ONE OF THE FASTEST IN MILITARY HISTORY AND AIMED TOWARD PARIS AND THE SEINE, VIRTUALLY CUT THE GERMANS OFF FROM THE FRENCH CAPITAL WHEN IT CROSSED THE EURE RIVER NORTH OF DREUX.

THUS HIS HARD-RIDING FORCES DROVE FIELD MARSHAL GEN.GUENTHER VON KLUGE'S ARMY DIRECTLY NORTH TOWARD THE VIRTUALLY BRIDGELESS SEINE.

THE SITUATION IS LIKE THAT OF A PISTON. PATTON ESTABLISHED A WALL OF THE CYLINDER 70 MILES IN FROM THE SEA, WHICH FORMS THE OTHER.

THE PISTON SQUEEZING THE GERMANS IS COMPOSED OF THE U.S.FIRST ARMY, THE BRITISH SECOND AND THE CANADIAN FIRST, AND IS DRIVING EAST AND NORTH ALL THE WAY FROM A POINT EAST OF FALAISE TO THE SEA.

HARASSED BY ALLIED AIR FORCES, IT IS DIFFICULT TO SEE HOW THE SEVENTH ARMY, ALREADY BATTERED AND REELING FROM ITS NARROW ESCAPE FROM THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN POCKET, IS GOING TO GET ANY EQUIPMENT ACROSS THE SEINE OVER THE ONE NARROW BRIDGE REMAINING, WHICH ITSELF MAY ALREADY BE CUT BY BOMBS.

THE AIR FORCES ARE CERTAIN TO MAKE THE USE OF BARGES, PONTOON BRIDGES AND FERRY BOATS A HAPHAZARD, DANGEROUS PROCESS.

THAT THE GERMANS BELIEVE THE ROUTE TO PARIS IS LOST TO THEM IS SEEN IN THE REPORT THAT THE DIRECTION OF THEIR RETREAT HAS TURNED NORTH TOWARD ROUEN.

ALLIED TROOPS PUT ON THE PRESSURE, BREAKING THE STAGNATED COASTAL FRONT WITH DRIVES OF FOUR TO SIX MILES. THE OBJECT IS TO RUN OVER THE GERMAN REARGUARDS AND GIVE THEM NO REST NOR ANY TIME TO CROSS THE SEINE.

PATTON'S BRILLIANT FRENCH CAMPAIGN IS ALMOST A DUPLICATE OF THE LIGHTNING OFFENSIVE HE LED IN SICILY. IN SICILY HE WAS GIVEN ONLY THE OBJECTIVE OF DRIVING ALONG THE SOUTH AND WEST COAST TO TAKE PAERLMO. PATTON ACHIEVED IT SO RAPIDLY THAT WHEN GEN.SIR BERNARD L. MONTGOMERY'S FORCES BECAME STALLED AT CATANIA GEN.DWIGHT D.EISENHOWER TURNED PATTON NORTH AND HE DROVE THE AMERICANS INTO MESSINA AHEAD OF THE BRITISH.

THIS TIME PATTON SWEPT THROUGH BRITTANY, THEN TURNED NORTH TOWARD PARIS AND NOT ONLY "SURROUNDED" MONTGOMERY AGAIN, BUT INCLUDED THE AMERICAN FIRST, THE BRITISH SECOND, THE CANADIAN FIRST, AND FOR GOOD MEASURE THE GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY.

FROM BREST, WHERE ONE PART OF THE THIRD ARMY STILL IS FIGHTING, TO DREUX IS A DISTANCE OF APPROXIMATELY 300 MILES BY ROAD.

A NINTH U.S. AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, AUG. 17-(DELAYED)-(AI -AMERICAN FIGHTER BOMBER PILOTS REPORTED THAT THE ST.MALO CITADEL WHIC HAS BEEN HOLDING OUT FOR DAYS SURRENDERED TODAY DURING A BOMBING ATTACK.

THE PLANES WERE CALLED OFF BY RADIO WHEN WHITE FLAGS WERE RUN UP.

SEVERAL HUNDRED GERMANS UNDER COMMAND OF COL.ANDREAS VON AULOCK, WHO SCOFFED AT RADIO REQUESTS TO SURRENDER, HAD BEEN HOLDING OUT FOR DAYS IN THE CONCRETE FORTRESS AT THE TIP OF A PENINSULA. ORDINARY BOMBS AND ARTILLERY HAD FAILED TO DISLODGE THEM AND AFTER THE FINAL WARNING WAS IGNORED THE AIR FORCE WAS CALLED UPON TO USE ITS STRENGTH.

DURING THE BREAK IN GROUND SHELLING SEVERAL LIGHTNING FIGHTER BOMB- ERS WERE TO CARRY OUT THE ATTACK, BUT ONLY ONE HAD TO UNLOAD. IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN A COINCIDENCE BUT EVERY SORT OF WHITE FLAG AND SIGNAL STARTED GOING UP LESS THAN A MINUTE AFTER COL.HOWARD F.NICHOLS OF GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., LEADING THE MISSION, PUT A BOMB NEAR ONE OF THE ENTRANCES TO THE FORT.

THE AIRMEN ARE MAKING NO CLAIMS OF FORCING THE SURRENDER OF THE CITADEL. ALL THEY KNEW WAS THAT SOON AFTER NICHOLS' BOMB LANDED, THE PLANES WERE CALLED BACK AND THE PILOTS WERE TOLD TO CEASE BOMBING.

"THEY ARE SURRENDERING," THE PILOTS WERE TOLD.

"THEY MAY HAVE BEEN GETTING READY TO SURRENDER, BUT WE SURE HURRIED THEM ALONG," SAID LT.ROBERT W.HOYLE OF BREMERTON, WASH.

WHEN THE AMERICANS WERE CONVINCED THE SURRENDER WAS REAL, NICHOLS SAID, THE PLANES WERE ORDERED BY GROUND RADIO CONTROL TO ATTACK A SMALL FORTIFIED ISLAND JUST OFF ST. MALO. THE PILOTS REPORTED THE ISLAND WAS DOTTED WITH GUN EMPLACEMENTS AND STRONG POINTS, AND THAT THEY LEFT IT IN FLAMES.

"THERE WERE BIG EXPLOSIONS FROM AN AMMUNITION DUMP AND I SAW ONE OF THE BOMBS LAND RIGHT AMONG A BUNCH OF SOLDIERS WHO WERE TRYING TO GET INTO A BOAT, SAID LT. COL. SETH J.MCKEE OF ORLANDO, FLA.

A SEVENTH U.S. ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, AUG. 18-(P)- A GERMAN GENERAL CAPTURED THIS MORNING SAID "THE ALLIES WILL NEVER BREAK THROUGH THE WEST WALL INTO GERMANY," BUT A VAST MAJORITY OF PRISONERS WHO WERE UNDER HIS COMMAND FELT THE SIEGFRIED LINE WOULD CRUMBLE LIKE ALL THE REST UNLESS THE WAR ENDED BEFORE THE ALLIES CROSSED FRANCE.

AT A PRISONER COLLECTION POINT WHERE MORE THAN 1,300 GERMANS, POLES AND TURCOMANS CAPTURED BY ONE DIVISION ALONE AWAITED SHIPMENT FROM THE BEACHHEAD, SEVERAL GERMANS OUTSPOKENLY PREDICTED THE END OF THE WAR "IN FIVE OR SIX WEEKS."

ONLY ONE SMALL, ARROGANT GROUP WAS ENCOUNTERED. THEY WERE MARINES FROM TOULON.

"WE WILL FIGHT TO THE LAST SHELL," ONE SAID. "HITLER WILL NEVER MAKE PEACE."

THE MARINES WERE WELL CLOTHED AND LOOKED ADEQUATELY FED, IN MARKED CONTRAST TO THE BEDRAGGLED INFANTRYMEN, WHO SAID THEY HAD BEEN WITHOUT MEAT RATIONS FOR THREE WEEKS.

THE MOST DEPRESSED MARINE AS AN OBERSTLEUTNANT FROM COBLENZ, WHO TOOK A LONG LOOK AT THE HARBOR JAMMED WITH UNLOADING SHIPS AND SAID: "I'VE SEEN MORE AMERICAN EQUIPMENT IN ONE DAY THAN OUR OWN IN SIX MONTHS."

ON THE FRENCH-ITALIAN FRONTIER, AUG. 18-(AP)-MEN IN EUROPE FIGHTING FOR FREEDOM JOINED HANDS TODAY IN NORTHWESTERN ITALY AND EASTERN FRANCE IN A GENERAL DRIVE TO OUST THE NAZIS AT LAST, ONCE AND FOREVER.

THEIR CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE GERMANS COINCIDED WITH REPORTS, UNCONFORMED, THAT THE ALLIES ALREADY HAD OCCUPIED PARIS, THAT THE AMERICANS HAD REACHED GRENOBLE, AND THAT A DETACHMENT OF ALLIED TROOPS FROM NICE IN FRANCE HAD REACHED AND CROSSED THE ITALIAN FRONTIER.

DIRECT REPORTS AND REPORTS THROUGH NEUTRAL CHANNELS INDICATED THE REBELLING MAQUIS, THEIR ARMIES SWELLED BY THOUSANDS OF NEW VOLUNTEERS, HAS ESTABLISHED CONTROL OVER VAST FRENCH AND ITALIAN AREAS. SOME 40,-000 WELL-EQUIPPED MEN IN ONE SECTION OF ITALY ALONE WERE SAID TO BE FIGHTING IN ONE BATTLE, AND IN FRANCE, IN DISTRICTS NEAR THE SWISS FRONTIER, THERE PROBABLY WERE AT LEAST THREE TIMES THAT MANY.

ITALIAN PARTISANS WERE SAID TONIGHT TO HAVE WON CONTROL OF LIGURIA AND PIEDMONT ALMOST ENTIRELY, EXCEPT FOR NAZI GARRISONS WHICH KEPT WITHIN BARRICADES IN THE CITY. THE FREE FRENCH WERE SAID TO HOLD THE UPPER HAND IN ABOUT HALF OF THE HAUTE-SAVOIE REGION AND WERE BELIEVED MOBILIZING FOR A FINISHING OFFENSIVE IN DOUBS, JURA AND AIN PROVINCES AND THOSE CIRCLING SWITZERLAND.

THE FRENCH WERE REPORTED TO HAVE OCCUPIED THE LAST FRONTIER TOWN IN NAZI HANDS IN ANNEMASSE THIS MORNING. THIS AFTERNOON, REPORTS SAID, BANDS THERE PLAYED THE AMERICAN, FRENCH AND SWISS NATIONAL ANTHEMS AND AMERICAN FLAGS FLOATED BESIDE THOSE OF DE GAULLIST FRANCE. DANCING IN THE STREETS, SPEECHES, PARADES AND SHOUTS FOR DE GAULLE AND FOR THE AMERICANS AND SWISS WERE SAID TO INTERMINGLE WITH THE OTHER MANIFESTATIONS OF JUBLIATION.

MAQUI TROOPS THIS AFTERNOON AND TONIGHT WERE REPORTED TO HAVE ATTACKED ANNECY AND THERE WAS ANOTHER UNCONFIRMED REPORT THAT THIS STRONGEST NAZI HOLDOUT IN HAUTE-SAVOIE SURRENDERED, OR IF IT HAD NOT, ITS FATE WAS SEALED.

APR 19 1944

FRENCH FRONTIER AND ITALIAN PARTISAN REPORTS SAID THOUSANDS OF FACTORY EMPLOYES FROM GENOA AND SPEZIA JOINED THE PARTISANS; THAT THE GERMANS IN GENOA BURNED LARGE SECTIONS OF THE CITY AND TEN VILLAGES IN REPRISAL; THAT 150 HOSTAGES WERE HANGED IN THE MARKET PLACE AND THA' THE PARTISANS RETALIATED WITH THE EXECUTION OF 150 NAZI PRISONERS.

THE FASCISTS WERE SAID TO BE IN RETREAT FROM MENTON, THE ONLY CITY ITALIAN TROOPS CAPTURED IN THE 1940 CAMPAIGN AGAINST FRANCE. ITALIAN PARTISAN ACTIVITY WAS SAID TO BE CONCENTRATED ON A LIGHT FROM MENTON THROUGH VENTIMIGLIA BY WAY OF GENOA TO SPEZIA.

FROM FRANCE CAME THE DOUBTFUL REPORT THAT MARSHAL PETAIN WAS HELD UNDER HOUSE ARREST IN VICHY FOR EIGHT HOURS TODAY. A MORE LIKELY REPORT WAS THAT WHAT REMAINED OF THE LAVAL GOVERNMENT, MOST OF WHOM MOVED TO PARIS EARLIER IN THE MONTH, HAD GONE TO NANCY.

Yanks Reach Seine River, Approach Paris Suburbs; Allies Within 25 Miles Of Marseille, Flank Toulon

GERMANS HASTEN DEMOLITION, SET FIRES IN CAPITAL

American Third Army Reaches Banks of Seine, 25 Miles West of City.

FALAISE TRAP CLOSES

Allies Press Task of Destroying German Forces Over Wide Front.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, Aug. 20.—(AP) Speedy American reconnaissance patrols stabbed into the suburbs of Paris yesterday and columns of the American Third army reached the Seine river 25 miles west of the French capital as the Allies fashioned a tremendous knockout blow against the German armies in France.

Explosions and fires shook and seared Paris as the Germans apparently hastened ruthless demolitions preparatory to abandoning the city without a fight.

The Swiss radio said American forces already were in the Paris suburbs. Allied sources did not confirm this, but they put patrols of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's army very near, and truck-borne Doughboys were shouting, "Paris next!"

Claim Yanks in Paris

British papers all headlined reports that the Americans were in Paris, but all were quoting German or neutral rumors without confirmation.

Destruction of the German army, not the immediate liberation of Paris, remained the Allied goal, and this was speeding on apace.

The Falaise gap, where much of the German Seventh army was destroyed in a week of siege, finally was sealed off entirely, and the fleeing enemy remnants that raced away from it under the worst aerial scouring in history found only that they had run into a bigger trap against the meandering and bridgeless Seine.

While latest reports here put the Americans only at unspecified distances a few hundred yards from the Seine in the Mantes area, the German communique acknowledged that Patton's forward elements already had fought to both Mantes and Vernon, 30 and 45 miles downstream from Paris.

This would envelop the Germans in an area roughly 55 miles square between the Seine, the sea, the British and Canadians and the Americans, with a perilous crossing of the river as their only hope of escape.

Frontline dispatches passed by field censors said flatly that the Germans in France had been beaten and that the Americans could advance on Paris anytime they wanted to. Instead of doing so at once, they apparently chose for the second time in 10 days to let that glittering prize dangle for a time while they sought out and slew more Germans.

The ruins of at least 18 German divisions from the Falaise trap already were spread out in a 70-mile shambles from there to Dreux, jumpoff point for the American dash to the Seine.

The German Seventh army, bolstered by elements of the 15th army from the Calais coast, "has not been destroyed," wrote Associated Press Correspondent William S. White with the American First army, but he declared the Germans had left thousands upon thousands of casualties behind in salvaging much of their armor for the dash to the Seine.

10,000 Tanks Destroyed

That dash, however, was opposed by tremendous Allied air power that in three days had destroyed 10,000 tanks and trucks. In as many as seven flights a day, RAF fighter bombers and rocket planes and the newly-disclosed rocket-firing American Thunderbolts, swooped lower than the tree-tops to pick out "live" targets among the welter of already smashed equipment.

Intermittent rain hampered the fliers somewhat, but also mired the Nazis in the mud as sitting ducks.

"We're beating up the Germans —and it's a terrible beating," exclaimed a British staff officer at the front.

The remnants of the German Seventh army and their reinforcements from the Fifteenth were believed to have little chance of ferrying their armor across the Seine even if they should beat the main Allied body to the river crossings.

These two German forces—which may number as high as 100,000 men —were under the most terrific aerial assault ever seen on any battlefield, and were losing tanks by the hundreds and trucks by the thousands.

Their rearguards fought desperately to hold back the onrushing American, British, and Canadian armies which were driving along the coast, and hurdling river barriers inland in drives which at one point before endangered Lisieux were no more than 48 miles from Rouen, the enemy's river port.

Suffer Heavy Losses

Their forces bringing up the rear north of Trun were suffering terrible casualties and a large part of one convoy of 500 vehicles went up in a mass of flames under the rocket fire of fighter planes.

Before them as they headed north was the Seine, 150 or more yards wide, where Allied aerial fleets yesterday sank hundreds of barges and two river steamers trying to cross it.

While the Germans were fighting back hard along the coast, their hitherto orderly retreat farther inland began taking on the earmarks of a rout, with many soldiers afoot as a result of Allied bombings which knocked out 3,800 vehicles in 24 hours.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's commanders were not letting the luster of Paris blind them to their real task, the crushing of this army, after which the capital—and all France—may well fall of its own weight.

A British staff officer, noting that elements of 18 enemy divisions had been captured, expressed the opinion that the Germans now could never hold the charging Allied armies at the Seine.

RAF pilots reported the fires and explosions in Paris which, coupled with the fact that the Paris radio has been silent for two days, indicated the Germans were wrecking military installations before quitting the city.

Nazis Flee Paris

Various foreign sources said Germans and collaborationists were fleeing the city, crowding the roads leading toward Germany, and patriots were marching through the streets singing the Marseillaise. All public buildings were reported closed.

(The Germans admitted their embassy personnel had been evacuated.)

The thunder of violent explosions, which awakened British villages along the channel coast opposite Dieppe and Le Havre indicated demolitions might have begun there.

It appeared that the final phase of the battle of the Seine had been reached — pursuit and annihilation. Routes of retreat blazed with the pyres of stricken transport. British, American and Canadian tanks shredded enemy rearguards. The whole front was on the move.

Along the coast the Canadians fought into the outskirts of Cabourg and Dives, 17 miles across the tidal Seine estuary from Le Havre, and brought the small port of Houlgate under artillery fire.

Four miles south of Dives they were hammering away near Dozule against stubborn rearguards.

British on the south forced the Vie river near Notre Dame-d'Etrees, 12 miles from the sea, and five miles south of this crossing seized the village of St. Julien-Le Faucon.

At one unspecified point the Allies were only six miles from Lisieux, a roadhead of great importance to the enemy 42 miles from Rouen. Vanguards lunging eight miles due south of Lisieux captured St. Marguerite-des-Loges.

Supreme headquarters announced that for the time being there would be a news blackout in some sectors, because the enemy was so confused he had no idea where the Allies were.

This confusion was illustrated when Canadians captured a commander of a division heading up a highway to Trun. He was not aware that Trun had fallen and yet it is a pivotal point between the Falaise-Argentan pocket and the retreat to the northeast.

Attempt to Close Gap

This part of the gap, which funnels down to a mile or two farther west, is now four miles wide between Trun and the forest of Gouffern, and Poles and Canadians are fighting to close the gap.

So close is the fighting in this area that the Allied troops were coming under the fire of their own planes.

Lt. Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander of the First Canadian army, sent a message to his troops saying that such accidents were unavoidable in close fighting of the type now raging. He recounted yesterday's air score against the enemy, which included 77 tanks destroyed and 97 damaged. Latest official figures raised this score to 205 tanks knocked out.

The Falaise pocket west of these positions was being squeezed into two thinly-connected ones, and the hapless forces still inside were getting a "terrible beating, as a British headquarters officer phrases it.

Tanks of one British brigade ran riot against a fleeing enemy column south of Falaise and shot up 1550 transport vehicles.

The carnage was tremendous, and hundreds of enemy corpses covered the roads, fields and hills. But still German troops moved east.

Hundreds of prisoners were coming in, one entire company with its commander throwing down their arms.

A captured document showed that Hitler's pet SS (Elite) divisions for the first time had been ordered to move in daylight. They have been going out by night, leaving the regular army to try to flee by day.

The Germans were still fighting hard to keep the gap open around Argentan, but Allied forces threatened to cut the pocket in two with an advance to Pierre Fitte, six miles northeast of Argentan.

Last resistance on the northern coast of Brittany was crushed, Supreme headquarters said, with the liquidation of German pockets at Lannion, 54 miles east of Brest, and Paimpol, 19 miles farther east.

U. S. Spearhead Threatens To Trap Fleeing Germans

Nazi Broadcasts Assert Yank Forces Are Battling South of Paris — Two Enemy Armies Falling Back in Defeat Northwest of French Capital

London, Aug. 19—(AP)—U. S. spearheads have reached the Seine at points 27 and 42 miles northwest of Paris in a slashing offensive, Berlin said today, which threatened to close off the retreat of fleeing Germans below the river and to cut off Paris from Western France.

The battle for France assumed proportions of a rout.

Fall of Paris appeared a matter of time.

German broadcasts asserted U. S. tanks were clashing south of the city with German "security forces," and said other American units were roaming within 12 miles of Paris.

The battle of the western front is in its last stage of pursuit and annihilation, Supreme Headquarters declared. Many Germans were fleeing northward and eastward on foot after Allied planes destroyed and damaged 3,800 vehicles on congested roads in 24 hours.

Flight From Vichy

The Nazi radio declared Chief of State Marshall Petain was moving his Government from Vichy, and that Pierre Laval, chief of Government and German officials had already fled Paris.

There was no confirmation from Supreme Headquarters of the German reports of American spearheads reaching Mantes and Vernon, near Paris. If true, it means Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's tank columns were building a series of pockets south of the almost-bridgeless Seine for the German Seventh Army and part of the 15th Army falling back from defeat in Normandy.

A senior British staff officer at the front predicted Field Marshal Gen. Guenther Von Kluge's forces could not stop at the Seine River.

British and Canadian troops pushed eastward along the Normandy Coast and beyond Caen in pursuit which was compressing a estimated 40,000 to 100,000 German remnants against the Seine and the jaws of the Patton trap.

Berlin broadcasts which said American tanks were fighting German security forces South of Paris, added that "a direct thrust of these American forces on Paris is not on at the moment."

Headquarters Silent

Supreme headquarters maintained secrecy on Patton's drives, but said armored patrols had pushed out from Dreux, Chartres, and Orleans—in a ring west and south of Paris—in several directions, and in some cases had withdrawn.

Berlin indicated the thrusts northward to the Seine to close off Von Kluge's withdrawal were from Dreux, Mantes is 23 miles northeast of Dreux, and Vernon is 25 miles due north. Supreme headquarters announced only that the bridgehead across the Eure River at Dreux had been "enlarged."

With Laval in flight from Paris were German Ambassador Otto Abetz and all personnel of the German Embassy, Berlin radio said. It added Petain's Government was considering leaving Vichy, and that "this transfer may already be in progress." A Wilhelmstrasse spokesman was quoted as saying no details could be given until Monday.

The German withdrawal along the Normandy coast, brought Cabourg and Houlgate, five miles beyond the Orne River mouth, under Allied shellfire, Canadians threw three bridgeheads across La Vie River at points fourteen miles east and twenty southeast of Caen.

The Allies beating along the coast are only thirteen miles from Deauville at the southern end of the Seine Estuary, eight miles south of LeHavre.

Canadians and Poles Gain.

Farther south, Canadian and Polish troops advanced in the Trun and Chambois areas southeast of Falaise, building up the barrier of the northern neck of the trap all but closed upon German remnants. Northeast of Falaise, front dispatches said Allied armor was only six miles from Lisieux.

British Second Army troops captured elements of 18 German Divisions yesterday. Germans still caught in the Normandy trap were declared to be struggling chaotically to escape eastward.

Enemy forces that freed themselves from the pocket struggled northward toward the Seine after Patton's men virtually had denied them any chance of falling back toward Paris.

Canadians At Cabourg

In the first advance along the Normandy coast since D-Day, the Canadian First Army reached the edge of Cabourg and Dives-Sur-Mer in an area some 13 miles northeast of Caen and 17 miles south of Le Havre on the Seine.

The Supreme Command said there would be a temporary blackout of news in some sectors, since the Germans were in such a state of confusion they did not know where the Allied troops were and any announcement of Allied positions which they could hear by radio would help them.

While the American Third Army held the Germans compressed within a 70-mile wall of armor stretching from a point near Argentan to Dreux, Americans, British, Canadians, Poles, Dutch and Belgians drove the Germans in a confused mass toward the northeast.

This struggling German force was estimated at 40,000 to 100,000 men. It included not only the broken enemy Seventh Army, but also mauled elements believed to comprise half of Von Kluge's crack Fifteenth Army, revealed yesterday to have been rushed from Northern France where it had been assigned to defend the rocket bomb coast. A British staff officers said the offensive power of these troops was spent, and he added that in winning the battle of Normandy the Allies will have won the battle of France.

In France, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower conferred with his highest officers and was believed to have reached far-reaching decision as a result of the new turn of the battle.

During an Allied air bombardment north of Trun yesterday one great mass of vehicles was turned into a flaming, bloody mass of tanks, trucks and men. RAF veterans of the North African campaign described the attacks on the fleeing Germans as the greatest show "since El Alamein" which spelled Marshal Erwin Rommel's doom in Africa.

(The German Transocean Agency, broadcasting from Berlin, quoted a German War Ministry official statement as saying "we must be prepared for a German withdrawal from France."

(The same agency quoted a military spokesman in Berlin as saying that "no fresh German divisions can be sent to France. The troops in battle have been warned of this and have been ordered to fight to the last man.")

Von Kluge committed the now hammered groupings of the 15th Army, the last source of enemy strength in France, to his lost cause in Normandy after withdrawing them from their positions guarding the Nazis' robot bomb lairs along the Northern French coast.

The British staff officer said he employed these reinforcements "in pieces and too late."

After squeezing through the Falaise gap in Normandy, the harried Germans now are all but corralled in a new encirclement forged by Lieut. Gen. George G. Patton's American Third Army south of the Seine.

By crossing the Eure River north of Dreux, Patton's men virtually have cut off the Germans from Paris.

Conference In Field

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower summoned his field commanders to an urgent conference yesterday which soon may be reflected in new and urgent blows to break the German grip on the whole of France.

Supreme Headquarters said last night the Falaise-Argentan gap in Normandy now had been narrowed to two miles. Frontline broadcast said the gap had been snapped shut entirely around Trun, southeast of Falaise.

The pocket already had dwindled to such insignificance, however, that great forces of British and Canadian troops were released and were driving straight east after the enemy.

Allied planes continued the ceaseless hammering of the Germans. Thirty-five German planes were shot out of the air and at least 51 were destroyed on the ground yesterday while in a 24-hour period Allied aircraft destroyed at least 23 of the 500 or more barges waiting to ferry the Germans across the Seine. Thirty-three armored and 612 other vehicles trying to get the Germans to the river also were destroyed.

BRITISH HAIL GEN. PATTON AS NEW HERO

Press Plays Up His Exploits and 'Legendary' Daring

London, Aug. 19—(AP)—Britons are hailing a new hero—Lieut Gen. George S. Patton Jr., in whom they see embodiment of many qualities frequently attributed to Americans: dash, daring and a rip-roaring drive.

They are applying such terms as "legendary" to the exploits of Patton, whose tankmen are riding roughshod through the Germans into the heart of France. The press continually relates his exploits with tanks, six-shooters and swords on and off the battlefield.

The British are familiar with the soldier-slapping incident of Patton's stormy career, but in the words of the London News Chronicle Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's faith in Patton's ability "secured his services for the swiftest outflanking move of any Army in history."

The News Chronicle has picked "son-of-a-gun General" Patton as its "man of the week."

Editorial Praise

The London Evening Standard editorially lauded Patton and his men, commenting:

"There can have been few sights to equal the Americans on that day (their Avranches breakthrough). A never ending armored host was sweeping into France. The same casual young men who lived among us and shared our trials and pleasures were now thundering out the annihilation of an Army and the liberation of a country.

"And leading them was a legendary general—Patton of the grim jaw and disconcerting manners."

An editorial page feature in the News Chronicle described him as "superman" in appearance and possessing a "drive and dash that doesn't count the cost because he believes victory is won more cheaply that way."

The News Chronicle said Patton has constantly justified his 'theory of fire and movement—moving into the enemy and pushing past him." It added:

"Patton's tactics have taken the German blitzkrieg of 1940 and, with America's overwhelming war making resources, have forged it into an irresistible weapon to turn against the aggressor."

Flier Bails Out, Bags German

A UNITED STATES NINTH AIR FORCE BASE, in France, Aug. 19 (AP)—Capt. Frederick Holbrecht of Beeville, Tex., a Thunderbolt fighter-bomber pilot who parachuted out of a crippled plane behind the enemy lines, has returned safely with a German Storm Trooper whom he captured. He said that, as he was running for cover, he was sighted by the German. Unarmed, he yelled: "Achtung!" the only German word that he knew, and pretended to cover the German with a gun. The German dropped his rifle, raised his hands and came along meekly.

27 NAZI PRISONERS FOLLOW HIM HOME

An American Base in France, Aug. 18 (Delayed) (A. P.).—After he had been held a prisoner for twenty-seven hours, a Thunderbolt pilot, Lieut. Emil Bertza, 24 years old, of East Chicago, Ind., convinced a group of Germans that they were hopelessly surrounded and talked them into surrendering. Then he marched twenty-seven Germans across the lines, handed them over to Allied patrols and calmly returned to his base.

Lieut. Bertza had been shot down and captured on August 12, five miles northeast of Domfront. He was taken to a German divisional headquarters in a farm house that was on fire when he arrived. An R. A. F. pilot and four other Americans were being held prisoner there and everything was in much a state of confusion that—after a night of continuous Allied attacks—the prisoners escaped.

They found shelter in a hayloft and then a ditch, where they were joined by six frightened German soldiers. At the height of an artillery barrage, Lieut. Bertza told the Germans, some of whom understood English, that they were surrounded.

"The Germans offered to give up, one explaining that he had a truckload of food hidden near by," the flyer continued. "The Germans led us past the SS guards, but the truck wouldn't start and we had to take what food we could carry on foot."

On the way to Allied lines they picked up twenty-one more Germans who joined the procession.

Little Opposition Near Paris

ON THE ROAD TO PARIS EAST OF CHARTRES, Aug. 19 (AP).—Speedy reconnaissance patrols of the American 3d Army stalked nearly to the suburbs of Paris today with a surprising lack of opposition.

The six-wheeled reconnaissance cars moved so quickly, and the surprise element was working so well, that exact positions cannot now be disclosed. Besides shooting up everything hostile in sight, these armored patrols are the roving eyes of the army that is preparing to spring a knockout blow against the Germans.

The operations are spread all the way from Orleans to the east of Dreux and are growing in magnitude as column upon column of reconnaissance cars, tanks and trucks laden with troops and supplies clogs the roads across Normandy and Brittany.

Eisenhower Gets Plenty Of Chow

30. 24 — 18133

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Advanced Command Post, Normandy, Aug. 19 (AP)—This is to let Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower know that her husband has not lost any weight since he moved to Normandy. The general is eating well. He had fresh blackberry pie for dinner today, fresh eggs for breakfast this morning and it was not just because the army breaks its neck seeing that the supreme commander does not go hungry.

The ingenuity of the four-star GI mess crew deserves the most credit. Sergt. Eugene Brandon, 2300 South Grand street, Monroe, La., went hunting for eggs. Regularly he tucks his army French phrasebook under his arm and goes visiting the farmers near the camp.

When he trails back home in the cool of the evening he has usually killed two birds with one stone. His trailer carries fresh eggs, vegetables, butter and cheese and the farmer who provided them will be around the next day to pick up the garbage.

Smash German Headquarters

UNITED STATES NINTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS in France, Aug. 18 (Delayed) (AP)—A big German headquarters hidden in the forest South of Orleans was flattened in a surprise American fighter-bomber attack yesterday.

Initial reports indicated all four buildings comprising the headquarters set-up were destroyed. They included a thick brick structure well camouflaged.

The fliers laid their bombs right in the front doors, said a senior Ninth Air Force officer after examining the strike photographs.

The attack was carried out by a group of Lightnings commanded by Lieut. Col. Clinton C. Wasem of Dover, Ohio.

Members of the French underground were standing by waiting to take the place over after the bombing. [The United Press said the patriots seized the German staff there.]

Hitler Declared Beaten In France

By DON WHITEHEAD

Headquarters American First Army, France, Aug. 19 (AP)—On this 75th day of the invasion, Germany stands defeated in the battle of France.

American troops can advance on Paris any time Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley chooses to throw the weight of his armor and infantry eastward.

There still is fighting ahead for the Allies—hard, bitter fighting—but victory is inevitable.

Germany lost the battle of France when General Bradley outgeneraled the Nazis' best with the spectacular break-through west of St. Lo. That was the decisive action.

SAYS PLANES CAN'T HELP BOMB ERRORS

With the Canadian First Army, France, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Canadian, American and British troops are so close together in the Normandy action that they have been hit by their own planes, Lieut.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Canadian commander, told his army in a special message terming such accidents unavoidable.

"There have been a number of attacks by our own aircraft on our own troops during the past two days and particularly today," Gen. Crerar declared last night.

"It is necessary to stress the peculiar difficulties to the Allied air forces caused by the convergence of American, British and Canadian armies on a common objective, with air action against the enemy forces within that Allied circle most desirable to the point of their surrender," he said.

Praising the air arm, Gen. Crerar said that up to 10:30 P. M. last night Allied planes had destroyed seventy-seven tanks, probably destroyed or damaged ninety-seven others, wrecked 900 vehicles, and damaged or destroyed 1,180.

A Canadian staff officer said that the closing of the Allied armies had led to telephoning all around the circle in order to determine the latest positions of Allied troops and that was information relayed to air headquarters to prevent the bombing of Allied men.

ADVANCE AT PACE OF 10-MILES A DAY TO SPLIT FRANCE

French Tanks Lead Seventh Army into Point 25 Miles From Marseille.

FLANK NAVAL BASE

More Than 10,000 Prisoners Taken; Invasion Forces Hold 50 Mile Coast.

ROME, Aug. 19 — (AP) Hard-driving French tanks today led the American Seventh army into St. Maximin - Le - Ste. Baume, only 25 miles northeast of Marseille and 22 miles below the vital road hub of Aix - en - Provence, as the Allies outflanked the great Toulon naval base in a broad enveloping movement headed swiftly towards the Rhone river valley.

Less than 350 airline miles separated the forces in southern France from those in the north as they moved rapidly ahead for a union that would split France in two longitudinally.

Many Prisoners Taken

Announcing the latest 10-miles-a-day gain against German opposition that was "considerable" at some places but feeble at others, Allied headquarters said the bag of captured Germans now had passed 10,000 and identified the second German general captured as Gen. Ferdinand Neuling, commander of the 62nd reserve corps.

The French, operating new American-made tanks, drove into St. Maximin by leap-frogging the tired American infantry who had carved a path for them.

Other American forces shot out northward to the vicinity of Grasse, eight miles northwest of Cannes, and La Bastide, 23 miles northwest of Cannes, thus deepening up to 30 miles their solid foothold along more than 50 miles of the curving French Mediterranean shores on which they landed Tuesday.

An Allied staff officer said the Germans were withdrawing so rapidly that they were unable to accomplish their usual demolitions. He said they were expected to stiffen somewhat as the Allies progressed northward, but declared that German reserves in France already had been virtually exhausted. He highly praised the American-French tactics in by-passing and cutting off enemy strong points.

Only on the coast a dozen miles directly east of Toulon was German opposition described as truly determined.

Toulon Outflanked

The Toulon garrison, however, already was outflanked by the American-French drives farther north. One of these too La Roquebrussane, 14 miles north of Toulon, and another Sollies-Pont, six miles northeast.

Another five miles west from Sollies—Pont would put Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's men on an open coastal plain across which they could move a dozen miles to the sea, cutting off Toulon entirely. They already were reported less than 30 miles east of Marseille, which with Toulon is one of the two big prizes on the Mediterranean French coast.

While elements of a Third German division, the 338th infantry, have been identified in the northwestern sector, probably around Brignoles, there still were no official reports of any movement of substantial German units toward the battle zone.

On the east of the beachhead front the Germans announced they had abandoned Cannes, but official information at Allied headquarters indicated the eastern front was relatively stable and there was no word of entry into that onetime resort of the rich.

Torpedo Boats Hit

The Germans made a belated attempt to interfere with the unloading operations but it resulted only in destruction of four enemy torpedo boats by American destroyers. For consolation the Germans could only report that the Americans "and their French auxiliary forces" were suffering losses in building up their forces and that isolated German shore batteries had "held out until the last grenade was fired."

The Germans contended their force on the island of Port-Cros still was holding out, but Allied headquarters disclosed that island and neighboring Isle du Levant were cleaned up by a mixed American-Canadian outfit the night before Tuesday's invasion.

Some Germans remained on the nearby islands of Sainte Marguerite and Saint Honorat, south of Cannes, and were firing periodically at the mainland with heavy calibre guns.

Allied air forces continued to give active support to the invasion both from land bases and from nine auxiliary aircraft carriers.

FRENCH DRIVE PAST TOULON IN INLAND PUSH

Allies Sweeping Toward Rhone River Beyond Port of Marseille.

10,000 NAZIS ARE CAPTURED

General Is Among Prisoners—Beachhead Is Expanded Eastward Also.

Rome, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Leapfrogging American units which had carved a pathway for them, French armored forces have driven to St. Maximin, twenty-two miles northwest of Toulon and only twenty-five miles northeast of Marseille, Allied Headquarters announced tonight.

Simultaneously, troops on the right flank in southern France reached the vicinity of Grasse, eight and one-half miles northwest of Cannes, and La Bastide, twenty-three miles northwest of that Riviera resort.

The Germans are pulling out so rapidly that no demolitions have been encountered, and more than 10,000 prisoners have been taken in this new invasion, including two German generals.

A front twenty miles broad has been driven to the north and behind Toulon, the French naval base at which American bombers yesterday blasted the half-submerged French battleship Strasbourg in an effort to silence her big guns, which were opposing the Allied attack.

Latest announcements put American and French forces only six miles northeast of Toulon, but other advance units, speeding over a network of inland roads, were pointed directly toward the Rhone Valley through routes which by-pass Toulon and Marseille.

Other towns taken were Sollies-Pont, Gareoult, Vins and Brignoles, all north and northeast of Toulon.

In the approach to the naval base along the coast the Allied forces encountered some stiff German resistance west of Bormes, but inland the opposition was less.

American forward elements were pushing rapidly into the high ground west of La Roquebrussanne. Highway 7, the road on which they are approaching, leads to the Rhone Valley at Avignon by way of Aix-en-provence.

To the northeast other troops pushed two miles west of Brignoles along Highway 7. The advance through the Argens Valley still farther north was approaching Carces, about seven miles southwest of Salernes.

The path of the Seventh Army was obviously toward the Rhone Valley, aimed for a push up that great artery to effect a juncture with the armies of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. These forces were now less than 350 airline miles apart.

American infantry was spreading out on both sides of the Argens Valley, which has been the main avenue of attack through the rugged terrain of the Maritime Alps.

French Are Gaining.

Advance troops pushed beyond Salernes, twelve miles west of Draguignan, previously the farthest inland penetration.

Although the Germans declared they had abandoned Cannes, there was no announcement here of an entry into that resort town. Indications were that the eastern front of the beachhead was relatively stable.

An official announcement said that French troops had overcome the last enemy resistance in the Cap Benat region, on the coast twenty-one miles east of Toulon.

A force of German motor torpedo boats attempted to attack ships landing troops Thursday night, the Navy announced. Allied destroyers sank four of them and repulsed the others.

Ack-Ack Heavy Over Toulon

American B-25 Mitchell bombers, braving the heaviest flak encountered in many weeks, scored several hits on the Strasbourg which the Germans were using for a coastal battery. They also sank a destroyer and submarine and left a cruiser partly submerged. A big gun position at the entrance to the harbor was silenced.

Allied headquarters disclosed that the islands of Port-Cros and Levant were captured by the first special service force, a mixed United States and Canadian Commando type unit which saw service in Italy. This force attacked the islands on invasion eve.

Germans still on the islands of Sainte Marguerite and Saint Honorat south of Cannes have been firing on Allied troops on the mainland from heavy caliber guns installed there.

Elements of another German division—the 338th Infantry—has been identified in the northwest sector.

The Mediterranean Allied Air Forces announced that in the first three days of the invasion a Thunderbolt group commanded by Col. Earl Bates of Winnetka, Ill., destroyed or damaged 225 freight cars, 195 motor vehicles, two locomotives, twenty coastal guns, sixteen grounded planes, an ammunition dump, supply dump and a German headquarters.

Vice-Admiral H. K. Hewitt reported that British and American naval aircraft based on carriers off the southern invasion coast effectively attacked enemy communications on land, destroying or damaging 31 trucks, two locomotives, 11 tank cars, 25 freight cars, and cutting tracks in several places.

(The British radio quoted one of its correspondents this morning as saying that Toulon is going to fall soon.

("The Germans have thrown up a hastily built screen of mobile guns and infantry to give protection to the rest of their men as they pulled out of the city," said the correspondent, Vaughn Thomas. "They are blowing up bridges and mining the roads, but not on a scale big enough to check our advance.")

The advance to Brignoles followed a trunk highway leading to the Rhone Valley above Marseille. Such an advance, if projected beyond the latter city, would hem in German forces in both Marseille and Toulon.

Toward the eastern end of the beachhead, forward elements of the Seventh Army made slight advances in the vicinity of Draguignan, captured inland road junction point. But a late dispatch said German forces still occupied Le Muy, midway between Draguignan and St. Raphael on the coast. American artilery units were reported shelling Le Muy.

Headquarters announced capture of the second German general in 48 hours. He was taken yesterday by troops of the American Thirty-Sixth Division.

Nine Carriers Aid Riviera Drive

Rome, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Nine aircraft carriers—seven British and two American—were officially disclosed today to be operating off the Riviera beachhead.

Warplanes from the carriers have attacked road and rail traffic and communications, a communique announced, adding that "there was considerable anti-aircraft fire, but no opposition from the air."

Commanding the force is British Admiral Thomas Hope Troubridge.

Aircraft from the carriers were credited with destroying or damaging fifty-one trucks, two locomotives, eleven tank cars, twenty-five freight cars, and cutting tracks in several places.

FRENCH PATRIOTS TAKE 70 VILLAGES

Maquis Intensify Corralling of Nazis in Southwest France.

LONDON, Aug. 19—(AP) French Forces of the Interior, rising behind the German lines, have liberated 70 villages in the area southeast of Paris, are taking over whole departments of France, and intensifying the corralling of Germans seeking to escape from the southwest, it was announced today.

The once-hunted men of the Maquis—men of the underbrush—organized in cellars and forest glades and armed by parachute, have become hunters on a gigantic scale, it was disclosed in a communique from headquarters of Maj. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of all resistance forces in the interior.

All police in the Saone and Loire departments have joined the Maquis, he announced, and German garrisons at Thonon, Evian, Lefayet and Ichamonix are negotiating to surrender. (Swiss dispatches said the Maquis already had occupied Thonon and Evian).

In Brittany the Maquis hold Nantes, and aided by American artillery, took Paimpol and Plounez three days ago, Koenig's Communique said, while four days ago they attacked the Germans at St. Jean de Gonville and chased many across the border into Switzerland.

Vichy French militia in the Haute Vienne department who tried to flee to Vichy were driven back into Limoges, it was announced. In the Vienne department the FFI blocked a German munitions train in a tunnel and killed hundreds of Germans near Poitiers.

A German attack on the FFI near Cluny with mortars and 37-millimeter guns cost the enemy 270 dead and an equal number of wounded, Koenig said.

Inferentially confirming the announcements of wholesale successes for the French, the German transocean agency broadcast an interview with a self-styled "expert on the Maquis" who explained that 50 per cent of the Maquis in the Pyrenees area were Spanish Communists, not Frenchmen, and said:

"To get arms, you only have to go into the forest, flash a few lights, and then you will hear the drone of masses of American planes and masses of automatic rifles will be poured down from the sky; just be careful not to be knocked on the head by some of them."

The Paris radio continued silent, and the Vichy radio also vanished from the airwaves. Radio Lyons, of the Vichy network, confined itself to brief rebroadcasts of German war reports of the previous day. Some German propaganda programs were heard on the Paris wavelength.

Radio France from Algiers broadcast that the Germans, apparently intending to abandon all southwestern France to escape the big trap being fashioned by the Patch-Patton forces, were uprooting coastal guns and shipping them northward.

Until last Thursday night the city was repressed by tightening terrorism of Joseph Darnand's militia. They said that hundreds of Pro-Allied sympathizers were rounded up and imprisoned on news of the Riviera landings. Maquis (patriot fighters) were suppressed in a brief reign of terror harsher than anything previously imposed during the German occupation.

Thursday night the militia fled to Vichy. Yesterday morning Partisans opened the prisons, releasing the Maquis men. Meanwhile, all German headquarters and supply personnel left the city, leaving the garrison to prepare for a siege.

A German order for evacuation of the city was generally ignored, since no transportation existed, the Frenchmen said. All railroads from the city were cut by Allied bombers, and motor transport was so scanty that the Germans were unable to carry their own personnel, some service units quitting the city on foot.

So little food was transported to Marseille in the last few weeks that Vichy cut the bread ration to seventy-five grams daily. There was no meat, not even horse meat. But there were enough carrots, cabbages and beets to prevent starvation.

The curfew remained fixed at 10 p. m. even after the invasion of southern France began and Marseille's notorious red light district operated the same as ever, with one row of "maisons de tolerance" reserved for the Germans.

WITH THE 7TH ARMY IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 19.—Five Frenchmen from Cannes stranded at Marseille by the invasion reached the Allied lines today and told how France's second city awaits the approaching hour of liberation.

VICHY LEADERS FLEE TO BELFORT

Reports Say Laval Has Set Up Offices; Petain Expected Today.

ON THE FRENCH - SWISS FRONTIER, Aug. 19—(AP) Pierre Laval arrived at Belfort at noon today and Marshal Petain was expected there during the night, according to frontier reports tonight.

Belfort is in France about 25 miles west of Basel, Switzerland, and about the same distance from the German border.

The reports which could not be confirmed said Laval was establishing administrative offices at Belfort.

NAZIS SAY PETAIN EVACUATES VICHY

London, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Marshal Petain's Government is moving from Vichy to an unidentified new capital, a Berlin broadcast said today in reporting that an American tank spearhead was fighting German security forces south of Paris.

A German Foreign Office spokesman was quoted as saying Pierre Laval already had fled Paris.

No hint was given of the nearness of the American tanks—presumably a part of Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army—but they were identified as "reconnaissance" armor.

Patriots Save U. S. Force in Nazi Ambush

12 French Civilians Storm Hidden Anti-Tank Men and Clear Toulon Road

By Homer Bigart

New York Herald Tribune Correspondent (Representing combined American press)

WITH THE 7TH ARMY, Aug. 19.—Emile Mauret, who served in the Maginot Line as a reserve lieutenant, had not shot a German in more than four years and was slightly out of practice when he and his seventeen-year-old son led ten other Partisans yesterday in a charge that destroyed a German anti-tank gun crew, thus saving an American force from marching into an ambush.

The Americans, commanded by Major Clayton C. Thobro, of Rock Springs, Wyo., were nearing Emile's home town east of Toulon. There had been almost no opposition, but as they entered the town they encountered the still smouldering wreckage of a blown-up railway overpass and knew that German rear guards were not far ahead.

Two hundred yards down the hill, cleverly concealed on a wooded spur to the left of the road, lay about eighty Germans. They had a machine gun and two .37 mm. anti-tank guns.

An American tank, leading a company of infantry under Captain Frank L. Williams, of Edenton, N. C., plunged through the debris of the fallen overpass and was poking around a bend in the road into the point-blank range of the hidden guns when the young Mauret, Emile's son, raced up on a bicycle and halted the column.

Interpreter Required

Emile followed and tried to tell Lieutenant George E. Stripp of 13 Cabinet Street, Newark N. J., about the ambush. Stripp does not know a word of French but he waved his platoon into cover until Captain Williams came up with Private Rolland Riendeau, of North Attleboro, Mass., as interpreter.

"The captain decided to send my platoon around through the brush and envelop the German strongpoint from the right," Lieutenant Stripp said. "This Frenchman told us not to fire on the adjacent hill because it was full of Partisans. Sure enough, as we approached, ten Frenchmen popped out of the Maquis. One boy with a bright yellow shirt and blue pants took me up on a bald knob overlooking the strongpoint, but the Germans spotted us and for ten minutes we had to keep our heads and tails down until young Mauret found a ditch, and we crawled back to defilade.

"He led us around through a gully that brought us right behind the German positions. They were strung out on a brushy hump across a narrow gauge track Some were in a stone house, and when they saw us coming they started running toward the guns.

Partisans Capture Arms

"Only two of the Partisans were armed and all they had were little .25-caliber pistols. But they all took off, whooping and yelling, after the Germans. I saw one kid shoot a German and grab the kraut's gun before he even stopped kicking.

"You never saw a more eager bunch of fighters. In a few minutes they had killed enough Germans so that all the Partisans had tommy guns and Lugers. Then they rushed the nearest gun and shot up the whole crew. They didn't have a casualty."

The Maurets, father and son, killed at least three Germans, including one who had drawn bead on Lieutenant Stripp. The other Partisans bagged ten. Then the rest of the company stormed the strongpoint frontally. They lost the lead tank before the second German gun was silenced, but they killed more than sixty Germans and took thirty prisoners.

"Today," said the elder Mauret, "we had our revenge." Lieutenant Stripp gave his son a tommy gun.

Germans Scuttle Fleets in France

By The Associated Press.

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 19—The German fleet in southwest France, both naval and mercantile, has been scuttled in the Bay of Biscay and in the Gironde River channel near Bordeaux, it was learned here tonight.

The fleet consisted of a number of torpedo boats, submarine auxiliary ships, light submarines, armed trawlers and many coastal freighters.

The freighters could be seen from the Spanish shore today. They put out from Bayonne and St. Jean de Luz for a few miles and were scuttled by their crews, who went back ashore in lifeboats.

Information reaching here tonight said the action was similar in the Gironde Channel.

REPORT NAZIS EVACUATE SUPPLIES FROM PARIS

ON THE FRENCH-SWISS BORDER, Aug. 19—(AP) The Germans were reported tonight to have evacuated large stores of supplies from Paris during the past week and apparently have made little preparation within the city proper for carrying on the fight.

One courier said at least 30,000 French resistance troops were within the city ready to act or already fighting the Germans inside the city.

Another report reaching Maquis headquarters near here said 10 German officers including Col. Von Kolopfestein, chief of intelligence, were killed July 14 when a bomb hit a barge in which they were crossing the Seine.

Another report said Marshal Petain had left Vichy and that Maquis attacked his convoy but the aged Petain escaped.

Rocket-Firing Warplanes Wreck Retreating Armor

Allied Bombers Inflict Heavy Damage on Enemy Divisions Racing for the Seine—Officials Estimate 10,000 Transport Vehicles Smashed.

APR 20 1944

NIGHT

LONDON, Aug. 19—AP) Aided by the new rocket-firing tank-busting U. S. Thunderbolt, Allied war planes spread death and destruction among German divisions racing for the Seine today and the three-day toll of destroyed or damaged Nazi tanks and vehicles was officially estimated at 10,000.

The destruction inflicted on Nazi armor and transport was described as having caused "tremendous confusion and chaos" among the fleeing enemy troops.

RAF Typhoons and United States Thunderbolt fighter-bombers have been smashing German armor with astonishing success.

Weather Gives Respite

Bad weather gave the Germans some respite this afternoon but not before 615 military vehicles and 62 or more tanks had been knocked out.

The Second Tactical Air Force for the three daoys starting August 17 has destroyed or damaged more than 7,000 vehicles and tanks. The Ninth Air Force during Friday and Thursday accounted for more than 1,500 and the tabulation is not yet completed and does not include today's score.

Storm clouds blanketed the area late in the day. However, the Second Tactical Air Force in the forenoon knocked out 59 motor transports east of the Falaise-Argentan area, while United States Ninth Air Force fighter-bombers swept the routes of retreat.

Ploesti Hit Third Day

Mediterranean-based American heavy bombers struck at Hitler's dwindling oil resources at Ploesti, Romania, for the third straight day and encountered no enemy aircraft. RAF Lancasters smashed again an oil-)storage depot at La Pallice.

Photo reconnaissance and field dispatches testified to the destruction wrought by hundreds of Allied warplanes on the German forces in retreat. At least 71 tanks were destroyed yesterday and 91 were damaged, and some reports said the total was above 200.

At least 100 barges and two river steamers were sunk on the Seine.

Nazi Traffic Thins

Pilots said traffic had thinned in some sectors, indicating that the enemy was running out of transport, but heavy troop movement was noted on other parts of the front.

The air forces also have been smashing gun positions holding up the Allied advance, giving other close support and blasting bridges and barges on the Seine.

More than 1,000 RAF heavies set the great German port of Bremen ablaze and raided oil and rail installations in widespread sweeps over Germany, France and Belgium last night.

Photographs showed that the more than 150,000 incendiaries showered on Bremen started fires which extended two miles along the river from the docks to the commercial center. Smoke from Bremen extended 60 miles inland today, reconnaissance showed.

Mosquitos unloaded two-ton bombs on Berlin for the fourth time in five nights.

Ninth Air force headquarters reported that four buildings comprising a big German headquarters hidden in the forest south of Orleans were flattened in a surprise fighter bomber raid Thursday.

Among other RAF targets last night were the Sterkrade-Holten synthetic oil plant, knocked out once but rebuilt, oil storage depots at Rieme, Belgium, and the rail center of Connantre, 70 miles east of Paris.

PLANES SMASH NAZI VEHICLES WEST OF PARIS

3,800 Are Knocked Out—

Germany and Belgium Bombed

Bentner

DAY

London, Aug. 19—(AP)—Allied airmen destroyed or damaged more than 3,800 German vehicles in the battle of Northwest France yesterday and struck fresh blows today at shattered enemy divisions.

Blistering daylight attacks upon the remnants of Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's reeling remnants came after a night in which more than 1,000 R.A.F. heavy bombers set fires at the port of Bremen and blasted oil and rail installations of Germany, France and Belgium.

Mosquitos dumped two-ton blockbusters on Berlin for the fourth time in five nights and bombed and strafed German roads of retreat in France through the hours of darkness.

Like the pilots of the bomb and rocket-carrying fighters who battered enemy troops mercilessly in daylight as they attempted to scramble across the Seine ahead of Lt Gen. George S. Patton's U. S. Third Army, Mosquito crewmen reported "the best hunting since D-day." On one road they attacked at least 700 vehicles with bombs and bullets and left about 120 of them burning or destroyed and many more damaged to add to the total of yesterday's daylight achievements announced officially today.

5,000 Sorties Flown

Some 5,000 offensive sorties were flown yesterday and 51 Allied planes —including three heavy bombers— were lost. Eight R. A. F. bombers failed to return from the night operations. At least 38 German planes were downed in combat and 51 more were destroyed on the ground.

The enemy's daylight sorties were estimated at 300—most of them east of Paris.

Of the Allied attacks, American and British heavy bombers made at least 2,000 sorties in seven separate attacks on Nazi airfields, oil depots, bridges, submarine pens, pocket depots and other targets.

Other Objectives

Objectives battered last night by the British heavy bombers in addition to Bremen, Germany's second largest port, which is now the home of a Focke-Wulf factory, were the Sterkrade-Holten synthetic oil plant—the sixth largest in the Ruhr—oil storage depots at Rieme, Belgium, and the rail center of Connantre, 70 miles east of Paris. A communique said the Bremen target was left "a mass of flames."

Oft-battered Cologne also was bombed again in the night, but this probably was a diversionary attack.

Early in the evening R. A. F. heavies returned to L'Isle Adam just north of Paris for the second blow at that rocket weapon supply depot within a few hours and also hit several launching sites in Northern France.

Field dispatches disclosed that fighter bombers destroyed 71 German tanks and damaged 91 more yesterday.

At least 100 barges and two river steamers were sunk on the Seine nearby rivers and canals in low-level daylight raids and mosquitos bombed and shot up 75 barges last night at points along the Seine.

The weather over the battle zone was described today as good, with excellent visibility despite a few scattered clouds.

YANK PLANES FIRE ROCKETS

APR 20 1944

New Thunderbolt Used Against Retreating Nazi Armor

A United States Ninth Air Force Base in France, Aug. 19 (AP)—Rocket-firing American Thunderbolts, as sensational in performance as the RAF rocket-bearing Typhoons, have been secretly participating in recent attacks on retreating German armored columns, it was announced tonight.

While many details of the new weapon still have not been announced, it can be stated that they throw a highly explosive armor-piercing rocket that will split the toughest Nazi tank in half from either a high or low level.

Different-Type Rocket

The rocket is a new type American-developed projectile—not the same as the rocket carried by the British Typhoons. The rockets are aimed and fired with the same gunsights pilots use for strafing.

As an example of their potency, Col. Anthony Grossetta, of Tucson, Ariz., commander of one group, said his men knocked out 19 German tanks with 45 rockets in one day. They are most suitable for attacks on armored columns moving along the highways but also have been used successfully against air fields.

Five Trucks At One Shot

Lieut. Rodney Ellis, of Due West, S. C., who shot up five enemy trucks at the same time, said "they were all lined up bumper to bumper."

"I bounced one into the last truck and all five exploded," he added.

The number of rockets carried by each plane still is a military secret but "they are an ideal weapon for tanks and concrete installations," Grossetta declared.

All pilots of the rocket Thunderbolts were specially trained for the job in the United States and England before coming to France.

"We don't fire wild into any hedgerow," said Lieut. Harry Krig of North Dartmouth, Mass., "we aim and fire only at specific targets."

Lieut. Arden A. Hitch, of Maple Grove, Ohio, said "one of the big advantages of the rocket planes is that they still are able to carry a full load of ammunition."

trailing half a mile behind.

They nicknamed the new planes Jetties because they are jet-propelled like buzzbombs.

Powered by Rocket.

The pilots agreed the plane was powered only by the rocket propellant. The cloud trail is from the burning fuel.

A single-seater, it has a [illegible] by fuselage only two-thirds as long as the broad tapering wing. The pilot sits under a glass canopy in the fuselage.

Col. Murphy reported the swept-back wings form a sharp angle with the fuselage and that the short tail is thicker than a Thunderbolt's. "They are ugly old things," he said. "They look like a bat flying around." They are dark colored and unwaxed. The jet-propellant is turned on only when speed is needed. When this is switched off the Jetties glide. When given several short bursts of speed in a row, con-throttle it had," he said. "I lost 10,000 feet to catch him. He was so close I could smell chemical fumes from his jet."

Lieut. Shoffit is the first flyer who reported being fired upon by a Jetty. While he was making a head-on attack, the ship fired what he believed was a rocket. It missed him.

Lieutenant Got Mad.

"I was trying to get on the ship's tail. He came in too fast and overshot me. The Jetty was gliding at that time. He shot up his right wing, but the pilot turned on his jet and escaped, leaving Lieut. Shoffit plenty mad.

Here is what history-making pilots who were the first to meet them and beat them think of Germany's latest aerial weapon:

Col. Murphy, an ace who has made eight kills in the air, said: "They are not as maneuverable as our P-51s."

Lieut. Jones, who has destroyed an ME-109 beside his

Super-fast Nazi Flying Wings Are Downed at Point-blank Range

APR 20 1944

Bentner

A Fighter Base in Britain, Aug. 18 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The first three Allied pilots to engage the Germans' new rocket-propelled fighter plane, the ME-163 "Flying Wing"—in close quarter combat expressed belief today that in a vertical dive it made the fastest controlled flight ever achieved by man.

A detailed description of the ME-163 was given by Lieut.-Col. John Murphy of Tulsa, Okla., a 27-year-old Mustang squadron commander, who shot down the first Japanese plane in the Aleutians, Lieut. Cyril W. Jones Jr., of Athens, Tenn., and Lieut. Jimmy C. Shoffit of Fort Worth, Tex.

Diving on four rocket planes which attacked a fortress formation near Leipzig yesterday they destroyed two and damaged a third—all at point-blank range.

The bird-shaped ME-163s swished by Flying Fortresses so swiftly that the crews did not realize what they were. The Mustang pilots, however, identified the Flying Wings as far as twelve miles off because of a spectacular dense white cloud densation trails dot the sky like Morse code. Despite their phenomenal speed, pilots of the slower Mustangs nailed them by outguessing and outmaneuvering them.

Col. Murphy, who made the first attack, rightly figured one Jetty would dive at a straggling fortress, so he did too. The Jetty's speed, attained with the help of a 3,000-foot drop in altitude, was amazingly fast. The jet was turned off during the glide.

Action Was a Thrill.

Col. Murphy overtook the jetty at 23,000 feet altitude and poured 50 caliber bullets into its fuselage. Lieut. Jones, the Colonel's wing man, raked the Jetty's canopy with more 50s, probably killing the pilot.

"My plane almost hit it, I was so close," he said.

"It was an awful thrill to knock down one of those sons-of-guns," he said. "I had thought we couldn't catch him."

Col. Murphy, now alone, dived on another Jetty, outturned him and blew him up.

"I gave my Mustang all the ME-163:

"They should not be awfully maneuverable, the way an apparently expert pilot slipped it on its back and pulled it through a split-S. With their short range they're good for the Germans [illegible] their own territory, but of [illegible] value to us."

The Nazi "Flying Wing"

[illegible] United States Fighter Base in Britain, Aug. 18 (AP—Delayed by Censorship)—The German rocket-propelled fighter plane now in use as an interceptor against American bombers over the Reich moves so fast that even the men who have engaged it victoriously in close combat can give only sketchy description of it.

Strict censorship does permit the disclosure that they believe it completes vertical dives that are the fastest controlled flight ever made by man.

(Last September 29 Lieut. Robert H. Knapp, of Norwich, N. Y., reported that in a fight over Emden, Germany, he had pulled out of a dive in a Thunderbolt at 840 miles an hour, a speed so great that the paint curled on his elevators and his controls locked. On August 4, last year, Lieut. Col. Cass S. [illegible]

Hough, of Plymouth, Mich., deliberately dived a Lightning at a speed officially announced as "more than 780 miles an hour"—approximately the speed of sound.]

The German "Flying Wing"

The German plane, known officially as the ME-163, is called the "flying wing" and the "jetty" by the American flyers. The Americans and British have developed jet-propelled planes, but so far have not announced their use.

The German craft, two of which were shot down and a third damaged by American fighters over Germany Thursday, swished past heavy bombers so fast the crewmen did not realize what they were, but the fighter pilots said they were able to identify the enemy at 12 miles away by the spectacular dense white smoke or condensation trail stretching out a half mile behind each craft.

"Ugly Things—Like Bats"

Lieut. Col. John Murphy, of Tulsa, Okla., Mustang squadron commander who shot down one of the new planes Thursday near Leipzig, said, "they are ugly things; they look like bats flying around."

Lieut. Cyril W. Jones, Jr., of Athens, Tenn., who shot down another, and Lieut. Jimmy C. Shoffit, of Fort Worth, Texas, who damaged one, agreed with Murphy that the German planes were powered only by rocket propellants, having no supplementary engines or propellers.

The stubby fusilage, only two thirds as long as the broad, tapering wings, has room for one man under a transparent canopy. The short tail is thicker than that of the stubby American Thunderbolt and the wings have a swept-back appearance. There is a tail fin, but no tail plane.

Also Operates As Glider

The ME-163 is dark and dull-looking, apparently not waxed for greater speed, and from the puffy trails emitted when it is given short bursts of speed the flyers concluded that it operates as a glider when power is not needed.

Despite their amazing speed, the German planes were nailed by the slower Mustangs because the American pilots guessed where the enemy was going and got in position first.

Murphy caught one at 23,000 feet, out-turned it, followed it down 10,000 feet and blew it up at a range so close he said he could smell the chemical fumes it was emitting.

600-Mile-An-Hour Dive

Jones, Murphy's wingman, went into a 600-mile-an-hour dive to catch his foe. He blacked out and recovered after falling 9,000 feet and getting into the German's "wash."

Shoffit, who met a rocket plane head on, said it fired a rocket at him but missed. He overshot in trying to get on the tail of the enemy, who was gliding, and by the time he could turn, the German had put on the power and outran him.

Capt. Arthur F. Jeffrey, of San Francisco, who three weeks ago shot down the only other ME-163 known to have been destroyed, said he got it at extreme range and could not tell much about it.

All the flyers agreed that the plane was apparently of short range, useful primarily for defense over Germany. Some thought its great weakness was lack of maneuverability, but Jones said "they struck me as being awfully maneuverable, the way an apparently expert pilot slipped one on its back and pulled it through a split-S."

RUSSIANS DRIVE ON EAST PRUSSIA

Red Army Imperils Two Border Towns in 10-Mile Advance

APR 20 1944

LONDON, Sunday, Aug. 20 — (AP) Red army troops yesterday advanced up to 10 miles in thrusts imperilling Lomza and Ostrow-Mazowiecki, German bastions guarding the lower East Prussian border northeast of Warsaw, while Berlin said that another powerful Soviet army had punched out a "breach in major depth" in Nazi lines on the eastern rim of East Prussia.

NIGHT

The Russian pincers movement on Germany's exposed eastern province was launched by two Red armies totalling 300,000 men, supported by strong tank and warplane formations, Berlin said. The "main center of fighting" was near the East Prussian-Luthuanian frontier, the Germans said.

Await Crossing of Border

Moscow's communique was silent about the western Lithuanian front where Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian army Thursday reached the East Prussian border, but dispatches from the Soviet capital said the Russians there were awaiting an announcement of the first Soviet crossing into Reich territory in 30 years.

Gen. G. F. Zakharov's Second White Russian army began the new drive between Warsaw and the southern border of East Prussia, capturing 80 localities, the bulletin said. Curving around below the Wisna marshes one column seized Molomija, only 13 miles from Lomza, and 38 miles west of Bialystok, the Soviet offensive base.

Another column striking southwest in a 10-mile advance captured Czyewo, 45 miles beyond Bialystok and only 16 miles east of Ostrow-Mazowiecki. Czyzewo is on the Bialystok-Warsaw railway, and also is a junction on a highway junction linking Lomza and Siedice.

The town of Smolevo, 15 miles south of Ostrow, also was captured in this drive which is linked up with Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovky's First White Russian army wheeling movement between the Ostrow sector and Warsaw. East and northeast of Praga, suburb of Warsaw, Rokossovsky's troops improved their positions after repulsing bitter German counterattacks on their lines from seven to 12 miles from Praga.

3 Divisions Trapped

One hundred miles below Warsaw, on the western side of the Vistula river, Marshall Ivan S. Konev's First Ukraine army tightened its hold on three pocketed German divisions by capturing seven localities, and also smashed enemy attempts to break through to their rescue, the bulletin said.

The captured village included Komorna, seven miles northwest of Sandomierz; Penchiny, eight miles northwest, and Galkowice, five miles north of Sandomierz, which was captured Friday after a three-day street battle in which thousands of Germans were slain.

The intensity of the struggle of the Polish plains and along the East Prussian border approaches was evident in Moscow's announcement that the Germans lost 203 more tanks and 48 planes in Friday's fighting. This made a total of 1,084 tanks and 383 planes lost by the Nazis in a week, Moscow said.

On the Estonian and Latvian fronts two other Russian armies captured 80 localities in their simultaneous drives on Riga, Latvian capital, and Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Estonian forces also were on the verge of snapping the Tallinn-Riga railway at the midland city of Tartu, 100 miles southeast of Tallinn, Estonian capital.

Aluksne Falls

In Latvia the town of Aluksne on a lake of the same name was taken by Maslennikov's lower wing spilling across the Estonian frontier. Farther south Gen. Andrei Yeremenko's Second Baltic army seized Bindeny, nine miles west of Madona and 70 miles from Riga. Jaunkalsnava, the same distance from Riga and 10 miles below Bindeny, was captured.

The two stranded German Baltic armies were fighting with bitter tenacity, and there appeared to be no German hope or intention of trying to save these 200,000 men. Moscow dispatches said they were being sacrificed in a German effort to delay the onslaught on East Prussia.

Southwest of Riga another Russian army, the first Baltic commanded by Gen. Ivan Bagramian, for the second straight day fought off heavy enemy attacks in the Siauliai area of northern Lithuania. The Germans in this area apparently were not only trying to erase a third threat to East Prussia, but were attempting to open a corridor to the stranded Baltic legions.

Berlin said the major breach in German lines around East Prussia was made near Vilkaviskis, Lithuanian town on the Kaunas-Konigsberg highway only 11 miles from German soil. Farther north, along the Szeszuppe river, Russian artillery and even riflemen were firing across that water border into German lines fighting on East Prussian soil.

Two Russian Armies Launch New Drive on 100-Mile Front

Moscow Reports Vistula Dam Is Broken—Soviet Capital Awaits the Capture of First German Town.

DAY

Gilmore

Moscow, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Two Russian armies surged forward today in co-ordinated attacks against a 100-mile sector stretching from Warsaw's eastern suburbs to the Lyso Mountains guarding German Silesia. The Moscow High Command timed the Polish drive to strike with Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian Army assault in East Prussia.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian Army, north of captured Sandomierz, sent armored columns spearing up the west bank of the Vistula at the rear of the enemy's river defenses. Other units smashed due westward, bent on severing the Radom-Kielce link in the Warsaw-Krakow railway.

Konev's destruction of resistance along the Upper Vistula was the signal for Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovksy's First White Russian Army to resume the initiative in the battle raging four to seven miles east of Warsaw. The Russian infantry with powerful artillery support slashed into the flanks of the narrow German salient extending from Praga to Ossow.

[Today's German communique said that the Russians had launched an offensive on a wide front northeast of Warsaw, and in a broadcast picked up at New York today by CBS, the British radio quoted a Moscow dispatch as announcing that the Vistula Dam has been broken.]

Await Fall of German Town.

Meanwhile today the home front tensely awaited a salute from Moscow's guns announcing that the Red Army had won the first town inside Germany.

Having squandered nearly 750 tanks in four days of counter-attacks, the Germans were faced with a smashing challenge for a decisive victory in Poland.

Over the town hall of Sandomierz flags of the Soviet Union and Poland waved side by side after three days of street fighting. The Russian Army newspaper, the Red Star, reported that Hitler ordered the garrison at Sandomierz on the eve of its capture to "retain the gates to southern Germany and fight to the last."

In a desperate attempt to halt an imminent Soviet sweep into East Prussia, the Germans hurled one of their biggest armored blows in months west of the Lithuanian city of Siauliai. They penetrated the Red Army lines, but apparently it was not a serious setback.

East of the Warsaw suburb of Praga, the Red Army attacked and improved its positions.

Moscow Broadcasts

The Russian war bulletin was silent on fighting at the border of East Prussia, but fliers returning from that area reported villages inside the Junker Province burning from Nazi-applied torches.

(Moscow broadcasts heard in London said the Russians had reached the East Prussian border at new but unspecified points. "Fighting on the threshold of East Prussia grows fiercer every hour . . . but the speed of the Soviet offensive never slackens," one Moscow announcer asserted.)

(Berlin reported the Russians had hurled more than 150,000 men into the battle for East Russia on an 80-mile front from Augustow in Northern Poland to the Niemen River in Western Lithuania. The Nazis said heavy fighting was in progress, with the "center of gravity" at Virbalis, three miles from the border on the Kaunas-Koniigsberg Railway.)

Marshal Ivan S. Konev, commander of the First Ukraine Army that captured Sandomierz, drove into the Radom region, taking numerous villages along the Vistula. He lengthened his bridgehead to 75 miles and reached the village of Lukava, 13 miles northeast of Radom and 44 miles southeast of Warsaw.

Nazis Trapped

The Russian war bulletin said "successful engagements" were in progress for the three trapped Nazi divisions that "have fallen into the cauldron."

Capture of Sandomierz gave the Russians another river crossing with which to pour men and material into the Polish plains leading to German Silesia, and outflank Warsaw from the south.

In Estonia units of the Third Baltic Army crossed the narrow strait linking lakes Pskov and Peipus seized a six-mile-wide strip of territory on the west side, and drove nine miles inland in a push toward Tartu, Estonia's second largest city. These units joined forces which had been pushing up the west bank of Lake Pskov. Fifteen miles inland another Russian column seized Valgetmesa, 15½ miles southeast of Tartu. The Soviet war bulletin said 1,000 Germans were slain in that battle.

Red Airmen Claim Total Of 60,000 Nazi Planes

Aviation Day Is Observed; Production Up 300%

LONDON, Aug. 19 (AP).—On the eve of Soviet Aviation Day celebrations, the Russian press said today that Red airmen had destroyed in the air or on the ground 60,000 German planes in three years of war and that airplane production in the U. S. S. R. had increased 300 per cent.

Premier-Marshal Josef V. Stalin, in an order of the day, directed that Moscow's victory cannon fire twenty salvos from 224 guns tomorrow night.

The Soviet press said the Ilyushin-2, known variously as a "flying tank," or Stormovik, was the best low-level assault bomber in the world, and the Yakovle fighter was described as the lightest fighter in action on any major front.

STALIN RAISES POLISH HOPES

Hands Off Pledge In Unity Issue Reported In London

London, Aug. 19 (AP)—Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of Poland's exiled Government has obtained personal assurance from Premier Joseph Stalin of Soviet non-interference in Poland's political and internal affairs, Polish quarters said tonight.

While the exiled Cabinet gingerly approached showdown decisions Monday on relations with Russia, a source close to the Government who has been reliable in the past said an accord with the Soviet and agreement with the National Liberation Committee is not only possible, but quite likely, within a few days.

Pending Warsaw's Liberation

The informant said that if everything goes well, Mikolajczyk would go directly to Warsaw to present plans for bringing representatives of the rival group into the Government and for going ahead with the country's rehabilitation.

Final decisions probably would await liberation of the Polish capital, he added, and they would depend to a major extent upon conditions under which the city, now being stormed by the Russians, is freed, and upon the treatment accorded to underground army leaders loyal to Mikolajczyk.

Pravda Assails Exile Regime

Meanwhile, Moscow's Communist party newspaper Pravda accused the Polish Government-in-exile of a "perfidious political maneuver" in the uprisings of Polish patriots within Warsaw to "make propaganda and strengthen its prestige in the United States and England."

The publication attacked foreign criticism of operations of Russian troops before Warsaw, declaring that the Red army, now locked in a "blood-soaked battle at the capital's walls," had "always warned against such insurrections" and that "there is no precedent for this insurrection in any city or town ever liberated by the Red army or other armies."

Pravda fixed responsibility of the revolt in Warsaw on Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkowski, commander in chief of Polish fighting forces in Italy and France; Gen. Wladyslaw Anders, chief of the Polish Corps in Italy, "and their adherents."

LOSAF Aids Warsaw Patriots

Great fires raged in Warsaw when RAF heavy bombers—implementing British policy to help anyone who fights the Germans—roared over and dropped guns and ammunition to patriots fighting the occupation forces in the Polish capital, it was disclosed today.

Among the supplies reported dropped by the British was a Piat anti-tank gun, similar to the American bazooka, and this was said to have been used effectively against tanks which the Germans were employing freely.

The planes, 21 of which already have been destroyed by Nazi gunners within the city, flew from Mediterranean bases on a 1,750-mile round-trip flight—a perilous adventure which Britain undertook although her Russian ally is at Warsaw's outskirts.

Answer Seen In British Policy

While there is no official comment, British policy appears to be the answer to the anomalous situation, for the near-by Russians have disavowed General Bor's forces in Warsaw as creatures of the Polish Government-in-exile in London, which the Soviet Union refuses to recognize.

The British, South African and Polish crews have flown 100 bombers on these missions, not only facing the hazard of German night fighters but coming in over Warsaw low and slow in order to drop the badly needed arms accurately and offering easy targets for ground gunners.

The dates of the flights from Mediterranean bases have not been announced.

Guerrilla War Brings Discord

Guerrilla warfare against the German garrison began on a large scale August 1 and won considerable success as Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's forces surged to the eastern fringe of the city.

But while the Russians consolidated their positions, the Germans fought back fiercely against the underground, which sent out pleas for help.

Then the Polish Government here issued statements implying that the Russians had let down the resistance movement.

Seize Nazi Base Near Bulgaria

LONDON, Aug. 19 (AP).—Yugoslav Partisan forces have captured the enemy base of Bolevac, twenty miles from the Bulgarian border, and have liberated a large area in that vicinity, a broadcast communique said today.

Masaryk's Grandson Is Killed

LONDON, Aug. 19 (AP).—Pilot Officer Leonard Reyilliod, a grandson of the late President Thomas G. Masaryk of Czecho-Slovakia, has died while on active service with the Royal Air Force, it was announced today.

Forrestal In London; Will Visit France

London, Aug. 19—(AP)—Secretary of Navy James V. Forrestal has arrived in London.

Censorship prevented any speculation concerning the purpose of his visit.

He will visit France, however, and inspect the shore's strong points which British and American warcraft shelled on D-Day.

2-Day Week in Berlin Exchange

LONDON, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Norwegian radio said today the Berlin Stock Exchange is open only two days weekly and that no new members will be admitted "as long as the present total war exigencies exist."

CHAOS IN REICH HELD NAZI AIM

Party Would Then Go Underground, Refugee Paper Says

London, Aug. 19 (AP)—Drastic Nazi total mobilization decrees ostensibly designed to stiffen Germany for a last-ditch stand, actually are part of Adolf Hitler's master plan for creating chaos after defeat, a German refugee paper said today.

Die Zeitung, published here, said Paul Joseph Goebbels' decrees as Reichsplenipotentiary were intended to destroy the last vestige of orderly life, uproot all Germans, keep them away from home and lay the groundwork for general anarchy.

Anarchy And Underground

In an anarchical state, the paper said, the Nazis could continue an underground struggle after the Allied occupation.

It regarded the function of Heinrich Himmler's armed SS troops to be formation of a barrier between collapsing armies at the front and Germans in the homeland, thus preventing disillusioned regular troops from arriving at home first and influencing civilian events.

This appeared to be borne out by reports from France that SS troops were heading for home, leaving regulars holding the bag.

Foreigners An Advantage?

Presence of 8,000,000 foreign workers inside Germany and Austria was seen as a possible advantage for the Nazis if they abandon field armies to their fate and themselves go underground. In the confusion of credentials it might be difficult for Allied occupation forces to round up fanatical Nazis.

Other opinion here is that Hitler might only create chaos, hunger and misery in the Reich and hurt the Germans without frustrating Allied occupation plans or hindering reconstruction of the rest of Europe.

LONDON EVACUATES 10,000 PATIENTS

London, Aug. 19 (A. P.). — About 10,000 patients have been evacuated from London hospitals, it was disclosed today, after the Germans had sent over a flock of the robot bombs. The fresh salvo, ending a lull of twenty hours, the longest in the Germans' two-month-old vengeance campaign, fell in southern England and London during the night.

Patients not too ill to travel have been sent to hospitals in Scotland, Wales and northern and western England, the Ministry of Health said.

Well over 1,000,000 Londoners have moved out of the city, it is estimated. Again this week end railway stations were jammed by crowds which included an appreciable number of persons leaving for an extended stay.

French Explosions Shake Buildings on English Coastline

Folkestone, England, Aug. 19—(AP)—A series of violent explosions in France during the night and morning shook buildings along the English coast.

The blasts, coming from the direction of Le Havre and Dieppe, suggested the Germans may be demolishing installations.

Villagers along the Channel, who four years ago were apprehensive that Hitler's forces would hop across, now are watching and listening to the war in France much in the manner of a man trying to follow a football game played in a blacked-out stadium.

There is a great deal of guessing what each blast means—but everything leads to the conclusion that the war is moving rapidly up the coast of France.

FOE SAYS BADOGLIO CEDED ITALY LAND

Berne, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—The German newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter and Stefani, the Fascist news agency, today published what they described as the Italian armistice conditions signed by Marshal Pietro Badoglio on September 3, 1943.

They represented that the agreement gave to France regions along the west Italian border and the island of Elba, to Britain the island of Pantelleria, to Yugoslavia Istria, Fiume and Zara and to Greece the Dodecanese Islands. It was further alleged that the economic clauses required Italy to send 2,000,000 workers to contribute to the reconstruction of Allied countries, including 800,000 to Russia and 200,000 each to the United States, South Africa, Australia, Brazil and Britain.

NAZIS SETTLE ON GOTHIC LINE

Allied Patrols In Italy Find Finish Fight Indicated

Florence, Aug. 19 (AP)—Allied patrols feeling out the Germans found them sitting in their Gothic Line today and apparently determined to fight it out despite French and American landings in southeran France which threaten to seal off one of their last escape routes.

There was no perceptible loosening of the enemy lines anywhere from Pisa on through Florence and eastward to the Adriatic shore.

Allied patrols, splashing through rain which prevented more important operations, probed deep into enemy positions in the upper Arno river valley and in the Adriatic sector.

Gusts Of Artillery Fire

Sporadic gusts of artillery fire swept the front, and the enemy sent out his own patrols to try to learn what fresh adventures his foe was contemplating. These patrols were repulsed.

The last snipers were cleared from the central part of Florence, but elsewhere there was little activity.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring is believed manning his mountainous northern Italian positions with 12 divisions, about half his original strength.

The new Allied drive along the French Riviera, as well as the American push toward Paris far to the north, will make the problem of supply of these divisions more difficult.

Quit North City Streets

The Germans have pulled out of the northern streets of Florence, where they stationed themselves for days with tanks and machine guns and fired down the streets, but this move apparently was dictated by an inability to supply food for hungry Florentines.

The enemy still has strong positions on high ground south of the Arno river east of Florence.

A line has been built by the Germans in the hills north of the city which runs through Fiesole, two miles northeast, and they show every intention of holding it as long as possible.

The Allies are massing materials to crack the Gothic Line, open a path through the Etruscan Apennines and pour out onto the plains of northern France.

Meanwhile an exasperating situation prevails in Florence, which now is almost entirely under Allied control. The Germans are able to fire upon almost any sections of the city.

Last night from their hill positions the Germans dropped about 20 shells into the center of the city. There were no military casualties, but there were some civilian losses and damage to buildings.

RELATIVELY QUIET ON ITALIAN FRONT

Rome, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—The Italian front remained relatively quiet today with the last snipers cleaned up in the central part of Florence. There was sporadic fire along the Arno River and some enemy patrols were repulsed. Allied patrols carried out deep reconnaissance in the upper Arno valley and in the Adriatic sector. Heavy rains fell along the whole front hampering operations.

Meanwhile the material necessary to crack the Gothic Line and open a path into the north of Italy was being prepared.

Field Marshal Kesselring, who once had twenty-four divisions in Italy, now has the equivalent of perhaps a dozen. Cut off or very nearly cut off from France by the new Allied landings there, he now faces the drab possibilities of a knockdown fight in and behind the Gothic Line, a cold winter in the Alps, or a difficult retreat in the direction of Vienna.

Hit Ploesti Again.

Rome, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Fighter-escorted Flying Fortresses of the Fifteenth United States Air Force bombed the Ploesti oil fields in Romania for the third consecutive day today, encountering intense flak, but no enemy fighters. A smokescreen obscured the results.

Pope Receives Soldier Who Once Was His Guard

Vatican City, Aug. 19 (AP)—Pope Pius XII recently accorded a special audience to an American officer who used to be one of his own soldiers, it was learned today.

The Pontiff received Lieut Carl Fehr, native of Lucerne canton of Switzerland, who served in the Swiss Guards from 1933 to 1936 before migrating to the United States. He returned to Rome as an American officer and is now in the Allied Control Commission Security Section.

Fehr, whose home is at New Orleans, said he spent 45 minutes with the Pope. The Pontiff asked him jokingly if he wanted his old job back. Fehr declined, with thanks, saying he was "making out pretty well in the American army."

Fehr went to America in 1938, and became a citizen in 1942.

NAZI BALKAN LINES TAUT

Forces in Rugged Peninsula Are Estimated at 60 Divisions

BARI, Italy, Aug. 19 (AP)—A German force of fewer than sixty divisions, most of them far under strength, is holding the entire Balkans, including the front facing Russia, recent reports indicated today.

The Germans have strung out two-thirds of this number across 600 mountainous miles between the Black Sea and Cracow in Poland, dispersed about a dozen divisions below the Danube and concentrated the remainder in central and northwestern Yugoslavia, these reports indicate.

These troops constitute the minimum with which Germany can hope to retain the Balkans, it is believed here, and withdrawals to help meet the new Allied invasion are unlikely.

The enemy's transportation situation has been described as critical, principally because of Allied bombing of oil installations at Ploesti and elsewhere.

The German air force, bolstered by Rumanian, Hungarian and Bulgarian units, probably is able to muster 800 to 1,000 fighter planes in the Balkans. They are based principally in eastern Austria, Hungary, Rumania and eastern Yugoslavia for defense of refineries, freight yards and war factories.

Most of the German divisions in the south have been saturated with satellite troops—Poles, Czechs, Slovaks, Serbs and Armenians—an indication that the Reich means to jettison them whenever it becomes necessary. Field Marshal Gen. Maximilian von Weichs, who directs all operations in Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece, is believed to have not more than five or six all-German divisions left in his command.

Hungarians Below Cracow

The burden of holding the Carpathians against Soviet forces below Cracow, 200 miles from Vienna and 180 miles from Budapest, has been placed on the Hungarian Army. It is believed to have twelve of its approximately seventeen divisions in the line. Only three Germans divisions, one a cavalry outfit of 10,000 to 12,000, are known to be in this region.

Rumania, which is estimated to have lost 1,500,000 men in Russia, is believed to have eleven of its thirty under-strength divisions on the Soviet front. Others are massed in the rear to defend the gap between Galati and Transylvania.

In the southeast Bulgaria was reported to have ridded herself of all but one German division prior to Premier Ivan Bagrianoff's pledge to the National Assembly Thursday that he would strive to take the country out of the war. Although there have been mass desertions to Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia, Bulgaria's army of twenty-five divisions is believed the best among the Balkan satellite nations.

In Yugoslavia a dozen German divisions and five quisling groups are under attack by Marshal Tito.

Only one German division, the 297th, remains in Albania, where the National Liberation Front now boasts an army of 40,000.

Of the four better-quality divisions reported in Greece, Crete and the Aegean Islands, German soldiers form only the core. The most exposed units of Marshal von Weichs' army group, they depend on a railroad running northward through the Tito-dominated Vardar Valley. Because of mounting supply difficulties, some groups have been evacuated.

BULGAR LEADER IN PEACE PLEA

Premier Virtually Asks for Allied Aid.

Istanbul, Aug. 18 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Premier Ivan Bagrianov made what amounted to an appeal to the United States and Britain to help Bulgaria get out of the war in his impassioned speech before the Bulgar Parliament in Sofia Thursday night. Whether he has enough internal support to get the nation out of the fight probably will be determined in the next few days.

The Premier indicted previous governments for leading the nation into the war, which he said "the great majority of the Bulgarian people never desired."

The speech was broadcast to the world. The assembly cheered every statement indicating that Bagrianov's regime intended to break from Germany and ask for peace.

APR 20 1944

night by Federal Communications Commission monitors said that Parliament had opened debate on the speech and two Deputies were quoted as indorsing Prime Minister Bagrianov's major points.

One Bulgar said: "If the Army doesn't carry out a coup d'etat against Bagrianov within twenty-four hours, Bulgaria has surrendered." [The time limit set in this appraisal has now passed.] German forces in Bulgaria are now so small that the support of the Bulgar Army would mean Bagrianov could easily expel them.

The speech climaxed cautious but intense activity directed by Bagrianov in the ten weeks since he became Premier. He prepared the ground for capitulation inside Bulgaria and established contact with the United States, Britain and Russia in exploratory talks at Ankara.

The 53-year-old leader, one-time adjutant of the late King Boris, called insistently for a "democratic government. There was no mention or any apparent allusion in his speech to Soviet Russia, with which Bulgaria has maintained relations throughout the war.

The complete lack of mention of Macedonia and Thrace appeared to indicate that Bagrianov was ready to sacrifice those long disputed territories for peace—peace at almost any price.

If the Army is with him, Bagrianov must presumably satisfy what are generally accepted as two basic British-American conditions: eviction of the Germans from Bulgaria and withdrawal of Bulgar forces from Macedonia and Thrace into Bulgaria's pre-war frontiers.

Turks Down British Plane

Istanbul, Aug. 18 (AP—Delayed)—Turkish anti-aircraft gunners shot down their second British plane within a fortnight today. Crewmen escaped unhurt from the plane which had been damaged in a raid over Romania.

U. S. Air Chief Decorated in Russia

Moscow, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Brig.-Gen. Alfred A. Kessler Jr., of Sacramento, Cal., deputy commander of the Eastern Air Command, received the Legion of Merit today in a formal ceremony before a formation of American and Russian troops at a United States air base in the Soviet Union. Gen. Kessler headed the first contingent sent to the Soviet Union to establish shuttle-bombing fields. Previously he had seen combat service with the United States Eighth Air Force in England.

The citation extolled Gen. Kessler's "exceptionally meritorious conduct of performance of outstanding services."

He sent it to Mrs. A. A. Kessler of Delawanna, N. J.

Chinese Battle Tengchung Foe From City Wall

Fire From Shelters Blasted In to 20-Foot Parapet; U. S. Doctors Tend Injured

TENGCHUNG, China, Aug. 11 (Delayed) (AP).—Ragged, poorly-fed Chinese troops are pressing their siege of Japanese-held Tengchung from "foxholes" blasted out of the city's stone wall.

Chinese gunners installed themselves in at least five places on the twenty-foot parapet. Their positions were gained by Chinese engineers who scaled the ancient wall with ladders and set charges of TNT to blast protective holes for their riflemen. These positions have made possible the crushing of Japanese counter-attacks.

Outside one gun port Japanese dead lay sprawled on the grassy incline which forms the inner side of the wall. All were in exposed areas which made it impossible for either Japanese or Chinese to remove the bodies.

The Chinese troops, living on rice and a few green vegetables, find life in this beautiful valley a vast improvement after their push from the Salween River. It is not hard to find cases of malnutrition, but the men remember the rigorous trek across the mountains where about as many died of exposure as fell to the Japanese and where the meat of a fallen pack animal was a delicacy.

At a Chinese field hospital amid the muddy squalor of a farm village, a small American medical team tended the Chinese wounded in a primitive surgery. Under a leaky roof worked two physicians, Captain Dubose Egleston jr., of Augusta, Ga., and Lieutenant Edward J. Blumenthal, of Ansonia, Conn., and six enlisted technicians. They had performed twelve major operations in the day.

"We could do more here if we could give blood," Egleston said as he worked over a wounded Chinese.

"This patient has been hours getting here. He is suffering a loss of blood and shock. Plasma can't make up the volume he lost. He ought to have a transfusion. But we have no laboratory for typing blood. We have to get along with what we've got."

What the team has is a rudimentary kit of surgical instruments, a few boxes of plasma and other supplies, not more than 200 pounds in all. They lack even shelter halves. Their food is rice boiled with mountain weeds and bamboo shoots.

CHINESE TROOPS GAIN GROUND NEAR HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, Aug. 19 — (AP) Chinese troops have gained high ground west of Hengyang and have repulsed Japanese attacks, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

At the same time a Japanese column moving southwest from Siang Tsang, about 60 miles north of Hengyang, was contacted by Chinese forces and suffered heavy casualties the communique said.

(The German controlled Oslo radio in a Tokyo dispatch said 46,000 Allied troops including Americans, British and Canadian troops, were fighting with the Chinese in an attempt to retake Hengyang from the Japanese. Later the German news Agency Transocean, quoting a Tokyo dispatch, said Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek personally was leading the Chinese forces near Hengyang.)

5 U. S. O. Troupers Reach Chungking

Chungking, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Five U. S. O. troupers headed by actress Ann Sheridan arrived today in Chungking's stifling heat wave after 30,000 miles of traveling with an average of two shows a day from Casablanca to China. Others in the troupe were accordionist Mary Linda, dancer Ruth Denas, dancer Jackie Miles and comedian Ben Blue. The escorting officer was Capt. Melvyn Douglas, attached to the special service office in Delhi.

Before coming to the capital they gave a show for Americans and Chinese at the Chinese-American composite wing air base.

Mile-A-Day Pace Kept In Burma

APR 20 1944

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, Aug. 19 (AP)—Allied forces, pressing their thrust southwestward along the Mogaung-Mandalay railway through intense heat and heavy monsoon rains, today maintained their average advance pace of a mile a day.

Two hundred Japanese were killed by the British 36th Division in the first 12 days of its push from Mogaung. This unit, first all-British outfit under Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's command, captured Diego Suarez, capital of Madagascar, in 1942 and was in the Arakan campaign early this year.

Waist-deep water and mud prevented the Allies from bringing up artillery, but British and American aircraft gave close support to this advance and to other Allied forces driving down the Tiddim road and Kabaw Valley.

Two Allied aircraft were missing in all operations, which included bombing assaults on the Yamathin railway yards and positions around Bhamo. Long-range RAF fighters blocked the Taungup-Prome road by firing rockets into a hillside, causing a landslide.

PHILIPPINES RAIDED AGAIN

MacArthur Bomber Damages Jap Freighter Off Davao

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Sunday, Aug. 20 (AP). Continuing the steady patrol of southern Philippine waters, a Liberator bomber damaged a small Japanese freighter off Davao, headquarters announced today.

Patrol planes bombed Halmahera, southern guardian of the Philippines, and Vogelkop peninsula, the northwestern tip of New Guinea. They also struck at Palau. Fourteen barges were destroyed or damaged off Manokwari, northern Dutch New Guinea.

This patrol activity continued the aerial war which Gen. Douglas MacArthur said has reduced the enemy's potential strength in islands around New Guinea.

Sixth Attack In Eight Days

The Philippines raid, made Friday, was the fourth consecutive attack in the Mindanao area and the sixth in eight days.

A small number of Liberators hit Palau Thursday and reported fires and explosions, including a "terrific explosion." All the other attacks were Thursday.

The General's Saturday communique told of air blows to the south of Halmahera in the Banda Sea area—air assaults in force against the islands of Amboina, Ceram and Boeroe. Japanese airdromes were the chief targets of the Allied flyers.

ALLIED PLANES RAKE JAP BASES

Points From Philippines to Timor Blasted.

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—Allied planes destroyed at least fourteen aircraft, cratered airdromes, bombed an oilfield, sank a laden vessel and hit two others in whiplash blows along 1,000 miles of Japan's supply stricken holdings from the Philippines to Timor, headquarters announced today.

Other air blows, projected north to Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, within 750 miles of Toyko, and east to the by-passed enemy base of Truk, were reported at Pearl Harbor by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

Planes in the command area of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, maintaining a highly effective aerial blockade, struck in a solid line thus:

Philippines—Scored three bomb hits on an enemy merchantman in Davao Gulf.

Halmahera—Sank a supply-laden sailing vessel.

Tip of Dutch Guinea—Hit the Klamano oilfield near Sorong; fired a coastal vessel.

Amboina-Ceram — Bombed two airfields; destroyed an unestimated number of parked planes; shot down nine enemy fighters; blew up a flying boat on the water.

Boeroe—Bombed airdromes; destroyed four parked planes.

Banda Sea—Attacked small shipping—the only type feebly attempting to supply garrisons in the vicinity.

Timor—Enemy positions given an aerial machine-gunning by long-range fighters.

Nimitz reported no air losses. One of six interceptors were shot down over Truk. MacArthur listed the loss of two fighters.

Off Dutch New Guinea, Japanese remnants still holding out on Biak Island, which was invaded last May, were confronted with early extinction by troops landed on the west coast from the allied-controlled eastern half.

Saltonstall's Son Died Leading Patrol On Guam

Guam Island, Aug. 13 (Delayed A. P.)—Marine Sergeant Peter B. Saltonstall, 23 year old son of the Governor of Massachusetts, was killed today while leading a patrol to clear stray Japanese soldiers from the northern end of Guam Island.

Young Saltonstall was struck twice in the head by Japanese bullets and as he dropped he was hit three more times.

The sergeant was the second son of prominent Americans to be killed in battle on Guam. Col. Douglas C. McNair, son of the late Lieutenant General McNair, was fatally wounded by sniper fire earlier in the campaign as he was hunting for a command post site for the 77th Army Division.

Sergeant Saltonstall was chief of the instrument section in a gun battery of marines handling heavy artillery. He had been overseas more than two years. He enlisted in the Marines in January 1942.

Massachusetts Men Awarded Air Medals

Somewhere In The Southwest Pacific — (Delayed) — (AP) — An Air Medal and two Bronze Oak Leaf Clusters to the Air Medal have been awarded Massachusetts men by Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Allied Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific.

Sergt. Joseph P. Lehane, of 197 Weld Street, West Roxbury, received the Air Medal and Staff Sgt. Robert C. Hooley, of 67 Ferrin Street, Charlestown, the Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster for taking part in an air attack on Rabaul, New Britain, November 2, 1943.

Both men were aboard B-25 bombers during a raid which resulted in the destruction of 50,000 tons of merchant shipping, the sinking of three destroyers and the damaging of two cruisers.

A second bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal was given to Staff Sgt. Thomas F. May, Jr., of 56 Delle Avenue, Boston, for participation in bombing missions against enemy airdromes and installations and attacks on enemy naval vessels and shipping in the Southwest Pacific area.

APR 20 1944

Stony Creek Sergeant Among Medal Winners

Somewhere in the Southwest Pacific—(AP)—Delayed)—Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of Allied Air forces in the Southwest Pacific, has awarded the air medal to the following Connecticut men:

Staff Sgt. Angelo A. Ciotti, 83 Franklin Street, Bridgeport; Staff Sgt. Edward P. Driscoll, 259 Park Street, Bristol; Staff Sgt. Joseph Megaro Jr., Stony Creek; Sgt. William F. Steefe, 426 Reef Road, Fairfield; Tech. Sgt. Max Zachem, RFD 1, Box 84, Norwich.

The wards were made, the citation read, for "meritorious achievement while participating in sustained operational flight missions in the Southwest Pacific area, during which hostile contact was probable and expected. These operations consisted of bombing missions against enemy airdromes and installations and attacks on enemy Naval vessels and shipping. The courage and devotion to duty displayed during these flights are worthy of commendation."

FLYING SERGEANT OF SO. NORWALK

WINS AIR MEDAL

Somewhere In The Southwest Pacific, Aug. 19—(AP)—Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Allied Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific, has awarded an Air Medal to:

Staff Sgt. Anthony F. Di Berardine, 76 Spring Street, South Norwalk, Conn., for meritorious achievement while participating in an aerial flight over Rabaul, New Britain, on November 2, 1943, it was announced today.

This enlisted man was a crew member of a B-25 engaged in a co-ordinated strike against this Japanese base, which was regarded at the time as the strongest in the Southwest Pacific area, the citation read. The purpose of this squadron was to silence certain anti-aircraft positions by laying a smoke screen to protect the other bomber units.

An approach was made which caught the enemy by surprise and the mission was successfully accomplished. After completing the run, the bombers were intercepted by a number of Japanese fighters, and during a running battle, four hostile aircraft were destroyed by this squadron without the loss of any planes or personnel.

In this highly successful raid, a total of 5,000 tons of merchant shipping was destroyed, three destroyers sunk, and two cruisers and considerable merchant shipping damaged. The courage and devotion to duty displayed by Sergeant Di Berardine are worthy of consideration.

Australia Votes States Rights

Curtin Government Defeated on Concentration of Power

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 19 (AP).—Australia voted heavily today against the Commonwealth government's proposals to concentrate in the national Parliament many of the powers held by the six states.

By the referendum vote the government of Prime Minister John Curtin lost heavily in prestige. The list of fourteen proposals covered participation of the national government in post-war recoconstruction, including control over employment, profiteering, prices and related subjects.

U. S. 43d Division Leaves New Zealand

Auckland, New Zealand, Aug. 18 (AP—Delayed)—It was disclosed here today that the 43d Division of the United States army after resting and refitting in New Zealand for several months, has moved on to its next assignment against the Japanese.

Sixty-five of the American soldiers left New Zealand wives behind. Many others are engaged to marry New Zealand girls.

The 43d has visited this country twice, the first time in 1942. Early in 1943 it departed to take part in the New Georgia and other campaigns centering in the Solomons Islands .The second visit began early this year.

Throughout both visits the division wrote a good record for itself.

Burning Of Argentine Ship Is Investigated

Acapulco, Mexico, Aug. 19 (AP). Mexican naval authorities came here today to question passengers and crew of the Argentine vessel Rio de la Plata, which burned in the harbor yesterday.

The explanation of the blaze has been given as explosion of a small oil tank in the engine room. An authoritative source said that until now there was no suspicion of sabotage.

Forty-one of the United States citizens aboard, it has been determined, had disembarked at Acapulco with their personal effects. The remainder of the approximately 83 North Americans aboard were through passengers and lost their belongings.

HOT TIME SCHEDULED

New York, Aug. 19—(AP)—The people of Sweden, preparing to celebrate the victory of the Allies over the Axis, have flooded the "largest fireworks manufacturing company" in Stockholm with orders for portraits of Prime Minister Churchill, Marshal Joseph Stalin and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the British radio said today.

The broadcast, reported by U. S. Government monitors, quoted the Stockholm Tidningen.

Reports U-boat Crews Active in Sabotage

Washington, Aug. 19 (A. P.).—The Royal Norwegian Information Service said today that a number of German naval personnel have been arrested after acts of sabotage at the Aker Shipyards, Oslo, Norway. The reported sabotage consisted of blocking a lubricating oil feed-pipe with sand, the service stated, adding:

"It appears that German crews are prepared to go to any lengths rather than put to sea again. The morale of the German troops in Norway has sunk still lower as a result of the recent events, and the Germans are no longer careful to avoid open criticism of Hitler and the other Nazi leaders. They openly admit that they no longer believe that Germany can win the war."

JAPANESE SUBMARINES HELD BACK, DAVIS SAYS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP)—Elmer Davis, Office of War Information director, back from a visit to Pacific outposts, said today Japanese submarines were offering virtually no resistance to the vast tonnage of American shipping plying far Pacific waters.

"One of the great mysteries of the war," he said, "is the ineffectiveness of the Japanese submarine fleet. Very little effort has been made to use them against our cargo ships, and as far as I know they never did get an American warship that wasn't already crippled."

Mr. Davis, who visited Guam, Saipan and other islands, said the Pacific war would "continually need more shipping."

"Pearl Harbor, now the fourth United States port in tonnage handled, probably will pass Norfolk and become the third port when the European war folds up," he added.

U. S. POSSESSION ADVOCATED FOR WESTERN ISLES

McKellar Says Nation Should Have British, French Caribbean Bases

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—Senator McKellar, Tennessee Democrat, who wants the United States to have permanent possession of British and French islands in the Caribbean, says he hasn't forgotten Prime Minister Churchill's pointed statement that he had not been chosen as the King's first minister to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire.

But McKellar says that Churchill and the British would be making a good bargain if they deeded Bermuda to us, along with the Bahamas and other West Indies islands guarding the approaches to the Panama Canal.

"Why," he told a reporter today, "it would be to the greatest advantage to the British if we took over and fortified those islands. Look at the map—the direct route from Engalnd to Australia is through the Panama Canal. The British ought to be delighted to have us taken over the job of permanent protection."

Statement Given

So far, the 75-year-old Tennessee Democrat has been waging pretty much of a one-man campaign to put the Senate on record, by a formal resolution, as favoring the acquisition in postwar settlements not only of the islands in the South Atlantic but also the Japanese mandated islands in the Pacific, and Formosa, which the Japanese took from China

In the case of the Japanese islands McKellar says: "We are entitled to them under the rules of war." With the British, he adds, "it would have to be by agreement, of course."

During 33 years in Congress McKellar has gained a reputation as a tenacious fighter. He is a veteran Senate leader, a colorful orator. While not a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, he wields the influence that goes with the chairmanship of the Committee on Appropriations. And of this latest legislative campaign he says he is in dead earnest.

U. S. REMOVES EXPORT BANS ON TURK TRADE

Moves to Facilitate Cash Dealing With Neutral Nation

Washington, Aug. 19 — (AP) — The United States has removed export bans imposed on Turkey and is facilitating the shipment of civilian goods on a cash basis to the neutral which broke relations with Germany two weeks ago.

It was also learned today that shipment of military items under Lend-Lease is expected to be resumed shortly, depending on the Allied supply situation as a result of the French campaigns.

The majority of Lend-Lease sent to Turkey is of British origin, but the decision to start shipments is up to the combined munitions assignment board.

Stopped Aid

The United States and Britain stopped sending military aid to Turkey several months ago after negotiations between British and Turkish military delegations broke down.

APR 20 1944

American Ambasador to Ankara Laurence Steinhardt, who has been in this country about a month, is returning today. He stopped by the White House yesterday to see President Roosevelt for final instructions.

The extent of Lend-Lease accorded Turkey will depend on whether or not that neutral comes into the war. Basing their predictions on the rapid progress of Allied drives in France and the western push of the Red Army, observers here were inclined to discount the possibility that Turkey would become an active belligerent.

Mobile Surgery Saves 96% of U. S. Wounded

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 (AP).—The War Department said today that 96 per cent of men wounded in action have recovered, and that about two-thirds of them have returned to duty as a result of modern mobile surgery and reconditioning treatment.

Figures compiled between June 25 and July 25, the department said, show that 23 per cent of the men discharged from hospitals with serious physical limitations had elected to remain in the military service rather than take a discharge.

BALDWIN CONFERS WITH STRIKERS

GROTON, Aug. 19—(AP) A s hour conference between Govern Baldwin, representatives of t Shipbuilding and Marine Engineers union and officials of the Electric Boat company in Hartford was adjourned at 7:30 p. m. without an announcement as to results. A brief summary from the governor's office stated that the conference between representatives of the union and the company, would be resumed here Monday.

Taking part in the conference which was called following the company's discharge of union leaders after the union had agreed to call off the strike at the submarine building plant were Charles Suisman, general counsel for the union; John McGee, member of the Executive committee and Ben Burdick, a member of the steering committee.

The governor conferred first with the union representatives and later called in O. P. Robinson, vice-president and general manager of the Electric Boat company.

Suisman said after the meeting that he would discuss the legal aspects of the disciplinary action taken by the company, with Edward Schneider, general counsel for the firm. Suisman said that the union was taking no further strike action.

The entire plant remained closed today under the agreement approved by the War Manpower commission which provides for a 48-hour work week of five days.

Icelandic President Arrives in Washington

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—President Sveinn Bjornsson, of Iceland, arrived in Washington today for meetings with President Roosevelt and State Department officials.

Bjornsson, whose country has garrisoned thousands of American troops since prewar days, was a White House guest. He expects to visit New York August 27, before returning to Iceland.

Roosevelt Denies Inviting Willkie For Conference

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday there was nothinfg t published reports that he had invited Wendell L. Willkie, 1940 Republican presidential candidate, to a White House conference on postwar security questions.

When asked whether he would like to talk with Willkie on that subject, the Chief Executive replied that was rather a personal matter. There were published reports that Mr. Roosevelt had written Willkie, asking him to call at the White House to discuss foreign policy.

The President had nothing to add to Secretary of State Hull's statement yesterday, describing as "utterly and completely unfounded" Gov. Thomas E. Dewey expressed fear that the Allied big four were headed for a permanent military alliance that would coerce small nations and dominate the postwar world.

When asked whether there was any truth to reports that he might propose an international organization to be set up prior to the end of the war—separately from any peace treaties—the President shrugged and said he was not here to answer all things the newspapers are printing and had no time to comment on all fool questions.

Mr. Roosevelt said Secretary Hull had taken all into his confidence on what has been done to date.

HULL, DULLES EXPECTED TO CONFER SOON

APR 20 1944

Secretary of State, Dewey Advisor Will Discuss Postwar Security

Washington, Aug. 19—(AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull and the man who might replace him if Thomas E. Dewey is elected President are expected to meet here in the next few days for a conference on postwar world security organization.

Their session should come soon after representatives of the United States, Russia, and Britain begin conferring Monday on the functions of such an organization.

The man who will hold this meeting with Hull is 56-year-old John Foster Dulles, the Republican nominee's foreign relations advisor and a veteran of international conferences and foreign affairs.

His prospective meeting comes at Dewey's suggestion after Hull had said he would be willing to meet Dewey or any one else interested in co-operating on a non-partisan basis. Dewey, in his wire proposing Dulles yesterday, gave assurances of bi-partisan co-operation.

In replying last night Hull said he was "immensely gratified" at these assurances and added:

Secretary Delighted

"I shall be delighted to see Mr. Dulles and to confer with him on any date or dates convenient to him." In Albany, Dewey headquarters, indications were that Dulles had already prepared to come here.

These evidences of increasing domestic political unity on foreign policy coincided with reports that Russia's delegation to the four-power meetings is due in this week-end with world organization plans which will be very close to those of Britain and the United States.

Ambassador Andrei Gromyko heads the Russian group. Presumably he is bringing the Kremlin's latest ideas on maintenance of peace with victory in this war.

It is known that highly-placed authorities here who are familiar with the Russian view as stated in an official document which arrived a week ago do not contemplate any serious differences of opinion among Russian, British and American plans.

There are no serious differences between Russia and the United States and Britain, although the United States, through Hull, has gone on record as saying small nations must be given power and position commensurate with their position in world affairs. It is expected that they will have a voice in decisions on the use of force though conclusive authority will remain in the hands of the nations who have the force.

Dulles Suggests Allies Plan To Police Reich After War

APR 20 1944

Dewey Adviser Says Disarming Foe, Setting Up Peace Are Separate Tasks.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 19—(AP) John Foster Dulles, deputized by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for foreign policy consultations with Secretary of State Hull, proposed today that the problems of policing defeated Axis countries and of maintaining lasting peace be separated.

Meeting reporters in the governor's study of the Executive Mansion with the Republican presidential nominee sitting nearby, Dulles said he believed difficulties of forming an international security organization ought not to be complicated by the immediate problem of disarming Germany and Japan and making them unable to undertake new aggressions.

The 56-year-old New York lawyer said that Dewey's statement of this week in connection with the four-power diplomatic conference at Washington should be interpreted as delineating the kind of military controls which should be exercised over Germany and Japan.

With Dewey at times nodding agreement, Dulles proposed that the United States, Great Britain and Russia, with "substantial contributions" from nearby liberated countries police Germany and hold her in check.

He said the U. S., Great Britain and China should undertake the policing of Japan.

With these duties undertaken by the four powers, Dulles said it would be possible to form an international organization in which the small nations would have a voice in the future determination of lasting peace plans without being subjected to four-power domination, which Dewey has opposed.

Asked if a conference he will hold Wednesday with Hull might indicate the possibility of eliminating foreign policy as a political campaign issue, Dulles replied:

"I don't think it is healthy or desirable to eliminate from the campaign the discussion of international problems. The only way a democracy makes up its mind is by having issues debated and discussed."

Gen. Drum Aids

Dewey announced before reporters directed questions at Dulles that Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, retired head of the New York Guard, who also was present, would go over with him and with Dulles current military problems. Dewey said these included the future occupation of Germany and Japan as well as the establishment of outlying American island bases.

The Republican nominee said the three had talked over these issues "dozens" of times, adding he would make his views known more fully in campaign speeches.

Asked to summarize the possible result of his conference next week with Hull, Dulles said:

"The one thing I think all Americans, or practically all Americans, are united on and want to achieve is a practical and effective organization for a durable peace. Certainly that is the thing to which I have devoted practically all of my life and I think that that is something which the great mass of American people want and demand."

Sees Non-Partisan Aim

"The task is one which ought to demand the constructive effort of all people of good will in this country, irrespective of party," he said. "That is the governor's attitude toward the thing."

The peace of Versailles had failed, he said, largely because it was "everybody's and nobody's job to see that it was enforced." To avoid repeating that mistake, Dulles said, the nations which will win the war — the United States, China, Great Britain and Russia — must see to it that Germany and Japan are kept impotent.

"The specific task will be the task for the victors, and not a task for a world organization that is new and untried," he said. If the big four turned this job over to an international organization he contended, they must perforce control the organization in all its operations in order to be certain that Germany and Japan remain dormant, Dulles declared.

The alternative, he continued, was to make direct agreements for postwar control of the Axis countries, including their raw materials and production facilities.

He said that France, Belgium and the Netherlands should have a part in policing Germany. With prompting from Dewey, he added Poland to this list but observed that Latvia, Lithuania and Esthonia "may play parts as states of the Soviet union."

Russia probably would join in postwar controls over Japan only if she went to war with the latter country, he said.

President Roosevelt said at a press conference yesterday that he had conferred with Great Britain and Russia on occupation of Germany and that he expected no difficulty in arranging with China for occupation of Japan.

Dulles made it clear that in his conferences with Hull he would speak the views of Dewey and not necessarily those of the Republican party.

He did not know yet whether these were to be continuing conferences, he added.

Dulles was remaining here overnight for further conferences with Dewey tomorrow.

LONDON, AUG 19-(AP)-VICHY'S CHIEF OF GOVERNMENT PIERRE LAVAL, GERMAN AMBASSADOR OTTO ABETZ, AND NAZI OFFICIALS HAVE FLED PARIS, AND AXIS FORCES ARE FIGHTING AMERICAN TANK SPEARHEADS SOMEWHERE SOUTH OF THE FRENCH CAPITAL, THE GERMAN TRANSOCEAN NEWS AGENCY SAID TODAY.

THE PRO-AXIS VICHY GOVERNMENT ALSO IS THINKING OF LEAVING THAT CAPITAL, THE BROADCAST SAID, AND ADDED "IT IS POSSIBLE THIS TRANSFER MAY ALREADY BE IN PROGRESS." FURTHER DETAILS ON THE PLIGHT OF VICHY PERSONNEL WERE PROMISED BY MONDAY.

THE ALGIERS UNITED NATIONS RADIO IN A BROADCAST RECORDED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS SAID "THERE ARE REPORTS" THAT FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR ALREADY ARE IN CONTROL OF VICHY AND HAVE SET UP THEIR OWN COURTS.

THE AMERICAN TANK THRUST SOUTH OF PARIS IS A "RECONNAISSANCE MOVEMENT," THE BERLIN RADIO SAID. "A DIRECT THRUST OF THESE AMERICAN FORCES ON PARIS IS NOT ON AT THIS MOMENT."

WITH THEIR ARMIES ADMITTEDLY IN FLIGHT WEST OF PARIS AND WITH LAST NIGHT'S FRANK GERMAN WAR MINISTRY STATEMENT THAT "WE MUST BE PREPARED FOR A GERMAN WITHDRAWAL FROM FRANCE," IT WAS OBVIOUS THAT THE NAZI HIGH COMMAND STILL WAS TRYING TO DETERMINE ALLIED INTENTIONS.

U.S. TROOPS IN A SUDDEN WHEELING MOVEMENT NORTH OF DREUX, 40 MILES WEST OF PARIS, REACHED THE SEINE RIVER AT MANTES AND VERNON, 30 AND 42 MILES, RESPECTIVELY, NORTHWEST OF THE CAPITAL IN AN EFFORT TO SPRING A NEW TRAP ON THE RETREATING GERMANS, BERLIN SAID.

CAPT. LUDWIG SERTORIUS, TRANSOCEAN MILITARY COMMENTATOR, GUESSED: "IT IS NOT THE ENEMY'S AIM TO PUSH INTO THE FRENCH CAPITAL BY FORCED MARCHES." INSTEAD, HE SAID, THE AMERICANS WERE TRYING TO THROW A SERIES OF LOOPS AROUND THE NAZI TROOPS.

IN SOUTHERN FRANCE THE ALLIES WERE PUSHING FORWARD WITH "NOTICEABLY INCREASED" PRESSURE, THE COMMENTATOR SAID. "MAJOR TANK FORCES," HE EXPLAINED, ARE DRIVING WEST IN THE ARGENS VALLEY AND ON THE ROAD CONNECTING ST.RAPHAEL WITH AIX-EN-PROVENCE, 25 MILES NORTH OF THE BIG PORT OF MARSEILLE. THESE TROOPS ARE TRYING TO ESTABLISH A JUNCTION WITH AIR-BORNE FORCES ENTRENCHED AT SEVERAL POINTS ALONG THE ROUTE, HE SAID.

"THE POSSIBILITY OF A BREAK-THROUGH ATTEMPT BEYOND AIX INTO THE RHONE VALLEY MUST BE RECKONED WITH," HE ADDED.

THE GERMANS ALSO TOLD OF POWERFUL REINFORCEMENTS LANDING ALONG THE COAST EAST OF TOULON IN AN ATTEMPT TO HASTEN THE ENCIRCLEMENT OF THAT STRATEGIC PORT AND NAVAL BASE.

BACK IN CHARTRES OUR TROOPS CLEANED UP FINAL GERMAN RESISTANCE WITH CAPTURE OF MORE THAN 1,000 PRISONERS DURING THE DAY.

"THE FINAL ROUNDUP STARTED LAST NIGHT AND WE HAD 800 HEINIES BY 9 A.M.," SAID CAPT. WILLIAM CLARKE OF WARSAW, IND.

IN THE AFTERNOON ONE GENERAL PINNED THE BRONZE STAR ON ANOTHER GENERAL WHO DIRECTED THE CHARTRES OCCUPATION, WHICH WAS ACHIEVED WITH PHENOMINALLY SMALL CASUALTIES.

"NEXT!" YELLED CORP. HARRY E.FUTCH OF PEMBROKE, GA., WHEN HIS UNIT WAS RELIEVED IN CHARTRES AND ORDERED TO STAND BY FOR ANOTHER ASSIGNMENT.

FIRST U.S.ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE--FIRST ADD BATTLE OF FRANCE
(BY WHITEHEAD) X XX ~~QUICKLY SMASHED~~. decisive action

THE BREAKTHROUGH PLANS WERE BARDLEY'S OWN. HE CONCEIVED IT, PLANNED IT AND EXECUTED IT, ALTHOUGH THE OVERALL STRATEGY OF THE FRENCH CAMPAIGN WAS PLANNED BY THE HIGH COMMAND.

THROUGH THE GAP HE POURED DIVISION AFTER DIVISION AND THEN TURNED LT.GEN.GEORGE PATTON'S THIRD ARMY LOOSE ON THEIR WILD DASH TO THE SOUTH VIRTUALLY UNOPPOSED.

THE ACTUAL BATTLE FOR PARIS WAS FOUGHT OUT IN THE ARGENTAN-FALAISE-VIRE-MORTAIN POCKET WHEN PART OF GEN.GUENTHER VON KLUGE'S SEVENTH ARMY WAS TRAPPED BY AMERICAN ARMOR AND INFANTRY SUDDENLY SWINGING NORTH WHEN IT APPEARED THEY WERE HEADED STRAIGHT FOR PARIS. ACTUALLY, PARIS IS JUST A MILITARY BY-PRODUCT OF BRADLEY'S PLAN TO CRUSH THE GERMAN ARMIES.

THERE STILL IS NO RELIABLE OFFICIAL OR UNOFFICIAL ESTIMATE ON JUST HOW MANY GERMAN TROOPS WERE CAUGHT IN THE TRAP. THERE STILL ARE FORCES OF CONSIDERABLE STRENGTH HOLDING OUT IN THAT AREA FIGHTING BITTERLY AND SLOWLY BEING CRUSHED. THE DEATH TOLL IS RUNNING HIGH BUT THERE IS NO DOUBT VON KLUGE MANAGED TO GET THE BULK OF HIS ARMOR OUT AND MOST OF HIS TROOPS ALTHOUGH THEY TOOK A BAD BEATING AND NO LONGER CAN BE CONSIDERED AN ARMY THAT CAN BE A REAL THREAT. THEY HAVE BEEN REDUCED TO A ROLE OF A HARASSING, DELAYING FORCE.

THE JAWS OF THE TRAP ALMOST WERE CLOSED BU THE GERMANS MANAGED TO KEEP OPEN A NARROW ESCAPE CORRIDOR THROUGH WHICH ARMOR AND TROOPS SLIPPED DESPITE THE HEAVY SHELLING OF THE ROADS BY ALLIED ARTILLERY. THE AMERICANS' HOOKING DRIVE FROM THE SOUTH MOVED SWIFTLY BUT THE BRITISH AND CANADIANS WERE UNABLE TO MOVE AS FAST FROM THE NORTH TO COMPLETELY BOTTLE UP THE ENEMY.

VON KLUGE'S ARMY MAY MAKE A STAND WEST OF THE SEINE, BUT THEIR BATTERED RANKS CAN NEVER HOLD THE POWER WHICH BRADLEY AND MONTGOMERY CAN LOOSE AGAINST THEM.

BEYOND THE SEINE IN THE PAS DE CALAIS REGION FROM WHICH HITLER HAS BEEN HURLING HIS BUZZ BOMBS ON ENGLAND THE GERMANS HAVE MORE FORCES. IN THE PAST SOME OF THESE TROOPS HAVE BEEN FED INTO THE NORMANDY FIGHTING IN AN EFFORT TO SUPPORT VON KLUGE'S FORCES. THERE IS LITTLE LIKELIHOOD THE GERMANS WILL BE ABLE TO STALEMATE THE WAR ON A STATIC FRONT IN THIS REGION UNLESS THEY ARE ABLE TO BRING MORE DIVISIONS INTO FRANCE.

PARIS' 3,000,000 POPULATION IMMEDIATELY WILL BECOME A PROBLEM FOR THE AMERICAN ARMY WHEN THE CITY FALLS AND WE MUST TAKE ON THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CIVILIANS. THE ARMY IS READY TO ACCEPT THAT RESPONSIBILITY DESPITE THE ADDITIONAL BURDEN IT PLACES ON THE TRANSPORT AND SUPPLIES. PLANS NOW ARE TO TAKE 3,000 TONS OF FOOD DAILY INTO PARIS UNTIL THE CIVILIAN TRANSPORT SYSTEM CAN BE RESTORED AND FARM PRODUCTS CAN BE SHIPPED FROM THE COUNTRY.

THE AMERICANS ARE NOT LIKELY TO PUT MANY TROOPS IN PARIS EXCEPT FOR POLICING PURPOSES.

THAT DOES NOT MEAN, HOWEVER, THAT THE GERMANS ARE MAKING A STRONG, DETERMINED DEFENSE OF TOULON, BECAUSE THEY LACK THE MEANS TO DO SO, AND THE AMERICANS ARE GOING SO FAST ALONG THE ROADS CUTTING AT RIGHT ANGLES NORTH OF TOULON THAT IT SHOULD FALL LIKE A RIPE PLUM BEFORE LONG.

HOWEVER, IT IS NOT TOO LATE TO DEFEND MARSEILLE IN FORCE, AND ALL SIGNS POINT TO THE GERMANS MAKING A DETERMINED EFFORT TO DO SO.

THIS IS OPEN WARFARE WITH A VENGEANCE. ONE OFTEN DRIVES 10 OR 20 MINUTES WITHOUT SEEING AN AMERICAN OR FRENCH SOLDIER. THE COMMANDOS UNDER CAPTAIN DU COURNAU, A VETERAN OF THE 1940 CAMPAIGN WHO ESCAPED THROUGH SPAIN, CIRCLED 15 MILES THROUGH THE MOUNTAINS AND CAME ON A GERMAN CONCRETE BLACKHOUSE, WHICH WAS MOSTLY UNDERGROUND.

THE FRENCH THOUGHT THEY HAD ONLY ONE GUN POSITION TO DEAL WITH. WITH THE ALLIED FORCES BEFORE TOULON, AUG. 18-(DELAYED)-(AP)-FIERCE GERMAN RESISTANCE SLOWED THE ALLIED PUSH ON TOULON TODAY AS AMERICAN TROOPS AND FRENCH COMMANDOS FLUSHED OUT NAZIS FROM HIGH GROUND EAST OF THE GAPEAU RIVER WHILE HEAVY FRENCH REINFORCEMENTS CONTINUED TO POUR ASHORE.

CONVOYS BEARING THE MAIN FRENCH FORCES WHICH ARRIVED AHEAD OF SCHEDULE AUG. 17 WERE DISCHARGING CRACK FRENCH UNITS FOR DRIVES ON TOULON AND MARSEILLE.

FROM A DIPLOMATIC VIEWPOINT IT WOULD BE BETTER FOR FRENCH TROOPS TO OCCUPY TOULON WHERE VICHYITES AND PRO-GERMAN REMNANTS OF THE OLD NAVAL GARRISON MAY AID THE DEFENSE. HENCE AMERICAN TROOPS WOULD AVOID SLAYING FRENCHMEN.

AMERICAN UNITS CLEARED THE APPROACHES TO THE MAIN DEFENSES OF HYERES ON HIGH GROUND NORTH OF THIS KEY TO THE TOULON AREA. MEANWHILE OTHER UNITED STATES UNITS THREATENED TO OUTFLANK THE HYERES DEFENSE BY PENETRATING FROM CUERS TO SOLLIES-PONT, NORTHWEST OF HYERES.

AMERICANS CLEARED THE NAZIS FROM THE MASSIVE DES MAURES HILLY SECTION NORTHEAST OF HYERES IN SHARP ACTIONS EARLY FRIDAY. THE GERMAN DEFENSES IN THIS AREA CONSISTED OF A SERIES OF ARTILLERY STRONG POINTS MANNED BY SMALL GARRISONS WITH NOTHING BUT SNIPERS IN BETWEEN.

MOST OF THESE POSITIONS WERE MANNED BY "REAL GERMANS" AS DISTINGUISHED FROM IMPRESSED FOREIGNERS.

"THEY ARE FIGHTING UNTIL KILLED," RELATED A FRONT LINE OFFICER, "BUT OUR BOYS ARE GOING ON KILLING THEM."

IN FANATICAL LAST DITCH DEFENSES SOME NAZI MACHINEGUNNERS ARE FIRING STEADILY ROUND AFTER ROUND. THEY ARE FIRING AS FAST AS CARTRIDGE CLIPS CAN BE INSERTED.

THE NAZIS APPARENTLY ARE PLAYING FOR TIME TO CONCENTRATE FOR THE DEFENSE OF TOULON.

AMERICAN TROOPS SPEND BLOOD AND LIVES KNOCKING THESE POSITIONS OUT BUT THEY'VE LEARNED THEIR LESSONS FROM ANZIO, ACCORDING TO OFFICERS WHO ACCOMPANIED THE THIRD DIVISION TO THE ITALIAN BEACHHEAD.

DURING TODAY'S ADVANCE WHICH CAPTURED LA LONDE-LES-MAURES AND THEN PUSHED BEYOND THE PANSARD RIVER VALLEY TO THE EAST BANKS OF THE GAPEAU, THE AMERICANS REPEATEDLY PINNED DOWN NAZI ARTILLERY AND MACHINEGUN NESTS WITH CONCENTRATED MORTAR FIRE. SMALL PARTIES OF INFANTRY THEN SNEAKED AROUND THE FLANKS AND SHOT DOWN THE DEFENDERS POINTBLANK AS THEY LAY IN THEIR FOXHOLES.

FRENCH PARTISANS AND COMMANDOS ARE AIDING GREATLY IN THESE OPERATIONS, THE PARTISANS PARTICULARLY IN LOCATING DEFENSES.

"THESE BOYS REALLY WANT TO GET OUT THERE AND FIGHT," SAID A UNITED STATES OFFICER, "AS SOON AS THEY GET UP HERE THEY GO OUT AFTER 'EM."

HE EXPLAINED THAT EVERY OPERATION ALWAYS HAS SOME BUGS--SOME ELEMENTS WHICH GO WRONG--BUT THAT THE BUGS IN THIS OPERATION THUS FAR HAD BEEN THE UTTER LACK OF ANYTHING GOING WRONG SO FAR AS THE AIR IS CONCERNED.

FROM ALL INDICATIONS IT SHOULD BE ONLY A MATTER OF A VERY FEW DAYS UNTIL THE FIGHTERS WILL BE OPERATING FROM FRENCH MAINLAND FIELDS.

ALREADY TINY ARTILLERY OBSERVATION CUBS HAVE BEEN OPERATING AT LEAST A COUPLE OF DAYS FROM THE ROADS AND SMALL FIELDS PICKING TARGETS FOR ALLIED GUNNERS.

ALTHOUGH THERE HAS BEEN LITTLE GERMAN AIR OPPOSITION UP TO NOW OVER THE BEACHHEAD, AIR RAIDS MAY BE EXPECTED IN THE NEAR FUTURE. NIGHT LEAD (310)

BY DANIEL DE LUCE

MOSCOW, SUNDAY, AUG 20-(AP)-THE BATTLE OF POLAND AND EAST PRUSSIA RAGED ON A 200-MILE FRONT TODAY WITH THREE RUSSIAN ARMIES LINKED IN NEW ATTACKS THAT HAMMERED ALONG THE WEST BANK OF THE VISTULA RIVER, HACKED AT THE GERMANS ON THE EASTWARD LIMITS OF WARSAW AND DROVE A DEEPER WEDGE BETWEEN THE POLISH CAPITAL AND THE EAST PRUSSIAN FRONTIER.

ANOTHER RUSSIAN ARMY WAS FIGHTING ALONG THE EAST PRUSSIAN FRONTIER IN WESTERN LITHUANIA, BUT THERE WAS NO OFFICIAL REPORT OF ITS PROGRESS.

RED ARTILLERY AND ASSAULT BOMBERS KNOCKED OUT HUNDREDS OF ENEMY TANKS IN FURIOUS STRUGGLES RANGING FROM ESTONIA TO THE VISTULA RIVER BEND 100 MILES BELOW WARSAW, AND THE GROUND TROOPS CAPTURED SCORES OF VILLAGES.

MARSHAL KONSTANTIN K.ROKOSSOVSKY'S FIRST WHITE RUSSIAN ARMY SNATCHED THE INITIATIVE FROM THE GERMANS AT THE EASTERN GATES OF WARSAW AND RESUMED OFFENSIVE OPERATIONS THAT DENTED THE ENEMY'S NEWLY-WON SALIENT TEMPORARILY EXTENDING SEVEN MILES TO OSSOW.

GEN.G.F.ZAKHAROV'S SECOND WHITE RUSSIAN ARMIES, ALREADY WITHIN A DOZEN MILES OF EAST PRUSSIA FROM THEIR BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE BIEBRZA RIVER NORTHWEST OF BIALYSTOK, LAUNCHED A FRESH PUSH TO THE WEST AND SOUTHWEST, ENDANGERING ENEMY COMMUNICATIONS IN NORTHERN POLAND BASED ON LOMZA. EIGHTY SETTLEMENTS WERE OCCUPIED.

SOUTH OF WARSAW AND WEST OF THE VISTULA MARSHAL IVAN KONEV'S FIRST UKRAINE TROOPS HELD THREE GERMAN DIVISIONS IN A STEEL ENCIRCLEMENT AND WERE STEADILY CLEARING THE ENEMY FROM THE RIVER DEFENSE ZONE AROUND SANDOMIERZ.

THE ENEMY COMMAND DISPATCHED RESERVES FROM RADOM AND KIELCE, 20 MILES WEST AND 42 MILES NORTHWEST OF THE RUSSIAN POSITIONS, IN AN EFFORT TO LIBERATE THE SURROUNDED FORCE. KONEV SMASHED THIS RESCUE EFFORT.

WITH THREE ARMIES THROWING THEIR FULL WEIGHT INTO THE POLISH BATTLE IT APPEARED THAT THE GERMAN DEFENSES WERE UNDERGOING A SUPREME TEST WITH IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS POSSIBLE IN THE NEXT TWO OR THREE DAYS. CONTINUED SUCCESSES ON WARSAW'S DISTANT FLANKS WOULD LEAVE A BIG GERMAN ARMY GROUP ON THE EASTERN FRONT IN A SACK.

MOSCOW, AUG 19-(AP)-THE COMMUNIST NEWSPAPER PRAVDA DECLARED TODAY THAT THE REVOLT OF POLISH PATRIOTS WITHIN WARSAW WAS "DOOMED TO FAILURE AT THE VERY OUTSET" AND HOTLY LASHED BACK AT FOREIGN CRITICISM OF RED ARMY OPERATIONS BEFORE THE POLISH CAPITAL.

RED ARMY TROOPS "HAVE NOT DISCONTINUED FOR A SINGLE DAY THEIR BLOOD-SOAKED BATTLE AT WARSAW'S WALLS," DECLARED PRAVDA, WHICH WAS FOUNDED BY JOSEPH STALIN.

(GEN. BOR, LEADER OF THE WARSAW INSURRECTION, TAKES HIS ORDERS FROM THE POLISH GOVERNMENT-IN-EXILE IN LONDON RATHER THAN FROM LUBLIN, THE SEAT OF THE SOVIET-RECOGNIZED POLISH COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL LIBERATION. IT WAS ANNOUNCED IN ROME YESTERDAY THAT ALLIED BOMBERS FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER WERE DROPPING SUPPLIES TO THE WARSAW FIGHTERS.)

PRAVDA CENTERED ITS FIRE AT A STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO HUSSEIN DJAVID YALTCHIN, A TURKISH JOURNALIST, IN AN ARTICLE BY KONSTANTIN DEMIDOV.

"ONLY SILLY ADVENTURERS THINK SUCCESS MIGHT BE GAINED BY THE REVOLT OF POORLY-ARMED PEOPLE IN A CITY CROWDED WITH GERMAN TANKS, GUNS AND PLANES," IT SAID.

PRAVDA ACCUSED THE POLISH GOVERNMENT-IN-EXILE OF A "PERFIDOUS POLITICAL MANEUVER" IN THE REVOLT, WHICH THE PUBLICATION SAID WAS INTENDED "TO MAKE PROPAGANDA AND STRENGTHEN ITS PRESTIGE IN THE UNITED STATES AND ENGLAND."

PRAVDA SAID THE RESPONSIBILITY WAS ON GEN. KAZIMIERZ SOSNKOWSKI, COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE EXILED GOVERNMENT'S ARMED FORCES, AND GEN. WLADYSLAW ANDERS, CHIEF OF THE POLISH CORPS IN ITALY, "AND THEIR ADHERENTS."

"THE RED ARMY HAS ALWAYS WARNED AGAINST SUCH INSURRECTIONS," SAID THE ARTICLE. "THERE IS NO PRECEDENT FOR THIS INSURRECTION IN ANY CITY OR TOWN EVER LIBERATED BY THE RED ARMY OR OTHER ARMIES."

PRAVDA DENIED WHAT IT SAID WERE YALTCHIN'S ALLEGATIONS IN A PROMINENT TURKISH NEWSPAPER THAT THE RED ARMY HAD FAILED TO FULFILL A MILITARY AGREEMENT WITH THE POLISH ARMY INSIDE WARSAW AND HAD CEASED ITS OFFENSIVE.

"THE RED ARMY IS LIBERATING POLAND WITH THE AID OF HONEST POLISH PATRIOTS," IT SAID, AND DECLARED SOVIET SOLDIERS WERE UNSPARING OF THEMSELVES IN AN ADVANCE OF MORE THAN 300 MILES IN THE SIX-WEEK FIGHT FOR WARSAW.

TENGCHUNG, AUG. 17-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE CHINESE SIEGE OF TENGCHUNG, WITH THE ATTACKERS HOLDING HALF THE CITY AND ALL SURROUNDING POSITIONS, WAS DEVELOPING TODAY INTO ONE OF THE BLOODIEST ENGAGEMENTS OF ITS SIZE EVER FOUGHT IN CHINA.

THE CHINESE PAY A HIGH PRICE FOR EACH ASSAULT ON THE BREACHES IN THE GRANITE WALL OF THE INNER CITY. AND THE JAPANESE DEFENDERS SUFFER HEAVILY FROM THESE REPETITIOUS FORAYS AND INTERMITTENT SHELLING, MORTARING AND BOMBING.

THE INNER CITY SLOWLY IS BEING POUNDED TO RUIN AND THE DUG-IN JAPANESE WIPED CUT.

THE BATTLE IS HARDLY MORE THAN AUGERRILLA ACTION--THE HEAVIEST WEAPONS ARE 75-MILLIMETER MOUNTAIN GUNS WHICH AMERICANS FURNISHED AND TAUGHT THE CHINESE TO USE--BUT IT'S A DEADLY OPERATION FOR BESIEGED AND BESIEGER ALIKE.

A COORDINATED ATTACK, WHICH MIGHT HAVE MOPPED UP THE FEW HUNDRED SURVIVING JAPANESE ONCE THEY WERE BEATEN BACK INTO THE WALLED INNER CITY, NEVER MATERIALIZED.

INSTEAD, THE CHINESE HAVE BEEN TRYING SEE-SAW ATTACKS ON WALL BREACHES BLASTED BY SUPPORTING ALLIED PLANES. BUT THE JAPANESE DEVELOPED A HIGHLY MOBILE DEFENSE WHICH MEETS EVERY ASSAULT BEFORE THE CHINESE CAN OVERRUN THE BREACHES. AT ONE POINT THE CHINESE ARE REPORTED INSIDE THE WALL BUT PINNED THERE, UNABLE TO EXPLOIT THEIR POSITION.

CAPT. SAMUEL SCHWARTZESTEIN, 106 SHANLEY AVE., NEWARK, N.J., AN AMERICAN LIAISON OFFICER WITH A CHINESE REGIMENT, AND THIS CORRESPONDENT WORMED THROUGH THE HALF-RUINED SOUTHERN SECTION OF TENGCHUNG ALMOST TO ONE OF THE DISPUTED BREACHES--SO CLOSE TO THE JAPANESE POSITIONS THAT OUR VOICES HAD TO BE LOWERED LEST THE SOUND DRAW THEIR FIRE.

THIS WAS ONE OF THE BREACHES CHARGED NIGHT AFTER NIGHT BY INCOMPARABLE CHINESE INFANTRYMEN WHO ALWAYS ARE MET AT THE GAPING HOLE BY HELLISH MACHINEGUN FIRE FROM JAPANESE FLANKING POSITIONS INSIDE THE WALL.

ABOARD A LIBERATOR BOMBER OVER DAVAO,AUG.15-(DELAYED)-(AP)-IN THE BLACK HOURS BEFORE DAWN THIS MORNING, THE "LIBERTY BELLE" DELIVERED A THREAT AND A PROMISE TO OCCUPIED DAVAO, IN THE SOUTHERN PHILIPPINES.

THE BIG LIBERATOR, ON ARMED RECONNAISSANCE, MADE GOOD THE THREAT BY ATTACKING A 1,000-TON JAPANESE FREIGHTER AS IT CROSSED DAVAO GULF AND HEADED FOR TALAGUTONG BAY.

TWO 500-POUNDERS, NARROWLY MISSING THE STERN OF THE SHIP, APPARENTLY ENGULFED IT FOR THE CRAFT SANK FROM SIGHT BEFORE THE BOMBER PULLED OUT OF THE RUN SOME SEVEN MILES BEYOND.

OHEN THE PILOT, LT.ROLAND P.FISHER, OF (5163 CLAY ST.) ENVER,COLO., HEADED THE PLANE TOWARD DAVAO.

A FEW LIGHTS TWINKLED AS WE APPROACHED SANTA ANA DOCKS AND WARE-HOUSES, THEN BLINKED OUT. THE DAVAO RIVER SHIMMERED FAINTLY AS IT EMPTIED INTO THE GULF. SIX MILES UP STREAM, THE CAPITAL CITY LAY SLEEPING, BLANKETED IN HAZE.

IT WAS EVIDENT THE JAPANESE MILITARY HAD ORDERED A STRICT BLACK-OUT FOR THE CITY SINCE THE FIRST BOMBING OF DAVAO BY ANOTHER PLANE OF THIS UNIT LAST WEEK.

NO SEARCHLIGHTS SOUGHT OUR BOMBER NOR DID BURSTS OF ACK ACK REACH FOR US.

AT THE BRIEFING PRIOR TO THE TAKEOFF, CAPT.KENNETH A.MEAD, OF DENVER, EMPHASIZED OUR PRIMARY TARGET WAS SHIPPING IN DAVAO GULF. IF NONE WAS FOUND, THEN THE CENTER OF THE TOWN WAS TO BE BOMBED.

FISHER, WHO FLEW SPITFIRES FOR THE RAF IN THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN, TALKED THE SITUATION OVER WITH HIS CO-PILOT, 2ND LT. LAURENCE GRIMM, EL MONTE, CALIF., AND BOMBARDIER, 2ND LT. HOWARD HAMMETT, TULSA, OKLA.

HE DECIDED TO LOOK FOR MORE SHIPPING IN THE GULF RATHER THAN EXPEND THE LAST TWO BOMBS ON THE SLEEPING TOWN.

THE "LIBERTY BELLE'S" VISIT WAS A PROMISE OF FUTURE AID AND FREEDOM TO THE FILIPINO PEOPLE OF MINDANAO, TO AMERICAN PRISONERS WHO STILL DARED TO HOPE BEHIND THEIR PRISON STOCKADES, TO BRAVE BANDS OF GUERRILLAS HIDING OUT IN THE HILLS.

AFTER MORE THAN AN HOUR OF RECONNAISSANCE, NO FURTHER TARGETS PRESENTED THEMSELVES. THE BIG BOMBER HEADED HOME ALONG A COURSE PLOTTED BY THE NAVIGATOR, 2ND LT.JOHN E.MURRAY, JAMESTOWN, N.Y.

UNDATED JAPANESE (190)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALTHOUGH THE JAPANESE ARE BEING PUSHED BACK ON ALL FRONTS, TOKYO PROPAGANDISTS TODAY (SAT.) OFFERED AN EXPANDED GLOBAL PROSPECTUS OF THEIR SO-CALLED "GREATER EAST ASIA CO-PROSPERITY SPHERE" AS A PRODUCT OF "JAPAN'S CURRENT DELIBERATIONS ON POST-WAR PROBLEMS."

THE TOKYO DOMEI AGENCY, IN AN OVERSEAS ENGLISH-LANGUAGE WIRELESS DISPATCH REPORTED TO THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, CLAIMED THAT IMPERIAL JAPAN WAS THINKING OF THE "CO-EXISTENCE AND CO-PROSPERITY OF NATIONS" AS THE BASIS FOR ITS "NEW WORLD ORDER."

THE JAPANESE PROPAGANDA AGENCY SAID THAT THE PLAN ENCOMPASSED THE CREATION OF THREE "REGIONAL BLOCS OF NATIONS"--THE EAST ASIATIC, EUROPEAN, AND NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICAN--EACH WITH A "LEADER NATION." IT ADDED THAT THE "LEADER NATIONS" WOULD ASSUME THE RESPONSIBILITY OF "MAINTAINING AND PROMOTING THE THREE BASIC PRINCIPLES OF NEIGHBORLINESS, JOINT DEFENSE AND RECIPROCAL ECONOMY."

DOMEI SAID THE PLAN WAS EVOLVED AT A MEETING OF THE "COMMITTEE FOR THE STUDY OF POST-WAR PROBLEMS," HEADED BY TOSHIO SHIRATORI, FORMER JAPANESE AMBASSADOR TO THE NOW-DEPOSED FASCIST REGIME IN ROME. THE AGENCY SAID THE PLAN WAS "AN IMPORTANT STEP FORWARD" IN "JAPAN'S CURRENT DELIBERATIONS ON POST-WAR PROBLEMS."

30.24—18157

THE CORRESPONDENT, REPRESENTING THE COMBINED AMERICAN NETWORKS IN HIS BROADCAST, TOLD THIS STORY:

AT 5 O'CLOCK TUESDAY MORNING THEY WERE DROPPED WITH THE FIRST PARATROOPS. SOME FRENCH PATRIOTS GUIDED THEM INTO LORGUES AND THEN HID THEM IN A HAYLOFT UNTIL THAT AFTERNOON WHEN SOME UNDERGROUND TROOPS AND MORE PARATROOPS CAME IN, ALSO GUIDED BY THE FRENCH.

TWENTY-ONE PARATROOPERS AND THEIR FRENCH FRIENDS OCCUPIED AND HELD THE VILLAGE AGAINST THE VICHY MILITIA, AND THEN JAMES AND GRAY YESTERDAY VOLUNTEERED TO GO TAKE ANOTHER VILLAGE FIVE MILES FROM LORGUES.

THEY WENT AND BUSHED ON THE ROAD AND CAPTURED NINE PRUSSIAN TROOPS, ALL OF WHOSE OFFICERS SPOKE ENGLISH WELL.

FRIDAY MORNING FRENCH TROOPS SURROUNDED THE HILL WHERE THE GERMANS HAD LAID THEIR ARTILLERY.

new york, aug. 19-(ap)-col. andreas von aulock, commander of german forces resisting the siege of st. malo, has withdrawn to cecembre island off that north brittany port with the remnants of his forces, the german news agency dnb declared today.

the fall of st. malo was announced yesterday, but the fate of the colonel, who had ignored repeated ultimatums to surrender, was not disclosed. approximately 560 prisoners were taken when the citadel surrendered.

dnb said cecembre island was fortified with batteries whose fire had supported von aulock in his defense of the citadel. he was joined on the island by survivors of the dinard garrison, across the bay from st malo. the news agency's report, broadcast from berlin, said the citadel was abandoned after its main defense works had been wrecked and guns had run out of ammunition.

AMERICANS REACH VERSAILLES AREA IN SWIFT ADVANCE

Gen. Patton's Forces Fight Way to Seine on Both Sides of Capital.

FOE'S PLIGHT GROWS

French Patriots and Students Battle Germans as Army Flees City.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, Aug. 21.—(AP) Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's armored powerhouse raced eastward through France on a 100-mile front today, reaching the Seine on both sides of Paris. One column stabbed within 10 miles of the French capital where street fighting raged between partisans and the tottering Germans.

Near Mantes, 25 miles above Paris, the Americans smashed in force to the Seine, boxing in the riddled, retreating remnants of the German Seventh army. (The German radio said the Americans already had crossed the Seine with the aid of parachutists).

American columns also reached the Seine at Vernon, 45 miles above the Capital and in the vicinity of Fontainbleau, 35 miles southeast of Paris, as well as driving to the vicinity of Versailles, 10 miles from the heart of the city.

Yanks Drive Ahead

Others were around Corbeil and Melun, 15 and 25 miles respectively southeast. Farther south another force neared Montargis after a swing northeastward above the Loire river and 20 miles east of Orleans.

As the onslaught bulged unchecked 55 miles beyond Chartres through the Orleans gap, threatening a great encircling sweep south of Paris, Berlin dispatches indicated the German people were being prepared for a wholesale withdrawal from France to the Reich borders.

There still were no reports of any great stiffening of German defenses and from Paris itself came the sound of demolitions. The Paris radio was silent through the third day.

A Versailles resident told an American patrol near that city that street fighting was raging in Paris between students and patriots on the one hand and Germans on the other. He said there were numerous fires in the city and urged that American quickly come to the aid of the partisans. This resident said he had been in Paris only two hours previously.

The time of liberating Paris appeared a matter of Allied choosing, but there was more at stake than Paris itself.

Although the capital in the public view is one of the biggest plums of victory, one Allied officer commented, "we're shaking the tree to uproot the German army, not primarily to get the fruit."

Nevertheless, in anticipation of possible early Allied occupation of the capital, Gen. Charles de Gaulle and Brig. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of the French liberation forces, flew to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's headquarters Sunday for a half-hour conference. No news of the decisions was given out but de Gaulle emerged smiling.

Patton's formidable battle array was in a position to smash through on either side, north across the Seine toward the Pas de Calais or on through the gap around Paris to the south—or both. There was no inclination among the staff officers here to disclose which way he would strike.

Above Paris retreating German Seventh army soldiers under Allied air attack were swimming and ferrying across the Seine to escape being hemmed in by the Americans.

Reach Seine River

Gen. Patton's Third army plunged to the Seine at the river's elbow between Mantes and Vernon at the very point where the Germans were frantically assembling barges in an attempt to save Field Marshal Gen. Guenther Von Klug's Seventh army and parts of the 15th from destruction.

Other tank elements closed on Paris, sending armored patrols to the vicinity of the capital's suburbs on the west and southwest and along the approaches on the south, Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball reported.

As the enemy's Seventh army was set up for the fateful knockout blows which will hasten the day of France's liberation, it was announced that elements of 18 of its divisions left behind in two mid-Normandy traps were being swiftly annihilated by massed artillery fire from all sides.

Hopelessly cut off, these uncounted thousands milled around under the murderous fire in fields and on hills strewn with thousands of corpes of their fallen comrades and on roads ablaze with their bomb-wrecked transports.

Supreme headquarters said the bulk of combat strength of 14 divisions and the remnants of four others were in the pockets, one west of Argentan, the other to the east beyond the Trun-Chambois road.

But even this awesome slaughter was dwarfed by the development of the bulk of the Seventh army, fleeing across the Seine river in a hail of bombs and abandoning all the equipment with which an army fights.

British Enter Cabourg

British troops along the Normandy coast launched a violent assault eastward, stormed into the streets of Cabourg, a scant 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine, and seized the by-passed towns of Merville and Franceville at the mouth of the Orne.

This drive, besides keeping the Germans under intense pressure, also was clearing the Orne so that the valuable docks of Caen, isolated by German shellfire, can be put to use unloading more Allied forces.

The Canadians farther inland, with their vengeful Polish, Belgian and Dutch comrades, threw three more bridgeheads across the Vie river within 23 miles of the coast and closed to within 6 miles of the German communications center of Lisieux.

Patton's sweep to the Seine near Vernon was about 55 airline miles from the sea and left the Germans forces over the bridgeless reaches of the river, which is never less than 150 yards wide from there on to the mouth.

The Germans had at least 20 improvised crossings, but the best were ferryboats capable of taking only a few tanks at a time and the worst were barge lines and pontoons stretched across the river by night and drifted back to the shelter of the banks by day.

Many Barges Destroyed

Pilots, whose blazing guns and bombs knocked out 23 large barges and set a 10,000-ton vessel afire on the Seine yesterday, and more than twice as many the day before, said von Kluge was ferrying his forces over in small groups. But some soldiers in their haste were swimming for it.

Behind them over 70 miles of road lay their equipment, knocked out by the ceaseless hail of bombs and bullets or abandoned in flight.

This did not look like an army that intended to make a stand on either bank of the Seine. It looked like an army that was bent on fleeing the wrath of the liberating armies.

Its rescue seemed to lay with the 15th army along the rocket coast, which already has been depleted by important elements sent across the river to try to extricate the Seventh.

Waiting Allied air forces fell on this stricken army with fearful execution. The Allied communique said more than 800 motor trucks were destroyed and 600 damaged and 40 tanks were kocked out and others dameged yesterday in air blows from Argentan northeastward to the Seine.

For such high dividend work as this, the kind that brings final victory, the capture of Paris could wait.

(A Berlin dispatch to Sweden predicted a "swift German retreat on the French front" and indicated the Nazi press was preparing the German people for a withdrawal all the way back to the Reich's own frontier.)

It was announced officially that infantry which followed Patton's swift armored columns had mopped up the last resistance around Dreux, south of Paris.

Meet Little Resistance

Dispatches from near Paris said reconnaissance over a wide area before the capital had uncovered surprisingly little resistance, even in patrols deep into the Orleans gap.

From this gap Paris can be enveloped, German lines of escape for forces in the south can be severed, or a great wheeling movement can be launched against the 15th army on the channel coast.

There was no confirmation of various reports that the Americans had pushed into the French capital, where lack of an outlying defense and the rumble of demolitions suggested the Germans might be preparing to give up Paris without a fight.

(German broadcasts said the American lines around the Capital ran through Houdan, 13 miles east of Dreux, and 34 miles west of the center of Paris, Rambouillet, 23 miles southwest of Paris, Arpajon, 17 miles south of Paris, Etamps, 12 miles south of Arpajon, and Pithieviers, 25 miles northeast of Orleans.)

Supreme headquarters, while reporting the advance to the vicinity of Mantes, was silent on all movements around the French capital.

The battle of the Normandy trap, a scene of indescribable chaos, came to a climax last night when Americans, Poles and Canadians met at Chambois, sealing off all Germans left fighting around Argentan, which is 7 miles southwest of Chambois.

Before the trap shut some enemy forces made it over the highway north of Chambois, only to find themselves blocked off by the Allied armies already in pursuit of the bulk of the Seventh army.

The larger of the two traps is that in the vicinity of Argentan. It is about ten miles wide and as much as ten miles deep west of Argentan, but narrows on the eastern end.

Shells fell in the middle of a giant traffic jam of at least 1,000 stalled vehicles in the area of the forest of Gouffern, at the eastern end of the pocket.

The Germans lucky enough to escape from this tornado of fire were surrendering in such numbers that they were hindering Allied movements some [illegible]s were taken yesterday.

West of this pocket, a smaller one southeast of Putanges was liquidated, the daily communique said.

In fighting into Cabourg the British were bent on silencing big enemy guns which have been harassing Allied shipping in the Normandy beachhead area since D-day. They also were threatening to cut off the small port of Houlgate on the south.

Report Parachute Attack

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP).—The German official news agency D. N. B., said today that Allied parachute troops and airborne units had landed east of the Seine River. The broadcast dispatch said that the Allies also landed armor under cover of the airborne troops and that heavy fighting was going on at the bridgehead.

D. N. B. said, "After reaching the middle of the Seine between Vernon and Mantes, the Allies made a first attempt to establish a bridgehead on the western bank of the river.

"This attempt having failed, the Allies then landed parachute and airborne troops east of the Seine, and Allied tanks subsequently crossed the river under the protection of these troops.

"The bridgehead and airborne troops were attacked immediately by German units. Heavy fighting is in progress here now."

De Gaulle and Le Clerc To Lead Paris Parade

LONDON, Aug. 21 (Monday) (AP).—When Allied liberating armies make their triumphal entry into Paris they will be headed by General Charles de Gaulle and by units of General Jacques Le Clerc's French 2d Armored Division, it was reported in informed circles here.

Reports from neutral sources for some time have said that tickets for choice balcony seats overlooking routes leading to the Arc de Triomphe in Paris have been selling at high prices.

Push on Houlgate From South

ON THE BRITISH FRONT, in Normandy, Aug. 20 (AP)—Marshal Guenther von Kluge's northern flank along the English Channel coast was under a new and violent assault tonight as British troops driving east toward Le Havre captured Merville and Franceville and stormed into the streets of Cabourg. Houlgate was threatened from the south by this drive.

British troops have crossed the River Dives in an inland sweep parallel with their thrust east of the Orne River along the Channel coast. Beyond the Dives they advanced a mile and a half east of Dozule.

The Germans were being swept toward the larger net thrown around the escape route in the Trun sector, west of the Falaise-Argentan line.

A series of fair-sized German pockets remained to be mopped up southeast of Falaise. British tanks and infantry driving east from Putances captured Sentilly in a six-mile advance overnight and reached the Falaise-Argentan highway south of Occagnes.

Farther north along the road, cut off from all sides, the doomed Nazi garrison at Pierre-Fitte continued its suicidal stand, apparently trying to keep open the escape gap there, now less than two miles wide, that leads only into the bigger trap to the northeast.

A British staff officer said that "dribs and drabs" of Nazi reinforcements from the Seine were arriving to bolster the dazed and exhausted remnants of von Kluge's army, chiefly SS troops who escaped from the hell of Normandy's caldron and now are retreating in a northeasterly direction.

DEGAULLE CONFERS WITH EISENHOWER

GEN. EISENHOWER'S HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Aug. 20—(AP) Anticipating the liberation of Paris by the swiftly moving Allied armies, Gen. Charles de Gaulle and his deputy, Brig. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, conferred with Gen. Eisenhower today.

De Gaulle and Koenig conversed in English with the Supreme commander, who speaks little French, for more than a half-hour in Eisenhower's field tent.

Details of their conversation were not disclosed officially, but hearty laughter punctuated the session and all appeared in high good humor as the two French generals climbed into their automobile to speed back to the nearby airfield where they had landed in mid-morning.

Signing of the document returning the civil government to liberated areas in the rear zone tentatively is scheduled soon. De Gaulle will sign for the French, Eisenhower for the United States and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden for Great Britain.

Hatfield and McCoy Together

ON THE ROAD TO PARIS, Aug. 20 (AP)—The Hatfields and the McCoys were feuding again today, but not with each other, as American patrols reached the vicinity of Paris and the suburbs at Versailles. They were Phillips Hatfield of Sprigg, W. Va., and Homer L. McCoy of Avondale, W. Va., who said they were related to the original feudists. "This time we got a mad against Hitler and are not quarreling among ourselves," McCoy said.

Drive on Brest Was Led By Untried 6th Division

N. Y., Jersey and Pennsylvania Men Make Up Bulk of Unit

AMERICAN 3D ARMY HEADQUARTERS, France, Aug. 20 (AP).—The spearhead of the American drive to Brest in a ten-day advance of 250 miles was the 6th Armored Division, it was disclosed officially tonight.

Under command of Major General Robert W. Grow, the division led the spectacular drive down the center of the Brittany Peninsula which disorganized German defenses in the entire sector.

The division jumped off after passing through an infantry division near Lessay July 28 and climaxed its record-breaking drive by smashing into the outskirts of Brest Aug. 7.

Although it was the division's first combat action, its members exploited their opportunity to the limit, capturing 5,000 Germans, including Lieutenant General Karl Spang, and killing many hundreds of the enemy while losing few of their own men.

Most of the 6th's tank men were recruited from New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, but it also contains a guard unit from Massachusetts and two from Missouri.

Maquis Control Pyrenees

The entire Pyrenees region of southwestern France from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean is now either in Maquis hands or under their control, reports reaching Port Bou, Spain, today said.

In this area the Maquis hold such important cities as Pau, Tarbes, Foix, Pamiers and Oloron and have surrounded the strongholds of Toulouse and Auch.

(A communique by Brig. Gen. Joseph Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior, broadcast by the Algiers radio, said French partisans now control one third of France comprising eight departments. The communique said that during the week ended Aug. 19 patriots killed 1,821 Germans, wounded 415 and captured 2,265, suffering only slight losses themselves.)

All German forces just north of this Spanish border have withdrawn north toward Germany and Maquis forces immediately took possession, appointing new civil administrators.

After blowing up all military installations, bridges, ammunition dumps and port facilities the Germans also have withdrawn from the frontier villages of Cerbere and Liperthus and Port Collioure and Port Vendres.

The retreating Germans passed through Perpignan without a stop and continued on the rough Narbonne on the Toulouse-Marseille railroad. They halted a few miles north of Narbonne where they were forced to ditch much of their heavy material because patriots already had blown up all the bridges in the area.

DE GAULLE ADDRESSES PATRIOTS IN CHERBOURG

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 — (AP) Gen. Charles De Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation, speaking from the balcony of the town hall in Cherbourg after his arrival in France today, told a cheering crowd of 7,000 that "we are all united in the same will—the will to French greatness."

"We shall rebuild Cherbourg greater and more beautiful than it was and in the same way we shall rebuild France," de Gaulle said in his address, reported by the Office of War Information.

"We know that the calvary we have been going through is the greatest ordeal of our history," the French leader said. "We know the abyss we are emerging from and toward what peaks we are striving."

De Gaulle was met in Cherbourg by Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, chief of the French Forces of the Interior; Gen. Alphonse Juin, French chief of staff; Admiral Georges Thierry d'Argenlieu and the mayor of Cherbourg.

The cheering crowds sang the "Marseillaise" as de Gaulle went to the town hall balcony to make his speech, and when he had finished, they shouted "long live de Gaulle; Long live France!"

Four Americans Storm Orleans, Rout 150 Nazis

Beat Infantry Into City and Attack With Maquis' Aid

ORLEANS, France, Aug. 20 (AP).—Two United States Army civil Affairs officers and two enlisted men beat the infantry into this city and with the aid of twenty-five French patriots killed or wounded 150 Germans who were among the last enemy units fleeing southward across the Loire River.

Today, four days after they helped drive the last German out, they had the city functioning again in orderly fashion, with adequate water and enough electricity for key services.

"It sure wasn't orderly the day we came in," said Captain George L. Schneider, of 1231 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, a thirty-one-year-old former lawyer.

The other officer, Captain Lawrence W. Brady, of Los Angeles, an air conditioning engineer, suffered slight leg wounds in the fight, and a number of the French patriots were killed or wounded.

Captain Schneider and the two American enlisted men, Sergeant Francis J. Harrington, of Troy, N. Y., and Corporal Paul D. Bahr, of Salt Lake City, were unharmed in the three and one-half-hour conflict.

HOSTILITIES STOP AS U. S. CHAPLAINS PICK UP WOUNDED

By EDWARD D. BALL

WITH THE AMERICANS IN NORMANDY, July 23 (delayed)—(A) Three American chaplains seeking out wounded under fire in a marshy no-man's land brought a spontaneous unofficial cessation of hostilities in this bloody sector for three hours today.

During the brief armistice the Germans came out and directed the chaplains and litter-bearers to our wounded.

Principals of the episode were Chaplains Joseph J. Esser, Catholic, Cleveland, Minn.; Edgar H. Stohler, Spavinaw, Okla., Salvation Army; and James M. Hamilton, Fort Worth, Tex., Disciples of Christ.

Defying fire from both sides and our strafing planes overhead they went into the marsh holding aloft Red Cross flags, succoring a man here, another there.

The enemy was impressed by the bravery of these men of the cloth and stopped shooting. Soon guns on both sides fell silent except the artillery in the rear.

The chaplains were met in no-man's land by a German officer and through a German-speaking American removal of the wounded was arranged.

While the little group was negotiating, a German cameraman came out and snapped pictures of them. Associated Press Artist Howell Dodd and I witnessed the removal of the last casualties from a vantage point midway between our line and the enemy.

We had moved up under guidance of Pvt. Edward L. Madden of Naugatuck, Conn., and Cpl. George Rothschild, German-born infantryman from Houston, Texas. Incidentially both Madden and Rothschild were surrounded by the enemy last night but got back through the lines.

Within a few minutes after the chaplains reached an aid station the deathlike silence was broken over the battlefield. The Germans had started shooting again and the fight was on.

"There was no request for an armistice," Father Esser said. "We were out there carrying on when Stohler came over to get me to give the last sacrament to a dying Catholic. I administered the last sacrament and then Stohler and I decided to go further into the swamp and see if we would draw fire. There was none so we called back for litterbearers and began picking up our wounded.

Meanwhile Chaplain Hamilton was picking up wounded with a party of American aid men farther down the line. They were hailed by a German who emerged from behind a machinegun emplacement. The German directed them to a wounded American they had passed. While picking him up they came upon another man whose left leg had been shot away."

POLISH, U. S. UNITS LINK UP

Former, With Canadians, Seal a Pocket With 1st Army Patrols

WITH THE CANADIAN FIRST ARMY in France, Aug. 20 (AP)—Polish troops of the Canadian First Army have linked up with American First Army patrols in the middle of the Falaise gap.

The joining of the Allied forces took place last night at Chambois. There was a steady build-up of the Canadian barrier from Falaise to Trun, behind which, a senior Canadian officer said, "we now have a big mass of stuff. Nothing the enemy has got can get out through our screen.'

Enemy troops have been surrendering on such a large scale they are hampering Allied operations.

Yank Bombers Rain Explosives On Enemy Trying to Cross Seine

LONDON, Monday, Aug. 21—(AP) Moving swiftly to close a great new trap on the battered Germans in France after a week of the most sustained air scourging in warfare's history, American Marauder bombers rained explosives on the enemy trying to cross the Seine river yesterday while fighter bombers ranged up and down the stream, breaking up pontoon spans, ferries and barge concentrations.

British-based heavy bombers were held on the ground by unfavorable weather, but fighter bombers sneaked below the 2,000-foot ceiling in their concentrated effort to weld shut the Seine entrapment.

The German radio said American heavy bombers from Italy, 1,000 strong, with fighter escort, attacked Szolnod and Szeged, Hungary, and penetrated southeastern Germany. Allied headquarters reported the Italian-based heavies had struck oil refineries in Polish Silesia, Slovakia and unidentified targets in Hungary.

Chief strength of the Allied air attacks, however, was directed over the battle areas in northern France.

Activity over the Falaise trap area ceased, with final cleanup left for the ground forces, while the Second tactical and Ninth U. S. Air forces struck at the enemy on both banks of the Seine and as far away as the Risle river.

Brig. Gen. Francis Griswold of the Eighth Air force fighter command and that in the 10-day period ending Aug. 19, fighters and fighter bombers of his force destroyed or damaged 979 enemy locomotives, 7,808 railroad cars, 775 oil cars, 1,235 motor trucks, and 281 other vehicles while losing 87 planes.

This toll was not included in the destruction totals of the Second RAF and the Ninth Air forces which, operating near the front east from the Falaise trap, destroyed and damaged nearly 10,000 vehicles and tanks in a three-day period ending Aug. 19.

Ninth Air force fighter bombers which pounded barges, tankers, temporary bridges, ferries and steamers along the Seine met intense flak and increased fighter opposition.

Second tactical air force planes struck savagely at moving transport immediately west of the river, and reconnaissance flights disclosed that the Germans were concentrating every makeshift craft possible in an attempt to save remnants of the army from the new trap.

Temporary spans were seen crossing the Seine from Vernon to the mouth of the river at a point where it is 200 yards wide. All primary bridges large enough for the passage of vehicles had been smashed in the battle area. East of the Falaise gap in the attacks from Thursday through Saturday the enemy lost 10,000 military vehicles and tanks.

American infantry was on both sides of the Durance.

(The American broadcast station in Europe (ABSIE) said that a correspondent of the French news agency estimated that several hundred thousand Allied troops now were in Southern France "and that French troops make up over one half the force.")

Allied headquarters said that Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, deputy commander in chief in the Mediterranean and commander of American forces in that theatre; Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, Allied air commander; and Major Gen. John K. Cannon, commander of the U. S. 12th Air Force, had visited the invasion area for a first hand survey.

U. S. Seventh Army Isolates Marseille in Flanking Move

Gen. Patch's Forces Cross Durance River, Imperil Toulon Base.

ROME, Aug. 20—(AP) Vanguards of the Allied Seventh army in a sweeping drive across Southern France have crossed the Durance river at several points and are on the outskirts of Aix-en-Provence in a lightning drive that has virtually isolated the great city of Marseille and the naval base at Toulon, [illegible] announced tonight.

French troops of the Seventh army were officially reported closing in on Toulon following heavy air and naval bombardments of targets in that vicinity.

Trap Nazis at Pertuis

At the same time well-organized Maquis forces in a full-scale offensive behind the German lines have trapped a German force in the town of Pertuis on Thenorth bank of the Durance some 30 miles north of Marseille.

Aix is an important junction of seven roads 15 miles due north of Marseille and between the Mediterranean port and Pertuis. Not only do these highways lead straight into the Rhone valley but they also are the main escape routes for the German forces trapped in Marseille and Toulon.

Headquarters did not reveal exactly where Allied spearhads had crossed the Durance which is a tributary of the Rhone.

French patriots have encircled Pertuis and are holding all four roads leading from it, it was stated.

Adds to Bag of Prisoners

The Seventh Army in its sweep against relatively weak resistance added to its bag of 12,000 prisoners in five days of invasion, and seized the town of Rians, 15 miles northeast of Aix and 27 miles northeast of Marseille.

Combined radio dispatches from the battle front said the Germans were pulling out of Marseille and that Maquis had broken open the city's jail, liberating political prisoners. The French Gestapo was said to have left the city but many high Vichy officials still remained.

Overwhelming forces being poured into the beachheads were fanning out in every direction, plunging deep into the maritime Alps in a drive straight north, severing enemy communication lines and liberating hundreds of additional square miles of southern France.

The position of stubborn German rearguards at Hyeres, only eight miles east of Toulon, seemed untenable with the capture by French commandos and American tanks of dominating heights on the east.

Other forces were even closer on the north, being only six miles away at Solles-Pont, but opposition was stiff before the Naval base and its bristling batteries in contrast to the situation elsewhere.

German officials and French collaborators had pulled out of hungry Marseille, leaving its defense to a garrison of undetermined strength bedding down for a siege.

Outflanking of Great City

Marseille, the second city of France, was being outflanked rapidly by the surge of the Seventh Army on the north heading for the plains along the Rhone with the avowed intention of joining hands with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces now before Paris.

30. 24— 18161

It was apparent the Germans would have to try to make a stand here with whatever forces they can muster or cede strategic southern France to French and American forces of Major Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army.

French armor and American infantry leap-frogged their way to Rians, 50 miles beyond the point of debarkation.

The Frenchmen, come back to France after four years of exile to liberate the homeland, took over the burden of attack from American infantrymen and cracked into the town of St. Maximin-La-Ste. Baume.

Then they sped 12 miles northeast through Rians while other forces took care of Barjols, on the north flank east of Rians.

At Rians, Patch's troops were in position to march on the roadhead of Aix, which controls the network of communications north from Marseille and whose main highways leads northwest to the Rhone valley.

Drove Into Maritime Alps

On the eastern flank, the Americans drove far into the Maritime Alps and occupied Castellane, 33 miles northwest of Cannes. La-Bastide, 23 miles northwest of Cannes; and Grasse, eight miles northwest, also fell.

"There was no further advance toward Cannes along the coast," an official source said, apparently indicating the Allied command saw no point in expending lives to capture the resort town as long as it is under the muzzles of big German guns in the hills behind and on islands offshore.

Medium bombers and fighters ranged freely over enemy rear positions yesterday, batting down weak attempts at interception by the Luftwaffe and knocked out at least 100 enemy vehicles, destroyed a number of locomotives and blew up German gun positions.

Engineers were hurrying airfields to completion to give tactical forces bases on the mainland.

RAF Busy In South

RAF light bombers were out last night, bombing and strafing enemy transport moving over roads of the Italian Riviera as well as southern France.

The U. S. Navy disclosed that 641 of the total of 1,500 ships and other craft in the assault force that staged the landings in southern France six days ago flew the colors of the United States.

Three principal naval assault forces operating off the new beachhead are commanded by Rear Admirals Frank J. Lowry, Cresson, Tex., Bertram J. Rodgers, Los Angeles, Calif., and Spencer F. Lewis, Calvert, Tex.

Of five naval gunfire support groups, one is commanded by Rear Admiral J. M. Mansfield, British Royal Navy, in the cruiser Orion, and the others by U. S. Rear Admirals Lyal A. Davidson, Davenport, Ia., Theodore E. Chandler, Washington, D. C., Carleton F. Bryand and M. L. Deyo who directed a force at Cherbourg.

Rear Admirals Thomas Troubridge, Royal Navy, in HMS Royalist, and Calvin T. Durgin, United States Navy, were listed as commanding the group of aircraft carriers participating in the operations.

VICHY REPORTED TAKEN BY MAQUIS

Brazzaville Radio Claims Gestapo Agents Have Fled to Nancy.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 — (AP) The Brazzaville radio said today in a broadcast reported by NBC that Maquis forces were in control of Vichy.

In the same broadcast the Brazzaville radio said that Gestapo agents had been moved from Vichy and Paris to Nancy.

French-Swiss border reports last night said Pierre Laval and other Vichy officials had arrived at Belfort, about 25 miles from Basel, Switzerland, and an equal distance from Germany.

Maquis Contact Kept Over Year Before Invasion

French Officers and Allied Arms 'Chuted in South; Patriots Built an Airfield

WITH ALLIED FORCES IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 19 (delayed) (AP).—With the Allied landings on the French Riviera successfully accomplished, it now can be revealed that the American and French general staffs maintained regular plane and parachute communications with Maquis (French patriot) patrols for more than a year prior to the invasion.

As early as September, 1943, General Henri Honore Giraud's staff established plane routes to the interior of southern France. French officers were dropped by parachute to help organize and direct the Maquis movement.

French and Allied planes brought in equipment for the Maquis and during the last few weeks huge supplies of British Bren guns were dropped by parachute.

The patriots leveled and guarded an air field large enough for C-47 transport planes to ferry in key personnel and to bring out detailed maps. The planes landed and took off from the field without lights, operating only in clear weather and during a full moon.

The gathering of information on enemy defense installations, troop dispositions and strength has been praised by 7th Army intelligence officers, who said no German units which had not previously been expected were encountered by the Allies on the beachhead.

PARATROOPS ON JOB WITH MAQUIS AUG. 1

U. S. Squad, in South France 15 Days Before D-Day, Worked on Cannes, Marseille Roads

Combined American Press Dispatch.

AN ADVANCED AMERICAN OUTPOST, Southern France, Aug. 20 (AP)—Capt. Mills Brandes pointed mournfully at his feet, encased in bedroom slippers, and ruefully explained that the only hard part about being in southern France doing advance work two weeks before the invasion was that his shoes did not last long.

Captain Brandes, from Sandusky, Ohio, parachuted in with his squad of fourteen exactly fifteen days before D-day last Tuesday to consolidate patriot activities inland from the beachhead. In addition the group cut communications and ambushed all the Germans they could.

Everything was just fine, the Captain reported today, as he and his men contacted rapidly advancing beachhead forces, except that the rough running up and down mountains and over rocks and through streams wore out their shoes.

Captain Brandes talked about "the wonderful job" the Maquis did in organizing resistance and preparing the way for the arrival of the Americans. The Maquis were waiting for his squad when they parachuted down, he said, and "anything we needed, they fixed for us."

The chief job of the advance invaders was chopping up the enemy's transportation and communication facilities along the Napoleonic Highway running north from the coast near Cannes and the vital Highway 96 extending northward from Marseille.

Captain Brandes and his men put up several ambushes along the Napoleonic Highway and cut railroad and highway bridges over the Durance River at several places during the fifteen days. What is more, they were not particularly quiet about it. Daily they reported back to Allied Headquarters by radio.

French to Rule Civil Affairs in Riviera Sector

Patch Will Follow Precedent Set in Normandy; Allied Military Courts Barred

ROME, Aug. 20 (AP).—The civil affairs program for the south of France will follow closely the precedent established in Normandy, with the civil affairs section of Major General Alexander M. Patch jr.'s staff working with French General Gabriel Cochet, who commands the southern zone of Allied forces, it was announced today.

The chief problem will be to restore order and set up civil administrators, but there will be no Allied military courts.

One section of Patch's staff is headed by Colonel Harvey S. Gerry, a former New York bank official. Heading the Allied Civil Affairs Committee is Colonel Henry S. Parkmon, of Boston, son of the Harvard historian.

The question of supplies is serious for the moment and bread is reported short.

Some undernourishment is reported in cities, with an almost complete lack of any drugs or medicines. Emergency foods and medicines are being rushed to these areas and turned over to responsible Frenchmen in each town. Army engineers working with French engineeers are combating power emergencies.

French forces are being paid in metropolitan French currency, while Allied soldiers use a supplementary franc.

The civil administration of each community is entirely in the hands of the French.

MAAF Bags 21 Nazis in Week

ROME, Aug. 20 (AP)—Mediterranean Allied Air Force planes shot down only twenty-one enemy planes in the week ended yesterday, despite the opening of a full-scale invasion. The low score was brought about not by bad marksmanship, but by the lack of German planes in the air.

The MAAF set an all-time record for this theatre on D-day for the invasion of southern France, flying 4,285 sorties.

In addition to the invasion operations the MAAF carried out attacks in northern Italy, Germany, Hungary and the Balkans during the week and RAF units dropped supplies to Polish patriot forces in Warsaw.

GEN. BOLTE COMMANDS 34TH INFANTRY DIVISION

ROME, Aug. 20—(AP) Maj. Gen. Charles L. Bolte of Chicago is commanding the veteran 34th infantry division it was announced today.

Maj. Gen. Charles Ryder who commanded the division in the north African and Italian campaigns recently was transferred to new duties.

Bolte, a 49-year-old soldier who never went to West Point but entered the army as a second lieutenant after graduating from Armour Institute of Technology saw service in France with the Fourth Infantry division in the first World war. He was wounded in France but remained in the field and later served with the Army of Occupation.

From 1922 to 1926 Gen. Bolte was aide to Gen. J. L. Hines then chief of staff. He is a graduate of the Infantry school, the command and General Staff school and the Army War College. His most recent duties include serving as assistant chief of staff, G-3 Fourth corps, special observer in London, chief of staff of the initial American forces in England, assistant division commander 91st Infantry division, and commanding general of the 69th Infantry division.

AUTO TRADED FOR EGGS

American Captain Swaps Seized German Car for Food

WITH AMERICAN FORCES in southern France, Aug. 20 (AP)—Lieut. Bill Luyt of Jersey City, N. J., "discovered" a big sedan abandoned by German generals. He drove it a few hours and then traded it to Capt. Kenneth Barnaby of East Orange, N. J., and Mystic, Conn., for one yellow parachute.

Captain Barnaby tried to ford the river in the car and tore out the undercarriage and damaged the motor. So he traded it to a French unit for one chicken and seven eggs.

When last seen the sedan was being driven by an American lieutenant. Details of the last trade were lacking.

FOE SET AMBUSH IN SOUTH

Casualties Suffered by American Infantry Near Brignoles

BRIGNOLES, Southern France, Aug. 19 (Delayed) (AP)—American infantry took control of this shell-battered village on the road to St. Maximin, back door to Marseille, today despite desperate German rearguard action.

Members of two American companies said some of their comrades were ambushed this morning and casualties resulted.

"They let our forward patrols go through, then opened up on the main body," said Pvt. Bernard Wojcwodka of Wheeling, W. Va., who with Sulo Wist of Denver, Col., and Ubaldo Benavidez of Hatch, N. M., escaped the attack. Their unit took eleven prisoners.

The Americans knocked out two of three battalions defending the town and have been taking an average of 150 prisoners a day, said Lieut. Maurice Wyss of 50 Plaza Street, Brooklyn, in charge of the prisoner stockade.

Bolte Heads 34th Division

ROME, Aug. 20 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Charles L. Bolte of Chicago is commanding the veteran Thirty-fourth Infantry Division, it was announced today. Maj. Gen. Charles Ryder, who commanded the division in the North African and Italian campaigns, was recently transferred to new duties.

THREE YANK GENERALS NARROWLY MISS DEATH

WITH THE SEVENTH ARMY IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 20 —Three American generals—Maj.-Gen. John K. Cannon, Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers and Maj. Gen. Ira C. Eaker—on a visit to this beachhead narrowly missed being hit by a bomb during a German air raid a few nights ago.

The generals were returning to a ship some miles out to sea when the bomb fell close to their small boat. It exploded as it hit the sea and sent up a water spout which deluged them.

Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, commander of the 7th army, was distressed over the close call of the three generals. It was on his advice that they went out to sea for the night in view of probable German air raids on the beachhead.

Nazis Retreat from France

The Nazi press began preparing the homeland today for wholesale withdrawals from France as the German high command reported American tanks had slashed across the Seine northwest of Paris with the aid of airborne troops and infantry rushing in to cement the beachhead.

Stockholm reports said the Nazi Sunday Press took the line that "swift German retreat on French soil can be expected" presaging a retreat all the way back to the Reich's borders.

To make this bitter dose as palatable as possible, the Press warmed up its secret weapon propaganda and predicted "a change in the mode of warfare under very dramatic circumstances."

The report that Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's tanks had crossed the Seine, presumably about 30 miles northwest of Paris, first came from the German Agency DNB, which said powerful airborne forces were landed on the east bank to knock out German defenses.

The German High command radio then reported that Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley had thrown in reinforcements of infantry in an effort to extend the bridgehead on the east bank.

DNB said a previous attempt to cross the Seine had been thrown back before the airborne troops struck, and that "heavy fighting is in progress."

This same source said the American armored drive in the direction of Paris had been halted along a line running through Houdan, Rambouillet, Arpajon, Etamps and Pithiviers, from 18 to 47 miles from the capital on the west and south.

Driven to the wall by a manpower shortage, the Nazi regime was reported by DNB to have arranged the release of Italians disarmed and interned after Italy's capitulation last fall.

They will be regarded as "free citizens," DNB said, but will have to work and "pull their weight for the war effort."

BIG U. S. BOMBERS BLAST INDUSTRIAL UNITS ON KYUSHU

Jap Radio Reports 77 Planes Raid Five Cities in Heart of Empire.

YAMATA [illegible] AGAIN

Daylight Raid Costs Four Planes, and Is Followed by Night Attack.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21—(AP) B-29 Superfortresses hammered Japan's home industries in two attacks today—one the first Daylight raid on the enemy homeland since Lt. Gen. James Doolittle's daring swoop on Tokyo more than two years ago.

The Twentieth Air Force, announcing Sunday's coordinated day and night attacks, said four planes were reported lost due to enemy action. The Japanese radio had claimed that 25 planes out of a total of 77 were destroyed in the first raid.

12 Planes Destroyed

The army communique said 12 Japanese fighters were claimed destroyed, 12 probably destroyed and 10 damaged.

The big bombers struck war industries in the Yawata-Kyushu area. Bombing results on the first attack were reported as good, with relatively strong fighter opposition. Anti-aircraft fire was described as moderate to intense.

Results of the night mission were not disclosed.

The 20th Air Force has acknowledged the loss of only seven Superfortresses in five previous air assaults on Japan and occupied areas, although it has indicated that other bombers were lost and some damaged.

The loss of four planes—two by accident, one by enemy anti-aircraft fire and one missing—was admitted in the first major raid which struck at Yawata on June 15. Three planes were listed as not accounted for after the August 10 attacks on Palembang, a petroleum center in southern Sumatra, and Nagasaki, a port and manufacturing city on Kyushu.

In the July 29 raids against Anshan, steel city in Manchuria, and Tangku, a port in occupied China, losses were described merely as "light." All planes returned safely after the July 7 operation, which had as its targets Yawata, Sasebo and Omura, important homeland industrial centers; the port of Laoyao on the north China coast and Hangkow on the Yangtze river. No losses were reported in an early June test raid on Bangkok.

Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell, Jr., who had much to do with planning the air offensive against Germany's war production, is chief of staff on the 20th air force and presumably is doing a similar job on Japan. He said nearly four months ago that the Nipponese industrial economy had been studied by military experts for several years and declared that it could be destroyed from the air.

The enemy has been reluctant to admit serious industrial harm, but the 20th Air Force has said on several occasions that "observed bombing results were reported to be good."

The Tokyo radio reported tonight that American B-29 Superfortresses raided the Japanese home islands twice, once about 5 p.m. and again about midnight, Japanese time.

The series of broadcasts on the domestic wavelengths and beamed abroad conflicted in many details, with the Japanese steadily raising their claims of destruction of American planes.

The latest count, in a propaganda broadcast beamed to North America, claimed 25 planes out of a total of up to 77 were destroyed in the first raid and that 20 parachuting American crewmen were captured.

The second raid, according to a Japanese domestic broadcast, involved about 20 planes.

No Information Given

U. S. Twentieth air force headquarters confirmed only that superfortresses had been over the Japanese home island of Kyushu and said additional information would not be available until returning fliers had filed their reports.

The Japanese broadcast, as heard by the Federal Communications commission, by listoners in London and as relayed by the German radio, said the first raid was against five cities on Kyushu, naming Fukuoka, Moji, Kokura and Yawata, the last city that had been hit twice previously.

The Japanese broadcast said both raids were directed at "northern Kyushu and the western Choguku district," and contended damage was negligible.

The German DNB agency and some other sources identified "Choguku" as Shikoku, one of the Japanese home islands east of Kyushu island.

The OWI identified it as a naval base on the main land of Honsu directly northeast of Kyushu.

However, there is Chokugo district on Kyshu island in the immediate vicinity of the Kyushu cities named by the Japanese, and it is possible this district was meant.

Text of 20th air force communique No. 9:

"Two forces of Superfortresses from the Twentieth bomber command struck Japan's vital war industries in the Yawata, Kyushu, area by coordinated day and night attacks Sunday.

"The initial attack was the first daylight operation against the Japanese homeland since the Tokyo raid led by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle April 18, 1942.

Second Attack Made

"The second Sunday assault, a smaller force, bombed at night.

"On the first attack, bombing results were reported good. Relatively strong fighter opposition was encountered, and anti-aircraft fire was moderate to intense and accurate.

"Four planes were reported lost due to enemy action. Twelve enemy fighters were claimed destroyed, twelve probably destroyed and ten damaged.

"Operational details on the night mission are not available.

(End communique)

The daylight raid apparently was one of the heaviest thus far.

Tokyo Reports Two Raids

NEW YORK, Aug. 20, (AP)—The Tokyo radio reported tonight that American B-29 Super-Fortresses raided the Japanese home islands twice, once about 5 p. m. and again about midnight, Japanese time.

The second raid, according to a Japanese domestic broadcast, involved about 20 planes.

One Raid Only Confirmed

U. S. Twentieth Air Force headquarters confirmed only that superFortresses had been over the Japanese home island of Kyushu and said additional information would not be available until returning fliers had filed their reports.

The Japanese broadcasts, as heard by the Federal Communications Commission, by listeners in London and as relayed by the German radio, said the first raid was against five cities on Kyushu, naming Fukuoka, Moji, Kokura and Yawata, the last a city that had been hit twice previously.

Directed at Kyushu

MANNERHEIM AWARDED OAK LEAVES BY HITLER

LONDON, Sunday, Aug. 20—(AP) The German Transocean News agency said in a broadcast dispatch today that Adolf Hitler had awarded the oak leaves to the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross to Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, now president of Finland.

(The gesture was obviously an attempt to counter reports that Finland was considering making peace offers to Russia.

(A Stockholm dispatch describing Mannerheim's new cabinet, announced less than two weeks ago, said it was selected "to clear the way for peace feelers to Russia.")

Nazi Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel made the presentation during a recent visit to Mannerheim's headquarters, Transocean said. The Knight's Cross was awarded also to Gen. Axel E. Heinrichs, Mannerheim's chief of staff.

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP)—The German radio quoting a Tokyo dispatch today said Goro Morishima, Japanese minister to Russia, had left Moscow for Japan to report.

IT'S A SMALL WAR

Private's Jeep and Wife Turn Up in Least Expected Places

LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Pvt. Richard Martin of Shinnston, W. Va., is nicknamed Rabbit's Foot.

In Tunisia some one stole his jeep. In France he thumbed a ride in a jeep, decided the seat felt familiar, and scratched the paint off part of the hood. There were his name and serial number.

Moving on, he escaped death by inches in the battle of Hill 95 in Normandy and was flown to a hospital in England for removal of shell splinters. When he awoke, the nurse bending over him was his wife, Lieut. Betty Martin.

11 KILLED IN BARRAGE OF NAZI ROCKET BOMBS

LONDON, Aug. 20—(AP) A barrage of flying bombs hurled by the Germans against London and Southern England today killed at least 11 persons, including two Canadian soldiers, and wrecked blocks of tenements.

A hotel and some partments near the living quarters of some American soldiers were damaged, and in one of these blocks six persons were killed.

The robots hurtled over the channel mist in spasmodic salvos. Fighter pilots and anti-aircraft gunners and barrage balloons accounted for the destruction of several bombs, and several more were destroyed over the sea.

American soldiers pitched into the rescue work in the stricken areas.

15,000 GERMANS WIPED OUT BY REDS

Remnants of Three Trapped Divisions Crushed Near Warsaw.

LONDON, Monday, Aug. 21—(AP) Red army troops yesterday crushed possibly 15,000 trapped Germans, the remnants of three divisions, in the Sandomierz salient below Warsaw, while other Soviet units abandoned several villages in western Latvia under the shock of 20 savage Nazi counterattacks that cost the enemy 2,000 dead.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukraine army, hammering up the west bank of the Vistula river in a move to outflank embattled Warsaw, liquidated the trapped Germans.

"As the enemy refused to surrender, most of the encircled enemy troops were killed," Moscow's communique said.

Eight localities were captured in the 25-square-mile area where the Germans had been pinned just north of fallen Sandomierz, freeing the Russian units for action on the Polish plains leading to German Silesia, only 75 miles beyond advance spearheads operating southwest of Sandomierz.

Some of the biggest tank battles of the war were being fought on the Eastern front, Moscow dispatches said, as the Germans battled with desperate realization that a Soviet break-through in any of the many vital sectors would send Soviet troops crashing onto German soil.

The slight Russian reverse in Latvia occurred in the Jelgava sector near the gulf of Riga, where the midnight Soviet bulletin said 144 German tanks and self-propelled guns were knocked out.

Berlin reported a rare display of German naval effort by saying a Baltic force including "several cruisers" had entered the Gulf of Riga, shelling Russian positions in the corridor driven above Jelgava to the sea, and also hurling shells inland.

The Russians said that in nine days their troops had wrecked more than 1,500 German tanks in the grinding war of attrition being fought on the plains of Poland, along the edge of German East Prussia, and in the lake-dotted Baltic states.

Attack Warsaw Line

German Elite SS troops attacked 20 times against the menacing Russian lines east and northeast of Warsaw, where the Russians were within sight of the Polish capital and trying to drive a wedge between it and East Prussia. Moscow said these were absorbed, 900 Germans killed, and several localities taken when the Russians counterattacked.

Moscow was silent about the progress of other powerful Soviet armies attacking on two sides of East Prussia. Nor was any mention made of the Romanian front, where Berlin said a southern Red army had begun a "large-scale attack" on both sides of Laisi, key rail city 175 miles north of the Romanian oil wells at Ploesti.

In Estonia Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic army drove to within seven miles of Tartu on the Tallinn-Riga railway in a three-sided drive which threatened the early capture of that strategic city and the further disintegration of two stranded Nazi Baltic armies.

Among 150 localities overrun the Russians seized Pedaspaa, on the southwestern bank of Lake Peipus 23 miles east of Tartu; Korvesila, 10 miles east of the objective; and Vaana Kuuste, seven miles south of Tartu, which is 73 miles below the Baltic sea.

Maslennikov's troops also seized Mut Metsa, 27 miles southeast of Valga, rail junction on the Latvian-Estonian border, and a string of localities extending 22 miles across the frintier, including the rail station of Alsviki, four miles northwest of Aluksne, taken Saturday.

55 Miles From Riga

In Latvia, below the Estonian sector, units of another powerful Soviet Army, the Second Baltic, led by Andrei Yeremenko, drove to within 55 miles east of Riga with the capture of Erglin on the Madona-Riga railway. This represented a 22-mile advance west of Madona.

More than 70 localities were swept up by Yeremenko's troops, including Ozolsala, only three miles southeast of Plavinas, a rail junction 66 miles southeast of Riga.

These two Russian armies were hammering back the remnants of 25 exhausted German divisions cut off weeks ago by Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's first Baltic Army drive which reached the Baltic Sea 25 miles west of Riga.

Germans Have Some Success

Ever since Bagramian established this wedge beyond Riga, the Germans have been hurling in powerful counterattacks in an effort to break through and rescue

Col.-Gen. Georg Lindemann's forces, estimated at 200,000 men, and the Soviet communique admitted some German successes.

West and northwest of Jelgava, which is 25 miles southwest of Riga, the Russians "abandoned several populated places" after repulsing attacks by large enemy infantry and tank forces, the bulletin said. This sector is on the western side of the Russian-held corridor running through Latvia from Lithuania to the Gulf of Riga.

In Northern Lithuania the Russians also beat off German attacks in the Siauliai area, the bulletin said, inflicting heavy losses in men and material.

The ferocity of the fighting in all key sectors on the eastern front was illustrated by Moscow's declaration that 260 German tanks had been wrecked Saturday and 21 planes shot down. This made an eight-day total of 1,344 German tanks and 423 planes destroyed.

With the reduction of the three German divisions in the pocket a few miles north of Sandomierz, the Russians were now in a position to expand in three directions, southwestward toward Krakow, 35 miles beyond their advance positions, westward 25 miles toward Kielce, communications center on the road to German Silesia, and northward toward Warsaw.

Berlin radio again repeated the week-old assertion that the Russians also had established another bridgehead across the Vistula in the Warka sector, only 30 miles south of Warsaw.

May Spring Trap At Radom

Konev's troops and the first White Russian army attacking around Warsaw may intend to spring another trap at Radom.

In addition to German reports of Russian attacks in the Iasi sector of Romania, a communique issued in Bucharest told for the third straight day of Soviet attempts to cross the lower Dnester river in the area between Tiraspol and the Black Sea.

The Romanian war front has been quiet for months since Marshal Konev, then commander of the second Ukraine army, invaded the Iasi sector April 2 after an 800-mile march from Stalingrad across Russian Steppes where hundreds of thousands of Germans perished.

other parts of the peninsula front.

Some enemy shells fell in Florence yesterday, the communiqué said, but otherwise the Tuscan capital, where snipers have been active for several days, was quiet. [The Berlin radio said a major attack was launched yesterday on the Adriatic side. The Germans, the broadcast said, were forced to withdraw in one area.]

The Brazilian Expeditionary Force under General Joao Batista de Moraes Mascarenhas has become a part of the Fifth Army in Italy, it was announced today.

It was thus clear that the Brazilians will not for the present participate in the French operations.

The Fifth Army front on the banks of the Arno in the Tyrrhenian coastal area has been comparatively quiet for the past two weeks.

Disgraced by Capture

FLORENCE, Aug. 20 (AP)—Lieut. Col Eggers, command the Fourth Parachute Regiment of the German First Parachute Division, has been captured and he does not like it. "What a disgrace that I should be here," he said after having had his first real meal in ten days. "What will Heidrich [Lieut. Gen. Richard Heidrich, commander of the division] say when he hears about this? I must get back to my unit."

RUSSIANS HONOR AIRMEN

Red Air Force Commanders and Fliers Receive Decorations

MOSCOW, Aug. 20 (AP)—Russia saluted the Red Air Force today with salvos of praise, promotions, decorations and fireworks.

The Chief Marshal of Aviation, A. A. Novikoff, received his second Order of Suvorov, first class, and Marshal of Aviation Alexander Golovanoff gained the rank of Chief Marshal of Aviation.

The double hero of the Soviet Union, Col. Alexander Pokryshkin, who has downed fifty-nine German planes in 137 sky fights, received his third Hero of the Soviet Union Medal, becoming the first triple hero in the nation's history.

In addition, a bronze bust of Colonel Pokryshkin will be set up in the capital. The young flier, who has taken part in flying an American-made Airacobra in 550 missions, is being honored individually as have few men in this country.

JAP RESISTANCE BY-PASSED IN INDIA

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, KANDY, Ceylon, Aug. 20 — (AP) Two British 14th army columns have by-passed the last knot of Japanese resistance along the Tiddim road a mile north of the Burma frontier in the east Indian state of Manipur, and stabbed beyond a mile south of the border, a communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said today.

Inside India the Japanese still were resisting in what a headquarters spokesman called a disorganized manner, but the spokesman added this was not considered in conflict with the report of last Thursday that "all organized resistance inside Manipur State has ceased."

The new advance along the Tiddim road into Burma is by a larger operational force equipped to hold the territory, the spokesman said, and not merely an advance element such as penetrated two miles south of the border late last week. The communique said the new force had executed a wide outflanking movement against the remaining enemy positions.

In the Kabaw valley east of Manipur two drives into the Chindwin valley are developing on the Tamu-Sittaung track, and the Japanese were driven from positions 19 miles east of the border town of Tamu.

Only patrol activity was reported from the north Burma front.

Chinese Gain Near Lungling

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 20 (AP)—Supported by United States Fourteenth Air Force planes, Chinese troops stormed and captured Laotungpo, a strongly fortified hill position southeast of the Burma Road city of Lungling, and inflicted an estimated 130 casualties on the enemy, the Chinese High Command said today.

With the capture of Laotungpo, Chinese troops in Yunnan Province now hold all necessary positions to launch an attack on Lungling. The supporting American planes, which flew forty-five sorties, destroyed seven Japanese warehouses at Lungling.

On the walls of besieged Tengyueh, thirty-five miles northwest of Lungling, the Chinese captured three pillboxes and joined two previously captured footholds there. Fighter planes of the Fourteenth Air Force started fires inside Tengyueh.

Japanese planes attacked the Burma Road bridge over the Salween River but caused no damage. The Chinese in Yunnan Province are fighting to link up with Allied forces in north Burma.

JAPS DRIVEN BACK SOUTH OF YANGTZE

CHUNGKING, Aug. 20—(AP) Chinese forces are attacking Japanese positions north and south of the Yangtze river in an effort to prevent enemy reinforcement of their Hunan province strength, the Chinese high command said tonight.

In Southern Hunan in the vicinity of Japanese-held Hengyang, figthing was mounting in intensity.

Chinese troops drove against the port of Ichang on the Yangtze, westernmost point of the Japanese penetration into central China. Three strategic points northeast of the city were retaken by the Chinese, the High Command said.

From the east, west and northwest Chinese columns were pictured as advancing against the important highway town of Tangyang, 27 miles northeast of Ichang and a connecting link for Japanese overland supply from Hankow, and another column was attacking the Yangtze port of Wanchieh west of Shasi.

South of the Canton-Hankow rail city of Hengyang, Chinese forces were attempting to recapture Leiyang and stem the Japanese drive down the railway toward Kwantung province.

Planes Continue Raids On Scattered Jap Bases

U. S. PACIFIC HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, Aug. 20, (AP)—War planes of the U. S. Central Pacific Command continue their neutralizing raids against scattered Japanese island bases, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported today.

In raids Thursday and Friday American fliers hit two islands in the Marianas, Pagan, to the north of conquered Saipan, and Rota; between Tinian and Guam.

Mauru, phosphate island south of the Marshalls, was blasted twice. Mili and Wotje, in the eastern Marshalls, also were attacked on both days.

The raids were carried out by Army, Navy and Marine planes. The Japanese sent up ack-ack fire ranging from meager to moderate, but all the American planes returned.

JAPANESE PLANES FLEE HALMAHERA

Withdrawing West of Outpost for Philippines—MacArthur Sees Direct Blow Obviated

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific, Monday, Aug. 21 (AP)—Heavily punished Japanese air forces are withdrawing from Halmahera to bases westward beyond Allied bomber range, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported in a communiqué today.

"This will make possible an advance westward without the necessity of costly frontal assaults to clear the way," the announcement added.

Halmahera, 200 miles west of New Guinea and 300 miles south of the Philippines, had been under almost daily attack by Allied bombers in recent weeks.

Nearest major Japanese strongholds west of Halmahera are Celebes and Borneo Islands. Both contain many airdromes untouched by Allied bombing.

The communiqué said:

"The battle for air supremacy (in the Moluccas) is rapidly approaching a definite conclusion.

"Under constant punishment, the enemy is apparently withdrawing his air force to bases farther westward beyond our bomber range.

"Our air force is continuing its pressure, but is finding many enemy air bases non-operative and others stripped of planes.

"The enemy is no longer contesting the air over the Moluccas.

"This, together with limitation of his shipping, renders his numerous and powerful garrisons there strategically impotent for anything but local action.

"With negligible loss, this interlocking chain of positions, which provided flank interdiction to the vital Halmahera-Philippine route, is being strategically sterilized and the chain divided into its component links."

A headquarters spokesman said the Japanese had abandoned and destroyed some of their Halmahera airdromes to prevent use by the Allies. He said they had entirely withdrawn fighter opposition over the Molucca Islands, of which Halmahera is the largest, but continued to offer anti-aircraft fire.

The communiqué disclosed that air patrols on Saturday damaged a 3,000-ton Japanese freighter and sank a 500-ton vessel near Celebes.

Fighters on sweeps over Ceram Island, south of Halmahera, destroyed or damaged a small freighter, three coastal vessels and six barges.

Elsewhere in the Netherlands Indies enemy positions from Timor to New Guinea were bombed and strafed. One Dutch-manned Mitchell medium bomber was destroyed by anti-aircraft fire at Langgur, in the Kei Islands.

Allied planes also attacked Japanese targets near Wewak, British New Guinea; in New Ireland, Bougainville and at Palau in the Carolines. Two planes were lost in an attack upon Rabaul, New Britain.

Blind G.I. Says 'Show Me Where to Shoot' and Dies

Alone, He Stood Off Night 'Banzai Charge' With Rifle

AITAPE, New Guinea, Aug. 11 (Delayed) (AP).—Just before he died Private George Klym, of Gorham, N. D.—blind and comatose American soldier—pulled on the sleeve of a battalion hospital corpsman and said: "Don't move me. Just show me where to shoot."

With that the world of war slipped from him and it made no difference that his eyes had lost the light of life. The corpsman covered his face and went on to the next case.

Not thirty minues before, Klym, standing midnight watch in a foxhole outpost, fought off a Japanese banzai charge" with an automatic rifle single-handed until the rest of his outfit was aroused by the din and joined him to repulse the suicide attack.

In the dark all the Japanese could see was the blazing muzzle of Klym's gun and so they fired and charged at it. He took their fire, stood his ground and pumped bullets into the charging enemy. They shot out both his eyes and still he stood and fired. He was still firing when he went down. And he wanted to fire some more just before death intervened at the battalion hospital.

His officers believe he saved twenty to fifty lives. The next morning soldiers counted more than twenty Japanese bodies in front of Klym's foxhole.

WOUNDED MAN FIGHTS, TOO

Joins His Bearers in New Guinea Skirmish With Japanese

AFUA, Drinlumor River Front, New Guinea, Aug. 11 (Delayed) (AP)—American wounded and headquarters soldiers can fight, too, when they must.

Sgt. Lloyd W. Hale of Tyler, Tex., and Aaron S. Chandler of Lubbock, Tex., headquarters troopers, volunteered to act as stretcher bearers. The fighting was hot, the wounded were numerous and all regular stretcher men were busy.

Hale and Chandler went beyond the lines and picked up a wounded soldier, Pfc. H. H. Martin of Oak Hill, Ohio. As they were going back to an aid station the Japanese jumped them.

The rescuers and the wounded joined the fight. Martin, from his reclining position on the stretcher, shot one Japanese. Hale got two, shooting one and smashing the other with the stock of his rifle. Chandler came to grips with another, wrestled him to the ground and killed him.

Hale was shot through both legs, Chandler through one. But they dragged themselves and Martin part of the way back. A medical detachment found them and brought them in. All are recovering.

BULGARIAN Ppremier TALKS WITH RED ENVOY

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bulgarian Premier Ivan Bagrianov and the Soviet charge d'affaires at Sofit conferred yesterday, the German radio announced.

Bulgaria and Russia have never broken off diplomatic relations although Bulgaria is allied with the Nazis.

NIGHT

At the same time the German radio said Foreign Minister Parvan Draganoff would read a foreign policy statement by Bagrianov to members of the Bulgarian Parliament Monday afternoon and will reply to members' objections to any part of the government's policy.

Last Thursday night Bagrianov in an impassioned speech before Parliament urged that the nation get out of the war which he said the "great majority of the Bulgarian people never desired."

Gromyko Arrives For Peace Parley

Optimistic About Success of Coming Conferences; Brings Soviet Approval of Four Power Council Endorsed By Britain.

By John M. Hightower

AUG 21 1942

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko flew in from Moscow today bringing Russia's plans for a postwar world organization to preserve peace. He immediately expressed conviction that in the four-power meetings starting tomorrow his country, the United States, Britain and China can mesh their differing plans into a single master blueprint.

Gromyko Optimistic

"I am most optmistic about the success of the coming conferences," he told reporters at National Airport where his plane, marked with the red star of Soviet military forces, brought him and his delegation in to a military reception.

His optimism is shared expressly by both Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., American delegate, and Sir Alexander Cadogan, the British representative, who arrived a week ago. But it is potentially more significant because it apparently means that Gromyko knows of no points in Soviet world security plans on which there cannot be agreement with Britain, the United States and China.

British Endorse Plan

The British already have publicly endorsed the basic American plan for a world assembly of nations, a council including the Big Four, plus elected smaller nations, a world court and a strong commitment to use force when necessary to prevent aggression. It has been feared in some quarters here that Russia would insist on concentrating control in the Big Four nations to a degree unacceptable to the United States and Britain.

Dr. Wellington Koo, the Chinese representative, is not due for another week. He will meet Stettinius and Cadogan when they conclude their talks with Gromyko.

Meeting Opens Tomorrow

The meetings will be opened tomorrow morning at Dumbarton Oaks, historic Georgetown estate, by Secretary of State Hull, official host. Cadogan and Gromyko are scheduled to make responses, and all three statements will be public. After that the conferees will go off the record to hold their "exploratory talks."

Such information as comes from Dumbarton Oaks thereafter will be by common agreement among the conferees whenever they decide to make a progress report. Eventually they expect to arrive at a tentative agreement on the main lines of development for a world security agency.

Need For Public Education

The Foreign Policy Association in a report on "U. S. plans for world organization", issued tonight, said that one of the great needs in this country is for "education of the public" on international organization.

"Current debates on the subject clearly show," the report said, "that much spadework in the education of the public will have to be done before people can be persuaded that national interests do not necessarily conflict with the need for international collaboration and, on the contrary, can be better advanced by international rather than national methods."

U. S. Will Gain

"The apprehension persists," the Association also said, "that by collaborating with other nations the United States surrenders something. Assuming that it does, is it not true that it gains something in return?"

The Association said President Roosevelt's June 15 declaration on the use of force to maintain peace "indicates that what he has in mind is the pooling of national forces, which would retain their identity, under an international command similar to that of the combined chiefs of staff."

While much of the Dumbarton Oaks talk may be devoted to organization and employment of force, even more time is expected to be spent on planning peaceful methods of removing the causes of war.

Willkie to Exchange Views With Dulles

AUG 21 1942

Accepts Offer of Dewey While Still Maintaining An Attitude of Watchful Waiting on Party Policy.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 20 (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey arranged today for an exchange of foreign policy views between Wendell Willkie and John Foster Dulles, who has been designated by Dewey to consult with Secretary of State Hull on postwar plans.

Discussion Non-Partisan

In an exchange of telegrams Willkie said that since both Dewey, Republican presidential nominee, and Hull had agreed that the discussions should be of a non-partisan character, he would be glad to talk to Dulles.

"I wish I had known of your desire for my views prior to your original statement," Willkie said in the telegram. Persons close to Willkie later said this indicated the 1940 GOP nominee still was maintaining a watchful waiting attitude, largely because of Dewey's espousal at the Mackinac Island conference a year ago of a postwar military alliance between the United States and Great Britain.

Four-Power Control

In a statement of his foreign policy views last Wednesday, subsequently enlarged, Dewey said the four great Allied powers must disarm. Germany and Japan but must not through a permanent military alliance deny small nations a voice in the preservation of future peace through an international organization.

Dulles who left Albany tonight for New York City by automobile because an infected foot made it difficult for him to travel by train, said he would call Willkie for an appointment tomorrow before going to Washington Tuesday, where he will meet with Hull the following day.

Declines Prediction

In a telephone conversation with a reporter ,Willkie said the meeting probably would be held during the afternoon, but decline to predict the results. He said he did not know whether it would be possible to issue a joint statement of view,s an objective Dulles said he would like to attain.

In announcing the Willkie-Dulles conference, Dewey told reporters it was his intention to obtain all shades of views on foreign affairs so that the American people could be kept wholly informed on the progress of the work of building the peace.

First Public Meeting

It will be the first public announced meeting between a close representative of Dewey and the 1940 presidential nominee since Dewey became the party's standard bearer.

At a news conference, Dewey proposed the internationalization of the Ruhr valley in Germany, chief mass production center of the Axis state, as one of the steps to be taken to prevent future wars.

He said it was his idea that the victorious powers must join in exercising control over Germany immediately after the war, later turning that control over to a proposed international organization.

Dewey Contacts Willkie

Dewey disclosed he had tried to reach Willkie by telephone last night to have him join in conferences here with Dulles and Elliott V. Bell, state commissioner of banks and a campaign adviser.

They learned Willkie was at home in New York but had retired.

The Governor then telegraphed, suggesting Willkie come to the executive mansion today, but Willkie replied he would be glad to meet with Dulles in New York on the latter's way to Washington.

Deeply Concerned

"For several years," Willkie said in his telegram, "I have been deeply concerned about the ill fate of the small nations inherent in military alliances between any or all of the great powers. I have been equally concerned that there should not arise among our Allies the notion that our party would in any way obstruct or endanger the success of an international conference.

"I therefore made inquiry about 10 days ago of the Washington authorities to determine if our government intended to insit upon the protection of the position of small nations in the forthcoming Dumbarton Oarks conference.

Awaited Results

"I was given strong affirmative assurances," Willkie said. "Therefore I had determined to await results before entering into any public discussion."

Willkie said that because Dewey and Hull had agreed on non-partisan conversations he would be glad to exchange views wtih Dulles.

Dewey, who previously had urged that the four-power diplomatic conference opening tomorrow in Washington not be directed toward the formation of a military alliance, said in a reply telegram he was "confident" the Willkie-Dulles conference "will promote the constructive results which I am sure we all want."

Congress Hits Snag On Postwar Laws

AUG 24 1942

Goes Into Fourth Week With Major Issues Undecided—George and Surplus Property Bills Face Fight.

By Ernest B. Vaccaro

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (AP)—Congress goes into its fourth week of work on legislative machinery to shift the nation from a war to peacetime production basis with major issues of policy still bogged down by controversy.

General Picture

The picture shapes up like this::

1. The Senate having passed the George "states rights" demobilization measure which opponents termed "inadequate," awaits final action tomorrow by its military committee on a measure to provide for the disposal of upwards of $75,000,000,000 in surplus war properties.

2. The House, which sidetracked temporarily the Senate-passed George bill leaving to the states the fixing of postwar unemployment compensation rates, looks for a final vote tomorrow or Tuesday on a surplus property proposal widely at variance with that being whipped together by the Senate committee.

Since both bills ultimately will have to be worked out in conferences of committees representing the two houses, the feeling is growing that final solution still may be weeks away.

Override Objections

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) said he would ask the Senate committee to override objections from surplus property administrator William L. Clayton and set its own rules for disposal of war-acquired real estate. O'Mahoney proposes to require classification of the land by the Interior Department and the sale of farm lands through the Agriculture Department by a procedure giving preference first to former home owners and second to veterans of the present war.

Clayton advocates sale on an appraised value basis through normal trade channels. He said it was his policy, however, to confine farm acreage sales to family-sized plots with prohibitions against absentee ownership.

Wrote Provisions

The Senate committee over the week-end wrote into its surplus property bill provisions substituting a board of eight members for a House-proposed control by a single administrator.

The board would prescribe all policies with respect to disposal of surplus war goods of all kinds. Its members would serve for a term of two years during which they could hold no other employment.

O'Mahoney said the committee felt "we should not carry over into the peacetime era the arbitrary controls over the nation's economy that were necessary when we were entering the war."

"What the committee is seeking to do," he added, "is establish a broad, comprehensive control over our economy rather than a concentration of control in one man."

In another move to tighten congressional control over sales of war plants and supplies, the committee wrote in an amendment to require quarterly progress reports to Congress and to prohibit the sale of aluminum, magnesium, aviation gas and other plants of that nature without 30 days advance notice to Senate and House.

Kimmel Hits Article By Sen. Truman

AUG 22 1942

AUG 23 1942

Declares Repetition Of Charges in Public Grossly Unfair.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20. (AP)—Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, former Navy commander at Pearl Harbor, today protested to Senator Truman (D-Mo) that Truman had made false statements in a magazine article relating to Kimmel's conduct at the Hawaiian base prior to the Japanese attack in 1941.

Kimmel's protest was expressed in a letter to Truman, dated today from Kimmel's home in Bronxville, N. Y., aand made public here by Charles B. Rugg, Boston attorney who is civilian counsel for the retired officer.

Both Kimmel and General Walter C. Short, who was Army commander at Pearl Harbor at the time of the Japanese sneak attack, face trial by court martial for alleged dereliction of duty.

By direction of Congress, both the Army and Navy boards are conducting investigations into circumstances of the Japanese attack.

Kimmel told Truman that in the article in the August 26 issue of Collier's "you have made false statements concerning my conduct x x x your innuendo that General Short and I were not on speaking terms is not true. Your statements alleging failure to cooperate and coordinate our efforts are equally false. x x x"

Based on Roberts' Report

Admiral Kimmel said that Truman had relied upon the Roberts report, on Pearl Harbor, compiled by Justice Owen J. Roberts of the supreme court. The report, Kimmel said, does not contain the basic truths of the Pearl Harbor catastrophe.

"This is evident," he add, "from the fact that no official action has ever been taken upon the basis of that report. x x x

"Until I am afforded a hearing in open court," Kimmel declared, "It is grossly unjust to repeat false charges against me, when, by official action, I have been persistently denied an opportunity to defend myself publicly.

End Half Truths

"I suggested that until such time as complete disclosure is made of the facts about Pearl Harbor, you refrain from repeating charges based on evidence that has never met with the test of public scrutiny.

"I ask for nothing more than an end to untruths and half truths about this matter, until the entire story is given to our people, who, I am convinced, will be amazed by the truth."

Senator Truman could not be reached for comment.

Wallace Hasn't Heard Any Pledge for U.S. Job

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 20 (AP). — Vice-President Henry A. Wallace denied here today that he had been assured of an important governmental position if President Roosevelt is re-elected.

"No, I don't know anything about it," he replied, when asked if he had been promised such a post.

After a tour of Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College at College Station, Mr. Wallace proceeded to Austin, where he will inspect the University of Texas tomorrow.

LONDON, AUG 20-(AP)-THE BREAKUP OF PRUSSIA AND DIVISION OF GERMANY INTO 10 SEPARATE STATES, WITH EFFECTIVE REPARATIONS AND ECONOMIC CONTROL, WERE PROPOSED IN A MEMORANDUM ISSUED TODAY BY A POSTWAR POLICY GROUP OF 39 CONSERVATIVE MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND PEERS.

THEY PROPOSED TO REDUCE PRUSSIA BY PARTITION FROM A POPULATION OF 39,000,000 TO 13,000,000 AND FORBID, UNDER THREAT OF ECONOMIC PENALTI ANY ATTEMPT TO RECREATE ANOTHER CENTRALIZED REICH UNDER PRUSSIA'S DOMINATION.

OTHER STATES THEY ADVOCATED WERE RHINELAND, WESTPHALIA, HESSE, HANOVER, WURTTEMBERG, SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN, BAVARIA, SAXONY, BADEN AND THE OLD HANSEATIC LEAGUE TOWNS OF NORTHERN GERMANY.

THE GROUP, MEMBERS OF PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL'S PARTY, SUGGESTED THAT GERMANY'S MEANS OF PRODUCTION AND RAW MATERIALS SHOULD BE TRANSFERRED TO OR CONTROLLED BY THE UNITED NATIONS TO REPAIR WAR DAMAGE AND HELP REHABILITATE EUROPEAN ECONOMY. THEY ALSO WOULD QUOT GERMANY'S SHIPS, TRUCKS AND ROLLING STOCK AND BAN ALL AIRCRAFT.

LONDON AUG 20-(AP)-THE TOKYO RADIO SAID TODAY THAT AMERICAN B29 SUPERFORTRESSES FLEW OVER FIVE DISTRICTS OF KYUSHU, THE SOUTHERNMOST THE MAIN JAPANESE ISLANDS, AND CLAIMED THAT 11 OF THE BIG BOMBERS WER SHOT DOWN.

(THERE WAS NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION.

(IN WASHINGTON THE U.S. WAR DEPARTMENT SAID IT HAD NOT HEARD OF A NEW B29 RAID).

THE BROADCAST, HEARD IN LONDON, SAID THE BOMBERS ENGAGED IN FIERCE AIR BATTLES WHICH STILL ARE GOING ON.

TOKYO'S FIRST BROADCAST ON THE RAID SAID THAT THE SUPERFORTRESSES WERE SEEN FLYING IN AN EASTERLY DIRECTION FROM BASES IN CHINA. THE BROADCAST ADDED THAT A PRECAUTIONARY WARNING WAS SOUNDED IN KOREA.

THE TOKYO RADIO THEN SAID THAT TWO SUPERFORTRESSES WERE SHOT DOWN OVER KOKURA ON KYUSHU ISLAND. KOKURA IS 95 MILES NORTHEAST OF NAGASAKI, THE JAPANESE SHIPBUILDING CENTER WHICH WAS HIT IN THE LAST RAID OF THE SUPERFORTRESSES.

THE TOKYO RADIO NAMED FOUR OF THE FIVE TOWNS ATTACKED AS FUKUOKA, MOJI, KOKURA, AND YAWATA ALL IN NORTHER KYUSHU.

IN PROLONGED BATTLES, TOKYO, SAID, 13 (CORRECT) OF THE BIG RAIDERS WERE BROUGHT DOWN, INCLUDING THREE RAMMED BY JAPANESE FIGHTERS.

(OWI SAID THE TOKYO BROADCAST DECLARED 77 PLANES PARTICIPATED IN THE ATTACKS. LATER, TOKYO SAID, 16 ENEMY PLANES WERE OBSERVED FLYING WEST OVER A SMALL ISLAND SOUTH OF KOREA AND DECLARED THESE WERE THE "REMNANTS OF THE ENEMY RAIDERS DRIVEN OFF OVER KYUSHU.)

A LATER BROADCAST COMMUNIQUE REDUCED THE NUMBER OF ATTACKING PLANES TO 60, AND SAID "MORE THAN TEN" WERE SHOT DOWN.

"SEVERAL AMERICAN PILOTS WHO BAILED OUT WERE CAPTURED," THE COMMUNIQUE SAID, ADDING THAT THE WESTERN PART OF THE SHIKOKU ISLAND AS WELL AS KYUSHU WAS ATTACKED.

THESE BATTLE AMATEURS CAUGHT THE ENEMY OFF BALANCE AND PLUNGED FORWARD AT SUCH A BREAKNECK PACE THAT THE GERMANS NEVER WERE ABLE TO REORGANIZE ENOUGH TO MAKE A STAND.

THE AMERICANS OVERRAN THE PENINSULA FROM ONE END TO THE OTHER. AFTER THE FIRST FEW DAYS THERE WAS NO REAL "FRONT" IN THE ACCEPTED MILITARY SENSE.

THE DIVISION BYPASSED GERMAN ELEMENTS FROM ST. MALO WHICH WERE TRYING TO ATTACK THE TAIL END OF THE AMERICANS, WHILE THE FORWARD PART OF THE DIVISION WAS BOTTLING UP GERMAN FORCES TRAPPED AT BREST.

IN ONE ENGAGEMENT LT. COL. EMBRO D. LA GREW, OF LEXINGTON, KY., CAPTURED A TANK AND INFANTRY TASK FORCE OF 530 SURPRISED GERMANS, AND THEN ACCEPTED THE SURRENDER OF 760 OTHERS WHO CAME FORWARD UNDER A WHITE FLAG.

THE SIXTH DIVISION'S COLUMNS MOVED FORWARD SO FAST THAT PART OF THE TIME THEY WERE OPERATING BEYOND THEIR OWN LOCALITY MAPS--BUT THEY JUST FOUND A GOOD ROAD TO BREST AND KEPT ROLLING UNOIL THEY GOT THERE.

ON THE FALAISE FRONT, AUG.20-(AP)-BRITISH TROOPS EXECUTED A SPECTACULAR NEW THRUST EAST OF THE ORNE RIVER ALONG THE ENGLISH CHANNEL COAST TOWARD TROUVILLE TODAY AND BY NOON WERE FIGHTING IN THE OUTSKIRTS OF CABOURG.

IN A PARALLEL SWEEP INLAND OTHER BRITISH COLUMNS CROSSED THE RIVER DIVES AND ADVANCED A MILE AND A HALF EAST OF DOZULE.

CABOURG IS THE SITE OF BIG GERMAN GUNS WHICH HAVE BEEN HARASSING ALLIED SHIPS BRINGING IN SUPPLIES TO THE NORMANDY BEACHHEAD SINCE D-DAY. IT IS ABOUT ONE-THIRD OF THE WAY FROM THE MOUTH OF THE ORNE TO TROUVILLE.

COUPLED WITH THENEW DRIVETO CLEAR THE CHANNEL COAST, A BRITISH HEADQUARTERS COMMENTATOR ANNOUNCED THE "BATTLE OF THE BULGE" WAS ENTERING ITS FINAL STAGE WITH UNTOLD THOUSANDS OF GERMAN CORPSES LITTERING THE FIELDS, WOODS AND ROLLICNG HILLS.

NEARLY 3,000 MORE PRISONERS FELL INTO THE HANDS OF BRITISH AND CANADIAN TROOPS ALONE YESTERDAY IN THE FAST-DWINDLING POCKET AROUND THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN SECTOR.

ENEMY FORCES NOW ARE IN A COMPLETELY CHAOTIC STATE INSIDE THE TRAP, A STAFF OFFICER SAID, AND THUS FAR AT LEAST THREE AND ONE-HALF PANZER DIVISIONS IN THE POCKET HAVE BEEN SCUTTLED.

BY CONSERVATIVE UNOFFICIAL ESTIMATE THE DESTROYED PANZER FORCES ALONE WOULD APPROXIMATE 25,000 MEN AND IN THIS CONNECTION IT MUST BE REMEMBERED THAT FIELD MARSHAL GEN.GUENTHER VON KLUGE TRIED ABOVE ALL TO EXTRICATE HIS PRIZED ARMOR FROM THE TRAP.

HOW MANY TENS OF THOUSANDS OF LESS VALUABLE FORCES -- PARTICULARLY THE SHANGHAIED SLAVE TROOPS -- ARE LEFT TO PERISH IN THE NORMANDY BULGE STILL IS A MATTER FOR SPECULATION AND CANNOT BE KNOWN WITH ANY ACCURACY UNTIL THE SACK IS EMPTIED.

A SERIES OF FAIR-SIZED GERMAN POCKETS REMAINED TO BE MOPPED UP SOUTHEAST OF FALAISE. BRITISH TANKS AND INFANTRY DRIVING EAST FROM PUTANCES CAPTURED SENTILLY IN A SIX-MILE ADVANCE OVERNIGHT AND REACHED THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN HIGHWAY SOUTH OF OCCAGNES. FARTHER NORTH ALONG THE ROAD, CUT OFF FROM ALL SIDES, THE DOOMED NAZI GARRISON AT PIERRE FITTE CONTINUED ITS SUICIDAL STAND, APPARENTLY TRYING TO KEEP OPEN THE ESCAPE GAP NOW LESS THAN TWO MILES WIDE, WHICH LEADS ONLY INTO THE BIGGER TRAP TO THE NORTHEAST.

A STAFF OFFICER SAID THAT "DRIBS AND DRABS" OF REINFORCEMENTS FROM THE SEINE ARE ARRIVING TO BOLSTER THE DAZED AND EXHAUSTED REMNANTS OF VON KLUGE'S ARMY, CHIEFLY SS TROOPS WHO ESCAPED FROM THE HELL OF NORMANDY'S CAULDRON AND NOW ARE RETREATING IN A NORTHEASTERLY DIRECTION.

MOSCOW, AUG 20-(AP)-THE RED ARMY SCORED IMPORTANT BUT HARD-FOUGHT SUCCESSES ON TWO OF THE MOST VITAL SECTORS OF THE EASTERN FRONT TODAY, WIPING OUT THREE GERMAN DIVISIONS SURROUNDED NORTH OF SANDOMIERZ, WEST OF THE VISTULA, AND IMPROVING THEIR POSITION TO THE NORTHEAST AS WELL AS EAST OF WARSAW.

UP TO WESTERN LATVIA WHERE THE GERMANS ARE TRYING TO PULL OFF A DRIVE INTO THE RUSSIANS' RIGHT FLANK--A MANEUVER THAT FAILED MISERABLY NORTHEAST OF WARSAW TWO WEEKS AGO--THEY GAINED SOME GROUND.

THE BIG THING TONIGHT HOWEVER WAS DESTRUCTION OF 250 GERMAN TANKS AND THE BETTERING OF THE SITUATION WEST OF THE VISTULA AND OUTSIDE THE POLISH CAPITAL.

ANNIHILATION OF THE THREE DIVISIONS NORTH OF SANDOMIERZ IN AN OPERATION DURING WHICH MOST OF THE GERMANS WERE KILLED RELEASED FIELD MARSHAL IVAN S. KNOEV'S FIRST UKRAINIAN ARMY FOR NEW OPERATIONS.

HITLER CALLED THE BRIDGEHEAD WEST OF THE VISTULA "A PISTOL POINTED AT THE GERMAN EMPIRE" AS HE EXHORTED HIS TROOPS TO DEFEND IT TO THE BITTER END AND THOSE BATTLING IN THIS REGION KNOW THEY ARE BATTLING FOR THE APPROACHES TO THE REICH.

THE NEXT FEW DAYS COULD DETERMINE MUCH THE COURSE OF THE RUSSIAN GERMAN WAR IN THIS AREA.

NORTHWARD IN THE BALTIC STATES THE RED ARMY CAPTURED 220 POINTS, EDGED CLOSER TO RIGA AND GOT WITHIN EIGHT MILES OF TARTU, COMMUNICATIONS CENTER IN ESTONIA JUST WEST OF LAKE PEIPUS.

EAST OF WARSAW THE SITUATION LOOKED BETTER THAN AT ANY TIME FOR A WEEK.

NEW YORK, AUG 20-(AP)-MEMBERS OF THE VAUNTED GERMAN GESTAPO WERE PICTURED AS TERROR-STRICKEN MEN CRINGING WITH FEAR AFTER THEIR CAPTURE BY CONQUERING MAQUIS FORCES IN EASTERN FRANCE, IN A REPORT TONIGHT BY CBS CORRESPONDENT HOWARD K. SMITH.

IN A DISPATCH RELAYED TO NEW YORK BY WAY OF SWITZERLAND, SMITH SAID HE AND HIS WIFE HAD JUST COMPLETED "A FOUR DAY TOUR OF CONQUEST WITH THE FRENCH PEOPLE'S OWN ARMY OF LIBERATION" BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES.

DESCRIBING A COURTYARD SCENE IN ANNECY, WHERE THE MAQUIS HAD HERDED TOGETHER EIGHT OF THE GESTAPO, SMITH SAID ONE OF THE NAZIS FELL TO

HIS KNEES "AND BEGGED MY WIFE TO SAVE HIM."
"THEY CRINGED WITH FEAR," SMITH SAID. "THEY DISTINCTLY SHUDDERED AT OUR APPROACH. AT FIRST THEIR LIPS SHOOK SO THEY COULD HARDLY SPEAK.
"AFTER WE TALKED TO THEM IN GERMAN--NONE SPOKE FRENCH--THEY FLUNG THEMSELVES ON OUR SHOULDERS AND WEPT LIKE CHILDREN. WE WERE OVERWHELMED WITH EXPLANATIONS. THE EXPLANATIONS WERE HARD TO TAKE FOR WE HAD MET A HALF DOZEN FRENCHMEN WHO STILL BORE MARKS OF THE TORTURES BY HESE MEN."
SMITH SAID THE GERMANS INSISTED THEY HAD NOT WANTED TO BE GESTAPO MEN, BUT HAD BEEN CONSCRIPTED. THEY BLAMED THE HIGH OFFICERS OF THE SS (ELITE GUARD).

" ONE OF THEM FELL TO HIS KNEES AND BEGGED MY WIFE TO SAVE HIM," SMITH WROTE." HE SAID HE WAS SURE HE WOULD BE SHOT. ANOTHER BEGGED ME TO GET HIM PERMISSION TO JOIN THE MAQUIS, DECLARING THAT HE WANTED TO ~~XXXX~~ DIE FIGHTING AGAINST HITLER!"

APR 21 1942

SMITH SAID A FRENCH MAJOR, HEAD OF THE PARTISAN SECRET SERVICE, DREW UP THE ARTICLES OF CAPITULATION OF ANNECY. THE CONDITIONS GRANTED TO THE GERMANS WERE THAT THE LIVES OF SOLDIERS OF THE REGULAR GERMAN ARMY WOULD BE SPARED AND THAT THE WEHRMACHT WOULD NOT BE HELD RESPONSIBL FOR WAR CRIMES COMMITTED BY GESTAPO TROOPS.

Americans Circle Paris; Montgomery Says 'End of War Is in Sight'

APR 22 1944

BRIDGEHEADS ARE MADE IN FONTAINEBLEAU AREA AND NORTH AT MANTES

End Of War Is In Sight, General Montgomery Declares—Uprising Reported In Capital. De Gaulle Arrives In Cherbourg

APR 22 1944

JAMES M. LONG

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 21 (AP)—American troops were enveloping revolt-torn Paris tonight with armor which passed over the Seine both northwest and southeast of the city and reached toward the rocket coast and the Marne battlefields of the first World War.

"The end of the war is in sight," declared General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Allied field commander.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's tank columns crossed the Seine in the area of Fontainebleau, 35 miles southeast of Paris, and were in position to wheel about the capital against resistance which last was reported weak.

Fighting On Bridgehead

Heavy fighting raged on the bridgeheads planted on the east bank of the Seine at Mantes, 2 miles northwest of Paris, indicating that the German 15th Army—last great enemy force still in France—already had been brought to battle. This army is the guardian of the rocket coast now only 90 miles north of the bridgehead.

[The Berlin radio said the Americans enlarged this bridgehead "in small measure" and were attacking with strong forces "continuously strengthened by bringing up new troops."]

The enemy also fought back fiercely before Vernon, 15 miles northwest of Mantes, where Patton's tanks cruising along the Seine's west bank are running into the Germans falling back from Normandy. The enemy must stand here or risk having his Seine approaches lopped off.

Little Resistance Met

In the area of Versailles, western gate of Paris, and along a new Allied front of 20 miles southeast of the capital, the resistance was negligible, underscoring Montgomery's message to his troops today that their victory in northern France was "definite, complete and decisive."

The arrival of Gen. Charles de Gaulle at Cherbourg indicated that the fall of Paris itself could not be long delayed.

American patrols which reached Corbeil, Melun and Fontainebleau, 15, 25 and 35 miles southeast of Paris, yesterday, are now in position to wheel northeast around Paris, strike for the German frontier, or smash east and sever all German communications to southern France.

Near Old Battlegrounds

The Amricans here were only 55 miles southeast of Belleau Wood, where Americans halted the Germans in the second Battle of the Marne in June, 1918, and less than 30 miles from the area of the first Battle of the Marne, where the French and British checked the German drive in September, 1914—a drive which had carried to within 17 miles of Paris.

Vanguards before Paris were in the vicinity of Versailles, ten miles from the heart of Paris.

They met travelers from Paris, some on bicycles, who said that once more the tricolor flew over parts of the capital along with Allied flags for the first time since the Germans marched in four years ago.

Street Fights Reported

Patriot forces, armed with supplies dropped from Allied bombers, were battling the Germans in the streets. German machine guns were mowing down demonstrators, the travelers reported.

[DNB, the German news agency, said American reconnaissance forces were in the Paris suburbs.]

Elements of 18 divisions of the German Seventh Army, fighting stubborn rear-guard actions, were heading east from the Argentan disaster toward the Seine and were crossing the broad river under cover of bad weather, which stayed Allied air blows.

The proportions of the Argentan disaster were growing at the hour, with 25,000 Germans already captured. The British alone by midday took 2,000, bringing the 24-hour bag of prisoners to 10,000.

Among those taken yesterday were Generals Elfeidt, commander [illegible] blockhouses, pillboxes or other military barriers. I had an eerie feeling driving past forests and ravines which offered natural positions for German emplacements and yet contained no sign of defense.

"Caught Them Off Balance"

"I was supervising the movement of our motor columns across the bridge and so far as I could tell there wasn't a shot fired," said Capt. Edward P. Ludington, of Skaneateles, N. Y. "We really caught them off balance this time."

During the day 25 German tanks tried to cross the Seine farther west in an attempt to escape the vast Allied pocket, but they lacked engineering equipment for the task.

Lieut. Warren Hall, of Johnstown, Pa., engineering officer, told how the Americans surprised the Germans by crossing the Seine several miles from the point where the Germans had set up static defenses.

"First we took the doughboys over in our rubber assault boats," he said. "Each held a dozen infantrymen and three combat engineers who had to bring the boats back.

One Burst Of Fire

"There was only one burst of fire from downstream during the whole operation—and nobody was hurt. The enemy was eating breakfast on a hill, and, as they ate, our advanced infantry surrounded them and opened fire. Only one gun was manned by them and its crew ran away.

"We killed or captured all who didn't surrender or get away by bicycle or motor car. They didn't have a chance once we opened up on them.

One of our boys killed six of them running across a field, with eight shots from his rifle. Later he himself was shot through the neck with a tracer bullet. You could see daylight through it—but he is going to come out all right."

Engineers Build Bridge

"Yes, and he was the calmest guy on the river," said Private John Thompson, of Passaic, N. J.

The bridge was built by combat engineers under the direction of Lieut. Col. Theodore Jakim, of Chicago.

"The amazing thing about the bridgehead was that it was established so fast and without loss," said Lieutenant Colonel Dohrmann.

"We got behind them at the start. We passed a bunch of their machine-gun posts during the first night advance and the next morning found that they had pulled out.

German Planes Active

"There is no doubt they had no intention we should get across. But by coming across at night where they weren't expecting us we caught them completely off guard—and now it is too late for them to do anything about it."

German aircraft were active over the Seine river front during the day.

Montgomery Calls Nazi Defeat 'Definite, Complete, Decisive'

APR 21 1944

In Message to Troops He Says Normandy Disaster Robs Foe of Striking Power, Calls on Army to 'Finish Off the Business in Record Time'

By The Associated Press

WITH BRITISH TROOPS IN FRANCE, Aug. 21.—General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery told his troops tonight: "The end of the war is in sight. Let us finish off the business in record time."

Montgomery's special message said the German armies in northwest France had suffered a decisive defeat, and "there will be many surprises in store for the fleeing remnants."

The text of the message follows:

"On Aug. 11 I spoke to officers and men of the Allied armies in northwest France. I said we must 'write off' the powerful German force that was causing us so much trouble. We must finish with it once and for all and so hasten the end of the war. And today, ten days later, it has been done.

"The German armies in northwest France have suffered a decisive defeat. The destruction of enemy personnel and equipment in and about the so-called Normandy pocket has been terrific. And it is still going on. Any enemy units that manage to get away still will not be in fit condition to fight again for months. There are still many surprises in store for the fleeing remnants.

"The victory has been definite, complete and decisive.

"As soldiers we all want to pay our tribute to the Allied air forces. I doubt if ever in the history of war air forces have had such opportunities or have taken such good advantage of them. The brave and brilliant work of the pilots has aroused our greatest admiration. Without their support we soldiers could have achieved no success.

"Where all have done well, it is difficult to single out any for special praise.

"As a British general, I can speak for all the soldiers of the empire and can express our highest admiration for the brave fighting qualities of the American Army in the opening stages of the 'breakin' battle on July 25 and the following days. And we followed with tremendous enthusiasm their great achievements during the wheel of the right flank almost to the gates of Paris. We never want to fight alongside better soldiers.

"As Allied commander and the over-all commander of land forces under General Eisenhower, I can praise the fighting qualities and tenacity in battle of British, Canadian and Polish troops on the eastern flank. They fought the enemy relentlessly and took a heavy toll of him during the whole great battle.

Gives Motto for Allies

"But surely it matters little who did this or that. All that matters is that it was well and truly done by the whole Allied team.

"The proper motto of the Allies should be: 'One for all and all for one.' And that is our motto.

"I want to thank you all for the way you responded to the call.

"The victory in northwest France south of the Seine marks the beginning of the end of German military domination of France. Much still remains to be done but it will now be done the more easily.

"And what is next? Having brought disaster to German forces in northwest France, we must now complete the destruction of such of his forces as are available to be destroyed. After knowing what has happened to their armies in northwest France, it is unlikely that these will now come to us, so we will go to them.

"'The Lord, mighty in battle, has given us victory.

Yanks Cross Seine in 2 Places

Americans Storm Into Versailles Against Slight Resistance—Move Toward Battlefields of World War I.

Aug 22 1944

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—American Third Army tanks have hurtled the Seine both above and below Paris and have stormed into the area of the western suburb of Versailles where virtually no resistance was met.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, directing the ground sweep which threatened to isolate the French capital and to destroy further the German forces in northwestern France, declared the enemy had suffered a "definite, complete and decisive" defeat and that the war's end was "in sight."

Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's armor, in strokes rapidly cutting Paris communications with southern France and the channel coast, crossed the Seine in the Fontainebleau area thirty-five miles southeast of the capital and established a strong bridgehead across the river near Mantes, twenty-five miles northwest of the capital.

The northern thrust, threatening the remainder of the German Seventh and Fifteenth armies below the Seine and along the rocket coast, was meeting heavy resistance, however, as Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge sensed his peril.

Paris Already Flying Flags.

Gen. Patton's forces were deployed from the Fontainebleau area to Melun and Corbeil, fifteen miles southwest of Paris, where they might sweep on a twenty-mile front toward Soissons, Reims and the Marne battlegrounds of the first world war.

Within Paris itself refugees escaping into American lines said there was a rising wave of violence as French underground forces were revolting.

Allied flags were reported already flying over parts of the capital as the resistance forces anticipated the hour of liberation.

Already, it was announced that Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army in its sweep to Paris had captured 49,650 Germans, killed 11,025 and wounded 48,900—a total of 109,575.

Roger D. Greene, an Associated Press correspondent on the British front in France, said that an estimated 25,000 German prisoners had been captured in the Normandy bulge battle around the Falaise-Argentan gap by 6:45 P. M. tonight. The destruction of the German Seventh Army was accelerated today as Allied armies—American, British and Canadian—swept east toward the Seine on a wide front. Lieut.-Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey's British Second Army alone took 2,000 more prisoners up to noon today, boosting its total to 10,000 in the pocket.

Now Gen. Patton's invasion of the territory north of the Seine at Mantes threatened new destruction of Germans caught in a seventy-five-mile-long corner below the bridgeless river.

"The end of the war is in sight. Let us finish off the business in record time," Gen. Montgomery declared in his message in which he said there were fresh surprises in store for the enemy.

At least 10,000 men from the combat elements of possibly eighteen enemy divisions were caught in a succession of pockets west and east of Falaise and the total bag of German killed and captured was likely to total 36,000—equal to the number captured in the Cotentin Peninsula.

While the Germans made wild efforts to break out of the original pocket, now reduced to an area about six by ten miles, British and Americans were cutting it to pieces. Occagnes, Sentilly, Bailleul and Goulet, all about three miles north of Argentan, were captured in these slashes.

Canadians Cross Touques.

The Canadians were busily engaged in punching a hole in the Seine corner to the east where new pockets might be carved out. They crossed the Touques River in a two-mile advance just south of Uisieux.

The Germans made two violent efforts to break out of the Falaise traps, one last night and the other yesterday, field dispatches reported.

70 Nazi Tanks Attack.

Using about seventy tanks scraped up from the elements of five divisions, the Germans attacked from the westernmost pocket below Falaise in an all-night battle last night, with the result still obscure today. Farther east, below Chambois, rocket-spitting Typhoons and Canadian troops broke up an attack by thirty tanks attempting to force a way out of the second trap yesterday. Thirty-three tanks were reported destroyed in the two suicide lunges.

Gunners poured fire over open sights into the pockets. Field guns, anti-tank guns and even anti-aircraft guns blasted shells into milling masses of Germans. A British staff officer was quoted as saying of the night breakout attempt: "We do not know yet how many Germans got out, but we know they suffered severe losses."

More than 7,500 trapped Germans were captured yesterday—2,200 on the British front alone. Supreme Headquarters officially announced the capture of Argentan, on the southern edge of the now-closed escape gap of the original Normandy pocket.

On the left flank of the Allied offensive, which is forcing Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's forces back upon the Seine, British troops pushing along the coast toward Trouville and Le Havre drove deeper into Cabourg's outskirts. Cabourg is about twenty-five miles from the mouth of the Seine.

Bad Weather Aids Foe.

Taking advantage of bad weather, the Germans are trying to flee across the Seine toward Dieppe and the Pas De Calais along four crossings between Elbeuf, at the sea, thirty-five air-line miles away. R. A. F. Mosquitoes attacked their crossing attempts in that area last night.

The United States Ninth Air Force and the British Second Tactical Air Force, operating over the Allied left flank in the area from Pernay and Lisieux to the Seine, destroyed sixty-two tanks and 214 other vehicles. This did not include the destruction in the original Falaise-Argentan pocket, which now is being handled entirely by Allied artillery fire as it is too small and broken up for air force operation.

Along the coast the British Navy pitched in to help the land operations when it engaged long troublesome batteries at Houlgate and Benerville which had been firing on the Canadians' northern flank. Three hits were scored on the batteries and they appeared neutralized for the moment by fire of H. M. S. Erebus.

HENDAYE BRIDGE SEIZED BY FRENCH

Aug 22 1944

Entire Pyrenees Frontier Pass Under Control Of F. F. I.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 21 (AP)—Uniformed officers of the French army took possession of the International Bridge at Hendaye at 5.30 P. M. today in the name of the French Committee of National Liberation, thus completing French occupation of the entire Pyrenees frontier.

A small group of officials applauded when the French Tricolor was hoisted over the frontier post for the first time since 1940.

Two French officers, flown to Spain from Algiers, and Ferdinand Hirigoyen, for 12 years Mayor of Biarritz until ousted by the Vichy Government in 1942, crossed the bridge into France just as the rumble of exploding German munition dumps to the north shook the structure.

German Attache Nearly Caught

Hirigoyen, who escaped to Spain a month ago when the Germans learned of his aid to the underground, walked to the flagpost beside the customs shed and hoisted a large French flag.

A few minutes before the French party crossed the bridge the German military attache at Madrid, Col. Wilhem Otzen, had crossed returning to Spain from a farewell luncheon at St. Jean de Luz with the German general commanding the region.

Five minutes after the arrival of the French the German consul at San Sebastian, Spain, drove up to the customs gate intending to cross. He was turned back by the Spanish guard with the news that the frontier now was occupied by the French.

Nazis Quit Bayonne

Reports reaching here said the last German troops sped northward from Bayonne late today toward the Bordeaux region, where an armored column was said to be forming with the intention of attempting to fight a way through to Germany.

French volunteers armed with German weapons pursued Nazi forces north toward Bordeaux.

Two hours after the French took possession they had 30 German prisoners, with hundreds more waiting to surrender.

Two Trucks Of Nazis Give Up

Two truckloads of heavily armed German troops appeared on the frontier highway coming from Nehobia to Hendaye and headed toward Capt. Pierre D'Hauverne, who was standing alone in the highway awaiting what he believed would be certain death.

The German truck came to a halt before the lone representative of the Algiers Committee and handed over 30 submachine guns, rifles and small arms, saying: "All we want to do is surrender."

Paris Set To Free Self

London, Aug. 21 (AP)—French Forces of the Interior now are operating inside Paris, the Algiers radio announced today, and the capital "is liberating itself" from the Nazis who, during the day, reported "violent battles" within the city.

As the French took up the task of ridding Paris of the Germans the Allies gave details of arms deliveries to the F. F. I. deep within France by means of big planes both before and after the invasion.

The Allied announcement said the Americans by day and the British by night delivered thousands of tons of supplies to the French, supplies the Partisans now are using in their uprising against the Germans.

Koenig Named Paris Governor

Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, leader of the F. F. I., who has been appointed military governor of Paris by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, said in taking over his command "the hour of liberation is near" and appealed to the population to "show the greatest qualities of self-imposed discipline so that order may be maintained in the capital."

A DNB broadcast said the fighting in Paris was led by "French civilians and terrorists sent in by the Allies," but the Allied-sponsored Algiers radio announced "French Forces of the Interior have started operations in inside Paris. Paris is liberating itself."

Third Of France Free

Grounds for German disquiet was contained in the communique of General Koenig which said that the whole of Haute Savoie had been liberated and that Lyon was almost completely under control of the F. F. I.

"All roads leading to Italy are guarded by the F. F. I. and in the south all roads and railways used by the enemy are now unusable," the communique announced. It said there had been wholesale surrenders of Vichy militia forces and Vichy policemen in dozens of towns were going over to the Maquis.

General Koenig declared one third of France now was controlled by the Maquis. The Spanish border report that an American motorized column had passed through Angouleme, nearly half the distance from the Loire to the Spanish border was indicative of the state of Nazi disorganization.

Berlin Reports Tanks in Melee In Paris Area

Aug 22 1944

Radio Says Situation in France Is Tense; D. N. B. Strikes Disaster Note

LONDON, Aug. 21 (AP).—The German news agency Transocean reported today "a wild, slashing melee of American and German tanks and reconnaissance units in the Paris area."

Transocean's radio commentator, Captain Ludwig Sertorius, called the situation in northwestern France "tense" and said the Allies were trying to herd the German 7th Army north of the Seine and "engulf it on the northern bank of the river in a far-flung encirclement."

In the south, he said, "There is no longer any doubt that the Allies intend to break through into the Rhone Valley, historic highroad of invasions aimed at the Rhineland."

D. N. B. struck a disaster keynote with, "The number of men and machines which the Allies are launching against us is so crushing that even the most heroic German soldier is staggered."

But in spite of all this, the Germans should "not keep looking nervously at the map of France," said D. N. B. commentator Rudolf Semmler.

"The fact that we are at present more or less standing where we were four years ago loses much of its depressing character if we remember that we shall soon have means at our disposal to alter the whole character of the war," said Semmler.

Bridgehead Across The Seine Caught Germans By Surprise

By HAROLD V. BOYLE

With American Forces North of the Seine River, Aug. 21 (AP)—American troops in an operation which caught the Germans completely by surprise have established and solidified a bridgehead across the Seine river 25 miles northwest of Paris.

The first troops crossed by ferry and assault boats Saturday night in the vicinity of Mantes and Glassicourt and now are so firmly established that they have no fear of a counterattack.

"We are all set and waiting for them—with plenty of that artillery they met before," said Lieut. Col. A. C. Dohrmann, of Seward, Neb., who said that in the first hours of the attack across the river American infantry outflanked and captured eight German 88-mm. guns overlooking Mantes and Glassicourt.

Troops Brought Up

Realizing that this spearhead threatened the retreat of all their elements which they had been able to ferry across the bridgeless Seine, the Germans began to move in troops, but American artillery immediately took them under fire.

One German company was caught by a heavy barrage as it was trying to move in from the east to strengthen the garrison in Limay, a small village across the Seine, northeast of Mantes.

"One German who gave up as soon as he could find somebody to take him prisoner said we had destroyed 75 per cent. of his company," said Sergt. Leon Moss, of Canton, Ill.

This was subsequently confirmed by higher officers.

Surprised At Breakfast

Capture of the German 88 guns was accomplished by troops who surprised German crews eating breakfast Sunday morning and shot up or captured all except a few who fled on bicycles and in civilian automobiles.

The crossing of the Seine was made on the largest bridge of its type constructed by the American Army in France during this war. It was completed six hours from the time the first pontoon was floated.

The first treadway bridge thrown across by combat engineers was built in rain and midnight blackness after infantry troops had crossed the river in rubber assault boats.

I made a tour of our bridgehead across the Seine this afternoon and failed to see a single German. The enemy had not had time to build of the 84th Corps; Badinsky, commander of the 276th Infantry Division, and Menni, commander of the 84th Infantry Division. Three complete field hospitals also were captured.

At least 10,000 more were believed still inside the pocket, now about six miles deep and ten miles wide, and field guns, anti-tank and high-velocity anti-aircraft guns fired into the trap at point-blank range.

While the American First Army, the Canadian First and the British Second completed the liquidation of these positions, powerful elements of these forces were herding the Germans toward the Seine.

British Gain At Cabourg

The British on the coast fought deeper into the town of Cabourg, 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine and 75 miles northwest of Vernon, indicating to what extent this second envelopment of the Seventh Army had been constricted.

British units of the Canadian army smashed across the Touques river, only two miles south of the enemy roadhead of Lisieux and 18 miles in from the sea, threatening to engulf all German positions along the Normandy coast from Cabourg to the Seine with one more pincers.

At the point of crossing below Lisieux the British were 33 miles from the Seine.

Navy Supports Troops

The British navy supported land operations, pouring salvos into Houlgate and Benerville and silencing three batteries which had been pounding the Canadians' northern flank.

The Germans were getting across the Seine by barge, by pontoon, by ferry and by swimming and heading north toward Dieppe and the rocket bases of Pas de Calais despite night-long bombing of the crossings.

Most of the crossings apparently were being made along the Seine from Elbeue, whence the Seine twists and turns northwest to the Atlantic, 35 airline miles away.

In spite of yesterday's inclement weather, the retreating Germans lost 62 more tanks and 214 other vehicles yesterday from Allied air attacks.

Other Towns Captured

British and American forces, cutting up the Argentan pocket, wiped out the last resistance in Argentan itself and captured Occagnes, Sentilly, Bailleul and Goulet, all about three miles north of Argentan.

Some Germans—their number undetermined—squeezed out of the pocket last night at the height of a second attempt to smash the gap on the east from positions north of Argentan.

The first breakout attempt came yesterday. The Germans threw 30 tanks into the battle along a mile-wide front between Trun and Chambois. But this was broken up by Canadian artillery and rocket-firing Typhoons.

Last night the Germans made a more serious attempt, employing about 70 tanks, and striking in concert from both inside and outside of the pocket.

Tank Attack Launched

Field Marshal General Guenther von Kluge first threw in reinforcements to keep the Americans on the south from pinching off his salient east of the pocket.

Then tanks from the outside attacked Allied positions, and enemy forces, which had hidden out in the forest of Gouffern north of Argentan, went into action.

During the battle and under cover of night some of the pocketed forces slipped through, a British staff officer said, but at fearful cost. When the sun came up, 33 knocked-out enemy tanks sprawled on the battlefield.

Late reports from this front said confused fighting still raged, but it was believed that few enemy troops and tanks managed to get out.

Meanwhile, the enemy hideout in the forest of Gouffern was under heavy attack. Le Bourg-St. Leonard, at the southeast tip of the woods, was captured. British infantry and tanks in a five-mile advance from around Chambois drove to within two miles of Gace, which is 14 miles east of Argentan.

It was announced that in the 21-day sweep by Patton which hauled up before Paris a total of 109,573 Germans were knocked out of action—11,025 killed, 49,650 captured and 48,900 wounded.

Shelled by Warships.

The official announcement failed to give any indication of the nature of the action within the city, but frontline dispatches said that Allied warships shelled the harbor defenses with a thunderous bombardment all day yesterday.

The French entered the suburbs of Les Quatre Chemins, Les Routes and Valbourdin and clamped a siege-like ring around the city which left only the coastal road open for Nazi escape.

They occupied Cuges-Les-Pins and Le Beausset, fourteen and six miles northwest of the city, cutting the main road, No. 8, and virtually severing Toulon's communications with Marseille.

The French also drew tighter their net to the east of Toulon where German resistance had been toughest. About a mile from Hyeres, naval forces joined ground troops in smashing and capturing the Hotel de Golf, which the Nazis had converted into a strongpoint. Mont Redon also was captured after heavy fighting. The Nazi garrison in Hyeres, eight and a half miles from Toulon, was almost cut off.

To the northwest in the rapidly maturing drive toward the Rhone River, American troops joined French Maquis in finally overwhelming the surrounded German garrison at Pertuis, twenty-six miles north of Marseille.

Move on Marseille.

Continuing to brush aside resistance in a direct attack on Marseille itself, Allied troops approached Aubagne, nine miles east of the city.

Another of Major-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's American columns charged on several miles to the northeast of Aix, key junction of seven highways fifteen miles north of Marseille. Another unit was last reported in the outskirts of Aix and today possibly had completed occupation of that town.

The eastern sector of the bridgehead facing toward Cannes and the Italian frontier was reported mostly stable, without reference to new gains.

The count of prisoners passed the 14,000 mark and more were coming in hourly. Among the newest captives were Major-Gen. Hans Schubert and his entire staff of six officers and thirty men. Gen. Schubert, chief of a district liaison staff, was described as an ardent Nazi. Until June, he was chief administrative officer for southwest France with headquarters at Toulouse, and had established a reputation for "extreme cruelty," Gen. Patton's headquarters said.

With the Allies in the outskirts of Aix-en-Provence, the Germans had lost all hope of effective use of the network of highways north of Marseille and for withdrawal toward Avignon. To escape the closing trap, they could hope only to pull out from Marseille along two routes west and northwest to Arle, then northward up the Rhone Valley.

An Allied spokesman, commenting on the situation at Toulon, said: "The enemy has given evidence of being determined to defend it stubbornly." The villages of Meounes, Les Montrieux and Sollies-Toucas to the northeast have been occupied.

Allied medium, light and fighter bombers methodically destroyed enemy gun positions, railway rolling stock and bridges behind the battle lines. Five locomotives, 36 motor vehicles, 20 railcars and 2 barges were included in yesterday's toll.

Allied Cruisers Shell Bayonne, Foe Reported Abandoning Port

By The Associated Press

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 21.—Three Allied light cruisers shelled German defenses at Bayonne, France, before dawn today for more than an hour, and after they departed loud explosions could be heard as the Germans apparently proceeded to destroy their remaining fortifications there.

The German fortress wall south of Bayonne is reported no longer to exist. The Germans were said to have withdrawn from there last night, leaving their defense works in ruins.

The shelling of Bayonne, which is only eighteen miles from Irun, took place after the cruisers had patrolled the coast south of Bordeaux in an evident attempt to feel out the German defenses. Only light fire was drawn from German batteries near Bayonne.

A fog lifted as the cruisers approached and their progress was plainly visible from the Spanish coast. They shelled the coastline methodically, and from splashes in the water it was evident that the Germans were returning the fire. No hits by the German guns were observed.

Meanwhile, an American motorized column was reported 165 miles northwest of Bayonne and about 130 miles south of Nantes [which is on the Loire River], after passing through Angouleme, on a route leading to the Spanish border, without encountering any enemy resistance. The Americans were said in border reports to have received a joyous welcome.

French Troops Battle In Streets of Toulon

U. S. Infantrymen Push 50 Miles Inland as South Invasion Gains.

PACE OF ADVANCE IS SWIFT

Other American Forces Are Only Nine Miles From Marseille—Highway Hub Seized.

Rome, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—French troops have cracked into the western and northern sections of the great naval base of Toulon on the Mediterranean coast, the Allied command announced tonight.

The invasion of Southern France continued to progress at an amazing rate. American infantrymen stabbed 50 miles inland, seizing the highway center of Valensole, north of Toulon, and fanned out into the Asse River valley to the north. At Valensole the Americans were a third of the way to Lyon, populous control point on the Rhone River.

Other troops of the Seventh Army were only about nine miles from Marseille, France's second city.

French forces fought their way into Toulon at dusk yesterday, it was announced, after winning domination of Mont Faron, the 2,000-foot peak from which Napoleon shelled British and French republicans out of the city early in his career.

YANK FORCES ONE THIRD OF WAY TO LYON

Spread Out In Southern France In Inland Drive For Rhone Valley

Rome, Aug. 21 (AP)—French troops have fought into Toulon, France's Mediterranean naval base, and other Allied forces are sweeping down a broad highway within nine miles of Marseille, France's second city. Allied headquarters announced tonight.

[Reports in London placed Allied spearheads about six miles east of Marseille and said the invasion was so far ahead of the timetable that field commanders were improvising strategy as they go along.]

Front advices said the French troops which crashed into Toulon's northern and western sections at dusk yesterday were engaged in mopping up pockets of German resistance within the naval stronghold, where the French fleet was scuttled in 1942.

Third Of Way To Lyon

At the same time a swift American infantry column, lancing due north from Toulon, has enveloped the city of Valensole, 50 miles inland and approximately a third of the way to Lyon, and sent scouting columns fanning out into the Asse river valley, the Allied announcement said.

American troops and French Patriot forces which surrounded a German garrison in Pertuis, 41 miles north of Marseille, captured that town. The total of Nazi prisoners taken in the invasion of southern France swelled to more than 14,000.

The momentum of the French drive on Toulon carried Maj. Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny's troops west of the naval base. They captured the towns of Le Beausset and Cuges-les-Pins on Highway No. 8, main road to Marseille, and only four miles from the secondary coastal highway which is the last escape route for the German garrison of Toulon.

Enter 3 Toulon Sections

The French entered Toulon through Les Quatre Chemins, Les Routes and Valbourdin sections after establishing a ring around the eastern, northern and northwestern outskirts.

Other Allied troops were reported approaching Aubagne, nine miles east of Marseille, at nightfall yesterday.

French forces also made progress along the coast east of Toulon, where the Nazis had been offering their stiffest resistance. Naval forces joined ground troops in capturing Mont Redon and the Hotel de Golf, about a mile from Hyeres, which the enemy had made into a strong point.

Preceding their smash into Toulon the French gained dominance of the 2,000-foot Mont Faron just north of the city.

Head For Rhone Valley

American armored and infantry columns, leaving the French to deal with Toulon, spread out in a many-pronged drive through the Durance Valley north of Marseille and headed for the great Rhone Valley against crumbling enemy resistance. One Yank unit was in the outskirts of Aix-en-Provence, key road junction 15 miles north of Marseille.

American and French battleships stood off the coast and fired hundreds of big shells into German shore batteries between the two big ports, capture of which would give the Allies two badly needed landing points for essential material and supplies.

The strength of the German force holding Toulon was not known, but the resistance indicated the naval base was heavily garrisoned.

By-Pass Strong Points

As Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Americans drove through the Durance Valley they exploited the policy of by-passing strong pockets of enemy resistance and isolating them to be mopped up later. Elements which swept past Pertuis were no more than 35 miles from the Rhone Valley, main pathway to Lyon and a possible eventual juncture with Allied forces in northern France.

The swiftness with which the Allies had fanned out north of Toulon and Marsaille had robbed the Germans of most of the important roads.

The continued speed of the Allied operation was attributed in part to the almost complete absence of the Nazi air force, which was reported to have fewer than 70 bombers in all southern France.

While Allied transport was able to speed along the highways with almost no interference, anything that moved by daylight in enemy territory came under a terrific blasting by Allied warplanes, which were flying an average of 1,000 sorties every 24 hours. Five locomotives, 36 motor vehicles, 20 rail cars and two barges were included in yesterday's toll.

General And Staff Taken

Among the newest captives were Maj. Gen. Hans Schubert and his entire staff of six officers and 30 men. Until last June Schubert was chief administrative officer for southwest France, with headquarters at Toulouse, and established a reputation for "extreme cruelty," Allied headquarters announced. He was described as an ardent Nazi.

A delayed dispatch from Sid Feder, Associated Press correspondent, said he had returned from a 120-mile round trip through territory supposedly held by the Germans west of the Durance river and north of Marseille without encountering any enemy troops.

"Indications point to the fact that, except for scattered spots the Nazis have pulled out of this particular area," Feder reported. He said his scouting party was given a joyful welcome in dozens of villages. The Durance river, he said, was mostly dried up and offered no obstacle to the advancing Allies.

Toulouse Seen Taken by Maquis

AUG 23 1944

Algiers Also Reports Patriots Fight Nazis in Marseille—Third of France Free.

London, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The Algiers radio said today that on Sunday the Maquis captured Toulouse, sixth largest city of France.

Toulouse (population: 213,200) is in southwest France, sixty miles north of the Spanish border. Frequent neutral reports have told of German withdrawals from that area.

Another Algiers radio report said French Forces of the Interior were fighting German troops in the streets of Marseille, second city of France, which lies close to American Seventh Army advance units.

French patriots now control one-third of France comprising eight departments, says Gen. Joseph Koenig, commander of the F. F. I. In a communique broadcast by the Algiers radio, Gen. Koenig said that during the week ended August 19, French patriots killed 1,821 Germans, wounded 415 and captured 2,265, suffering only slight losses themselves.

Nazis Quit Border Area.

Reports relayed here through Port Bou, Spain, said the Maquis controlled the entire Pyrenees region of southwestern France from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean. All German forces just north of the Spanish border have withdrawn northward and French patriots have appointed new civil administrators.

A dispatch from Irun, Spain, said the last German forces at Hendaye, just across the border in France, have pulled out and only regular French customs men guarded the frontier.

[The Brazzaville radio said in a broadcast reported yesterday by NBC that Maquis forces were in control of Vichy. The broadcast added that Gestapo agents had moved from Vichy and Paris to Nancy.]

French-Swiss border reports said Pierre Laval and other Vichy officials had arrived at Belfort, near both Switzerland and Germany, and that Laval had established headquarters in a chateau ten miles outside Belfort.

Marshal Petain's whereabouts was a mystery. A frontier dispatch to the London Daily Mail said he was believed still at Vichy, "Waiting at the Pavillon de Sevigne to hand over his powers to those who will be called upon to represent the new France." The Ankara radio said Petain was expected at Belfort.

U. S. Airmen Drop Arms.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—American heavy bombers have dropped "thousands of tons of arms, ammunition and other supplies" to French Forces of the Interior, the Eighth Air Force announced today.

"On several occasions, hundreds of heavy bombers of the United States Eighth Air Force have dropped thousands of tons of supplies in containers in daylight by parachute to the Maquis deep in France," the announcement said, "Bastille Day, July 14, witnessed one of these large-scale missions."

The R. A. F. has carried out hundreds of similar missions, it was announced.

F. F. I. Surround Grenoble.

Five thousand Germans are reported to have been surrounded by French Forces of the Interior in the city of Grenoble, a city of 91,000 inhabitants in the Isere Department, BBC reported today.

CBS recorded the broadcast, which also said that, according to reports from Switzerland, approximately 1,000 officials of the Vichy government have left Belfort for Mulhouse, in Alsace, on their way to Germany.

Eighteen hundred German prisoners were taken by French Forces of the Interior in their capture of Annecy, the first French city liberated exclusively by the F. F. I., an NBC correspondent reported today from Berne, Switzerland.

Cheers for Americans mingled with cheers for France yesterday afternoon were heard as a correspondent's automobile bearing French and American flags entered the city while residents were celebrating their liberation, the NBC reported added.

Tells How Maquis Took le Fayet

AUG 23 1944

Eyewitness Reveals Their American Officer Tricked Nazis Into Surrender.

By HOWARD K. SMITH,
CBS Correspondent.

With the Maquis, Behind the German Lines in France, Via Switzerland, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—At Le Fayet, in the Savoy Mountains, the Partisans had a close shave. Elsewhere the Germans were either annihilated or else they capitulated when the situation became hopeless. But at Le Fayet they went on fighting, largely with bullets made of wood.

I have a handful of these as souvenirs. They make a big, scaring blast, but they scatter into splinters before they reach you. At Le Fayet the German commander kept enough metal bullets to kill forty French men and women whom he held as hostages. When the Maquis sent him an ultimatum to surrender or they would storm the town, the commander answered that if they did he would shoot the forty hostages. The French troops hesitated to attack.

The American officer, who advises the Partisans, had a bright idea. He sent a personal ultimatum to the German commander, saying that he had a company of American paratroopers who, as German propaganda said, were notoriously disrespectful of French lives, and that they would assault and kill every German man in the town, regardless of the consequences. The German commander reconsidered and sent a message back to the American who goes under the name of "Capt. Niveau."

Another Bright Idea.

The German said he would like to negotiate with the American and his staff. The American got worried. He didn't have any Americans and he didn't have any staff. Meanwhile, unknown to the German commander, a column of fourteen German lorries with artillery was en route to relieve him at Le Fayet.

The American got another bright idea. He hustled together four Frenchmen who put on four British uniforms which had recently been parachuted down, and he met the German commander in a forrest. When the German saw the five khaki uniforms—the Maquis wear grey uniforms—he surrendered the town, and the main force of the Maquis was then turned against the advancing German column and destroyed it.

In Annecy, we heard a gun gasp from one of the houses. Gendarmes rushed into the house and up the stairs. Before they reached the door of the room, a second shot rang out. When they opened the door they found the last Gestapo officer whom they had not yet caught, lying on the floor with his mistress in a pool of blood. The officer, whose name was Kamft, had shot her and himself. At headquarters we learned the woman was a spy.

What Would He Gain?

In St. Julien, the day before the Maquis attacked, the Germans caught a tough, little French communist bearing a revolver. He was taken to the Gestapo jail and beaten to a pulp with an iron poker. When St. Julien was taken, the Maquis commander lined the Germans up and told the tortured lad to pick out his man. The boy pointed to the man who had done it.

"I leave you the right to do anything you wish with him," the commander told the boy. "You may even shoot him."

The boy advanced silently. The Gestapo man flinched and his knees buckled. The boy fingered his revolver handle a minute. Then he grinned, he slapped the Gestapo man on the right cheek and then on the left. Then the boy turned to his commander and said: "Thank you, my lieutenant." He returned to his place in the ranks.

I asked him why he had not shot the man. He lit his cigarette and said: "I know I am a donkey. Everybody says so. But what could I gain from it?"

The lieutenant then made a little speech to the German. He said: "You have tortured our women and children. You have killed thousands of us. Now I can kill you. But I shall show you that we are more human than you have been.

He pointed to the French border and told them: "Go, you are free."

The lieutenant was a Jew. His brother was deported and killed by the Germans a year ago.

Yank Crossing of Seine Catches Nazis Completely by Surprise

By HAL BOYLE

WITH AMERICAN FORCES NORTH OF THE SEINE RIVER, Aug. 21 — (AP) American Doughboys in an operation which caught the Nazis completely by surprise have established and solidified a bridgehead across the vital Seine river 25 miles northwest of Paris.

The first troops crossed by ferry and assault boats Saturday night in the vicinity of Mantes and Glassicourt and now are so firmly established that they have no fear of a Nazi counter-attack.

8 Nazi Guns Captured

"We are all set and waiting for them—with plenty of that artillery they met before," said Lt. Col. A. C. Dohrmann, of Seward, Neb, who said that in the first hours of the attack across the river American infantry out-flanked and captured eight German 88-millimeter guns overlooking Mantes and Glassicourt.

Realizing that this spearhead threatened the retreat of all their hodge-podge elements which they had been able to ferry across the bridgeless Seine, the Nazis began to move in troops, but American artillery immediately took them under fire.

One German company was caught by a heavy barrage as it was trying to move in from the east to strengthen the garrison in Limay, a small village across the Seine northeast of Mantes.

"One German who gave up as soon as he could find somebody to take him prisoner said we had destroyed 75 per cent of his company," said Sgt. Leon Moss, Canton, Ill.

This was subsequently confirmed by higher officers.

Capture of the German 88-guns was accomplished by quickly advancing Doughboys who surprised Nazi crews eating breakfast Sunday morning and shot up or captured all except a few who fled on bicycles and in civilian automobiles they had stolen.

The crossing of the Seine was made on the largest bridge of its type constructed by the American army in France during this war. It was completed six hours from the time the first pontoon was floated on the turbid, tricky waters.

The first treadway bridge thrown across by combat engineers was built in rain and midnight blackness after infantry troops had crossed the river in rubber assault boats.

No Nazis Around

I made a tour of our bridgehead across the Seine this afternoon and failed to see a single German. The Nazis had not had time to build blockhouses, pillboxes or other military barriers. I had an eerie feeling driving past forests and ravines which offered natural positions for German emplacements and yet finding no sign of Nazi defense.

The inspection emphasized that the original German defenses in France consisted of nothing more than a brittle crust.

"I was supervising the movement of our motor columns across the bridge and so far as I could tell there wasn't a shot fired," said Capt. Edward P. Ludington, of Skaneateles, N. Y., "We really caught them off-balance this time."

During the day 25 German tanks tried to cross the Seine further west in an attempt to escape the vast Allied pocket, but they lacked engineering equipment for the task.

Lt. Warren Hall, of Johnstown, Pa., engineering officer, told how the speedy Yanks outwitted the Nazis by crossing the Seine several miles from the point where the Germans had set up static defenses.

"First we took the Doughboys over in our rubber assault boats," he said. "Each held a dozen infantrymen and three combat engineers who had to bring the boats back.

"There was only one burst of fire from downstream during the whole operation—and nobody was hurt. The enemy was eating breakfast on a hill, and as they ate our advanced infantry surrounded them and opened fire. Only one gun was manned by them and its crew ran away.

"We killed or captured all who didn't surrender or get away by bicycle or motor car. They didn't have a chance once we opened up on them.

Soldiers Kill 6 Germans

"One of our boys killed six of them running across a field, with eight shots from his rifle. Later he, himself, was shot through the neck with a tracer bullet. You could see daylight through it—but he is going to come out all right."

"Yes and he was the calmest guy on the river," said Pvt. John Thompson, Passaic, N. J.

The bridge was built by combat engineers under the direction of Lt. Col. Theodore Jakim, Chicago, Ill.

"The amazing thing about the bridgehead was that it was established so fast and without loss," said Lt. Col. Dohrmann.

"We got behind them at the start. We passed a bunch of their machine gun posts during the first night advance and the next morning found that they had pulled out.

"There is no doubt they had no intention [illegible] should get across. But by coming across at night where they weren't expecting us we caught them completely off-guard—now it is too late for them to do anything about it."

PAYS TRIBUTE TO EISENHOWER

Forrestal Lauds Teamwork of Allied Armies.

Gen. Eisenhower's Headquarters, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal came away from a conference with Gen. Eisenhower today "tremendously impressed," he said, with the spirit of co-operation the Supreme Commander has fostered between the British and Americans and their Allies.

"What he has done in the way of resolution between us and the British—and all our Allies—is a great example for the rest of the world," he told a brief news conference.

The Secretary came here after watching the landings in the south of France. He left to visit Cherbourg.

In his enthusiastic praise of Gen. Eisenhower, Mr. Forrestal said:

"The confidence of both sides in his fairness has been maintained because he pursues one idea: The winning of the war. Everything else is secondary. It is a pattern of co-operation which could well be continued after the war.

"Gen. Eisenhower hasn't sold out to the British in any sense of the word. His main theme has been: 'What is the one thing we can do to win the war?' When he met me this morning, he started talking about the fine job the Navy was doing. His generosity of spirit compels co-operation. We have the same kind of figure in Admiral Nimitz in the Pacific. These men just don't think destructively—except in terms of Germans and Japs."

The Secretary said that the pressure is on in the Pacific and that the trend in that theater was comparable to that in Europe. "Speaking in terms of acceleration of our own planning," he said, "we are ahead of schedule."

Mr. Forrestal declared that the landing craft building program was now proceeding satisfactorily but that "we can always use more LSTs." He observed that the invasion of the South of France involved 1,000 vessels exclusive of small landing craft carried on some of the larger ships, and said that this was an apt example of the fact that "you can't win a war with air power, but you can't win one without it."

He cautioned against over-optimism on the Japanese campaign should Germany collapse suddenly. "Lots of folk get the idea that some giant can yank our fleet by the neck, put it on a magic carpet and set it down in front of the Japs who'll take one look at it and say 'Uncle,'" he said. "It's much more complicated than that. The distance is 12,000 miles."

De Gaulle To Lead Entry Into Paris

London, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—When Allied liberating armies make their triumphal entry into Paris they will be headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle and units of Gen. Jacques le Clerc's French Second Armored Division, it was reported in informed circles here.

2 AMERICANS CAPTURE 100

Captain and Jeep Driver Bag Foe in Southern France

WITH AMERICAN FORCES in Southern France, Aug. 19 (Delayed) (AP)—Capt. Omar Brown of West Orange, N. J., and his jeep driver found themselves far in front of American troops while driving up a road to a small town.

They spotted a considerable number of Germans when they entered the town, an Associated Press correspondent representing the combined American press said, and were trying to decide whether to shoot when a German emissary approached. This was the message that he carried:

"If you fire on us we will wipe you out. If you don't fire and will take us in we will surrender."

Captain Brown and his driver obliged and bagged 100 prisoners.

U. S. Planes Flew Arms To FFI on Bastille Day

By The Associated Press.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 21—American heavy bombers have dropped "thousands of tons of arms, ammunition and other supplies" to French Forces of the Interior, the Eighth Air Force announced today.

"On several occasions, hundreds of heavy bombers of the United States Eighth Air Force have dropped thousands of tons of supplies in containers in daylight by parachute to the Maquis deep in France," the announcement said. "Bastille Day, July 14, witnessed one of these large-scale missions."

The Royal Air Force has carried out hundreds of similar missions, it was announced.

LUGER-LUGGING LADIES SEIZE NAZIS IN FRANCE

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN BRITTANY, Aug. 7 (Delayed) (AP)—French mademoiselles armed with enemy Luger pistols and carrying potato masher grenades in their belts have joined resistance leaders in Brittany's greatest outdoor sport—the capture of Germans.

Some girls [illegible] on their shoulders and speed down secondary roads seeking isolated pockets of Germans.

"I met two of these French gals yesterday packing Luger pistols," said Lieut. Leonard Hughes of Fond Du Lac, Wis., supply officer. "We have been trying to get our hands on some of those Lugers ever since we landed—and here were these gals packing a pair of 'em. We tried to trade them cigarets for their pistols but they wouldn't do it. They wanted to keep them to kill Germans.

"Those women are amazing. They fix up old trucks and go out Boche hunting the way our girls back home set out for the movies. They get out in front and lead our supply trucks for hours, checking roads ahead to see if they are clear."

By patrolling roads over which American armor has passed but which infantry has not mopped up, Fighting French men and women are reducing attacks on small American supply trucks convoys. To keep our tanks supplied, our supply boys have had to fight their way up to the front.

"These isolated groups of Germans get close to roads and shoot up the trucks," said Lieutenant Hughes. "I have had eight of my drivers hit by snipers. They usually let most of the convoy go by, then open up with machine guns and rifles on the last few vehicles."

Russian Women Freed by Yanks In France Offer to Fight Nazis

By HAL BOYLE

ST. MARS LE PREIERE, France, Aug. 19—(AP)—(Delayed) Young Russian women political prisoners freed from a German camp where they were compelled to work 10 to 15 hours a day at heavy labor repairing bomb damaged railroads, volunteered immediately to go into the Allied frontlines as soldiers to fight the Nazis.

Two hundred and twenty women ranging from 15 to 74 years old—and including 11 who bore children since their arrival four months ago—were liberated from their camp near this small village northeast of Le Mans by the rapid advance of the American army.

Only one Russian woman—a doctor—accepted the German invitation to retreat with them. The other women, however, believe she was taken forcibly.

"The first thing all the young women wanted to do was to take rifles and go right into battle with us," said Lt. Seymour Pinchefsky of 66 Cuthbert street, Queens, N. Y., a former New York city policeman.

Pinchefsky, Lt. William Neiler of Billings, Mont., and Medical Captain M. C. Igloe, formerly of the New York city Board of Health, came to inspect the camp with Corp. Saul Mitchell, Brooklyn, N. Y., as interpreter.

Igloe said the health of the sturdy Russian women was amazingly good considering the brutal treatment they had received from their German taskmasters in the Tod organization.

Maria Volkov, 36-year-old former Leningrad factory production manager, said the Germans seized 2,000 Russian women in the Leningrad area and brought them to France to do forced manual labor.

Madame Volkov, a small heavy set dark woman, said that before they left Russia one girl protested the food was inadequate. A German officer sneered and said, "let the Red army free you." When she replied spiritedly, "at least we ate when our army was here," he struck her in the face and knocked [illegible] teeth.

"When one girl went for a walk with her girl friend instead of reporting for work," said Mme. Volkov "the forman put her in an unlighted punishment cell and kept here there alone for eight days on bread and water. The room had no latrine and it was so small she couldn't stand up. She had to sleep on a wooden plank.

"When he finally let her out, she asked for permission to bathe in the river. He abused her and struck her with his fists.

"That young girl didn't weep. She just looked the foreman in the face and said, 'that's German culture.'"

NAZI AMAZON DIES IN NORMAN BATTLE

On the British Front, Normandy, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The first German "Amazon" definitely identified as fighting with the Wehrmacht, apparently as a member of a tank crew, was found dead during the battle of the Normandy bulge.

A British stretcher bearer reported today:

"A woman soldier was discovered when British burial squads were going over the scene of the bitter tank battle in the Vire sector between Viessoix and Burcy.

"Her flaxen hair had rolled out of her steel helmet and fallen to her shoulders. She was in full German uniform and wore trousers, field boots and a small pack in battle order. On her jacket was a silver star, a type of badge not often seen on Germans, and the epaulets of her tunic had the braid of a corporal."

The stretcher bearer said he searched her clothes without finding any hint of her name or identity. A photograph of four German soldiers and the woman was found in her wallet. Lying dead near her was a German soldier in a Panger uniform who was identified as the man standing beside her in the group photograph.

Invasion Nets Nab Bouisson, Once Premier

WM-MILLER

Draguigan, Southern France, Aug. 20 (AP—Delayed)—One of the biggest fish yet caught in the invasion of southern France is a 71-year-old man identified as Fernand Bouisson, barrel-shaped, bald-headed, goateed former president of the Chamber of Deputies.

He was found hiding at the house of a friend four miles from St. Raphael and was jailed pending judicial procedure.

For safety, he was imprisoned at Draguigan, and this morning the French Partisans paraded him and other prisoners for the benefit of the French Information Service [illegible]

APR 23 1942

Paraded With Gestapo Spies

It was a bitter pill for the man who was ten years Mayor of Marseille and former national head of the Socialist party. He was paraded with a motley throng of Gestapo spies and one woman whose head had been shaved for consorting with Germans.

A huge crowd gathered around the gendarmerie and booed and jeered. Tough young Partisans kept rifles and machine guns at the ready.

Bouisson, who was Merchant Marine Minister in the last war and who became Marshal Petain's Information Minister, and later joined Marcel Deat in editing the collaborationist Paris Daily L'Oeuvre, kept his head down during the short walk.

Premier For Five Days

Bouisson was Premier of France for five days. The Cabinet he formed May 31, 1935, collapsed on June 4. He once was a candidate for the Presidency of France, but withdrew, and several times refused to become Premier. No word has come out of France under the occupation concerning his activities.

On Leave, He Joins Invasion

Even Call of Brooklyn Could Not Keep Paratrooper From Landing in France.

APR 23 1942

With Parachute Troops in South France, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—A Brooklyn sergeant who turned down a home leave and sneaked into southern France shuffled into camp today, and for the second time in two months Sergt. Manuel Serrano, 24 years old, of 902 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, was ordered home.

Sergt. Serrano first earned home leave by beating his way intil Rome after thirteen months' captivity. He had jumped with his parachute battalion in Tunisia last May and was captured. The Germans took him to Italy where he escaped and walked into Rome from the north on July 15.

Sergt. Serrano was ordered home as are all escaped soldiers. He loitered around his battalion encampment in Italy for several weeks awaiting orders for Brooklyn. When the battalion moved to the airfields on August 12 to prepare for flight to France, Serrano went along. The the airfield, somehow, he picked up new equipment.

When the unit filed aboard planes, Sergt. Serrano "just sort of stood in line and go aboard," so he said.

The plane the Brooklyn boy chose was delivering jumpers on a special mission twenty-five miles behind the beaches and twenty miles from all other parachute troops. Everybody in Sergt. Serrano's plane knew he was there as did practically the whole camp. But every one from the commander down, knowing where Sergt. Serrano's heart was, tactfully ignored his presence.

Sergt. Serrano jumped near Grasse with Privates Charles Baum of Logan, Ohio, and Victor Trzeskowski of Bayonne, N. J. They fought through bands of Germans, slept in French houses and finally joined American divisions coming up from the beaches.

Today he looked very hurt when Lieut.-Col. William P. Yarbrough, with a finality that even Sergt. Serrano could not ignore, ordered him home to Brooklyn.

Benny, the Major, Likes to Fly Solo On Tough Jobs

APR 23 1942

By KENNETH L. DIXON,
Associated Press War Correspondent.

WITH THE AEF IN THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER, Aug. 12 (Delayed).—Sometimes the night's quiet around this fighter headquarters is broken by a Thunderbolt taking off in the moonlight.

And the men around the map and strategy boards look at one another and say:

"Where's Benny?"

The chances are pretty good that Maj. William B. Benedict, 26, huge, red-headed pilot from San Quentin, Calif., is bound on some lone, self-assigned mission.

They've nailed him to headquarters temporarily and technically he's not supposed to fly, but after nearly 200 RAF and AAF missions, and after shooting down six enemy planes and having four shot out from under him, he can't sit still.

Picks Tough Ones.

He picks tough ones skip-bombing railroad tunnels to seal off enemy guns inside, going through the hottest flax to knock out some enemy position, doing personal reconnaissance. When his pilots fly cover for the bombers, he often flies solitary top cover for them, just to see what happens and whether the boys are on the ball.

"If we didn't watch him, he'd fly a couple of missions every day," the commanding officer said.

In June, 1940, when he had only two years of college, the Army Air Corps looked somewhat askance at Benny's educational qualifications, so he went up to Canada to visit his aunt and dropped into a RCAF recruiting office "just to see what their qualifications called for."

They shoved blanks under his huge freckled hand and Benny began signing. He hasn't been back to San Quentin.

In August, 1941, he went to England, was adopted by the RAF and flew a dozen combat missions. Then they sen thim to Cairo just as Rommel was starting his big drive and Benny spent the next year mostly helping cover a retreat.

"We'd take off from one field in the morning, fly all day and then have to land at another field farther back that night," he recalled. That year he flew 84 missions in Hurricanes, piled up 200 combat hours, shot down four Germans and was shot down twice himself.

Transferred to AAF.

In December, 1942, he transferred to the United States Air Force with visions of going home for more training. But when he walked into AAF headquarters in Cairo and laid his log book on the desk they took one look at it and said: "You're just the guy we need. There's a P-40 waiting for you. You're a second lieutenant. Here's your orders, here's your money for uniform, goodbye and good luck." Just like that.

Benny had never seen a P-40. So he went out to the airport and asked the crew chief to give him a cockpit check. Hurricanes and Spitfires had been simple—just turn a couple of switches and take off. The P-40 had nine separate gadgets you had to tinker with first. But Benny solved them the first time and flew to Tunisia. In six days from combat with the RAF he was back in combat with the AAF.

Since then he's flown more than 100 additional missions. When stuck on the ground he storms and swears at the "soft life" he says the boys lead. He says, "They're all spoon-fed, good guys, and have got what it takes, but not trained right." Then he beats on the table, roaring about how they should be trained.

"Benny, you're nuts," some ranking officer will tell him good-naturedly. "You can't fun an air force that way."

More Like Him Needed.

Then, in an aside not intended for Benny's ears, the officer usually will add: "But what I would give for a squadron of guys just like him."

Benny doesn't want to go home now until the European war is over. After that:

"I'll go home and stay there. None of this Pacific war for me, I get malaria too easy. Those guys seem to be handling the situation all right by themselves."

Then a speculative look comes into his eyes:

"But that's quite a little war they've got out there in the Pacific, at that, isn't it?"

Then you know the chances are that on some night the stillness over some Pacific atoll will be shattered by a Thunderbolt and the men around the maps will look up and ask, "Where's Benny?"

SPECIAL FORCE ROAMS WORLD

American-Canadian Army Unit Goes Where Needed Most

CLINTON-B. CONGER

With the First Special Service Force in Southern France, Aug. 21 (AP)—Censorship release of the presence in southern France of the joint American-Canadian First Special Service Force today partly lifted the curtain on one of the most hush-hush organization in the United Nations' warbag.

It is a spearhead of specialists who are trained in snow warfare, amphibious warfare, mountain warfare, air-borne warfare and infantry infighting.

Visualized by one of Lord Louis Mountbatten's advisers and born of a conversation between Gen. George C. Marshall and Prime Minister Churchill at Chequers, county residence of the Prime Minister, April 9, 1942, the First Special Service Force was activated at Helena, Mont., July 20 of the same year. It was under the command of 37-year-old Maj. Gen. Robert Frederick, of San Francisco, now an air-borne task force commander, then a lieutenant colonel working with General Eisenhower in the War Department's operations and planning section.

World-Wide Basis

Like the 20th Air Force, the First Special Service Force, whose men call it simply "the Force," is employed on a world-wide basis, being attached to various armies at the discretion of the combined chiefs of staff.

At its inception, it was intended for air-borne sabotage in Norway or the Carpathians. At 1.30 A. M. August 15, 1943, the specialists were first into Kiska in the Aleutians. At 1.30 A. M. exactly a year later they struck in southern France.

Between those times they had served on the winter road to Cassino, Italy, and appeared at the Anzio beachhead, where they terrorized the Germans for 99 nights of black-faced raiding before spearheading the breakout to be the first into Rome. There Frederick left them for his present job.

Burhans Second In Command

Lieut. Col. Robert Burhans, of Lansing, Mich., son of a Michigan State college professor, who had winter warfare training before going to the army intelligence section, became second in command before activation of the force.

As plans for the force developed simultaneously with a winter weapon wherewith the idea began—the "Weasel," a tracked carrier for snow—Frederick and Burhans sent out a call to army camps in the western and southwestern United States for volunteers. At Mountbatten's suggestion, they also asked for volunteers in Canada.

[The plan then was still to destroy power facilities in Norway, but later it was found that the British commandos or the RAF already had plans for most of those objectives.]

Good Physiques Sought

Three officer boards toured the camps seeking outdoor men with excellent physiques—cowpunchers, miners, trappers, lumberjacks. They got everything from men with former jail records to former bodyguards of Barbara Stanwyck and Kansas City's one-time boss, Tom Pendergast.

At Helena they trained for winter warfare with the "Weasels"; they took parachute training at Fort Benning, Georgia, and finally, in preparation for the Kiska campaign, they received mountain and amphibious training at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont.

The force hit Kiska with Alaskan scouts six hours before H-hour.

In the entire force now, probably slightly less than half of the Kiska veterans are left. One combat unit only has about one fifth of its original personnel still in action.

Stories Trickle Out

Last March stories about the force began trickling out under the title of combined Canadian-American [illegible] but before then they had made their name known and feared with the Germans. They had paper stickers made up duplicating their shoulder flashes and they pasted the stickers on Germans they killed, on guns they destroyed and even on German command post doors.

In a diary found on the body of a dead German lieutenant they found a description they liked best: "The black devils are all around us every time we come into the line and we never hear them come."

Despite the high priority placed on the troops, only 23 ever have been captured alive, according to documents captured from the 14th Army's headquarters.

Flank Exposed

When the order for the Anzio break-through came, the force smashed ahead five kilometers, then had to wait with its flank dangerously exposed because the division next to them could only advance one kilometer. But when the armies reached Highway 7 leading to Rome, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark turned the force loose, and Frederick, with a bandage around a neck wound, led his men in to seize bridges across the Tiber for the advancing army.

For two months thereafter German intelligence worried about where the force would again spring up. The Special Service Force is in France.

Moscow Radio Reports Troops In East Prussia

Broadcast Places Russians in Pre-War Germany; Battle for Warsaw On

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 22 (Tuesday).—The Moscow radio, in a broadcast recorded by Reuters, asserted today that Russian troops were operating on East Prussian soil—the first time that Soviet forces have penetrated inside the borders of pre-war Germany in this conflict.

RUSSIAN FORCES ADVANCE 9 MILES IN WARSAW DRIVE

APR 23 1942

Germans Hurled Back to Bug River Northeast of City.

NAZIS GAIN NEAR RIGA

Regain Contact With Two Armies Stranded in the Baltics.

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug. 22.—(AP) Russian troops yesterday hurled the Germans back onto the Bug river northeast of Warsaw in a nine-mile advance through strong Axis defenses guarding the Polish capital, but in the north other Soviet forces suffered a setback near the Gulf of Riga and the Germans regained contact with their two stranded Baltic armies.

The Germans hurled more than 400 tanks into the struggle in western Latvia, and the Russians abandoned positions which an Associated Press Moscow dispatch early today said enabled the Nazis to link up with Col. Gen. Georg Lindemann's forces to the east.

Action on Romanian Front

Simultaneously, Berlin said that the long-quiet Romanian front again was in action with the Russians hurling 150,000 men against their lines near Iasi and Tighina. The Russians gained one-mile these attacks aimed at "cru the whole of our Dnestr river tions," Berlin said.

Marshal Konstantin K. Ro sovsky's First White Russian ar the Moscow bulletin said, shatter ed a 30-mile Axis defense line based on the Bialystok-Warsaw railway, and plunged on to within two miles of the Bug river, capturing 50 localities.

The Russian break-through was between Tluszcz, 16 miles northeast of Warsaw, and Prostyn 46 miles northeast of the capital and at a point where the Bug turns westward to flow into the Vistula north of Warsaw. Sweeping past these two captured rail stations the Red army also seized Trojany and Zazdrosc, 18 and 22 miles, respectively, northeast of Warsaw and only two and three miles from the Bug.

Filling out this Bug river bend, the Russians will have secured a natural flank protection for their wheeling movement westward along its bank toward the Vistula.

A midnight communique said the Germans fought furiously as they were pressed steadily back toward the Bug, 1,000 of them being killed in one ar

In Latvia the Russians admitted a reverse with the abandonment of Tukums, 33 miles east of Riga, after heavy German counterattacks. This is in the corridor which Gen. Ivan Bagramian's First Baltic army had established from Lithuania north to the Gulf of Riga, hemming in possibly 200,000 Germans.

In eastern Latvia and adjoining Estonia two other powerful Soviet armies were striking westward toward Riga and northward through Estonia toward the Baltic sea, chopping up the German forces which Berlin is trying to rescue.

30 Localities Captured

Gen. Ivan Masennikov's Third Baltic army yesterday captured 30 localities, including Kambja, only nine miles south of Tartu, big Estonian midland city west of Lake Peipus, and also Ennu, 10 miles southwest of Kambja and less than four miles from the Tallinn-Riga railway—the main communications artery connecting the German Baltic armies.

Advancing on Riga from the east Gen. Andrei I. Yeremenko's Second Baltic army seized Gostini, only one mile from Plavinas rail junction, and 65 miles southeast of Riga. Other units farther north were within 55 miles of Riga after Sunday's capture of Ergli.

The Soviet Baltic fleet, suddenly going into action in Narva bay, Estonia, sank four German destroyers and a [illegible] of 1,200 tons, the Moscow communique said. The Germans lost 600 men which had manned these modern ships, all built in 1942 and 1943, and 107 German sailors were picked up from the water.

The Germans, copying from Allied amphibious operations in the west, also had available Baltic naval units in action along the Gulf of Riga, shelling Russian shore positions in an effort to keep open the corridor which Berlin says now has been established.

While announcing a single success in Latvia, Berlin went even further than Moscow in telling of Soviet triumphs in other key areas along a blazing 1,300-mile front from the Baltic down to Romania.

Nazis Acknowledge Reverses

Nazi reverses northeast of Warsaw were acknowledged, and far south of the capital the Russians were said to have thrown three bridgeheads across the Vistula river in a drive to outflank Warsaw and spear westward into German Silesia, last reported within 75 miles of Soviet units.

The Russian bridgeheads are at Warka, 30 miles south of Warsaw, at Kazimierz, 70 miles below the embattled Polish capital and one 28 miles east of the German stronghold of Radom, and in the Sandomierz sector, 100 miles from Warsaw, the Germans said.

Moscow has acknowledged thus far only the Sandomierz bridgehead, and the late bulletin said north of that fallen stronghold the Russians had improved their positions after wiping out the remnants of three trapped German divisions on Sunday. The bag was 12,000 Germans killed and 1,550 captured, a total of 13,550, Moscow said, in addition to large quantities of equipment and supplies.

The Russian thrusts beyond the Vistula hold even greater immediate danger to Germany than the violent fighting raging along the eastern border of East Prussia, and the Germans were throwing in reinforcements in an attempt to hold the Russians.

In Silesia factory workers and all available civilians have been pressed into service, digging trenches and building fortifications along the frontier.

REDS FALL BACK BEFORE FOE ON BALTIC FRONT

Berlin Says German Tanks Have Severed Russian Corridor to Sea.

ELSEWHERE SOVIETS PUSH ON

Three Nazi Divisions Reported Wiped Out in Salient Below Warsaw.

Moscow, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The Russians have smashed three Nazi divisions in the Sandomierz salient below Warsaw, while other Red Army forces have yielded slightly before costly German attempts to rescue possibly 200,000 troops isolated on the Baltic front, a Russian communique announced today.

In the Warsaw sector, meanwhile, the Russians have driven deeper into Praga, suburb to the east of the city, and have captured some vital positions to the northeast, frontline dispatches said.

[In a communique broadcast by the Berlin radio, the German High Command said today that Nazi tank formations pushing west of Tukums, in Latvia, had crashed through the Russian corridor to the Baltic west of Riga and re-established contact with the thirty or so German divisions in Latvia and Estonia. The Russian communique did not indicate that the corridor had been cut. The Germans said that a naval flotilla aided the tank force.]

One Red Army Set Free.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian Army, thrusting up the west bank of the Vistula, liquidated the trapped Germans north of Sandomierz. "As the enemy refused to surrender, most of the encircled enemy troops were killed," the communique declared. This victory freed Konev's forces for a possible drive either southwest on the railway fortress of Krakow, north toward Warsaw, or directly west across the Polish plains toward German Silesia, which would snap Warsaw's communication lines.

The Germans threw additional reserves into South Poland in an effort to repair the damage inflicted at Sandomierz.

The slight Russian reverse occurred in the Jelgava sector near the Gulf of Riga, where 144 German tanks and self-propelled guns were reported knocked out.

In Estonia, Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic Army, capturing more than 150 populated places, drove to within seven miles of Tartu on the Tallinn-Riga railway, and in Latvia, below the Estonian sector, Gen. Andrei Yeremenko's Second Baltic Army, sweeping up more than seventy places, advanced to within fifty-five miles east of Riga with the capture of Erglin on the Madona-Riga railway.

Pushing Baltics Fight.

Maslennikov and Yeremenko were hammering back the snared Nazis in the Baltics, cut off by Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's First Baltic Army drive that reached the Baltic Sea twenty-five miles west of Riga several weeks ago. Ever [illegible] was established [illegible] Riga [illegible] Nazis have been mounting counter-attacks in an effort to break through to their trapped divisions.

No late official news came from the East Prussian front where the Russians reached the boundary last week. Frontline dispatches said, however, that the Russian artillery had beaten down trenches, pillboxes and artillery emplacements inside Germany, and quoted the officers as crying to their gun crews: "Fire on the enemy land for our mothers, wives and children who were tortured to death." Troops from the pillaged cities of Voronezh and Kiev cheered as the shells screamed into East Prussia, it was added.

Warsaw Cathedral in Ruins.

London, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The Germans are laying waste large sections of Warsaw with artillery and planes in their effort to smash the underground forces battling the Nazi troops within the city, Polish spokesmen here said today. Much of the Old City has been virtually wiped out and the famous fifteenth century cathedral has been almost pulverized, these informants said.

NAZI AIRFIELDS HIT FROM ITALY

Bad Weather, However, Keeps British Planes Grounded

London, Aug. 21 (AP)—Italian-based air forces took up the day and night offensive against Europe with around-the-clock blows at the Balkans today as heavy weather grounded Allied air power on the Western front.

The overcast was so thick over the battleground that not a single plane left the ground in Britain.

Normandy-based Typhoons, with their rockets, knocked out 13 of 30 tanks trying to break out of the Argentan trap, and United States fighter-bombers attacked escape barges on the Seine, bringing their three-day total to 150.

American Liberators from Italy hammered German airfields in Hungary and Yugoslavia and the Berlin radio said raiders were over Hungary again tonight.

Many Wrecks Left

An airfield at Hajdu Boszormeny, Hungary, was left littered with smoking wrecks of enemy planes after an attack by 15th Air Force Liberators. Seven strafing swoops by escorted Liberators also blasted an airdrome in central Serbia, which was described as a major base for the enemy's twin-engined Messerschmitts and Stukas.

Switching from the southern France invasion area where few targets were available, Italian-based American Thunderbolts dealt a surprise attack in several waves today on rail yards at Alessandria, northern Italy. The official report said scores of cars were destroyed and tracks were blown into a tangled wreckage.

Large Fires Started

Marauders and Mitchells also pounded communications in the Po valley and in the mountains north of Florence.

A few hours earlier night-flying A-20 Bostons started large fires in enemy positions at Remoulins, four miles northwest of Marseille, and also in the area immediately south of Avignon.

Ninth Air Force reconnaissance pilots reported for the second day German transport was moving east "bumper to bumper" on highways out of Paris.

CHURCHILL PRAISES 5TH ARMY AT FRONT

Pays Special Tribute to Negro Troops—Visits Brigade of Canadian Tank Crews

ROME, Aug. 21 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill praised the Fifth Army today as one of the great striking forces of the Allies and paid a special compliment to American troops of Japanese and Negro ancestry.

Mr. Churchill paid his tribute to the Fifth Army after a parade of the Thirty-fourth Infantry Division.

"The Thirty-fourth was the first, or among the first, of all United States troops to leave the New World and carry by their sacrifices and valor the precious blessing of freedom and justice to lands enslaved," the Prime Minister said.

He spent the night with Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth Army, at advance headquarters. He conferred with Maj. Gen. Charles Bolte, the new commander of the Thirty-fourth Division. A Fifth Army spokesman said that future operations had been discussed.

Churchill Addresses Canadians

WITH THE BRITISH EIGHTH ARMY, Near Florence, Aug. 20 (Delayed) (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill told a Canadian tank brigade today that the great battle raging in Normandy promised to bring the end of the war much nearer.

"I cannot predict an early end to the war, but I could not guarantee against it ending sooner than we have allowed ourselves to hope," he declared, as he faced a great circle of men backed by their Sherman tanks not far from the front.

Touring the Eighth Army's front with Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, the Prime Minister visited ground where the Allies fought more than a week to push the Germans back on Florence. He wore the uniform of an honorary colonel.

"I am pleased to see you on the grounds which your exertions have conquered and to assure you how closely the actions and deeds of the Canadians in Italy are watched by everyone in the mother country and, of course, in your own beautiful homeland," Mr. Churchill said. He added: "The strength of will of everybody and of all parties there was never more strongly resolved to continue this righteous war to a victorious conclusion.

"The enemy is still active and strong and the German Army still fights with the relics of its old efficiency. But, behind the lines, weakness and division are spreading and everywhere there are signs of internal decay and a dull apathy overtaking the weak. The dissension is such that, when a general goes [illegible] he doesn't know whether he is to be promoted or hanged."

Later he said: "If the battle now proceeding in northern France turns out to be the biggest of the whole war, one of the great hopes is that conclusion of our toil may be much nearer."

He said that the Canadians "had displayed the qualities of integrity, determination, elasticity and unity of the commonwealth and empire." He added:

"Whether here or on the fields of Normandy, they are showing that genius in combat on which the road to victory is built. God bless you."

CHURCHILL FIRES BIG U. S. GUN

[Rome, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill personally shot a big American gun at two German cannon positions north of Pisa, it was disclosed today.

After he pulled the lanyard, the shell fell 200 yards short of the target. A gunnery officer corrected the elevation and two rounds later [illegible] enemy guns were destroyed. An artillery spotter flying [illegible] head reported fires and explosions at both gunpits.

Robot Bomb Raid Among Heaviest

London, Aug. 21 (AP)—The Germans today hurled one of the heaviest daylight attacks since the first weeks of the flying bomb assaults on London and southern England.

Throughout most of the day the enemy sent the robot bombs across the Channel, capitalizing on the soupy weather that kept the Allied bombers grounded.

Heavy ack-ack fire, including some rockets, met the robots at the coast and the gunners' score was good. Over one coastal area they shot down two in a couple of minutes.

The bombs that got through wrecked houses, stores, busses and one pub—but in only one place was a heavy death toll feared.

Finds Carriage Wrecked

A young mother snatched her infant from a baby carriage and ran into a surface shelter as a bomb fell. She emerged a few minutes later to find the pram wrecked.

Another bomb demolished several houses just as two busses passed. Several persons were killed and the busses damaged. A newsboy on the corner was blown to bits. Within an hour three bodies had been removed from the ruined houses and rescuers were digging for many other persons believed to be [illegible]

A bluejacket who heard a bomb far in the distance warned a mother and child in the next house and all three had time to take shelter. Their houses were badly damaged but all three escaped injury.

The heavy raids started during the night after a lull of some ten hours, probably caused by German inability to move bombs to the sites over their battered transportation lines

POLES ADVANCE 7 MILES IN ITALY

Rome, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—Polish forces on the Adriatic have advanced seven miles to within twelve miles of the Italian port of Pesaro, where eastern outposts of the Germans' trans-peninsular Gothic line are reputed to begin. The Germans pulled their defenses behind the Matauro River, Gen. Alexander's headquarters announced. In the advance, the Poles captured Cerasa.

West of Florence, the Germans shelled Eighth Army positions south of the Arno River. Conditions within Florence were reported "somewhat quieter." Food and other provisions poured in for the citizens.

U. S. PILOTS STRAFE BALKAN AIRFIELDS

Rome, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—Nazi airfields in Hungary and central Serbia today were blasted by Liberators of the Italian-based 15th United States Air Force and strafed by escorting fighters. The big bombers struck at the Hajdu Boszormeny airfield in Hungary, and fighters swooped in seven strafing attacks on the field. The planes also hit the Nis airdrome in Serbia, major base for German twin-engined Messerschmitts and Stuka dive-bombers. A small number of German fighters engaged the planes over Hungary.

At the same time American Thunderbolts, switching from the south of France invasion area for lack of targets, struck a surprise blow in several waves at the Alessandria railway yards in the north of Italy. It was announced that scores of railway cars were destroyed and that the tracks were left a mass of tangled wreckage.

Marauders and Mitchells pounded communications in the Po valley and the mountains north of Florence. A few hours earlier night-flying Bostons started large fires in enemy installations at Remoulins, four miles northwest of Marseille, and in the area immediately south of Avignon.

Yesterday some 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the Fifteenth Air Force set fire to two oil refineries in Poland and one in Czecho-Slovakia, and for the first time encountered only a few enemy fighters over those hitherto fiercely defended regions.

FORTRESSES BLAST POLISH REFINERIES

Rome, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—About 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the Italian based Fifteenth United States Air Forces set fire to two oil refineries in Poland and one in Czechoslovakia yesterday and for the first time encountered only a few enemy fighters over those hitherto fiercely defended regions.

The Fortresses bombed the big I. G. Farbenindustrie synthetic aid and rubber factory at Oswiec in Poland, about thirty miles west of Krakow, starting three great fires. This plant has a capacity of 62,500 tons of oil per annum. The Liberators caused fires and explosions in a Vacuum Oil refinery at Czechowice, Poland, forty-five miles west of Krakow, and a State oil refinery at Duklza, Czechoslovakia, seventy miles southwest of Krakow. The only aerial opposition encountered came near Budapest, when fewer than twenty ME-109's and FW-190's jumped the Fortresses en route to Poland. Escorting Mustangs quickly drove them off.

Railway yards at Szolnok, Hungary, and the Rakoczifalva airdrome, four miles southeast of Szolnok, were also bombed by the Liberators.

Last night Halifaxes, Liberators and Wellingtons of the Royal Air Force attacked a tank factory at St. Valentin, twelve miles northeast of Steyr in Austria. The German communique said that Hungary, too, was bombed last night and that some explosives crashed in the Upper Danube area.

In more than 1,900 sorties flown yesterday, the Allied Mediterranean Air Forces destroyed two enemy planes and lost six of their own.

Flies 200 Sorties, Keeps On

Thunderbolt Pilot Elects to Fight Until Germans Give Up

ROME, Aug. 21 (AP).—Captain William D. Gatling, twenty-two, returned from his 200th fighter mission—an All-American record for fighter pilots in the Mediterranean theater—and decided he would like to continue flying in combat until the Germans give up.

Gatling, now among the Thunderbolt pilots helping to knock out enemy strongholds ahead of the Allied troops invading southern France, started his record combat tour flying a P-40 Warhawk in support of the 8th Army in Tunisia early in 1943. Only recently he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross with cluster. He commands a Thunderbolt flight.

His home is at Tarboro, N. C.

BUILD AIRDROMES IN SOUTH FRANCE

Rome, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—American aviation engineers began constructing airdromes in southern France the day after Allied assault forces put ashore, it was disclosed today.

The co-operation of French farmers, who showed the engineers where minefields were located, was credited officially with saving many precious hours—and possibly many lives in the task.

R. A. F. Using Riviera Bases

ROME, Aug. 21 (AP).—Allied fighter planes now are operating from landing strips in southern France, it was announced tonight. An official statement said R. A. F. Spitfires commanded by Group Captain W. G. Duncan-Smith were flying from southern France.

German General Agrees On War

With the Canadian Army in France, Aug. 21 (AP)—General Menni, commander of the German 87th Infantry Division, who was captured today by Canadian troops, remarked dryly to his escort as he was taken to Canadian headquarters:

"You think you are winning—and we think you are too."

Richmond Soldier Finds Nazi Snipers Poor Shots

By the Associated Press.

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE.—You just can't convince Pfc. James E. Dudley of Richmond, Va., that German snipers are anything but poor shots.

He got his low opinion of the enemy's marksmanship when a sniper nicked him in the ear. Later, after it was bandaged, he was on patrol when a hidden Nazi fired at him. The bullet clipped the bandage from Pvt. Dudley's wounded ear as if it had been snipped with a sharp pair of scissors.

Pvt. Dudley hit the dirt and looking around for the bandage, said bitterly:

"What did I tell you? See—those blankety-blank blanks can't shhh-shoot."

SAYS FOE IN FRANCE WON'T REACH HOME

London, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The force of more than 1,000,000 men which Germany had in France when the Allies invaded Normandy is now so badly beaten that only a very small fraction will be able to reach the German frontier, Robert E. Sherwood, overseas director of the OWI, said tonight.

In a broadcast over the American station in Europe, Mr. Sherwood called the battle of France one of the decisive battles of military history. He said that the Germany Seventh Army, the most powerful enemy force in France, had received a terrific beating and that Allied armies on the Riviera in the south are definitely ahead of schedule.

Hitler Will Never Yield, President Benès Predicts

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 21—Dr. Eduard Benes predicted tonight that Adolf Hitler would probably never surrender, but that the German Army would "disintegrate into small units that will fight singly to the end."

The Czechoslovak President has forecast German trends accurately before.

"This will be the real Wagnerian Goetterdaemmerung," he said. "Hitler will drive the German nation to destruction. That will be a terrible end. Fighting for every place will be necessary even after the Allies invade Germany."

King Arrives In Eternal City

Rome, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has arrived in Rome, it was announced today.

The purpose of the King's visit was not immediately disclosed. Last June the 74-year-old Monarch turned over his "royal prerogatives" to his 39-year-old son, Crown Prince Umberto, carrying out his promise to retire from public life with the entry of Allied troops in the Eternal City.

German Admiral Kills Himself

St. Eutrope, France, Aug. 23 (AP).—Admiral Siegfried Wieder, 55-year-old commander of German marine forces in southern France and charged with the defense of naval establishments from Nice to Perpignan, committed suicide in this village at the outskirts of Aix-en-Provence four days before the Allied invasion.

The admiral's French secretary found the body in his study at noon August 11, after hearing a shot.

The flag atop the villa housing Wieder's headquarters was dropped to half staff and all servants were prevented from entering the villa for a whole day until it was "made known" the admiral had succumbed from a heart attack.

French resistance leaders said they heard the Germans had planned to kill Wieder because it was believed he was implicated in anti-Hitler plotting.

When the American troops arrived they found the villa had been destroyed by German demolitions.

Resistance leaders described Wieder as a short, white-haired admiral who with two vice-admirals organized the marine defense of the southern coast. People of A[illegible] and surrounding villages saw little of him because he took no part in civilian affairs.

Communist Reporter Recalled to Italy

London, August 21 (A. P.).—London papers said today that Clement Dutt, reporter for the communist London Daily Worker, who entered southern France as a war correspondent accredited to the French forces, has been ordered back to Italy by the War Office, but British Army public relations officials here said they had no knowledge of the matter.

The paper added that he "committed no indiscretion, nor is it alleged he did."

Later today the War Office said that Sir James Grigg, Secretary of State for War, had no comment to make on Mr. Dutt's reported [illegible]

TERMS DENIED TO BULGARIA

Allies Refuse To Bargain To Get Country Out Of War

Ankara, Aug. 21 (AP)—The Allies have refused to bargain with Bulgaria for her exit from the war, an analysis of the best available reports indicated tonight.

British Ambassador Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen is believed to have told Stoicho Moshanov, Bulgarian emissary, that the Bulgarian army would have to surrender unconditionally and retreat behind pre-war frontiers.

United States officials have been kept informed of the Bulgarian-British negotiations for peace. There was an unconfirmed report that both British and American officials were present at a conference with Moshanov last week.

"Action, Not Talk" Demand

"Action, not talk, is necessary," the Allied representatives told the Bulgarians.

The Government of Premier Ivan Bagrianov is believed intent on getting out of the war despite the Allied refusal to compromise on armistice terms.

The Russians have dashed Bulgarian hopes for Soviet support of Sofia's attempt to gain a corridor to the Aegean Sea through Thrace.

5,000 Nazis Still There

Although some German troops already have withdrawn from the Black Sea coast, latest reports from Sofia indicate that about 5,000 remain in Bulgaria, that the Gestapo continues active there and that the Germans are in control, particularly of airfields.

While the Bulgarian army conceivably could eject the Germans in a crisis brought on by the Russian offensive in near-by Romania, the Bulgarians are expected to act in a way calculated not to offend the Germans until an Allied force is ready to occupy the country.

In any event, once Bulgaria has dropped out of the war, Romania would be expected to fall almost automatically.

Limited Bulgar-Nazi Break Today Envisaged

London, Tuesday, Aug. 22 (AP)—Foreign Minister Parvan Draganov is scheduled to address the Bulgarian Parliament this afternoon, and there was speculation in London that he might announce at least a limited break with Germany.

Bulgarian Premier Ivan Bagrianov's plea last week for peace at almost any price has been followed by persistent rumors that British-American-Bulgarian armistice negotiations already were under way.

Sometime ago Prime Minister Churchill told German satellites that they had to "work their passage home," and Bulgaria is believed to be attempting this under Soviet as well as British-American pressure.

Turkey's break with the Nazis stiffened the Bulgar spine, and inasmuch as the Germans have had to drain their Balkan garrisons the Bulgarian army probably could cope with the forces which are left.

REBELS FIGHT AXIS INSIDE BULGARIA

Cairo, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—From 5,000 to 15,000 Bulgarians are increasing their activities, it was learned here today, as the Bagrinov Government anxiously watched Allied successes in Europe.

The Partisans are reported operating in three main zones inside Bulgaria. They are striking at Bulgarian collaborationists.

The Bulgarian Foreign Minister, Paravan Draganoff, will make a statement on the Government's foreign policy when the Bulgarian Parliament meets today, the British radio said in a broadcast picked up in New York today by CBS.

"According to reports reaching Ankara, the German Ambassador in Sofia has left by air for Berlin, having failed to get an open declaration from Prime Minister Bagrianoff about his Government's attitude toward Germany," London added.

Declaring that German censorship in Bucharest and Budapest had suppressed Bagrianoff's statement that the Allies would win the war, London forecast that when the Bulgarian Parliament meets today, Bagrianoff would "demand full powers."

POLISH CABINET MEETS IN LONDON

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(AP) The London Polish cabinet met all day today in an effort to draft a plan for settling the Russian-Polish dispute, which emigre leaders here were represented as believing would not be healed until rival factions could meet in Warsaw and set up a provisional goverfnment.

It was understood that Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who went to Moscow in an attempt to find a solution, and some of his colleagues see their chief hope in a meeting in the Polish capital after it is liberated.

This provisional government, they hold, must include representatives of the Soviet-supported National Committee of Liberation, members of the government-in-exile here, and various political groups inside Poland.

Even such a provisional government, Poles here feel, would be lasting only if backed and broadened by [illegible] Allied auspices.

It was suggested that the London compromise proposals might be delivered to Premier Marshal Stalin by Mikolajczyk in a second mission to Moscow, but sources close to the Premier said he would prefer to wait until Warsaw is liberated and conduct final negotiations there.

A spokesman said it was unlikely that any statement on today's conferences would be issued in the next day or two.

Allied sources expressed hope for an early solution but were none too optimistic.

The cabinet also discussed possibilities of speeding aid to the underground already fighting the Germans inside Warsaw.

Polish quarters said the Germans were laying waste to the capital with artillery in an effort to destroy the underground and much of the old city had been wiped out.

FINNS ACT TO DELAY TRUCE

Conservatives Seek to Postpone Armistice With Russia

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 21 (AP)—Reactionary agrarian and conservative quarters in Finland are attempting to delay an armistice with Russia, according to information received here from Finland.

These factions were reported to be saying, in effect:

"The Allies' successes in the west are entirely in Finland's favor. They better our position because they restore a balance of power between the Anglo-Americans and the Russians. If we continue to hang on we are likely to get a better peace."

President Carl Gustaf Mannerheim was described by Finns as determined to see a way to getting Finland out of the war. He was said to have been "unpleasantly surprised' by behind-the-scene intrigues in Government circles—a situation of which he had not been aware until he became President.

Postwar Planners Would Curb Prussia

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The breakup of Prussia and division of Germany into 10 separate states, with effective reparations and economic control, were proposed in a memorandum issued yesterday by a postwar policy group of 39 Conservative members of Parliament and peers.

They proposed to reduce Prussia by partition from a population of 39,000,000 to 13,000,000 and forbid, under threat of economic penalties, any attempt to recreate another centralized Reich under Prussia's domination.

Other states they advocated were Rhineland, Westphalia, Hesse, Hanover, Wurttemberg, Schleswig-Holstein, Bavaria, Saxony, Baden and the old Hanseatic League towns of Northern Germany.

The group, members of Prime Minister Churchill's party, suggested that Germany's means of production and raw materials should be transferred to or controlled by the United Nations to repair war damage and help rehabilitate European economy. They also would quota Germany's ships, trucks and rolling stock and ban all aircraft.

YANKS BOMB KURILES, YAP

Nimitz Also Reports 44,956 Japs Killed In Marianas

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 21 (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, announcing new air raids against Japanese positions from the Kuriles to the Carolines, disclosed today that 44,956 Japanese were killed in the American conquest of Saipan, Guam and Tinian.

American casualties in the bloodiest campaign of the Pacific were 4,470 killed and 20,345 wounded, with 721 men still listed missing in action.

Make First Trip To Yap

Bombers of the 7eventh Army Air Rorce raided Yap in the western Carolines, 525 miles southwest of Guam, for the first time Saturday.

The yalso struck northward at Pegan in the northern Marianas, and for the first time bombed Alamagan Island, south of Pagan.

Yap, important because of its weather and cable stations, has been bombed previously by American carrier planes and by land-based bombers from the New Guinea area.

Plaster Airfield

The Liberators plastered Yap airfield, meeting no interception and only meager ground fire. Intense anti-aircraft fire greeted the raiders over Pagan.

Navy and marine planes, meanwhile, bombed Narau Island and in the Marshalls.

Navy Venturas bombed and strafed airfields on Paramushiro, in the northern Kuriles, Saturday. Three Japanese Zeros failed to attack.

Nimitz disclosed that mop-up operations were still under way in the Marianas.

HALMAHERA POUNDED BY RECORD BOMB BLOW

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific, Tuesday, Aug. 22 (AP)—Pitching aerial assault upon the Moluccas and near-by islands to a new intensity, Allied planes delivered the heaviest bombing attacks yet made upon Halmahera and Buru Islands, headquarters announced today.

Eight Japanese planes caught on the ground at Buru were destroyed or damaged.

In other attacks upon the enemy's dwindling shipping lines nine small Japanese freighters, transports and coastal vessels were sunk or badly damaged and ten barges probably destroyed.

A large force of Liberators pounded Halmahera, 200 miles west of New Guinea, with 110 tons of bombs on Sunday, demolishing warehouses and touching off great explosions.

Liberators raiding Buru with ninety-five tons of bombs caught the nest of grounded planes at Namlea airdrome on Saturday. Buru is 200 miles south of Halmahera.

Mitchell medium bombers raided the Japanese seaplane base at Talaud, midway between Halmahera and Mindanao, for the first time on Sunday, destroying warehouses and coastal installations. They also set a small freighter afire.

A Liberator ranging far to the northwest bombed a freighter-transport off Mindanao's south coast early on Sunday.

Air patrols destroyed two small freighters and two coastal vessels off Celebes, and south of Ceram bombed a 3,000-ton freighter-transport, destroyed two barges and damaged a small craft.

In coastal attacks along Netherland New Guinea's Vogelkop Peninsula Allied air patrols destroyed a small transport and eight barges. Naval craft sank a coastal vessel.

Bomber Sinks Jap Cruiser

Chungking, Aug. 21 (AP)—A Liberator bomber of the 14th Air Force sank a 14,000-ton Japanese cruiser in the China Sea Saturday, Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's headquarters announced today.

The Liberator found the warship in the China Sea off Hong Kong and got three direct hits and a probable, watching the Jap vessel sink during the fourth bombing run.

7TH AIR FORCE BOMBS YAP FOR FIRST TIME

PEARL HARBOR, Aug. 21 (AP)—Bombers of the Seventh Army Air Force raided Yap in the western Carolines, 525 miles southwest of Guam, for the first time Saturday and also struck northward at Pagan and Alamagan in the Marianas.

These attacks by Liberators based in the Marianas were announced today in a Pacific Fleet press release, along with news of raids by Navy or Marine planes on Nauru Island and in the Marshalls.

Yap, importapt because of its weather and cable stations, has been bombed previously by American carrier planes and by land-based bombers of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command. The Liberators plastered the airfield and adjacent installations, meeting no interception and only meager ground fire.

Alamagan Island, just south of Pagan, had not been attacked previously. Intense anti-aircraft fire was reported at Pagan, where docks and gun positions were blasted.

Two Navy search planes made the attacks Friday and Saturday on Nauru, phosphate island on the Equator west of the American-held Gilberts. That island, a British mandate, was occupied by the Japanese two years ago this month. It has been bombed almost daily since late July.

JAPANESE ON MOVE SOUTH OF HANGCHOW

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 21 (AP)—A new outbreak of fighting in Chekiang, coastal province below Shanghai, was announced today. The Chinese High Command said the Japanese had moved out of Wuyi, ninety-five miles south of Hangchow, in a southeast direction.

The Japanese possibly were started on a new mopping-up expedition.

Chinese twenty-five miles northwest of Hengyang in Hunan Province faced a new flanking threat from enemy units that drove from Siangsiang, sixty miles north of Hengyang. Fighting still was proceeding around Ichang on the Yangtze, where the Chinese have begun diversionary operations.

To prevent the Japanese from reinforcing their troops in Hunan, the Chinese are attacking enemy positions north and south of the Yangtze.

CHINESE GAINING TENGCHUNG WALL

Chungking, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The Chinese announced today that they had gained the entire southeastern wall of Tengchung, Japanese stronghold in Yunnan province, except for one gap now being reduced. Other Chinese troops lost and then regained Laotungpo, important hill position southeast of the Burma Road town of Lungling, and drove the enemy back with heavy casualties on both sides.

A new outbreak of fighting in Chekiang, the coastal province below Shanghai, was announced today. The Chinese High Command said Japanese had moved out of Wuyi, ninety-five miles south of Hangchow, in a southeastward direction. The Japanese possibly were started on a new mopping up expedition.

Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The existence of a ghost force of Fourteenth Army jungle rangers who harassed the Japanese the past three months in a series of daring actions during which the enemy was driven from Manipur State into northern Burma, was disclosed today. In the last thirty days the mystery force, made up of Indian troops, killed 675 Japs in ambush, wounded 245 and destroyed sixty motor vehicles.

The force lived off the country, and ranged widely behind the Japanese lines. The unit suffered only four casualties, including a single fatality.

Japanese forces have withdrawn from the Indian frontier area and broken contact, today's communique said. The Fourteenth Army occupied Khauivum.

Halmahera and Boeroes Blasted

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 22 (Tuesday (AP).—Bombers from southwest Pacific bases blasted Halmahera and Boeroe Island west of New Guinea with 205 tons in new raids announced today.

Eight grounded Japanese planes were destroyed or damaged in the strike at Boeroe on Saturday.

Patrol planes bombed a Japanese freighter off Mindanao in the Philippines Sunday. Other planes destroyed two small freighters near Celebes and set a small freighter afire near the Talaud Islands, between Halmahera and Mindanao.

New Yorkers Win Pacific Air Medals

By the Associated Press.

SOMEWHERE IN THE S. W. PACIFIC (Delayed). — Lt. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of Allied Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific, has awarded air medals to these New York fliers for participation in a raid on Rabaul, New Britain, Nov. 2, 1943, in which heavy losses were inflicted upon the enemy:

S/Sgt. William G. Metaxotos, 434 W. 48th St., was awarded the bronze oak leaf cluster to the Air Medal for participating in sustained operational flight missions during which hostile contact was probable and expected.

Natives on Guam Get Lost; New Roads Prove Vexing

By The Associated Press.

GUAM, Aug. 12 (Delayed)—American bulldozers, cutting what might be called roads on Guam, have just about upset the sense of direction of some natives.

Sgt. Murrey Marder, marine combat correspondent, tells this one:

A native Guam guide for marines on the west coast was released from duty yesterday and started for his home in the Mount Santa Rosa district. Four hours later he was back in the bivouac area.

"Don't you want to go back home?" someone asked.

"Yes," he replied, wearily, "but your people make new roads all over the island. I start for home but can't find the way. I am lost. So I come back here to stay. Later maybe I can find way home."

39,211 JAPS KILLED ON GUAM, SAIPAN

Americans Continue Mopping Up Operations on Both Islands.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP) The Japanese lost 14,067 dead on Guam, [illegible] on Saipan, the Navy announced tonight.

Only 100 Japanese prisoners were taken by American forces in the recapture of Guam from the Japanese, who had wrested the Pacific island from the United States early in the war.

Mopping up operations are continuing in the Marianas, the Navy said. During the period Aug. 11 through 17th, 593 Japanese were killed on Guam, at a cost of 12 American soldiers killed and 61 wounded.

During the same period, 187 additional Japanese were killed on Saipan, and 15 prisoners taken, at a cost of 5 wounded and one missing American.

On Tinian island, 201 Japanese were killed during that period, and 15 prisoners taken. The total Japanese [illegible] that island now number 5,745. Five Americans were killed and 11 wounded between Aug. 11 and 17th.

Meanwhile, the aerial onslaught against the island outposts of the Japanese empire continued, with the Navy planes having bombed Paramushiro island in the northern Kuriles on Aug. 19.

Airfields were bombed and strafed. Three enemy fighters took to the air but did not attempt to attack the United States planes.

Earlier the Navy had announced that attacks had been delivered on six islands in the western Pacific.

YAWATA LEFT BURNING BADLY BY SUPERFORTS

Night Raiders Half Hour's Flight Away Saw Fires Set Earlier.

JAPAN HIT BY DOUBLE BLOW

Four Big U. S. Bombers Lost—15 Enemy Planes Shot Down, 13 More Probably Destroyed.

Washington, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—Superfortresses of the Twentieth United States Air Force yesterday attacked Yawata, the so-called Pittsburgh of Japan, in two waves, one by day and the other by night, and the pilots of the second wave were today revealed to have sighted—while still half an hour's flight away—the great fires started by the daylight bombers.

Four of the Superfortresses were lost to every action, it was announced here. These losses, it was learned, were all sustained by the daylight raiders who met a strong fighter opposition. On the other hand, the Americans shot down fifteen enemy fighters, probably destroyed thirteen more and damaged twelve in the course of the two co-ordinated attacks.

The text of the communique follows:

"Superfortresses of the Twentieth Bomber Command in Sunday night's attack again hit Japanese industrial targets in the Yawata area of the Japanese homeland island of Kyushu, following up the daylight attack. Crews on the night mission reported that they could see fires from the previous attack burning thirty minutes before arriving over the target. Bombing results were reported in preliminary estimates as fair. Enemy opposition was rather light and anti-aircraft fire was moderate and inaccurate.

"Planes making the daylight attack met relatively strong fighter opposition, and revised estimates of results show fifteen enemy fighter planes destroyed, thirteen probably destroyed and twelve damaged. From the co-ordinated day and night attacks, four planes have been reported lost due to enemy action."

The Tokyo radio, as usual, minimized the effects of the raids, terming damage "negligible" and claiming that 23 planes out of a total of 80 were destroyed in the two raids. It also asserted that twenty parachuting American crewmen were captured. The Japanese broadcasts said the first raid was against four cities on Kyushu, the southernmost main island, naming Fukuoka, Moji, Kokura and Yawata. The latter, site of numerous heavy industries, has been hit twice previously.

The Japanese communique acknowledged the loss of three Japanese fighter planes.

Foe Quitting Moluccas.

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—Japan is withdrawing her planes from the Moluccas and ripping up the abandoned dromes, leaving that island cluster below the Philippines wide open for Allied invasion.

Largest island of the Moluccas group, also known as the Spice Islands, is Halmahera, 200 miles west of New Guinea and only 300 south of Mindanao.

Announcing that [illegible] construction equipment, the enemy is apparently withdrawing his air forces to bases further westward beyond our bomber range," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in a communique today:

"This will make possible an advance westward without the necessity of costly frontal assaults to clear the way. "Our air force is continuing its pressure, but is finding many enemy air bases non-operative and others stripped of planes.

"The enemy is no longer contesting the air over the Moluccas."

The communique added that the Moluccca chain was being "strategically sterilized and divided into its component links," leaving the numerous garrisons there impotent for anything but local action.

Many Targets Attacked.

Allied planes continued to strike at Japanese targets in the Pacific on a 2,500-mile arc from Timor to the Marianas. American Fighters, probably from Guam or Saipan, strafed Rota and Pagan in the Marianas Thursday and Fridy.

A Liberator damaged a 1,500-ton freighter transport off Davao in the [illegible] Philippines Friday.

Air patrols near Celebes damaged a 3,000-ton freighter and sank a 500-ton coastal vessel Saturday, while fighters sweeping Ceram Island, south of Halmahera, destroyed or damaged a small freighter, three coastal vessels and six barges.

Other planes raided Palau, in the Carolines; Mille and Wotje, in the Marshalls; Nauru, Bougainville, New Britain, New Ireland, New Guinea and islands in the Dutch East Indies.

Tokyo Sees It Coming.

London, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The Berlin radio today broadcast a Tokyo dispatch reporting lively Allied aerial activity north of Australia, and quoting Japanese as reasoning that this activity "probably foreshadows fresh offensive operations in that area."

Recent Allied attacks reported in the Tokyo dispatch were on Amboina and Boeroe islands in the Moluccas by flights of forty bombers each two days ago. Twenty other bombers hit Boela on Ceram Island, Tokyo said. Kai Island and Manokwari on New Guinea, Koror in the Carolines, Rota in the Marianas and Yap also were reported bombed.

Second Wave of B-29s Sights Fires Raging in Kyushu Plants

Four Super Forts Lost in Double Blow At Jap Homeland; 15 Fighters Downed

(Map on Page A-4.)

By the Associated Press.

B-29 bombers in the second wave of yesterday's double strike at Japan reported sighting the flames of destruction wrought by the daylight flight of Super Fortresses while still a half hour from the industrial targets at Kyushu.

Four of the huge bombers were lost to enemy action in the day raid and none in the night attack by the 20th Air Force. The important Yawata industrial section was the target of both flights, the first double blow of the war on the Japanese home islands.

The American planes shot down 15 enemy fighters, while 13 were probably destroyed and 12 damaged.

The text of communique No. 10 from headquarters of the 20th Air Force:

"Super Fortresses of the 20th Bomber Command in Sunday night's attack again hit Japanese industrial targets in the Yawata area of the Japanese homeland island of Kyushu following up the daylight attack.

"Crews of the B-29's on the night mission reported that they could see fires from the previous attack burning 30 minutes before arriving over the target. Bombing results were reported in preliminary estimates as fair. Enemy opposition was rather light and anti-aircraft fire was moderate and inaccurate.

15 Enemy Fighters Destroyed.

"Planes making the daylight attack met relatively strong fighter opposition and revised estimates of results show 15 enemy fighter planes destroyed, 13 probably destroyed and 12 damaged. From the co-ordinated day and night attacks four planes have been reported lost due to enemy action."

The Tokyo radio, as usual, minimized the effects of the raids, terming damage "negligible" and claiming that 23 planes out of a total of 80 were destroyed. It also asserted that 20 parachuting American crewmen were captured. The Japanese broadcasts said the first raid was against four cities on Kyushu, the southernmost main island, naming Fukuoka, Moji, Kokura and Yawata. The latter, site of numerous heavy industries, has been hit twice previously.

Possibility that a big naval base also was a target was seen in the Japanese statement that both raids were directed at "Northern Kyushu and the Western Choguku district." The Office of War Information identified "Choguku" as Shikoku, a naval base on the main island of Honshu. The German DNB agency, which relayed the Japanese broadcast, said, however, it was the island of Shikuku, east of Kyushu.

The 20th Air Force, noting that the initial attack was the first daylight operation over Japan proper since the historic attack on Tokyo headed by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle on April 18, 1942, had no information on results of the second attack.

Heaviest of Six Attacks.

Apparently it was the heaviest of six attacks since the B-29s first took to the air two months ago to blast vital Japanese war industries and shipping.

Tokyo broadcast the first news of the attack. Its initial claim was that 13 of the raiders were brought down, three of them by "suicide fighters" which rammed the Yank planes. It said the Super Fortresses flew in more than 10 formations.

The 20th Air Force has acknowledged the loss of only seven Super Fortresses in the five previous air assaults on Japan and occupied areas, although it has indicated that other bombers were lost and some damaged.

The loss of four planes—two by accident, one by enemy antiaircraft fire and one missing—was admitted in the first major raid which struck at Yawata on June 15. Three planes were listed as not accounted for after the August 10 attacks on Palembang, a petroleum center in Southern Sumatra, and Nagasaki, a port and manufacturing city on Kyushu.

Losses Declared Light.

In the July 29 raids against Anshan, steel city in Manchuria, and Tangku, a port in Occupied China, losses were described merely as "light." All planes returned safely after the July 7 operation, which had as its targets Yawata, Sasebo and Omura, important homeland industrial centers; the Port of Laoyao on the North China coast and Hangkow on the Yangtze River. No losses were reported in an early June test raid on Bangkok.

Brig. Gen. Haywod S. Hansell, Jr., who had much to do with planning the air offensive against Germany's war production, is chief of staff of the 20th Air Force and presumably is doing a similar job on Japan. He said six months ago that the Japanese industrial economy had been studied by military experts for several years and declared that it could be destroyed from the air.

The enemy has been reluctant to admit serious industrial harm, but the 20th Air Force has said on several occasions that "observed bombing results were reported to be good."

BOB HOPE TROUPE NOW IN NEW GUINEA

Lands in Rain, Gives Show At Hollandia

Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, Aug. 21 (AP)—The Bob Hope-Frances Langford expeditionary force arrived at Hollandia by plane from Australia in a mid-afternoon downpour today, and four hours later they were tickling the funnymore of more than 1,000 GI's in a sprightly USO stage show.

It was the first live entertainment for soldiers at this great forward base. As they literally clawed holes in the palm-fround wings of the stage to get a bigger eyeful, Hope quipped:

"The termites are bad around here, aren't they?

"Lovely Hunsk Of Morale"

The GI's laughed, but continued to rip the palms aside for a better view of Miss Langford and pretty Patty Thomas, Hollywood tapdancer.

"Aren't they lovely hunks of morale, boys?" Hope asked.

The answering roars and whistles would have drowned out a flight of bombers.

Hope greeted two old golfing [illegible] in the [illegible], Lieut. Bud Ward, of Spokane, United States amateur champion, and Sergt. Henry McLemore, former columnist.

The rest of the troupe included Jerry Colonna, movie and radio comedian; Capt. Lanny Ross, former radio singer; Barney Dean, Hollywood gagman, and Tony Romano, guitarist-singer.

Diary Of The War

Aug. 22, 1944 (AP).

Three of France's great cities were ripe for liberation last night as American armored columns smashed across the Seine river on both sides of Paris. French troops fought into the naval base of Toulon and other Allied forces were within less than nine miles of Marseille.

The German radio reported that Yank reconnaissance forces were in the Paris suburbs. 'Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's tank columns were astride the Seine both in the area of Fontainebleau, 35 miles southeast of Paris, and at Mantes, 25 miles northwest.

—o—

In southern France American infantry captured Valensole, 50 miles inland from Toulon and a third of the way to Lyon. North of Marseille other Yank columns were racing toward the broad Rhone valley. The count of German prisoners rose to more than 14,000.

—o—

Russian troops, lashing out anew northeast of Warsaw, were reported by Moscow to have shattered a 20-mile section of the German defense line along the railway to Bialystok. The Russians also acknowledged a reverse, confirming a German report that Soviet forces had abandoned Tukums, 30 miles west of Riga in western Latvia, enabling the Nazis to regain contact with their forces fighting in Estonia and eastern Latvia.

—o—

A 205-ton bombload was dropped on Halmahera and Boeroe, west of New Guinea. There was no Japanese interception as American bombs demolished warehouses and started fires and explosions.

A freighter was bombed off Mindanao, southern Philippines, and two small cargo ships were sunk near Celebes.

Central Pacific bombers attacked targets in the Carolines, the Marianas and the Marshalls, and also attacked Nauru.

—o—

Striking into the sea area east of Hongkong, an American Liberator bomber from a Chinese base sank a 14,200-ton Japanese cruiser. The warship went down within sight of the Yank flyers after three direct hits.

The navy, reporting for the first time in 11 days on submarine warfare, told of the sinking of 19 additional Japanese ships. The latest victims were a light cruiser, an escort vessel, a large tanker and 16 cargo-transport and cargo ships.

Japs Acknowledge Raids on Islands

By the Associated Press.

The Jap domestic radio said today that enemy aircraft yesterday hit Rota in the southern Marianas group in the western Carolines and Wotje in the Marshalls during Sunday.

The broadcast heard by U. S. government monitors, said 20 Liberator bombers raided Yap in daylight, while six smaller planes attacked Rota. Wotje Island in the Marshalls was persistently bombed in the morning by 18 small planes, the broadcast said.

DELEGATES URGE ENFORCED PEACE IN OPENING TALKS

Big Three Optimistic About Reaching Agreement on Security Policy.

PREDICT VICTORY NEAR

Hull Emphasizes Need of Maintaining Allied Fighting Power.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—(AP) American, British and Russian delegates sat down today to build the international machinery for a peaceful world after a victory one said was "not far off."

Secretary of State Hull opened the first meeting of the conference at luxurious Dumbarton Oaks in Georgetown, and both Sir Alexander Cadogan, head of the British group, and Ambassador Andrei Gromyko, leading the Russian delegation, joined in his optimistic prediction of agreement on the outline of a world security organization.

Sees Victory Near

Gromyko, declaring tha tthe time "is not far off when the freedom-loving nations, and first of all our nations, will bring complete victory," said that the unity of the Allies is a guarantee that the Dumbarton Oaks talks will reach "positive results." Urging speed, Cadogan said "peace may come sooner than some expect."

Hull, in his welcoming speech, and Cadogan and Gromyko in their responses, stressed the need for maintaining the fighting strength of the Allies, ready for quick use if aggression threatens after the war.

The three spoke informally, seated at the long u-shaped table around which were gathered their diplomatic and military advisers.

Each speaker sought to reassure the [illegible] that they will have a adequate role in the future organization, emphasized the importance of ready might for security, and underlined the special responsibility of the strong nations to lead in enforcing peace.

There was some difference in emphasis in th. American, British and Russian talks, reflecting varying approaches to the problem of preventing wars, but the speeches indicated, as Cadogan said, that "there is already much common ground."

Secretary Hull said "it cannot be emphasized too often that the principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a system of order under law, must constitute the foundation of any future international organization for the maintenance of peace and security."

Reasserting Hull's statement, Cadogan said that "even Hitler has surely learned by now, what we have ourselves long known, that it is not by riding roughshod over the smaller powers that the vital interests of the larger can in the long run best be protected."

Emphasize Enforced Peace

Gromyko gave greater stress to the primary burden on the large powers, but he said that all big and small freedom-loving nations can take part in the peace agency.

As for the determination to cooperate, he said people "have shed too much blood to be indifferent to their future."

"That is why they are striving," he said, "to establish an international organization which would be capable of preventing the repetition of such a tragedy." To this end, he continued, the resources of all the freedom-loving nations and especially of the big three represented at the conference table must be used effectively.

"In this fighting, saving, our country's security will not but find support on the part of the other United Nations, big and small, which will be participants of the international security organization, which will be based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all freedom-loving countries," Gromyko declared.

Reflecting the general agreement against an international police force, Cadogan said that "the nations of the world should maintain, according to their capacities, sufficient forces available for joint action when necessary to prevent breaches of the peace."

The chief of the British delegation warned the confrerees against attempting too precise a blue-print for the postwar world, and added that they must not think United Nations agreement on a theoretically perfect plan would insure peace.

The recommendations which will come from the conference are to be sent first to Moscow, London and Washington. After approval there it is proposed to submit them to the other United Nations and to the public generally as the framework which may become the constitution of the new association of nations.

The three delegations are to begin actual work tomorrow morning at 10:[illegible] Undersecretary of State [illegible] heading the American group.

They had an audience at the beginning session today, attended by about 200 reporters and photographers, but for the next three weeks they will work together behind the closed gates of Dumbarton Oaks' red brick wall.

China will join in similar talks with Britain and the United States at the conclusion of the present conference.

The attention Capitol Hill is giving the Dumbarton Oaks talks was highlighted in one sentence by Rep. Jarman (D-Ala.) who told the House that the conference must be successful "if civilization is to survive."

Technicians at Security Talks

Men of Four Nations at Dumbarton Oaks Are Skilled in International Diplomacy.

Washington, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—The spotlight of history focused on Dumbarton Oaks today shows the men gathered to plot a course for world peace to be a group of able technicians determined to do a job, not perform a diplomatic spectacle.

While experienced in international relations, they are for the most part the back-stage operators who depend on expert calculations rather than silk-hats and imposing rhetoric to do their work.

In brief, these are the men representing the British, American and Russian governments:

Sir Alexander Cadogan, head of the British delegation, is considered a typical career civil servant. He has spent his life in the Foreign Office, rising from Secretary of the Embassy at Constantinople (now Istanbul) before the last war to his present position of Permanent Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs.

The quiet, 59-year-old statesman attended the Atlantic Charter, Quebec and Teheran Conferences, as well as Premier Churchill's meeting with Stalin in December, 1942. He is known for his imperturbability, even to buzz-bombs, and his restrained language which he spices only on a golf course.

Gladwyn Jebb, second man for the British, followed the Eton-to-Oxford-to-Foreign Office route and at 40 years of age is Foreign Office Secretary-General. He has specialized on momentous but untrumpeted problems of postwar planning, and British newspaper men have called him one of "Sir Alexander's back-room boys."

An Noted Historian.

Most colorful member of the British delegation is Professor Charles K. Webster, a nineteenth century historian whose position corresponds to that of Dr. Isaiah Bowman, noted geographer on the American delegation. Both played important parts at the Paris peace conference after the last war.

Longest list of delegates is the American, headed by jovial silver-headed Edward R. Stettinus Jr., 43-year-old Undersecretary of State.

Secretary Hull's special assistant, pudgy, round-faced Leo Pasvolsky, who heads the State Department's secret post-war planning committee, will probably do most of the behind-the-scenes work. Born in Russia and versed in economics, international affairs and political science, Mr. Pasvolsky has been working for two years on the American memorandum for the conference.

The Pasvolsky committee has been a secret one because none of its members will talk about their work.

Wast Paris Delegate.

American military officials to the conference are as experienced in their field of international diplomacy as their political counterparts. Rear Admiral Harold C. Train was at the London naval conference and Major-Gen. George V. Strong went to the last peace conference at Paris.

Only two members of the Russian delegation are well known in this country, and both speak English fluently. The chairman is Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko, handsome, reserved and conscious of the heavy responsibility he bears at 36.

He brings as deputy chairman A. A. Sobolev, formerly charge and counselor of the Soviet embassy in London. In his early fifties, the sandy-haired, moustached diplomat has spent most of his life in the Foreign Commissariat.

With the exception of the chiefs of delegations, few of the conferees will be widely recognized. They are the technicians who seldom make the front pages but whose expert knowledge lays the background for the news.

Hull, Cadogan and Gromyko Speeches

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (AP).—The complete texts of remarks today by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State; by Sir Alexander Cadogan, British Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs and leader of the British delegation, and by Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko, head of the Russian delegation, at the opening of the International Security Conference follow:

Secretary Hull

On behalf of President Roosevelt and [illegible] I welcome you to Washington. In the name of both of us, I desire to offer some brief remarks on the opening of this important meeting.

The series of conferences which we initiate today marks another step toward establishing a lasting system of organized and peaceful relations among nations. We met at a time when the war is moving toward an overwhelming triumph of the forces of freedom. It is our task here to help lay the foundations upon which, after victory, peace, freedom, and a growing prosperity may be built for generations to come.

The very character of this war moves us to search for an enduring peace—a peace founded upon justice and fair dealing for individuals and for nations. We have witnessed—and are witnessing today—the sweep of forces of savagery and barbarism of the kind that civilized men hoped and believed would not rise again. Armed with the weapons of modern science and technology and with equally powerful weapons of coercion and deceit, these forces almost succeeded in enslaving mankind because the peace-loving nations were disunited. During the years while these aggressions made their preparations for attack, the peace-loving nations lacked both unity and strength because they lacked a vigilant realization of the perils which loomed before them. These forces of evil now face utter defeat because, at long last, the intended victims attained the unity and armed power which are now bringing victory to us.

Lessons of Disunity

The lessons of earlier disunity and weakness should be indelibly stamped upon the minds and hearts of this generation and of generations to come. So should the lessons of unity and its resultant strength achieved by the United Nations in this war.

Unity for common action toward common good and against common peril is the sole effective method by which, in time of peace, the nations which love peace can assure for themselves security and orderly progress, with freedom and justcie. In the face of what modern war means to the physical and moral being of man, the maintenance of such unity is a matter of the highest and most enlightened self-interest. In the final analysis it is, first and foremost, a thing of the spirit.

Peace, like liberty, requires constant devotion and ceaseless vigilance. It requires willingness to take positive steps toward its preservation. It requires constant co-operation among the nations and determination to live together as good neighbors in a world of good neighbors. Peace requires an acceptance of the idea that its maintenance is a common interest so precious and so overwhelmingly important that all differences and controversies among nations can and must be resolved by resort to pacific means.

But peace also requires institutions through which the will to peace can be translated into action. The devising of such institutions is a challenge to the wisdom and ingenuity of men and women everywhere. That is why the United Nations, in the midst of a relentless prosecution of the war, have been working together to create the institutional foundations for a just and enduring peace.

Joint Use of Force

These foundations must support arrangements for peaceful settlement of international disputes and for the joint use of force, if necessary, to prevent or suppress threats to the peace or breaches of the peace. They must also support arrangements for promoting by co-operative effort the development of conditions of stability and well being necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations and essential to the maintenance of security and peace. These are basic problems of international organization.

Substantial progress has already been achieved through the food and agriculture conference, the conference on relief and rehabilitation and the financial and monetary conference. These and other similar steps are indicative of the profound desire of the United Nations to act together for advancing the well being of their peoples. They have been achieved by united effort of more than forty nations, large and small.

The governments represented here are fully agreed in their conviction that the future maintenance of peace and security—the supreme objective of international co-operation—must be a joint task and a joint responsibility of all peace-loving nations, large and small. They solemnly proclaimed this conviction in a declaration of their foreign ministers at Moscow on Oct. 30, 1943. It can not be emphasized too often that the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a system of order under law, must constitute the foundation of any future international organization for the maintenance of peace and security.

Cites Moscow Declaration

In the Moscow declaration each government also assumed its share of responsibility for leadership in bringing about the creation of an international organization for this purpose through joint action by all peace-loving nations. Success or failure of such an organization will depend upon the degree to which the participating nations are willing to exercise self-restraint and assume the responsibilities of joint action in support of the basic purposes of the organization. There must be agreement among all whereby each can play its part to the best mutual advantage and bear responsibility commensurate with its capacity.

It is generally agreed that any peace and security organization would surely fail unless backed by force to be used ultimately in case of failure of all other means in the maintenance of peace. That force must be available promptly, in adequate measure, and with certainty. The nations of the world should maintain, according to their capacities, sufficient forces available for joint action when necessary to prevent breaches of the peace.

For a long time before the Moscow conference, and especially during the months which have elapsed since that conference, each of our governments has been making diligent preparations for an effort to reach the agreement to which I have just referred. We have committed our tentative thoughts to writing, and each of us has had an opportunity to study the results of the work done by the others. All this should make easier the task which is now before you of reaching a concensus of views which you can jointly recommend to your respective governments.

It is the intention of the government of the United States that after similar consultations with the government of China, the conclusions reached will be communicated to the governments of all the United Nations and of other peace-loving nations.

Public Debate Proposed

It is our further thought that as soon as practicable, these conclusions will be made available to the peoples of our countries and of all countries for public study and debate. We are fully aware that no institution—especially when it is of as great importance as the one now in our thoughts—will endure unless there is behind it considered and complete popular support. The will to peace must spring from the hearts and minds of men and women everywhere, if it is to achieve enduring peace.

For us in the United States, it is as natural as it is desirable that we gather around a table with the representatives of other nations to devise means for maintaining peace and security. No passion runs deeper in the thoughts of the people of this country than the belief that all men should enjoy liberty under law. It has been our faith from the beginning of our nation, it is our faith for the future, that every individual and every nation should attain freedom and the security to enjoy it. The people of this country are now united as never before in their determination that the tragedy which today is sweeping the earth shall not recur.

The people of all the United Nations are hoping and praying for the opportunity to build anew toward a system of decent and just relationships among nations. Their noblest capacities and their highest skills have been divested from the creative pursuits of peace to the grim and terrible tasks of battle. They see the destruction of their homes and the resources of their lands. They will not be content with a precarious peace. Their sacrifices can only be rewarded by the fulfillment of their reasonable hopes.

It is the sacred duty of the governments of all peace-loving nations to make sure that international machinery is fashioned through which the peoples can build the peace they so deeply desire. The President is confident, and I share his view, that this thought will govern the deliberations which you are now undertaking.

Sir Alexander Cadogan

The discussions which open today arise out of Article A of the Declaration of Moscow, in the framing of which Mr. Hull played such a notable and prominent part. We have listened with admiration to the wise and powerful words with which he has initiated our labors, and we are, I know, all profoundly grateful to him for his indefatigable efforts in the cause of international understanding. Of him it may be said that he embodies in his own thought and person the qualities which have been responsible for the creation and the development of the country which he represents.

To the Soviet government, too, we all have reason to be grateful. It was, I think, on M. Molotov's initiative that the decision to hold these discussions was taken; and it was evident from their attitude at the time of the Moscow conference that the Soviet government attached the highest importance to the establishment of a system designed to prevent a recurrence of Nazi and Fascist aggression.

My government, for their part, have from the outset favored such discussions as these and have done their best to facilitate them. We have expressed our provisional views in the papers which have been circulated, and are most happy to find that in the papers of all three governments there is such a large measure of agreement.

There seems, in fact, to be a general will on the part of what are at present the three most powerful states in the world to achieve some kind of world organization, and, what is more, to achieve it soon. That should itself be a good augury for the success of our labors.

Hopes for Agreement

Chinese friends can also have no doubt of their wish to join in the establishment of such an organization, and I am confident that the subsequent discussions with the Chinese delegation will show that there is a community of aim on the part of the most populous and ancient of our civilizations. We shall thus, I hope, be able to achieve agreement on principles between officials from states comprising about half the inhabitants of the globe, and from states moreover whose combined power and determination is now playing so prominent a part in overthrowing the sinister forces of evil, which only a few years ago came near to dominating all mankind.

The victory of the United Nations, whenever it comes, must be complete, the military defeat of the aggressors must be made clear beyond all doubt, and most of all to the German people themselves and those responsible for the wanton outrages that have horrified the civilized world must receive their just retribution. On that basis we may hope to build more securely for the future. In 1919 there was a widespread feeling in many Western countries that force was in itself an immoral thing: Now there is a much more widespread conviction that it is only by the victors remaining both strong and united that peace can be preserved. We have, I believe, learnt many salutary lessons during the last few years.

Small Nations Included

We are met here to plan a system which will enable individual nations to co-operate effectively for the common good. Individual nations, small and great, must be the basis of our new world organization; and our problem is to construct a machine which will give to each of them the responsibilities commensurate with its power. This is no light task, but it can be accomplished. No one wishes to impose some great-power dictatorship on the rest of the world; but it is obvious that unless the great powers are united in aim and ready to assume and fulfill loyally their obligations, no machine for maintaining peace, however perfectly constructed, will in practice work. On the other hand, even Hitler has surely learnt by now, what we ourselves have long known, that it is not by riding roughshod over the smaller powers that the vital interests of the larger can in the long run best be protected.

Another lesson I submit we may learn from experience is that we should not attempt too closely to define what is perhaps undefinable. As I have already said, no machine will work unless there is, at any rate on the part of the great powers, a will to work it; and equally even an imperfect machine may function satisfactorily provided such a will exists. We might do well, therefore, to concentrate on certain guiding principles and on certain basic institutions, rather than on a set of detailed regulations, which, however ingeniously drafted, will probably have to be revised in the light of subsequent experience.

One other consideration I would put before you: we must remember that peace, in the negative sense of absence of war, is not enough. No world system can endure unless it permits of growth and unless it tends to promote the well being of humanity as a whole. Hence, however we may fit the various non-political world organizations into our general system, we must attempt to discover means whereby the expanding force of modern scientific discoveries is turned into constructive rather than into destructive channels. For this reason we must arrange for at least a measure of co-ordination between the various functional organizations now created or to be created, and in some way gear them to our world international machine. All I would emphasize here is that we should always recognize that, if there is acute political instability, economic or social organization will function successfully, and, on the other hand, let us never forget that acute discomfort in the economic and social field will constantly hamper the smooth operation of the best political plans. In other words, freedom from fear and freedom from want must, so far as human agency can contrive it, move forward simultaneously.

Talks Only Exploratory

In conclusion, I must, for my part, emphasize that the working party from the United Kingdom is recruited from the humble official level. From that it follows that, so far as we are concerned, these talks are necessarily exploratory and non-committal. Within these limitations we will make the best contributino we can, and I can pledge every one of us to devote his best energies and such knowledge and experience as he possesses to the search for agreed recommendations for submission by our governments, if they approve them, to all the other United Nations. We may take comfort in the fact that, as will be seen from the memoranda already circulated there is already much common ground.

Let us also not forget the time factor. Events are moving fast and peace may come sooner than some expect. It would be folly to delay the construction of at least some framework of future international co-operation until the problems of peace confront us with all their insistency. Moreover, the time even of officials is limited. If, therefore, we are to establish the points on which there seems to be provisional agreement, we must work fast and well.

Much depends on our efforts, and some give and take will probably be required. Let us go forward [illegible] responsibilities not only to our own nations but to the world at large. Let us go forward above all with the determination to produce a scheme worthy of the men and women fo the United Nations who are giving their all to make possible the construction of a better world.

Ambassador Gromyko

The present meeting is the first meeting of exploratory discussions between representatives of the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union on the establishment of an international security organization. I fully share the thoughts expressed by Secretary Hull in regard to the importance of the present discussions. The peoples of our countries are waging a life-and-death struggle against the worst enemy of humanity—Hitlerite Germany. This struggle has already cost our countries, as well as many other freedom-loving countries of the world, heavy human and material sacrifices. Waging a struggle for its freedom and independence, the people of our three great nations are also saving the freedom and independence of other freedom-loving peoples of the world. As a result of the combined efforts of the Allies, our common foe—Nazi Germany—is nearing its inevitable catastrophe. Our brave warriors are squeezing the enemy from the east, west and south. As a result of the latest offensive of the Red Army military operations are [illegible] to enemy soil. The time is not far off when the combined efforts of the freedom-loving countries of the world and, first of all, the efforts of our nations, will bring a complete and decisive victory and will force Nazi Germany to her knees.

War's Prevention Sought

In view of the heavy destruction and countless sacrifices which the present war has brought to humanity, the freedom-loving peoples of the world are naturally looking for means to prevent repetition of a similar tragedy in the future. They have shed too much blood and made too many sacrifices to be indifferent to their future. That is why they are striving to establish an international organization which would be capable of preventing a repetition of a similar tragedy, and of guaranteeing for the peoples peace, security and prosperity in the future. Members of such an organization can be, as it is said in the four nations' declaration signed at the Moscow conference on Oct. 3, 1943, all big and small freedom-loving countries of the world. All of us are glad that one of the distinguished participants of the Moscow conference, Secretary Hull, is among us at the present meeting.

It goes without saying that in order to maintain peace and security it is not enough to have the mere desire to harness the aggressor and the desire to apply force against him if it should be demanded by circumstances. In order to guarantee peace and security it is absolutely necessary to have resources with the aid of which aggression could be prevented or suppressed and international order maintained.

Must Use All Resources

In the light of the above, it becomes clear what responsibility falls to the nations, members of the future security organization, and especially to the nations which bear the main bruont of the present war, and which possess the necessary resources and power to maintain peace and security. That is why all those to whom freedom and independence are dear cannot but draw the conclusion that this freedom and independence can be preserved only if the future international security organization will, in the interests of the freedom-loving peoples of the world, use effectively all resources in possession of members of the organization and, first of all, the resources of such great nations as the Soviet Union, the United States and Great Britain.

The unity displayed by these countries in the present struggle against Hitlerite Germany and its vassals gives ground for certainty that after final victory is achieved these nations will operate in maintaining peace and security in the future as they are co-operating at the present time in saving humanity from enslavement by the Fascist barbarians. In this noble striving our countries naturally cannot but find support on the part of the other United Nations, big and small, which will be participants of the international security organization, which will be based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all freedom-loving countries and which will bear joint responsibility for the maintenance of peace.

Positive Results Expected

The unity of the Allies displayed in the struggle against the common foe and their striving to maintain peace in the future is a guaranty that the present exploratory discussions will bring positive results. They are the first step leading to the erection of a building in the foundation of which all freedom-loving peoples of the world are interested — for an effective international organization on maintenance of peace and security.

In closing I consider it necessary to note the initiative taken by the government of the United States in calling the present conference. The Soviet delegation is glad to begin discussions with the American delegation headed by Edward R. Stettinius, with whom I have had the pleasure since 1941 of meeting and discussing at different times various matters of mutual interest, and also with the British delegation headed by Sir Alexander Cadogan. I have no doubt that in the course of the present discussions the representatives of the three nations will conduct their work in a spirit of mutual understanding and in a friendly atmosphere which cannot but add to the successful outcome of the discussions.

ROOSEVELT SAYS NELSON MISSION IS MOST URGENT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 — (AP) President Roosevelt vehemently denied today that Donald M. Nelson's assignment to China was a "kick in the teeth," and the WPB chairman, who had been reported on the verge of resignation, rushed plans to leave for the Orient.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement that Nelson's economic mission was temporary and would bring no change in war production policy in his absence prompted Nelson to drop any plans he may have had to quit in protest. A WPB spokesman said he was "perfectly satisfied."

Nelson's plan for limited reconversion of industry to a peacetime basis has been vigorously opposed by military officials, and some others, and there was speculation that the plans might be changed in his absence. Over the week-end some of his associates complained bitterly that he was being "kicked in the teeth' 'and "sent to Siberia."

Today's formal White House statement, which described Nelson's trip as "most necessary" and "necessarily confidential," was reported to have followed conferences between Nelson and White House aides.

Nelson was understood to have emerged with the impression his mission would require no longer than the three weeks or thereabouts which he originally felt necessary.

A much longer stay had been indicated in a White House statement issued Saturday night, which said Nelson and Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley would remain in China "several months" in conferences with Generalissimo Chiang Khai-shek.

Meanwhile, Rep. Voorhees (D.-Calif.) told the House he was "profoundly concerned" over the choice of Nelson for the journey and a member of the Senate War Investigating committee revealed plans for an investigation by that body.

'So much of the hopes of small business and the entire future of our economy depends on him,' Voorhees said, "I earnestly wish someone else had been chosen to make the trip."

A member of the influential Senate group, who asked that his name be withheld, said "if it is production they want in China, why don't they send Wilson, who is a production expert?" He referred to Charles E. Wilson, WPB executive vice chairman, who becomes acting chairman in Nelson's absence, and who has not always seen eye-to-eye with Nelson on the reconversion question. The Senate committee member said both Nelson and Wilson might be called before the committee this week.

DULLES TALKS WITH WILLKIE

Joint Statement On Foreign Affairs Conference Issued

New York, Aug. 21 (AP)—Wendell Willkie and John Foster Dulles, foreign affairs deputy for Republican Presidential nominee Thomas E. Dewey, conferred here today on international security problems.

"We have conferred extensively about various international problems bearing on world organization to assure lasting peace," Willkie and Dulles said in a joint statement.

"There was a full exchange of views not animated by partisan consideration or having to do with any candidacy but by the desire of both of us that the United States should play a constructive and responsible part in assuring world order."

Telegrams Exchanged

Nothing further was added to the statement, which was issued from Dulles' residence.

The meeting between Dulles and Willkie followed an exchange of telegrams with Governor Dewey, who told the 1940 Republican Presidential nominee he "should like to have the benefit of your views. . . ."

Dulles, who has been mentioned as the next Secretary of State if the Republicans win the November election, will leave for Washington at 8.30 tomorrow morning.

To Travel By Auto

He is scheduled to confer with Secretary Hull Wednesday afternoon to detail to him Dewey's foreign-policy beliefs. He will make the trip by automobile because of a foot injury.

Dulles also announced he would meet with Senator Austin (R., Vt.) at 10 A. M. Wednesday, and with Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) the same morning.

While in Washington he said he would be the house guest of Fred Mayer, on Kalorama road. A press conference at that residence was being planned for late tomorrow afternoon, he added.

Dewey Awaits Result Of Dulles-Willkie Talk

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 21 (AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today awaited the outcome of his talks-by-proxy on foreign affairs with Wendell L. Willkie.

The Republican Presidential nominee had canceled plans to spend last week end at his Pawling farm and conferred instead with his foreign-affairs deputy, John Foster Dulles, who visited Willkie today, and will go on to Washington to talk with Secretary Hull.

The Governor spent nearly three hours with Horace A. Hildreth, Republican candidate for Governor of Maine, who predicted that Republicans would carry most, if not all, of New England.

Campaign Trip Planned

Hildreth later told reporters that either Dewey or his running mate, Gov. John W. Bricker, of Ohio, would visit the State on a campaign trip.

Declaring that "Maine will go Republican," in the September 11 election, Hildreth said he and Dewey also had discussed the situation in New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

"The prospects are that we will carry them," he said.

Following up his Labor Day proclamation of Saturday, Dewey sent a message to the New York State Federation of Labor, convening today in Syracuse, in which he said the nation would depend on labor leaders for a "major contribution" toward solving post-war problems.

A way must be found, he declared, to provide "not doles but jobs for all."

Repeating that New York's war-time strike record is one of the nation's lowest, Dewey said:

"I know of no reason why the stability which you, and New York industry and the State Government together have achieved cannot be duplicated nationally."

Truman Declares 'Court-Martial' Will Disprove Kimmel Protest

By The Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 21—Senator Harry S. Tuman of Missouri, Democratic candidate for Vice President, in a statement made late today declared that every statement he had made in an article in the current issue of Colliers' Magazine was correct and that he was certain the court martial of officers commanding at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, would bear out every assertion he had made and more.

Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, in command of the Navy at Pearl Harbor at the time of the surprise attack by Japan, in a letter sent yesterday to Senator Truman protested that the latter had made false statements in the article in saying that Admiral Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, in command of the Army at Pearl Harbor, were not on speaking terms at the time of the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor and had failed to cooperate and coordinate Army and Navy efforts.

Both Admiral Kimmel and General Short are facing court martial.

"Every statement I made in my article in Colliers was correct," Mr. Truman replied. "I have no desire, no intention, of entering into a personal controversy with anyone, but I am certain that, from the information at my command, not only will the court martial when held bear out every statement I made out even more."

The statement did not mention Admiral Kimmel by name.

Attacks Roberts Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (AP)—Representative Ralph E. Church, Republican of Illinois, told the House today that the full story of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor would "shock" the world and added, "Washington was to blame."

He referred to the letter sent to Senator Truman by Rear Admiral Kimmel and continued:

"The Roberts report is nothing more than a political document. It was designed to allay the public clamor for information as to the party or parties responsible for our armed forces being taken by surprise.

"It was designed not to present the truth but to prevent the people from knowing the truth.

"I am personally convinced and I believe that a true investigation will substantiate me, that the people really responsible for the Pearl Harbor catastrophe were here in Washington on Dec. 7 and not in the Pacific.

"How can one otherwise explain the unwillingness of the Administration to hold the courts-martial of General Short and Admiral Kimmel?

"There is another interesting development in connection with the Pearl Harbor catastrophe which is beyond understanding.

"You will recall that two privates operating a detector unit sent a message to headquarters that planes were approaching and they were told by the lieutenant who received the message to forget it.

"That same lieutenant, one Kermit A. Tyler, is today a lieutenant colonel.

"Think of it. An officer who obviously was not alert at the time of Pearl Harbor has subsequently been promoted by the Army to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

"It is beyond understanding."

WALLACE FOR 'LATIN SOUL'

He Urges Texans Be Pioneers in Understanding Lands to South

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 21 — Texas is the door to all Latin American understanding, said Vice President Wallace today in an informal address to University of Texas students.

Speaking before 3,500 students, he declared:

"Texas must lead the nation in acquiring not merely the speech and culture of Mexico, but also the Latin soul."

Patriotism for one's country is a fine thing, he added, but patriotism about the whole world is even more important.

The Vice President said that after the war the United States would be the greatest creditor nation in the world "and it is up to us to have a better understanding of all nations in the world."

"If this country is to be safe in the long run we must establish more friendly relations with the nations to the south of us," he added.

WAR GOODS BILL AMENDED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 — (AP) Congressional action was taken today to give regular trade channels first crack at vast stores of surplus war property and to grant priorities to former owners and returning veterans in the purchase of surplus land.

The House tentatively accepted an amendment to surplus war property disposal legislation which is designed to protect established business concerns against unfair government competition by utilizing commercial channels of distribution" instead of making direct sales to consumers, as long as there is a demand from the commercial trade.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Halleck (R.-Ind.) and accepted by a 77 to 67 vote, also requires the surplus war property administrator to refuse to sell to speculators "or persons who would freeze surpluses in large quantities for any purpose." Exceptions would be made where a thorough survey shows that the surpluses cannot be handled on the regular market.

The Senate Military Affairs committee, which is drafting the Senate's own disposal bill, accepted an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney (D.-Wyo.) providing for the priorities in land disposal and placing the disposal under the joint control of the departments of interior and agriculture, rather than the reconstruction finance corporation, (RFC) as recently ordered by William L. Clayton, present surplus property administrator.

Under the priorities system set up in the O'Mahoney amendment, former owners would be given first chance to repurchase land which the government took from them.

30 24 — 18187

If the owner did not wish to repurchase, their lineal descendants or tenants would be given the next option, and if they did not exercise their priority the land would be offered to veterans before being put up for general sale.

The O'Mahoney amendment provides that the Secretaries of Interior and Agriculture would jointly classify all surplus land. That classified for resale in family-size farms would be sold by the agriculture department under the Bankhead-Jones act provisions for long-term, low-interest government financing. The remainder would be disposed of by the Interior department, or the owning agency.

ANTILLES CHIEF SHIFTED

General Shedd Gets New Duties —General Harding Takes Post

BALBOA, Canal Zone, Aug. 21 (AP)—Headquarters of the Panama Canal Department announced today that Maj. Gen. Edwin F. Harding, commander of the Panama Mobile Force and Security Command since March, 1943, had been named head of the Antilles Department, succeeding Maj. Gen. W. E. Shedd Jr., who has been assigned to new duties.

General Harding, a veteran of the early phases of the southwest Pacific campaign as commander of the Thirty-second Division, left for San Juan by plane today to assume his new post.

Connally Urges U. S. To Acquire All Islands Needed for Defense

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee expressed the view today that the United States should acquire title to or long-lease possession of "all islands necessary to its future defense."

"Military considerations should dictate our negotiations looking to the fortification of island outposts," the Texan told reporters. "We should not seek possession for possession's sake."

Senator Hatch, Democrat, of New Mexico, another supporter of administration foreign policy, asserted in an interview that he wanted the United States to have all bases "necessary to her own safety, and just as much ownership and control as possible."

Senator Connally's view is that all islands in the Pacific reconquered from Japan are subject to continued United States occupation in the postwar era.

"We should pick out all those islands necessary to our defense," Senator Connally said. "We should take all mandated islands in the Pacific away from Japan. In the Atlantic we should proceed to negotiate with our Allies for titles or long-term leases on any bases which might be necessary for the protection of our future security."

The Senate spokesman for the administration on foreign policy declined to talk of specific outposts, other than to say he thought "we ought to negotiate for a base in Iceland."

Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee last week introduced a resolution advocating permanent possession of all islands in either the Atlantic or Pacific which might be considered essential to the defense of the Panama Canal.

Army Denies Pampering Its Prisoners of War

Danielson Explains Treatment at Session of Legion

OMAHA, Aug. 21 (AP).—Major General C. H. Danielson, commanding general of the 7th Service Command, said today, "We of the Army have been accused by some misinformed individuals and sometimes by earnest and sincere but wholly prejudiced persons of pampering or coddling prisoners of war."

Addressing the state American Legion convention, General Danielson said treatment of prisoners of war is governed by the Geneva convention, and that the situation of our own men who are prisoners of our enemies "should be kept uppermost in our minds at all times."

The general said members of the Italian service units—former Italian prisoners of war—in a sense may be regarded as co-belligerents although actually they are more nearly on a limited parole status like trusties who work outside prison walls.

"They are performing duties of military benefit," he said. "We cannot use actual prisoners of war on such projects. . . . These men get prisoners' pay, that is, 80 cents a day or $24 a month. But unlike actual prisoners they are allowed $8 in cash and the remainder in canteen coupons. That is not much when it is considered they are doing jobs where free labor would be paid $5.75 or more a day if it were available."

Catholic Chaplain Killed in France

Philadelphia, Aug. 21 (A. P.).—Capt. Peter Bonner, a member of the Army Chaplain Corps a former assistant rector of Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of the Rosary, was killed in France on July 28.

His death was announced to the congregation yesterday after his brother, Myles Bonner of Hazleton, had been informed by the War Department. Father Bonner was about 38 years old.

Gripsholm Sailing Soon On Repatriation Mission

Washington, Aug. 21 (AP)—The Swedish repatriation liner Gripsholm will leave New York within a couple of days for another exchange of prisoners with Germany at Goteborg, Sweden, about September 8, the State and War departments announced tonight.

Among those to be exchanged will be seriously sick and wounded prisoners of war.

Enemy Cruiser Sunk Off China By U. S. Plane

19 Other Ships Sent Down by Submarines; Yawata Left Aflame in B-29 Raid

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (AP).—American blows by air from China and from under the sea left the Japanese digging a home industrial area out from under charred wreckage today and hunting replacements for twenty ships, three of them war vessels.

A triple strike by air—two Superfortress blows at the strategic production center of Yawata and the sinking of a 14,200-ton cruiser by a Liberator of the United States 14th Air Force—emphasized the growth of American force on the Asiatic mainland.

Submarines accounted for the other nineteen Japanese ships, including a light cruiser, an escort vessel, one large tanker, three medium cargo transports, eleven medium cargo ships and two small cargo vessels. The time of the submarine successes was not given in the Navy Department announcement here. The last report on undersea action came eleven days ago.

The new list brought to 706 the number of Japanese vessels which American submarines have accounted for, including fifty-six combat ships. Eleven other enemy warships have been reported probably sunk.

The news of the sinking of the big enemy cruiser came from Chungking, where Major General Claire L. Chennault, 14th Air Force commander, disclosed that the Liberator found the warship in the China Sea Saturday, getting three direct hits and one probable and watching it sink during the fourth bombing run.

Superfortresses of the United States 20th Air Force struck the Yawata Bay area Sunday in the first daylight mission against the Japanese homeland since Lieutenant General James H. Doolittle's carrier-launched medium bombers hit Tokyo April 18, 1942.

The huge planes ran into fighter opposition and intense anti-aircraft fire but reported good bombing results, and the fires they lighted with their explosives and incendiaries outlined the targets for a second force which hit the same area Sunday night. The flames were visible a half hour's flight away.

Four of the Superfortresses were lost in the daylight mission against Yawata, but the 20th Air Force announced destruction of fifteen enemy fighters, plus thirteen probably destroyed and twelve damaged.

The follow-up night mission met [illegible] enemy opposition, with anti-aircraft fire only moderate and inaccurate, and lost none of the superbombers. However only "fair" bombing results were claimed for the night attack, on the basis of preliminary reports.

The key industrial area of Yawata, a center of iron and steel production at the northern tip of Kyushu Island, was the target for the first B-29 mission against Japan proper on June 15 and was hit again July 7, when the near-by naval base of Sasebo also was bombed heavily.

The [illegible] reported the B-29 raids [illegible] directed at northern Kyushu and the western Chugoku district. The Office of War Information described the western Chugoku district as apparently embracing the western coastal area in the southwestern part of the principal Japanese island of Honshu. Kure, one of Japan's biggest naval bases, is in the Chugoku district, but is on the eastern coast.

[A dispatch from Walter Rundle, a United Press correspondent at a B-29 base, said the big bombers also blasted Lao Yao, terminal port for the Lunghai railroad in China and an important enemy shipping center, and the Kaifeng junction of the Peiping-Hankow-Lunghai railroad near the bend where the Chinese diverted the Yellow River in 1938 to halt a Japanese advance.]

Refugees Indicate Nazis Sank Ship

Washington, Aug. 21 (AP)—The War Refugee Board said today reports from five survivors indicated that the Turkish motor ship Mefkura, carrying refugees from Romania to Turkey, was shelled and sunk by German surface craft on August 5 in the Black Sea.

More than 250 passengers perished in the sinking. The survivors, John W. Pehle, executive director of the board, said, are now en route to Palestine.

1½ Million in War Supplies Salvaged by Liberty Ship Men

By the Associated Press.

Warplanes and other supplies valued at $1,500,000 were salvaged recently by American Liberty Ship seamen aided by British soldiers and sailors "almost under the nose of the Luftwaffe," the War Shipping Administration has reported.

Crewmen of the steamer William M. Meredith worked 14 to 16 hours a day in the torpedoed, burned and half submerged hulk of the Liberty Ship Thomas T. Masaryk.

Capt. Leonard J. Green, Kittery Point, Me., said his vessel, after a stormy Atlantic crossing, was attacked by German planes near Algiers. An attack by submarines followed shortly. The Meredith escaped damage, but the Masaryk was torpedoed and set afire.

The Meredith found a number of assembled P-47 Thunderbolt planes remained on the deck unharmed, and that a large number of P-39 Airacobras were undamaged in cases in the hold. Many trucks and other vehicles, tires, weapons and thousands of cases of canned food also were in the fire-sodden vessel.

The work went forward in the open sea under constant risk of attack by submarines and Nazi planes based on captured Crete.

The Masaryk was floated a short time later and towed to Port Said for Salvage and repair.

Mustering Out Of Million Seen After Nazis Fall

[illegible]rshey Says Discharge Will Be Gradual, Draft Supplying Replacements

DENVER, Aug. 21 (AP).—Major General Lewis S. Hershey, national director of Selective Service, today forecast release of 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 men from the armed services after Germany falls.

He indorsed the idea of "gradual demobilization" when all hostility [illegible] with Japan's defeat.

Discharge of a good part of America's fighting men when the Nazis collapse will not be accomplished "in one day," the draft chief cautioned.

"If we yet out 1,000 an hour, it will still take ten months to get rid of 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 men," he said.

General Hershey explained that gradual demobilization is desirable because "we know that when the saturation point is reached we will not gain very much by putting [illegible] where [illegible] can't be reached."

"We can keep people in the Army about as cheaply as we could create an agency for them when they are out," he said.

The general disclosed that Selective Service now is taking from 70,000 to 100,000 men a month, and he indicated that the draft will continue to operate at this rate after Germany signs an armistice.

"I think people shouldn't get too much braced for the day the armistice is signed in Europe," he said. "If we stop all production of men when the European war is over, we are condemning somebody to stay in the Army until the need for men is ended."

General Hershey added that the selective service law is in force until May 15, 1945.

Atkinson Heads 3d Bombers

TAMPA, Fla., Aug. 21 (AP).—Brigadier General Joseph H. Atkinson, forty-four years old, a veteran of nearly two years of combat service in the European and Mediterranean areas, has assumed command of the 3d Bomber Command, with headquarters at MacDill Field here. He succeeds Brigadier General Robert C. Oliver, who has returned to his assigned post as commanding general of the 56th Combat Crew training wing at Charlotte, N. C.

Morgenthau's Son Gets Medal

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 21 (AP)—The Bronze Star Medal has been awarded to Lt. Robert M. Morgenthau, son of the Secretary of the Treasury, for service on the Lansdale, a destroyer sunk in the Mediterranean on April 20. The award was made at the Norfolk Naval Training Station. Lieutenant Morgenthau, executive officer of the destroyer, and Lt. Comdr. Douglas M. Swift, skipper, told in an interview how the ship was attacked by German torpedo planes. One of the missiles blasted it in two.

DSM Awarded Colonel Killed By Jap Sniper

Washington, Aug. 21 (AP)—The Distinguished Service Medal, awarded posthumously to Col. Carl D. Silverthorne, was presented today to his widow by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff.

Silverthorne, whose home was in Washington, D. C., was killed by an enemy sniper on Saipan in June, while he was acting as an observer for the chief of staff. He was chief of the Pacific theater section of the operations division.

Herbert Bachant Missing In Action on French Front

Father of Triplets Wrote Wife: 'I'm Going Into Battle'

Mrs. Muriel Bachant, who gave birth to triplets on March 30, disclosed last night that her husband, Herbert, an Army private, has been reported missing in action in France since Aug. 1.

Mr. Bachant, a bus driver before he was drafted on May 8, 1941, was sent to England last December and wrote to his wife in July that "if you don't hear from me soon don't worry, because I am going into battle," she said. He is thirty-five years old.

Mrs. Bachant, who lives at 1627 University Avenue, the Bronx, said she received War Department notification that her husband is missing yesterday morning.

Treanor, War Corresponaent, Killed By Tank In France

American Third Army Headquarters, Aug. 1[illegible] (delayed) — Tom Treanor, 35-year-old [illegible] casting and Los Angeles Times correspondent, died in a front-line hospital early today of injuries suffered ten hours earlier when a Sherman tank ran over his jeep at a crossroads.

Treanor, who covered the war from Chungking to London, suffered severe scalp cuts, a crushed foot and internal injuries. He died while undergoing an operation.

Two other correspondents and the jeep driver also were hurt. Charles Shaw, of Columbia Broadcasting System, suffered a fractured leg, the other a broken foot and the driver a broken arm. Publication of the other names was not permitted immediately.

Buried In Army Cemetery

Treanor was [illegible] in an army cemetery [illegible].

The group was en route to cover the Seine river front and was passing a tank column when the accident occurred. As the jeep swung out to pass the column at a crossroads the tank turned left and ran over it.

They gave Treanor ten pints of blood, but, although he had pulled himself out of hundreds of tight battlefield squeaks, he could not make it this time.

Joked With Doctors To End

He was game to the very end, joking with the doctors until he went under the anesthesia and still convinced he would come out alive and go on with his job. One of his last requests was that the other correspondents inform his office so it could send another man to "take my place temporarily."

As Treanor lay beside the road after the accident, dazed and bleeding, he called out to a photographer:

"Did you get a picture of me under that tank? This is a hell of a thing to happen to me just before we get to Paris."

Last Thought Of His Paper

Medical Captain William Werner, Los Angeles, examining him, remarked: "I am from Los Angeles, too."

"Did you hear that?" said Tom, whose eyes were covered with blood. "Get his name, somebody, for my paper."

He was given morphine and as they lifted him into an ambulance, he murmured sleepily:

"Well, I guess I am lucky to be alive."

Treanor, a tall boyish-looking reporter, was widely known for his accounts of battles in the North African, Sicilian, Italian and French campaigns. He had written several magazine articles and a book ("One Damn Thing After Another") about his experiences.

Noted For His Daring

He was known as one of the most daring as well as one of the ablest war correspondents, but his fellow-reporters admired him most for the way he cut red tape. During much of his time abroad he had no formal accreditation and fought a running series of fights with army public relations officers from China to England—and he always came out on top.

As a result of these frequent skirmishes, Treanor frequently found himself denied transportation to get to places where he wanted to cover stories. He became an inveterate hitchhiker and probably thumbed more miles than any other correspondent.

Native Of Los Angeles

Treanor was born in 1908 in Los Angeles. He attended Stanford University and the University of California at Los Angeles. He worked on the old Los Angeles Evening Express, on Oakland (Cal.) and Milwaukee papers and joined the Times in 1933.

Before the United States entered the war he covered a roving assignment that took him through Portugal, Spain, Italy, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Greece and unoccupied France.

Survivors include the widow, Eleanor Stimson Treanor, and their three children, Thomas, 10; Marshall, 8, and Cordelia, 5.

Saw World Disconnected

Treanor, before his death, had described his experiences as a war correspondent since June 13, 1942 in a book titled "One Damn Thing After Another."

The author says of the book:

"Alice never saw more different things in Wonderland than I've seen since June 13, 1942. I've rung the changes from Chungking to Anzio and written 1,000 words a day about it. Because it is all so new and confusing I can't explain any of the riddle.

"I can only give you the world all disconnected, just as I saw it in traveling, a sequence of separate worlds, nearly as crazy, independent and self-centered as they were in Columbus' time."

105 American Women Have Won Awards From Army, Navy

By the Associated Press.

One hundred and five American women have received individual awards from the Army and Navy for war bravery and efficiency, according to the Office of War Information.

Army nurses lead with 97 official awards and a Distinguished Flying Cross, the highest award ever given an American woman in uniform. This was presented to Lt. Kathleen R. Dial, Florence, Ala., in recognition of her work in taking care of 18 patients after a flying ambulance crashed off Port Moresby, New Guinea.

Flying nurses have received 29 awards of Air Medals, 11 with four Oak Leaf Cluster awards for flights in combat areas.

Twenty-four Purple Hearts were awarded Army nurses and four Purple Hearts went to WACS.

The Soldier's Medal for personal bravery has been presented to four Army nurses and two WACS.

Hospital ships have been named for Army nurses: the late Blanche F. Sigman, Akron, Ohio, who was killed at Anzio, and the late Maj. Emily N. Weder, Sellersville, Tex., who died after more than 20 years service.

One WAVE, Lt. Elizabeth Reynard, New York City, has received a commendation and ribbon awarded for "substantial contributions to organization and training methods in recruit training school."

Thirty-one States are represented by women who wear Army and Navy awards.

In addition to the awards listed by OWI, one Red Cross recreation worker, Esther Richards, San Francisco, who was killed at Anzio, received the Purple Heart posthumously.

Forty-two Navy nurses have received the Navy's new commendation ribbon which "may be worn by those who have received letters of commendation for heroism or service performed."

Red Cross Flies Whole Blood to Europe's Fronts

Meets Services' Request to Supplement Plasma; City Quota 500 Pints a Day

The American Red Cross, at the request of the Army and the Navy, has opened a new service—the shipment by air to Europe of whole blood to supplement the use of blood plasma, it was announced yesterday.

The request for whole blood, which contains the red blood cells that are removed in the processing of plasma, was made by the fighting forces a week ago after extensive experiments had established the feasibility of shipping the whole blood from this country to the European theater.

Asked to share responsibility with the Washington blood-donor center, the New York Chapter will deliver today the first of its 500-pint daily quota to an Army airfield where the flasks will be placed aboard an Army Transport Command plane for the journey to hospitals in England and Normandy.

Services Requested More

Major General Norman T. Kirk and Vice-Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, Surgeons General of the Army and the Navy, respectively, asked for the whole-blood shipments for transfusions to wounded soldiers and sailors who have received plasma, but whose injuries are such that they need the red blood cells.

In the request, General Kirk and Admiral McIntyre explained that whole-blood transfusions have always been given to patients who lost a large quantity of blood. The supply of whole-blood, however, came, of necessity, from able-bodied men aboard ships or from base troops, and, in some cases, from civilian donors in the hospital area. This practice dates back to the last war.

Under the system set up by the Army and Navy for the delivery of whole blood, only the blood of those donors who have the common O-type blood is selected for shipment as whole blood. This means, of course, that it can be used in transfusions only to those wounded who also have O-type blood. Later the whole-blood delivery may be expanded to include all types of blood.

The blood is screened through a liquid and then sealed in refrigerated flasks after the Red Cross research laboratory has made purity and serological tests. General Kirk and Admiral McIntyre added that it may soon be possible to reclaim the red blood cells that are discarded in the processing of plasma and use them in whole blood transfusions.

Stresses Pressing Need

The 1,000 pints of whole blood which the two Red Cross centers are to supply daily are in addition to the 100,000 pints of blood plasma required each week, the Surgeon General said, emphasizing that there is a continuous and pressing need for plasma in every theater of the war.

"Plasma is the foremost life saver of the war and is largely responsible for the fact that ninety-seven out of every 100 of our wounded men are being saved," General Kirk and Admiral McIntype said in appealing to all Americans to donate their blood.

The first shipment of whole blood will leave this country on the eightieth anniversary of the founding of the world Red Cross movement. It was on Aug. 22, 1864, that the Treaty of Geneva was signed making the Red Cross program world-wide.

SPRING MOUNT, Pa., Aug. 21.—The "one-man army of Anzio" received his official welcome home yesterday and most every one in the Perkiomen Valley opined he "never saw anything like it."

As for the hero himself, Pfc. Alton W. Knappenberger, the 5-foot-4, 120-pound country boy who won the Congressional Medal of Honor for holding off two companies and killing 80 Germans on the Italian beachhead—

"[illegible] terrific," he said as he turned [illegible] to the girl he is to marry [illegible]day.

The Lower Frederick fire company of Spring Mount, which sponsored the celebration, was proud, too, for more than 800 members of 27 firefighting units in the valley turned out with sirens blowing to lead the parade.

Farmers and villagers poured into town in shiny cars, battered jalopies, on foot, and even in buggies to see "the Army" ride by in a sky-blue coupe, his arm around his fiancee, Ruth Eichoff.

On Ruth's third finger, left hand, sparkled a diamond that Pvt. Knappenberger bought with contributions from neighbors who heard a pickpocket took all his money, $150, the day before he sailed from Naples, but well-wishers here made up a purse of $569 for him.

He and Ruth and his mother went to New York for three days, but Pvt. Knappenberger returned saying he would rather "live in Spring Mount."

The hero's mother, Mrs. Harvey Seibert, stood on her front lawn with 50 relatives and friends clad in the traditional cap and plain dress of the Mennonites. Asked how she felt about the honors being paid her son, she said:

"I just [illegible]. Al was always a good [illegible] always did well shooting foxes in the woods when he was a boy."

At the wedding, which will be performed by a Lutheran minister Saturday, Pvt. Knappenberger will carry a serviceman's watch presented him by the firemen. They also gave him a gold plaque signifying life membership in the fire company.

Then it's back to the fight.

"It's the only thing to do," he said.

Lily Pons Finds G.I. Joes Enjoy the Classics Too

Star Returns From U.S.O. Tour Through Middle East

The average American soldier overseas really enjoy good popular-classic music, and he will demand encore after encore on well-known operatic arias, Lily Pons, Metropolitan Opera star declared here yesterday.

Miss Pons, with her husband, Andre Kostelanetz, conductor; Carolyn Gray, her piano accompanist, and Frank Versaci, flautist, arrived home three days ago from a thirteen-week USO-Camp Show tour through the Middle East, Persia, [illegible] Command, Africa and Italy. The men, Mr. Kostelanetz said, were always nervous and restless at first, "but when we would play 'Showboat' or Victor Herbert and my wife would sing 'Caro Nome' and the 'Ave Maria,' they would become absolutely quiet. We played memory music and it made them think of home."

The acid test for the classic program came one night in southern Iran when they appeared before an audience of Army truck drivers. "Their commanding officer was afraid "higher level music," wouldn't please them," Miss Pons explained, "but I've never had to sing so many encores."

In Iran Mr. Kostelanetz assembled an all-soldier orchestra, three [illegible] professionals and forty-

ELECTION NEWS BAN IS LIFTED

Roosevelt Okays Changes In Troop Restrictions

Washington, Aug. 21 (AP)—President Roosevelt signed today the soldier-vote law amendments relaxing restrictions on the dissemination of political news and opinion among members of the armed services.

Sponsors said the effect of the amendments would be to open the way for sale and distribution through army post exchanges and navy ships of any newspapers, magazines and books in general circulation among civilians—within the limits of available transportation.

In the case of radio broadcasts, the only limitation applied is that if political speeches are rebroadcast to troops over Government-operated stations equal time shall be allowed to any political party having a Presidential candidate in six or more States.

Ban Off Of Movies

Motion pictures generally available to the public may be shown without restriction, but shall be selected in an "impartial and non-partisan" manner.

If transportation space problems require a selection of books and other publications, the new bill directs that the choices shall be made in "some impartial manner" prescribed by the army and navy, such as a preference poll among troops or recommendations of expert committees.

Left in the anti-propaganda section of the act is a ban against propaganda material paid for by Government funds. It applies to any Government-financed printed matter, film or radio presentation which "when considered in its entirety, contains political propaganda obviously designed to affect the result" of the Presidential or Congressional elections.

Department's Interpretation

The War Department had interpreted the language of the original act to prohibit the distribution, at Government expense or through army stores, of numerous books [illegible] magazines and some newspapers containing political opinion.

The amendments were drafted by Senator Green (D., R. I.) in collaboration with Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and army and navy representatives.

While supporting the amendments, Taft contended that the War Department had placed "nonsensical" interpretations on the original act and that this led to widespread misunderstanding and criticism of it. The amendments passed the Senate August 15 and the House the following day.

NAVY TO SPEED PACIFIC NEWS

OWI Man Tells Of New Transmission Base On Guam

Washington, Aug. 21 (AP)—George W. Healy, Jr., of the Office of War Information, asserted today that navy plans for faster transmission of news of Pacific operations indicate that naval authorities "are conversant with the need for keeping the American people informed."

Healy, head of the domestic branch of OWI, has just returned from a tour of advanced Pacific bases as civilian adviser to the navy's public relations chief, Rear Admiral A. S. Merrill. He accompanied Merrill, who was checking final arrangements for the stepped up news relay system.

Guam As Clearance Base

"I am confident from my observations [illegible] said, "that the Navy Department is making adequate plans to provide these additional facilities and intelligently planning for news coverage before operations."

Merrill disclosed that a central clearance and transmission base is being set up on Guam as an advanced point from which news stories and pictures will move directly to San Francisco.

Weather and battle conditions permitting, the news and pictures can be published in this country within a few hours after they originate at the battle scene, the navy said.

Single Censorship Planned

Single censorship, on the flagships from which stories and pictures will be picked up by specially scheduled seaplanes, is planned as another speed-up factor.

Transmitter facilities for sending of news and photos to the mainland are on the way to Guam, a naval spokesman said.

"We hope they'll be installed before the next operation," he added.

An additional transmission circuit has been released by navy communications for 24-hour civilian news service. If atmospheric conditions interfere with transmission from Guam to the United States, the navy said, alternative arrangements are made to fly stories and photos to Hawaii for relay to the mainland.

FORT DEL' ECLUSE, FRANCE, AUG.21-(AP)-FOUR HUNDRED GERMANS WERE FORCED TO SURRENDER THIS FORT 14 MILES FROM GENEVA, SWITZERLAND, BECAUSE THEIR WATER SUPPLY HAD BEEN CUT OFF DURING A FIVE-DAY SIEGE BY THE MAQUIS.

BRITISH PLANES PARACHUTED NEW ARMAMENTS TO THE FRENCH FIGHTERS.

PIERRE LAVAL WAS SAID TO HAVE LEFT BELFORT, NEAR THE SWISS-GERMAN BORDER. HE WAS REPORTED KEEPING QUARTERS WITH VICHY CABINET MINISTERS JOSEPH DARNAND AND FERNAND DE BRINON CLOSE TO THE FRONTIER AT MORVILLARS.

MARSHAL PETAIN DEFINITELY HAS LEFT VICHY. ONE REPORT WAS THAT HE IS IN A CHEATEAU OUTSIDE VICHY SURROUNDED BY A THOUSAND VOLUNTEERS PLEDGED TO DEFEND HIM UNTIL THE ALLIES ARRIVE.

GOOD INFORMATION, HOQEVER, SAID HE HAD MOVED CONSIDERABLY FARTHER NORTH, EITHER TO MOULIN OR BELFORT.

LE BEAUSSET, ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF TOULON, AUG.21-(AP)-FRENCH FORCES HAVE OCCUPIED THIS VILLAGE FIVE MILES NORTHWEST OF TOULON AND SENT SPEARHEADS INTO THE SUBURBS OF THE FRENCH NAVAL BASE.

THE GERMAN GARRISON IS PUTTING UP STIFF RESISTANCE, COUNTER-ATTACKING TOWARD THE NORTHWEST AND SHELLING THE MAIN ROADS NORTH AND WEST OF THE CITY.

HOWEVER, A CONSTANT STREAM OF FRENCH REINFORCEMENTS IS ROLLING TOWARD TOULON.

ANOTHER ALLIED ARM THREATENED AUBAGNE WITHIN 8 MILES OF MARSEILLE.

FRENCH PATRIOTS (340)

LONDON, AUG 21-(AP)-FRENCH PATRIOTS NOW CONTROL ONE THIRD OF FRANCE COMPRISING EIGHT DEPARTMENTS, SAYS GEN.JOSEPH KOENIG, COMMANDER OF THE FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR.

IN A COMMUNIQUE BROADCAST BY THE ALGIERS RADIO, KOENIG SAID THAT DURING THE WEEK ENDED AUG. 19 FRENCH PATRIOTS KILLED 1,821 GERMANS, WOUNDED 415 AND CAPTURED 2,265, SUFFERING ONLY SLIGHT LOSSES THEMSELVES.

REPORTS RELAYED HERE THROUGH PORT BOU, SPAIN, SAID THE MAQUIS CONTROLLED THE ENTIRE PYRENEES REGION OF SOUTHWESTERN FRANCE FROM THE ATLANTIC TO THE MEDITERRANEAN. ALL GERMAN FORCES JUST NORTH OF THE SPANISH BORDER HAVE WITHDRAWN NORTHWARD AND FRENCH PATRIOTS HAVE APPOINTED NEW CIVIL ADMINISTRATORS.

A DISPATCH FROM IRUN, SPAIN, SAID THE LAST GERMAN FORCES AT HENDAYE, JUST ACROSS THE BORDER IN FRANCE, HAVE PULLED OUT AND ONLY REGULAR FRENCH CUSTOMS MEN GUARDED THE FRONTIER.

(THE BRAZZAVILLE RADIO SAID IN A BROADCAST REPORTED YESTERDAY BY NBC THAT MAQUIS FORCES WERE IN CONTROL OF VICHY. THE BROADCAST ADDED THAT GESTAPO AGENTS HAD MOVED FROM VICHY AND PARIS TO NANCY).

FRENCH-SWISS BORDER REPORTS SAID PIERRE LAVAL AND OTHER VICHY OFFICIALS HAD ARRIVED AT BELFORT, NEAR BOTH SWITZERLAND AND GERMANY, AND THAT LAVAL HAD ESTABLISHED HEADQUARTERS IN A CHATEAU 10 MILES OUTSIDE BELFORT.

MARSHAL PETAIN'S WHEREABOUTS WAS A MYSTERY. A FRONTIER DISPATCH TO THE LONDON DAILY MAIL SAID HE WAS BELIEVED STILL AT VICHY, "WAITING AT THE PAVILLON DE SEVIGNE TO HAND OVER HIS POWERS TO THOSE WHO WILL BE CALLED UPON TO REPRESENT THE NEW FRANCE." THE ANKARA RADIO SAID PETAIN WAS EXPECTED AT BELFORT.

(AFTER HIS ARRIVAL IN FRANCE YESTERDAY, GEN.CHARLES DE GAULLE, HEAD OF THE FRENCH COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL LIBERATION, SAID IN A SPEECH FROM THE CHERBOURG CITY HALL THAT "WE ARE ALL UNITED IN THE SAME WILL--THE WILL TO FRENCH GREATNESS."

("WE KNOW THAT THE CALVARY WE HAVE BEEN GOING THROUGH IS THE GREATEST ORDEAL OF OUR HISTORY," DE GAULLE SAID. "WE KNOW THE ABYSS WE ARE EMERGING FROM AND TOWARD WHAT PEAKS WE ARE STRIVING." HIS ADDRESS WAS REPORTED BY THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION).

WITH THE ALLIED LANDINGS ON THE FRENCH RIVIERA SUCCESSFULLY ACCOMPLISHED, IT WAS REVEALED THAT THE AMERICAN AND FRENCH GENERAL STAFFS MAINTAINED REGULAR PLANE AND PARACHUTE COMMUNICATIONS WITH MAQUIS PATROLS FOR MORE THAN A YEAR PRIOR TO THE INVASION.

LONDON, AUG 21-(AP)-NAZI NEWS SERVICES PAINTED A BLACK PICTURE TODAY OF "VIOLENT BATTLES" WITH THE UNDERGROUND IN PARIS AS DETAILS WERE GIVEN OF ALLIED AIR DELIVERIES OF ARMS IN PRE-INVASION MONTHS WHICH MADE THE FRENCH UPRISING POSSIBLE.

A DNB BROADCAST SAID THE FIGHTING IN PARIS WAS LED BY "FRENCH CIVILIANS AND TERRORISTS SENT IN BY THE ALLIES."

THERE WAS NO INDICATION OF WHAT THE GERMANS WERE DOING TO QUELL THE PARIS UPRISING SINCE A SUNDAY MIDNIGHT BROADCAST BY THE NAZI COMMANDANT WARNING THE POPULATION THAT HARSH MEASURES WOULD BE USED.

GROUNDS FOR GERMAN DISQUIET WAS CONTAINED IN THE COMMUNIQUE OF GENERAL JOSEPH PIERRE KOENIG, LEADER OF THE FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR, WHICH SAID THAT THE WHOLE OF HAUTE SAVOIE HAD BEEN LIBERATED AND THAT LYON WAS ALMOST COMPLETELY UNDER CONTROL OF THE F.F.I.

"LL ROADS LEADING TO ITALY ARE GUARDED BY THE F.F.I. AND IN THE SOUTH ALL ROADS AND RAILWAYS USED BY THE ENEMY ARE NOW UNUSABLE," THE COMMUNIQUE ANNOUNCED. IT SAID THERE HAD BEEN WHOLESALE SURRENDERS OF VICHY MILITIA FORCES AND VICHY POLICEMEN IN DOZENS OF TOWNS WERE GOING OVER TO THE MAQUIS.

ALTHOUGH ALLIED PLANES HAVE BEEN FLYING OVER MAQUIS AREAS OF THE FRENCH INTERIOR FOR MONTHS DROPPING THOUSANDS OF TONS OF ARMS, AMMUNITION AND OTHER SUPPLIES BY PARACHUTE TO THE RESISTANCE FORCES, THESE IMPORTANT OPERATIONS WERE NOT ANNOUNCED OFFICIALLY UNTIL TODAY.

HUNDREDS OF AMERICAN AND RAF HEAVY BOMBERS ON NUMEROUS OCCASIONS CARRIED TONS OF GUNS AND AMMUNITION TO THE FRENCH UNDERGROUND, IT WAS STATED.

DELIVERIES ARE STILL BEING CARRIED OUT ON REGULAR [illegible].

FLYING UNDER MOST DIFFICULT NAVIGATIONAL CONDITIONS, THE AIR CREWS HAD TO FIND EXACT PIN POINTS AT WHICH THE RESISTANCE FORCES WERE WAITING. THE SUPPLIES HAD TO BE DROPPED WITH GREAT ACCURACY SO FRENCH SOLDIERS COULD COLLECT THEM HURRIEDLY.

WHEN THE DAY OF THE NORMANDY INVASION ARRIVED THERE WERE THOUSANDS OF FRENCHMEN LIVING IN STRICTLY DISCIPLINED, HIGHLY ORGANIZED AND FINELY TRAINED MILITARY GROUPS.

THEY CUT AND RECUT GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS AND AMBUSHED GERMAN CONVOYS SPREADING TERROR AND DEATH.

ON BASTILLE DAY, JULY 14, SEVERAL GERMAN DIVISIONS WHICH MIGHT OTHERWISE HAVE BEEN FIGHTING ON THE NORMANDY FRONT WERE TIED UP IN DESPERATE ATTEMPTS TO COPE WITH THE F.F.Q.

THE NAZI NEWS AGENCY TRANSOCEAN REPORTED "A WILD SLASHING MELEE OF AMERICAN AND GERMAN TANKS AND RECONNAISSANCE UNITS IN THE PARIS AREA."

TRANSOCEAN'S COMMENTATOR LUDWIG SERTORIUS CALLED THE SITUATION IN NORTHWESTERN FRANCE "TENSE" AND SAID THE ALLIES WERE TRYING TO HERD THE SEVENTH GERMAN ARMY NORTH OF THE SEINE AND "ENGULF IT ON THE NORTHERN BANK OF THE RIVER IN A FARFLUNG ENCIRCLEMENT."

REPORTS FROM THE SPANISH BORDER SAID THE ENTIRE PYRENEES FRONTIER WAS IN THE HANDS OF THE F.F.I. AND GEN.KOENIG DECLARED ONE THIRD OF FRANCE NOW WAS CONTROLLED BY THE MAQUIS. THE SPANISH BORDER REPORT THAT AN AMERICAN MOTORIZED COLUMN HAD PASSED THROUGH ANGOULEME, NEARLY HALF THE DISTANCE FROM THE LOIRE TO THE SPANISH BORDER WAS INDICATIVE OF THE STATE OF NAZI DISORGANIZATION.

DNB STRUCK A DISASTER KEYNOTE WITH, "THE NUMBER OF MEN AND MACHINES WHICH THE ALLIES ARE LAUNCHING AGAINST US IS SO CRUSHING THAT EVEN THE MOST HEROIC GERMAN SOLDIER IS STAGGERED."

SIGNIFICANTLY, NAZI COMMENTATORS ARE PRESENTLY COMPLAINING THAT THE ALLIES ARE HOLDING PRACTICALLY ALL THE TRUMP CARDS:

1. OVERWHELMING MATERIAL AND NUMERICAL SUPERIORITY. THE GERMANS HAD IT IN 1940 IN HOLLAND AND BELGIUM.
2. CRUSHING AIR SUPERIORITY. THE LUFTWAFFE HAD IT IN 1940.
3. EXCELLENT FIGHTING WEATHER. THEY CALLED IT "HITLER WEATHER" IN 1940.

BUT IN SPITE OF ALL THIS, GERMANS SHOULD "NOT KEEP LOOKING

30. 24 — 18191

NERVOUSLY AT THE MAP OF FRANCE," SAID DNB COMMENTATOR RUDOLF SEMMLER.
"THE FACT THAT WE ARE PRESENTLY MORE OR LESS STANDING WHERE WE WERE FOUR YEARS AGO LOSES MUCH OF ITS DEPRESSING CHARACTER IF WE REMEMBER THAT WE SHALL SOON HAVE MEANS AT OUR DISPOSAL TO ALTER THE WHOLE CHARACTER OF THE WAR," SEMMLER SAID.

WASHINGTON,AUG 21-(AP)-SIR ARTHUR SALTER, SENIOR DEPUTY DIRECTOR GENERAL OF THE UNITED NATIONS RELIEF AND REHABILITATION ADMINISTRATION, SAID TODAY A DECISION PROBABLY WILL BE MADE AT NEXT MONTH'S UNRRA COUNCIL MEETING IN MONTREAL ON WHETHER TO EXTEND THE ORGANIZATION'S ACTIVITIES TO FORMER ENEMY TERRITORY, SUCH AS ITALY.

SALTER TOLD A NEWS CONFERENCE THAT INFORMAL REQUESTS FOR UNRRA'S ASSISTANCE IN ITALY ALREADY HAD BEEN RECEIVED FROM THE ITALIAN GOVERNMENT AND FROM MILITARY AUTHORITIES.

NO AID COULD BE EXTENDED, HE SAID, BECAUSE THE ATLANTIC CITY CONFERENCE OF UNRRA LAST YEAR HAD PROHIBITED ANY ACTIVITY IN CONQUERED ENEMY COUNTRIES WITHOUT SPECIFIC AUTHORIZATION FROM UNRRA'S COUNCIL.

UNRRA REPRESENTATIVES, HOWEVER, ARE NOW IN ITALY STUDYING RELIEF AND REHABILITATION NEEDS AND THEIR REPORT WILL BE MADE PRIOR TO THE MONTREAL DECISION.

SALTER REPORTED THAT UNRRA IS NOW OPERATING A SERIES OF CAMPS IN NORTH AFRICA, PALESTINE AND SYRIA FOR APPROXIMATELY 40,000 REFUGEES, LARGELY YUGOSLAVS.

RELIEF WORK IN FRANCE, HE SAID, IS BEING CARRIED ON BY MILITARY AUTHORITIES BUT UNRRA EXECUTIVES ARE KEEPING IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH THE SITUATION THROUGH ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN ANTICIPATION OF MOVING IN LATER. HE SAID THAT NO ESTIMATE ON THE NUMBER OF FRENCH WHO WOULD NEED ASSISTANCE COULD BE MADE UNTIL IT IS LEARNED HOW MUCH THE OPPOSING ARMIES HAVE DESTROYED.

HE ESTIMATED THAT 30,000,000 PEOPLE HAVE BEEN DISPLACED FROM THEIR HOMES IN EUROPE AND SAID THAT UNRRA EXPECTED TO WORK WITH MILITARY AUTHORITIES AND ALLIED GOVERNMENTS IN PROVIDING SHELTER AND SUPPLIES FOR THEM.

AGANA, GUAM ISLAND-(AP)-THE NATIVES OF GUAM BEGAN THE PACIFIC WAR WITH DISTRUST OF THE JAPANESE CIVILIANS LIVING AMONG THEM AND ENDED THE JAPANESE OCCUPATION WITH HATRED SO BITTER THAT EVEN BOYS BEGGED FOR GUNS TO HUNT DOWN AND SLAY INDIVIDUAL NIPPONESE.
AFTER MORE THAN TWO AND A HALF YEARS THE OUTSTANDING FEATURE OF THE JAPANESE OCCUPATION OF GUAM WAS WHAT THEY DID NOT DO HERE.
AS THE LAST NIPPONESE SOLDIERS WERE BEING CHASED BY AMERICAN FIGHTING MEN THROUGH THE JUNGLES ON THE NORTHERN TIP OF THE ISLAND, THE U.S. CONQUERORS WERE STRUCK CONSTANTLY WITH THE FACT THAT THE JAPANESE DID PRACTICALLY NOTHING HERE AFTER TAKING OVER GUAM AT THE START OF THE WAR FROM A HANDFUL OF MARINES AND INSULAR FORCES. JAPANESE OCCUPATION CAUSED NEITHER DRAMATIC CHANGES NOR AFFECTED THE ISLAND PERMANENTLY.
THE JAPANESE GARRISON WAS NOT INCREASED UNTIL LAST WINTER WHEN THE AMERICAN ATTACKS IN THE MARSHALLS SHOWED DEFINITELY THE YANK SPEARHEAD WAS COMING THIS WAY.
THE INVADERS FORCED HALF-GROWN BOYS TO WORK IN THE RICE FIELDS. SOME HEADS OF FAMILIES WORKED FOR THE JAPANESE AT LOW BUT FAIRLY REGULAR PAY. THE NATIVES SAY THEIR PURCHASING POWER WAS BUT A FRACTION OF THAT THEY HAD UNDER THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT.
GREAT SHORTAGES DEVELOPED FOR THE CIVILIANS, ESPECIALLY IN TEXTILES AND MEDICINES.
JAPANESE TREATMENT OF THE GUAMANIANS WAS, THE LATTER ADMIT, NOT BAD IN COMPARISON TO WHAT THE NIPPONESE HANDED OUT IN CHINA AND SOME OTHER OCCUPIED AREAS. THEY FORCED THE NATIVES TO BOW TO SOLDIERS.
DURING THE OCCUPATION THE NATIVES WERE CUT OFF FROM ALL NEWS. APPARENTLY THE JAPANESE DID NOT EVEN ATTEMPT TO PROPAGANDIZE THEM.

THAT COULD GO ON MORE OR LESS INDEFINITELY, BUT YOU GET THE IDEA. EVERY TIME THE GUY OPENS HIS MOUTH HE SPOUTS DOLLARS INTO FRICK'S OFFICE, AND YOU CAN PRACTICALLY TRACE THE FORTUNE OF THE CLUB BY THE FREQUENCY OF HIS OUTBURSTS. IN '38, '39 AND '40, WHILE CREEPING UP TOWARD THE TOP, HE WASN'T FINED THREE TIMES, AND IN 1942, WHEN HE SAW HIS TEAM BEING EDGED OFF THE TOP, HE EXPLODED WITH EXPENSIVE WORDS FOUR TIMES.
HE'S PAID MORE THAN $1,100 IN FINES THE LAST FIVE YEARS, WHICH SHOWS THE DUROCHER ORATORICAL SOCIETY IS A RATHER EXCLUSIVE CLUB. OR, AS DUROCHER WOULD INSIST, THAT THE UMPIRING IS PRETTY TERRIBLE.

A U.S. BOMBER BASE IN BRITAIN, JULY 21-(DELAYED BY CENSOR)-(AP)-DODGING MOUNTAIN PEAKS AND SKIMMING TREE TOPS AT PERILOUSLY LOW ALTITUDES, THE EIGHTH AIR FORCE FLYING FORTRESSES RECENTLY ENACTED A DRAMATIC CHAPTER OF THE WAR BY DROPPING ARMS AND AMMUNITION TO HANDS OF THE FRENCH MAQUIS WHO SLOWED TO A WALK THE ADVANCE OF TWO TANK DIVISIONS TOWARD NORMANDY.

APR 23 1944

GUIDED BY PRE-ARRANGED SIGNALS TO A SECRET SPOT ON A MOUNTAINSIDE IN SOUTHERN FRANCE THE BOMBERS DROPPED ENOUGH EQUIPMENT FOR THOUSANDS OF LOYAL PARTISANS WHO PUT THE MUNITIONS TO QUICK USE BY ENGAGING THE TWO PANZER DIVISIONS IN PITCHED BATTLES.

MACHINEGUNS, RIFLES, SMALL ARMS AND BAZOOKAS WERE PACKED IN METAL CYLINDERS FASTENED TO BILLOWING PARACHUTES WHICH COVERED THE GROUND LIKE SNOW.

KEEPING THE OPERATIONS HIGHLY SECRET FOR THE PARTISANS' SAFETY, THE DAREDEVIL FORTRESS CREWS MADE TWO STIRRING FLIGHTS AND THE ADVENTUR THRILLED THE AIRMEN FAR MORE THAN THEIR REGULAR BOMBING RAIDS.

ON BOTH MISSIONS GERMAN FIGHTERS ATTACKED THE BOMBERS BUT WERE DRIVEN OFF BY AMERICAN PURSUIT PLANES.

LT.CHARLES A.LUDWIG, JR., 149 THIRD ST., NEENAH, WIS., A CO-PILOT, SAID HIS GROUP LET DOWN TO 100 FEET FOR ITS BOMB RUN.

"GROUPS WERE FLYING IN FROM ALL DIRECTIONS, DROPPING LOADS BY PARACHUTES," HE SAID. "WE WENT SO LOW I SWORE WE WERE GOING TO FLY RIGHT INTO THEM. I COULD SEE HUNDREDS OF MEN AND WOMEN RUNNING OUT OF A GRAVEYARD AND FOREST TO RETRIEVE THE SUPPLIES.

APR 23 1944

"A PADRA AND A COUPLE OF WOMEN WERE STANDING NEAR A CHURCH. A FEW BOYS WERE PLAYING BASKETBALL. GIRLS WAVED THEIR APRONS AT US.

30. 24 — 18193

IT SURE WAS A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT. IT MADE ME CRY."

LT.W.C. (BUD) CARRAWAY, 1135 EAST 48TH ST., SAVANNAH, GA., A NAVIGATOR, SAID "THOSE MAQUIS WERE A MAGNIFICENT LOT DELAYING THOSE PANZER DIVISIONS FROM GETTING TO THE NORMANDY BEACHHEAD. MY HAT IS OFF TO THEM. THIS MISSION WAS THE GREATEST THRILL OF MY COMBAT TOUR."

"I COULD ALMOST SEE THE COLOR OF THE MAQUIS EYES AND HEAR THEM SAY 'VIVE AMERICA,'" SAID CAPT.EARL ANTHONY, NEWPORT, R.I. "THE FRENCH WAVED FLAGS, HANDKERCHIEFS, HOES, PITCHFORKS AND ANYTHING THEY COULD GET THEIR HANDS ON AS WE DROPPED THEM ARMS TO REPLACE WHAT THEY HAD LOST IN BATTLES WITH THE PANZERS.

"WE DROPPED THE CYLINDERS JUST LIKE BOMBS. THEY WERE HUNG ON THE BOMB RACKS WITH THE PARACHUTES ATTACKED TO A CONTROL LINE LIKE THE STATIC LINE USED BY PARATROOPERS. THE FORTS WOULD HAVE BEEN BIG TARGETS FOR ANY GERMANS IN THE VICINITY. EVEN ENOUGH TROOPS WITH RIFLES COULD HAVE DAMAGED US OVER THE DROP SITE AT THAT LOW ALTITUDE."

APR 24 1944

BOTH MISSIONS WERE EXTREMELY SUCCESSFUL WITH EVERYTHING RIGHT IN THE TARGET AREA.

ON THE FIRST MISSION THE EIGHTH AIR FORCE RECEIVED A CONGRATULATORY TELEGRAM FROM THE MAQUIS ALMOST BEFORE THE FORTRESSES HAD RETURNED TO THEIR BASES.

ROME, AUG 21-(AP)-ALLIED NAVAL MIGHT HAS BEEN EMPLOYED WITH TELLING EFFECT IN SUPPORT OF TROOPS INVADING THE SOUTH OF FRANCE AGAINST A MINIATURE GERMAN CASSINO ON THE ISLE OF PORT CROS, AND AGAINST GERMAN STRONGPOINTS IN TOULON HARBOR, IT WAS DISCLOSED OFFICIALLY TODAY.

THE BOMBARDMENT IN TOULON HARBOR WAS CARRIED OUT BY AN AMERICAN CRUISER, THE FRENCH CRUISER GLOIRE AND THE FRENCH BATTLESHIP LORRAINE, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF REAR ADMIRAL LYAL A.DAVIDSON, WHO IS IN CHARGE OF ALL WARSHIP SUPPORT IN THE AREA. THE TARGETS WERE NAVAL BATTERIES LIFTED FROM SUNKEN FRENCH WARSHIPS AND PLACED IN CEMENT CASEMENTS IN THE HARBOR AND ALSO THE RUINED FRENCH BATTLESHIP STRASBOURG, WHOSE TURRETS ABOVE THE WATER MADE FORMIDABLE SHORE BATTERIES.

THE 15-INCH GUNS OF THE BRITISH BATTLESHIP RAMILIES FINALLY REDUCED THE ISLAND FORT OF PORT CROS, AFTER IT HAD BEEN POUNDED BY AMERICAN CRUISERS, DESTROYERS AND DIVE-BOMBERS AND STORMED BY INFANTRYMEN.

FOR 55 HOURS A HANDFUL OF DESPERATE GERMAN INFANTRYMEN HELD OUT IN THEIR SMALL FORT--ANCIENT BUT WITH TREMENDOUS WALLS WHICH IN SOME PARTS WERE 15-FOOT-THICK STONE COVERED BY 20 FEET OF DIRT.

ON AUG.16 A HEAVY CRUISER OFF SHORE POURED NEARLY A HUNDRED ROUNDS INTO THE FORT. OTHER CRUISERS SHELLED IT AND DIVE-BOMBERS SMASHED AT IT WITH SIX DIRECT HITS BY HIGH-EXPLOSIVE BOMBS. A WHOLE CORNER OF THE FORT FELL OFF AND A GAPING HOLE APPEARED IN THE CENTER.

THEN THE BATTLESHIP TOOK OVER. SUDDENLY AIR OBSERVERS SAW A LONG GERMAN INFANTRYMAN CLIMB TO A PARAPET AND WAVE A WHITE FLAG.

THE VANQUISHED PERSONNEL--IT NUMBERED ONLY 26 MEN--SURRENDERED AND THE AMERICAN FORCES MOVED IN. PRISONERS FROM THE FORT TESTIFIED THAT FANATICAL OFFICERS HAD SHOT A NUMBER OF MEN WHO HAD WANTED TO SURRENDER.

AUG 23 1944

FAILURE TO TAKE THE FORT IN THE FIRST SWEEP OF THE ISLAND HAD A SERIOUS EFFECT ON THE PROGRESS OF THE BEACHHEAD, SINCE IT PREVENTED SWEEPING THE CHANNELS CLEAR OF MINES AND FORBADE USE OF THE HARBOR BADLY NEEDED FOR SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT.

NINETEEN AMERICAN AIRMEN--ADRIFT FROM O[illegible] HOUR TO SIX DAYS AND ALL FACING DEATH BY THIRST--OWE THEIR LIVES TO THE EAGLE EYE OF LIEUT. ROBERT B.MARTIN, JR., 25, FREEPORT, N.Y.

THE STOCKY BLACK-HAIRED NAVY PATROL PLANE PILOT SPOTTED THEM ADRIFT ON THE PACIFIC "INCIDENTAL TO DUTY."

THE FIRST RESCUED WAS VERNON PUGH, CHIEF AVIATION PILOT, PENSACOLA, FLA., OCTOBER, 1942, WHEN HE WAS SEARCHING FOR A POWERFUL JAPANESE CARRIER TASK FORCE WITH A SLY PBY (CATALINA BOMBER). PUGH'S PLANE FOUND THE TASK FORCE AND HIS PLANE WAS SHOT DOWN BY ZEROS. THE OTHER SEVEN MEN IN PUGH'S PLANE WERE KILLED. PUGH'S SHOULDER AND NECK WERE BROKEN AND HIS ARM AND LEG MANGLED. BUT MARTIN SPOTTED HIM, LANDED ALONGSIDE IN HEAVY SEAS, HIS CREW ADMINISTERED FIRST AID, AND PUGH IS ALIVE.

AUG 23 1944

ALMOST A YEAR LATER, OFF NUKU FETAU, ELLICE ISLANDS, MARTIN SPOTTED THE RAFT OF LIEUT.PAUL HARDY, HUNTINGTON, W.VA., WHO HAD BEEN ADRIFT WITH THREE MEN--ENS.JAMES WELSHONCE, 20, OF THE SAME STATE, ROBERT J.STROUSE, 22, DENVER, AND NILS G.P.WIDELL, 22, OF ROCKFORD, ILL.--FOR SIX DAYS. ALL FOUR WERE SAVED.

MARTIN FOUND FIRST ONE LIFERAFT WITH THREE MEN AND THEN ANOTHER WITH ONE MAN IN IT. "THE GUYS WERE PRETTY WELL STOVE IN, THEY'D BEEN AFLOAT IN ROUGH SEAS FOR THREE AND A HALF DAYS." HE DID NOT GET THEIR NAMES, BUT THEY BROUGHT THE TOTAL RESCUED TO NINE.

FOUR DAYS LATER, APRIL 22, ABOUT 280 MILES OFF TRUK, MARTIN FOUND ANOTHER ARMY PILOT, FIRST LIEUT.JOHN SMITHSON OF MACON, GA., AND NEARBY THREE MORE LIFERAFTS WHICH HELD NINE MORE MEN. BECAUSE MARTIN WAS PILOTING A LAND-BASED LIBERATOR HE KEPT A COMFORTING OVERHEAD PATROL UNTIL LIEUT.ROBERT FINUCANE, 27, OF ROCKVILLE CENTER, LONG ISLAND, ARRIVED IN A SEAPLANE. (HOWARD K.SMITH, CBS CORRESPONDENT, SPENT FOUR DAYS WITH THE MAQUI BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES IN EASTERN FRANCE. THIS STORY WAS WRITTEN THERE).

BY HOWARD K.SMITH

BEHIND GERMAN LINES IN FRANCE (VIA SWITZERLAND AUG. 21)-(AP)-AT LE FAYET, IN THE SAVOY MOUNTAINS, THE PARTISANS HAD A CLOSE SHAVE. ELSEWHERE THE GERMANS WERE EITHER ANNIHILATED OR THEY CAPITULATED WHEN THE SITUATION BECAME HOPELESS. BUT AT LE FAYET THE GERMANS WENT ON FIGHTING, LARGELY WITH BULLETS MADE OF WOOD. I HAVE A HANDFUL AS SOUVENIRS. THEY MAKE A BIG, SCARING BLAST, BUT THEY SCATTER INTO SPLINTERS BEFORE THEY REACH YOU. AT LE FAYET THE GERMAN COMMANDER KEPT ENOUGH METAL BULLETS TO KILL 40 FRENCH MEN AND WOMEN WHOM HE HELD AS HOSTAGES.

WHEN THE MAQUIS ISSUED HIM AN ULTIMATUM TO SURRENDER OR THEY WOULD STORM THE TOWN, THE COMMANDER ANSWERED THAT IF THEY DID, HE WOULD SHOOT THE 40 HOSTAGES. THE FRENCH TROOPS HESITATED TO ATTACK.

AUG 23 1944

THE AMERICAN OFFICER, WHO ADVISES THE PARTISANS, HAD A BRIGHT

IDEA. HE SENT A PERSONAL ULTIMATUM TO THE GERMAN COMMANDER, SAYING HE HAD A COMPANY OF AMERICAN PARATROOPERS WHO, AS GERMAN PROPAGANDA SAID, WERE NOTORIOUSLY DISRESPECTFUL OF FRENCH LIVES, AND THEY WOULD ASSAULT AND KILL EVERY GERMAN IN THE TOWN, REGARDLESS OF THE CONSEQUENCES.

THE GERMAN COMMANDER THEREUPON RECONSIDERED AND SENT A MESSAGE BACK TO THE AMERICAN--HE IS A MONTANAN--WHO GOES UNDER THE NAME OF "CAPTAIN NIVEAU." THE GERMAN SAID HE WOULD LIKE TO NEGOTIATE WITH THE AMERICAN AND HIS STAFF. THE AMERICAN GOT WORRIED. HE DIDN'T HAVE ANY AMERICANS AND HE DIDN'T HAVE ANY STAFF. MEANWHILE, UNKNOWN TO THE GERMAN COMMANDER, A COLUMN OF 14 GERMAN NAZI LORRIES WITH ARTILLERY WAS EN ROUTE TO RELIEVE HIM AT LE FAYET.

AS TIME SHORTENED, THE AMERICAN GOT ANOTHER BRIGHT IDEA. HE HUSTLED TOGETHER FOUR FRENCHMEN WHO DONNED FOUR BRITISH UNIFORMS WHICH HAD BEEN PARACHUTED DOWN RECENTLY, AND HE MET THE GERMAN COMMANDER IN A FOREST.

AUG 23 1944

IN ANNECY, WE WITNESSED AN ALMOST SHAKESPEAREAN TRAGEDY. IN THE RUE GRENETTE WE HEARD A GUN GASP FROM ONE OF THE HOUSES. GENDARMES RUSHED INTO THE HOUSE AND UP THE STAIRS. BEFORE THEY REACHED THE DOOR OF THE ROOM, A SECOND SHOT RANG OUT. WHEN THEY OPENED THE DOOR THEY FOUND THE LAST GESTAPO OFFICER WHOM THEY HAD NOT YET CAUGHT, LYING ON THE FLOOR WITH HIS MISTRESS IN A POOL OF BLOOD. THE SS OFFICER, WHOSE NAME WAS KAMFT, HAD SHOT HER AND HIMSELF. AT HEADQUARTERS WE LEARNED THE WOMAN WAS A SPY.

THERE WAS A HINT OF AN INSURPASSABLE INNER NOBILITY. IN ST. JULIEN, THE DAY BEFORE THE MAQUIS ATTACKED, THE GERMANS CAUGHT A TOUGH, LITTLE FRENCH COMMUNIST BEARING A REVOLVER IN THE VILLAGE. HE WAS TAKEN TO THE GESTAPO JAIL AND BEATEN TO A PULP WITH AN IRON POKER. WHEN WE MET HIM BOTH HIS EYES WERE PURPLE AND HIS CLOTHES RED.

AUG 23 1944

AFTER ST. JULIEN WAS TAKEN THE MAQUIS COMMANDER LINED THE GERMANS UP AND TOLD THE TORTURED LAD TO PICK OUT HIS MAN. THE BOY POINTED TO THE MAN WHO HAD DONE IT.

"I GRANT YOU THE RIGHT TO DO ANYTHING YOU WISH WITH HIM," THE COMMANDER TOLD THE BOY. "YOU MAY EVEN SHOOT HIM."

THE BOY ADVANCED SILENTLY. THE GESTAPO MAN FLINCHED AND HIS KNEES BUCKLED. THE BOY FINGERED HIS REVOLVER HANDLE A MINUTE. THEN HE GRINNED, HE SLAPPED THE GESTAPO MAN ON THE RIGHT CHEEK AND THEN ON THE LEFT CHEEK. THEN THE BOY TURNED TO HIS COMMANDER AND SAID: "THANK YOU, MY LIEUTENANT." AND HE RETURNED TO HIS PLACE IN THE RANKS.

I ASKED HIM WHY HE DID NOT SHOOT HIS TORTURER. HE LET HIS CIGARET AND SAID: "I KNOW I AM A DONKEY, EVERYBODY SAYS SO. BUT WHAT COULD I GAIN FROM IT?"

AUG 23 1944

THE SAME LIEUTENANT THEN DID A THING WHICH WAS AT LEAST AS NOBLE. HE MADE A LITTLE SPEECH TO THE GERMAN. HE SAID: "YOU HAVE TORTURED OUR WOMEN AND CHILDREN. YOU HAVE KILLED THOUSANDS OF US. NOW I CAN KILL YOU. BUT I SHALL SHOW YOU THAT WE ARE MORE HUMAN THAN YOU HAVE BEEN."

HE POINTED TO THE FRENCH BORDER AND TOLD THEM: "GO, YOU ARE FREE."

THE LIEUTENANT WAS A JEW. HIS BROTHER WAS DEPORTED AND KILLED BY THE GERMANS A YEAR AGO.

New Landing Near Bordeaux Reported

French Aiding Yanks in Drive To Circle City

AUG 23 1944

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 22. — (AP) French military authorities said a third Allied landing in France began tonight within the last pocket of organized German resistance in southwestern France around Bordeaux.

(A spokesman at Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary force said the French announcement was "outside our province" and declined other comment. In Washington, the War department public relations office said it had no information on a new landing.)

The French sources said the landing was coupled with a coordinated ground attack by American and French columns which were reported to have effected a junction in the outskirts of Bordeaux, a major port and one-time U-boat base, about noon.

(There was no immediate confirmation in other Allied or Axis quarters of a Bordeaux landing. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Supreme headquarters has been silent upon the progress of a spearhead from the U. S. Third army since it broke 10 miles south of the Loire river from the Nantes area earlier this month.

American and French ground forces met on the outskirts of Bordeaux about noon and immediately launched an attack on the city, the last pocket of organized German resistance in southeastern France, French frontier guards said.

Land Explosions Heard

Explosions of an intense aerial and naval bombardment could be heard distinctly in the Irun-Hendaye frontier region.

Just before the sea and air bombardment opened, a single plane circled the estuary of the Bidassoa river and dropped flares at fixed intervals in order to mark the line of the frontier.

(The precaution in marking the frontier and the fact the bombardment was audible in the Irun-Hendaye area suggested that at least some phases of the reported operation were well below Bordeaux, major French Atlantic port on the Gironde river 110 miles north of Hendaye.

The French at Hendaye said the landing coincided with the start of the drive by U. S. and French forces surrounding the German Bordeaux concentration.

According to the frontier reports the landing was just southwest of Bordeaux in the Arcachon region, which is known to hundreds of prewar American and British tourists and vacationists.

Allied planes were said to have roared low over the area in a concentrated bombing attack which was followed almost immediately by the roar of big guns from naval units off shore.

Bombardment Lasts Hour

Moments later all along the coast could be seen the beams of powerful searchlights directed straight into the air by French forces to mark their positions. Allied shells poured into the black areas where the Germans were concentrated. The naval bombardment lasted well over an hour.

There was no immediate estimate here of the size of the reported Allied landing force.

(Bordeaux, France's fourth largest city with a population of 258,348, is a major Atlantic port 110 miles north of Hendaye and 170 miles south of Nantes on the Loire river.)

The American forces consist of a motorized column that sped south from the Loire river while the French are composed of a completely armed division of volunteers, it was announced.

Germans stranded in this area of southwestern France below Bordeaux were reported surrendering by the hundreds and town after town was being liberated.

Liberate Prisoners

As the Germans headed from the French-Spanish border regions, they attempted to spread confusion by opening prisons and liberating ordinary criminals as well as political prisoners while collaborationists spread rumors of "Maquis atrocities" and "Communist uprisings."

French patriots, however, quickly rounded up the common criminals and disregarded the others, frontier reports said.

I found complete calm in this region and was told that the same situation prevailed generally throughout the entire liberated area.

The French volunteer force left Hendaye at the Spanish-French border last night and grew in strength as it moved northward. They passed through St. Jean de-Luz and Biarritz, liberated Bayonne, and then freed Dax, 25 miles farther north.

(The Allied High command has given no news of any deep U. S. penetration south of the Loire river since an announcement days ago that Third army units had crossed the Loire in the Nantes area.)

AMERICAN TANKS

DRIVE PAST SENS IN 65-MILE SMASH

Doughboy Column Has Driven Half Way Across France Below Paris.

ADVANCE ALONG SEINE

Patton's Forces Mount New Drive Toward Sea, British Take Cabourg.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 22.—(AP) An American armored column has driven more than half way across France on the road to Germany, plunging past the ancient town of Sens, 58 miles southeast of Paris, in a 65-mile smash against only meager opposition, a dramatic front dispatch disclosed tonight.

Sens is a full 180 airline miles from the original Normandy invasion beachhead—much farther over the road of battle—and only 165 miles from the German border to the northeast near the Saar town of Neunkirchen. Germany also lies due east, 200 miles away at the Rhine.

Drive Along Seine

West of Paris Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's American armored and infantry forces mounted a new drive northwestward along the Seine toward the sea in an effort to encircle more thousands of battered Germans caught on the South side of the wide, almost bridgeless river.

On the Allied extreme left flank along the Channel coast British, Canadian, Belgian and Dutch troops spurted forward with swift drives on many sectors running up to almost a score of miles, closing in on the threatened German forces from the west.

Among the many towns from the coast to south of Paris which fell during the day were Cabourg and Houlgate on the channel; Dozule, five miles inland, Gace, 35 miles to the south; Etampes, 27 miles south of Paris, and Pithiviers, 18 miles below Etampes.

In addition Allied troops fought into the outskirts of the world-famed resort of Deauville on the coast, battled in the streets of Isieux, 16 miles southeast of Deauville, reached the fringes of Orbec, 11 miles farther southeastward, and beat their way around Nazi resistance at Rambouilet, 22 miles southwest of Paris.

Nowhere along the entire front from the channel to Sens did the Germans appear able to check the Allies, whose pauses—notably before Paris—were rather from Allied choice than because of enemy opposition.

Between the new wheeling drive toward the sea west of Paris and the spectacular plunge into the heart of France at Sens, the metropolitan area of the old French Capital lay ready to fall at the will of the Allied armies, which for the moment were racing to chew up still more German troops rather than to conquer territory.

Tanks Cross Two Rivers

The American tank smash beyond Sens carried across two rivers, the Loing and the Yonne, and represented the latest and perhaps most spectacular of a series of lightning armored thrusts which Headquarters has permitted to be disclosed after a day or two of silence on the theory that they were so swift the Germans did not know exactly where they were.

The Americans were racing beyond Sens in the direction of Troyes, 37 miles to the east, a large communication center on the upper Seine. Sens itself is a minor communications hub, lying on the Yonne near its confluence with the Vanne.

The movements of these forces had been hidden for some hours. The depth of their penetration, plus the information that it was against only meager opposition, disclosed that the Americans under Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley still were rampant on a grand scale without the slightest evidence of being checked.

Northwest of Paris the Americans sought to shape a trap approximately 40 miles square around those Germans still reeling in a tailspin of confusion, who managed to escape from the Argentan-Falais pocket in Normandy.

The final liquidation of this first pocket was announced at Headquarters tonight, with 30,000 prisoners counted and a total toll in killed and captured expected to reach or pass the 100,000-mark.

The drive along the Seine was launched from the Mantes-Gassicourt area 25 miles west of Paris, where the Doughboys had established a bridgehead across the Seine.

Paris Ready to Fall

Paris itself, with patriots fighting Germans in its streets and with American forces across the Seine both to the west and south east, it was left apparently ready to fall at any time the Allied military leaders give the signal.

The Germans stiffened somewhat along their arc before Paris, notably in the Mantes area and in the regions of Etampes and Rambouillet, respectively 27 miles south and 22 miles southwest of Paris, but the resistance was minor and failed to check the momentum of the great Allied drive. Etampes later was captured by the Americans.

The Allied offensive gained virtually all along the front. To the west, north of the now-flattened Normandy pocket, Belgian troops with the Canadian First army battled into the outskirts of the world-famous resort city of Deauville on the channel coast, lying just 10 miles across the Seine estuary from Le Havre.

This represented an advance of nearly 15 miles for the Belgians, who captured the coastal town of Cabourg on the way. Dutch forces also occupied Houlgate, another coast town.

Five miles inland British troops captured Dozule and advanced five miles eastward across the river Dives, and 15 miles to the southeast a British column fighting with the Canadians drove in the streets of Lisieux.

British Take Gace

Gace, 25 miles south of Lisieux, fell to British infantry in a 10-mile drive supported by tanks, and these troops then raced on six miles and seized St. Andre D'Echouffour. To the north Canadian troops captured Vimoutiers and advanced three miles across the river Touques.

Field dispatches reported some of the heaviest fighting of the battle-front in the region of the Mantes-Gassicourt bridgehead. The Germans threw armor into the fray to cover the withdrawal of their battered forces, and a battle ensued in which the Americans knocked out 30 German tanks and shot down 16 enemy planes.

The Americans generally tightened their hold on the Seine line, sending patrols along the south banks of the river between Mantes and Paris.

AUG 23 1944

The advance of the Canadian First army and the drives of the Americans virtually cut out of the fight the entire British Second army and suggested that clean-up operations now imminent would free this vast striking force to be hurled into another of the "new surprises" which the Allied ground commander, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, has declared to be shaping up for the Germans.

The fast-developing American cut-off drive down the Seine presumably was following the south bank in a thrust to or perhaps already beyond Vernon, approximately halfway from Paris to the mouth of the broad river barrier over which the Nazis are attempting to carry out an inland Dunkerque.

(The German News Agency Transocean said that in order "to give a broader base for their attacks down the Seine" the Americans had established a bridgehead 2 1-2 miles deep across the river Avre near Dreux, 23 miles southwest of Mantes.)

As the Allies tightened their pressure, the German race northward was in full swing. A British headquarters officer, commenting on Gen. Montgomery's message that "the end of the war is in sight," declared that "the back of the German army is broken," and that "any troops Hitler now sends forth to meet us will be only cannon fodder for our guns to chew up."

American And French Troops But 3 Miles From Marseille

AUG 22

DAY

Rome, Aug. 22 (AP)—American and French troops, plunging westward beyond the encircled naval base of Toulon on the Mediterranean, were fighting forward tonight within three miles of Marseille, France's second largest city, brushing aside Nazi forces declared by Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch to be "perplexed and stunned."

An American armored and infantry column, spearing toward the wide Rhone valley, was eight miles west of captured Aix-en-Province, which is 15 miles north of Marseille.

Advance Along Durance

Another Yank column approached St. Cannat, ten miles northwest of Aix. Still other American units, advancing along both banks of the Durance river toward the Rhone valley, were four miles beyond Les Puy.

Yank reconnaissance elements striking toward the northwest were reported in the outskirts of Apt, a highway junction 40 miles north of Marseille and only 30 miles east of Avignon.

The Nazis are in "full retreat" everywhere in southern France except for coastal defense forces holding out in and near Toulon and on the immediate approaches to Marseille, General Patch, Seventh Army commander said in an order of the day.

Urged To Forget Fatigue

He exhorted his troops to forget their fatigue and the difficulties of maintaining supply lines and to devote the last ounce of effort to the pursuit of the fleeing enemy.

"The opportunity for decisive results is in front of us and we must and will move with the utmost speed and effectiveness," he told his forces.

The pace of the Allied push-in from the Mediterranean in recent days had expanded the Seventh Army's grip on southern France to more than double the holding of late last week.

Pull Back Into Center

five miles southwest of the heart of Paris, Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's troops also tightened their flank positions against the Germans pushing them back toward the sea and the Seine. The Germans had thrown up flank protection and were fighting vigorously along the Avre in that area.

A front dispatch said there are indications that the total enemy killed and captured may run much higher than recent estimates, although the number of Germans still in the bag is a matter of guesswork. The British Second Army and the American First Army were busy wiping out the last Germans in the pocket and there was a prospect that another twenty-four hours may see the end of the pocket entirely.

The Canadian push on a front of about fifty miles from the sea toward Argentan where it meets Gen. Patton's forces virtually was squeezing out the British Second and American First Army in present operations.

Some remnants of the German Seventh Army were crossing the Seine—using in a few cases the very barges in which in their days of victory they hoped to invade England.

Patton Moves In Silence Again.

Supreme Headquarters had no news of Gen. Patton's second crossing of the Seine, near Fontainbleau, thirty-five miles southeast of Paris. This bridgehead is fifty-five miles southeast of Belleau Wood, where Americans halted the Germans in the second battle of the Marne in June, 1918, and less than thirty miles from the area of the first battle of the Marne, where the French and British checked the Germans' drive in September, 1914.

While the bridgehead at Mantes threatens to back the Germans against the sea all the way from Dieppe to Dunkirk, the one at Fountainebleau presents a threat to a possible German stand along the Somme River, the last large natural defense position in front of their robot lairs in the Pas de Calais.

Bad weather cut Allied air operations to their lowest point in many weeks and allowed the Germans time to get equipment and men out of the trap south and west of the Seine on choked roads and over their barge bottleneck.

the bridgehead at Mantes, twenty-five miles northwest of Paris. Here it could strike also above the Seine into the rocket-bomb Pas de Calais coast.

The Canadian First Army advanced four to ten miles on a broad front between the sea and Argentan, Belgian units took Cabourg on the Dives Estuary, sixteen miles across water from Le Havre. Dutchmen fought in the outskirts of Houlgate. British troops, gaining ten miles, seized Gace, fifteen miles east of Argentan. The American First Army also was pushing toward the Seine.

Germans trapped in the new pocket were surrendering by platoons, a Canadian officer declared. Thirty thousand prisoners had been taken in the Falaise trap, with thousands more throwing up their hands. The dead were yet uncounted. Pocketed Germans had been virtually wiped out.

Nazis Not Safe Yet.

Front dispatches said Field Marshal Von Kluge presumably had pulled out a large part of his forces, but they were by no means saved as yet.

"They have taken a thorough shellacking, and they know it," said one American officer.

Supreme Headquarters gave no news of the bridgehead at Mantes-Grassicourt, or the one southeast of Paris near Fountainblea, where Gen. Patton's forces were but thirty miles from the Marne.

The Germans in the bridgehead area lost thirty tanks and sixteen planes trying to protect forces fleeing north of the Seine, front reports said. The Americans strengthened their grip here, and patrolled southeastward toward Paris. Substantial gains were scored southwest of Paris.

Reports that French Patriots were seizing city after city in central and southern France, including Lyon, gave a clear indication that the Gestapo-dominated German High Command was capable of offering organized resistance only in northwestern France.

But this was precisely the Nazi defenses in that section of France which the United States Third Army's Seine bridgeheads northwest and southeast of Paris were threatening, including the flying bomb coast in the Pas de Calais.

(In the area of Drieux, forty-

Gassicourt twenty-five miles from Paris, bringing in the eastern arm of the pincers upon German Seventh Army remnants stumbling back to the Seine and seeking to escape by ferries, small boats, and even swimming.

Canadian, British and American armies striking eastward in this enveloping push gained up to ten miles.

Heavy fighting was reported in the Paris area. American forces met heavy resistance at Etampes, twenty-seven miles south of Paris.

[Berlin announced evacuation of both Etampes and Malesherbes, thirty-six miles below Paris, and fourteen southwest of the American bridgehead across the Seine at Fontainbleau. The Germans said thrusts in the Orleans area southwest of Paris were checked.]

Orleans was under shellfire, and there was fighting at Rambouillet, twenty-two miles southwest of Paris.

As the new pincers began, a British staff officer asserted "the back of the German army is broken."

A headquarters officer with British forces advancing toward the Seine said today that "One good sledgehammer blow by the Russians, coupled with our efforts in the west, will finish" the war with Germany.

"The days of great battle in France are ended," the officer declared, "the rest of the war for Germany is merely a fight for time—time for Hitler."

Intelligence reports said the Germans already had turned guns of the Maginot Line about to face the Allied armies.

The British officer said that never again can Germany put into the field an army such as the Seventh Army.

In cleaning up the Normandy bulge, troops found repeated instances of German use of dummy tanks. These were counterfeits, of Tigers, mounted on farm carts, and fitted with mock guns fashioned from stove pipes and camouflaged with lengths of saplings.

Front dispatches declared the enemy was so disorganized that he had been unable to make any co-ordinated stand or launch strong counter-thrusts.

Canadians Make Big Gains.

The Third Army was hitting westward and northward from columns striking down the Seine from their bridgehead at Mantes-Gassicourt, twenty-five miles northwest of Paris. Together they were all fashioning a gigantic new trap for the Germans.

U. S. Tanks in 65-mile Drive.

Meanwhile today an American armored column, in a smashing sixty-five mile drive, has got beyond Sens, a town fifty-eight miles southeast of Paris. This latest tank wedge thrust the entire distance against only meager opposition.

With other American forces across the Seine northwest of Paris, the entire area around the French capital was thus cut off by a great two-pronged drive which had as its aim the dissolution and destruction of the German Army rather than the mere capture of territory.

At the same time another American armored force today occupied Etampes, twenty-seven miles south of Paris, and a spearhead to the northwest passed beyond Pambouillett, twenty miles from Uaris on the highway from

The Americans captured a German corps general, a Lt. Gen. Farnbecker, in the Normandy pocket in an incident illustrating the confusion of the enemy and their ignorance regarding American positions and intentions. Three days ago he sent out an aide to reconnoiter a route of retreat for his armored division, and the aide tried to locate an open road in an area held by three American divisions.

American casualties since D-Day have been far lighter than the Allied command had anticipated, while the enemy's losses have been heavy. The number of German prisoners taken by the Americans exceeds the total number of American casualties, and in addition the Germans must count a heavy toll in dead and wounded.

Allied air operations were cut to their lowest point in many weeks by bad weather which allowed the Germans to get important relief in their harried efforts to get men and equipment out of the new trap shaping up on the Seine.

Belgians Drive Into Deauville; Allies Three Miles From Marseille

Patton's Tanks Swerve Down the River—Yank Armored Column in 65-mile Dash Southeast of Paris.

NIGHT

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Four powerful Allied armies drove in a great new pincers on the disorganized Germans fleeing back to the bridgeless River Seine today, reaching to within eight airline miles of the great port of Le Havre.

American columns struck down the Seine, and Belgian troops reached Deauville, the seaside resort at the mouth of the Seine across from Le Havre. Belgian units of the Canadian First Army advanced nine miles between fallen Cabourg in the punch into the outskirts of Deauville, and with their lines crumbling rapidly, the Germans were falling back on a fifty-mile front inland from the sea in this sector before the blows of Canadian, British and American armies.

The other flank of the pincers was formed by American

Supreme headquarters, disclosing the fresh cut-off operation, declared 1,200 enemy tanks had been destroyed or damaged since D day on June 6—armored strength equivalent to six and a half Nazi Panzer divisions—and field estimates said that more than 300,000 Germans had been put out of action in western France in the same period.

[French Forces of the Interior have rolled up light artillery into the battle inside Paris and have attacked the Germans in the Place de la Republique and the Boulevard Bonne Nouvelle, a communique from Lieut.-Gen. French Improve Positions Inside Toulon—Last Escape Route Cut.

YANKS ADVANCE WEST OF AIX

Twin Columns Gain in Drive Toward Rhone—Patriots Take 1000 Nazis Prisoners.

NIGHT

Rome, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Allied troops drove to within three miles of the great port of Marseille today, and to the east, hard-fighting Frenchmen who penetrated the great naval base of Toulon improved their positions in the northern and western sections of the encircled city.

American units advanced as far as the vicinity of Ventabren, eight miles west of the highway center of Aix-en-Provence and well to the northwest of Marseille, France's second city. Other American columns approached St. Cannat, ten miles northwest of Aix.

Twin columns continued to gain ground in the drive down the Durance Valley toward the Rhone River. The Seventh Army reached the vicinity of St. Esteve, eleven miles north of Aix, on this route toward the heart of France and juncture with Allied forces in the north. While this column drove ahead on the south bank of the Durance in a four-mile advance, the other unit stabbed along the north bank to the town of Villelaure, three miles north of St. Esteve.

AUG 23 1944

German forces still were holding out in the lower ports of Toulon and in the port, but the naval base was encircled by land, and the last escape route cut, penning in the garrison forces in the fixed fortifications.

While an Allied fleet offshore and land batteries on the north hurled shells against enemy strongpoints, the French infantrymen advanced through the outskirts of the city in house to house fighting.

American troops, meanwhile, reached points sixty miles inland, and headquarters announced that the Allied grip on southern France now had been expanded to more than 2,000 square miles—an area more than double that of the beachhead late last week.

A substantial extension of Allied territory was reported on the north with American troops capturing the towns of St. Julien and Barreme in the Basses Alps, thirty-five and forty-three miles northwest of Cannes and more than sixty from Cannes.

The rout of the scattered Nazi forces was so complete in southern France that the Allied command called off the warplanes which had been bombing and strafing available enemy targets, and sent them back to their former job of smashing enemy communications in northern Italy and the Balkans.

Sweeping across the Durance Valley northeast of Aix-en-Provence, forward American forces reached Grambois and Manosque in their westward sweep. They also were reported to have enveloped the city of Valensole, fifty miles inland and approximately a third of the way to Lyon. Four miles northeast of Toulon's outskirts the French captured the fortress of Coudon.

Patriots Take 1,000 Nazis.

Nazi troops trapped in Toulon by the cutting of their last escape road along the coast to Marseille had pulled back into the center and lower parts of the city, where they were putting up fierce resistance from fixed fortifications. They had depressed anti-aircraft guns to help shell French troops in the northern and western parts of the city.

[A German news broadcast acknowledged that Allied troops were fighting inside the "fortress" of Toulon.]

Fight From House To House

The French fought steadily and brilliantly from house to house, wiping out German resistance as they advanced.

The Allied column driving on Marseille had swept past Aubagne, eight miles to the east, where German infantry tanks and self-propelled artillery attempted to stem the rush.

Just as the garrison of Toulon already was trapped between French ground forces and the guns of Allied warships pounding them from the sea, so whatever Nazis who remained in or near Marseille were faced with the choice of fleeing or remaining to be encircled and destroyed.

Sealing Off Called Near

The sealing-off of the big port promised to be a matter of hours, dispatches said. The American column which fanned out southwest of Aix-en-Province needed to advance less than a dozen miles to sever the last coastal escape route from the city.

Front advices said the Nazis had set a forest fire east of Marseille in a desperate effort to check the fast-moving French.

American forces driving due north from the invasion beaches continued to move along at a steady clip. Captured yesterday were the towns of St. Julien and Barreme, more than 60 miles north and slightly east of Toulon.

Under Fire At Hyeres

Allied reconnaissance units entered the town of Hyeres, on the coast nine miles east of Toulon, but came under intense fire from well-intrenched Nazi forces there. The fortress of Coudon, four miles northeast of Toulon's outskirts, was captured by the French.

Testifying to the strength of German fortifications facing the sea in Toulon, an Allied naval ocrrespondent declared a French battleship scored a direct hit on one heavy gun turret without putting it out of action. There yet was no indication of the size of the enemy force holding Toulon.

The right flank of the Allied beachhead facing Cannes was reported unchanged, with Allied troops held up a few miles outside the famous resort town while the main strength of the invasion was exerted toward the north and west.

Adriatic Only Active Sector

ROME, Aug. 22 (AP)—Aside from patrol clashes and artillery exchanges the Adriatic sector continued to provide the only fighting along the Italian front.

Near the Adriatic coast Polish troops with tank support broke enemy resistance after a daylong battle and pushed within 1,000 yards of the Metauro River, behind which the Germans are building a new defense line. German losses were reported to be heavy and 100 Germans were captured. Two German tanks were knocked out.

Inland from the Adriatic Italian troops captured the town of Santa Maria Carpieneta, three miles west of Pergola. The Eighth Army announced that it had taken 13,171 prisoners from May 11 to Aug. 1.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—One thousand German troops have surrendered to an expanding French volunteer army surrounding the Bordeaux area, and an American motorized column is closing on Bordeaux from the north, advices reaching the Spanish border declared today.

[This dispatch from neutral Spain portrayed the deepest penetration by the Americans so far reported in the area below the Loire River. Bordeaux is 170 miles south of Nantes on the Loire. Supreme Headquarters of the Allied expeditionary force refused to confirm or deny the report. It has given no news of American operations since announcement days ago that Third Army units had crossed the Loire in the Nantes area.]

French volunteer forces 150 strong left Hendaye at the border during the night and grew to several thousands as they pressed northward on Bordeaux. They passed through St. Jean de Luz and Biarritz, liberated Bayonne, and then freed Dax twenty-five miles farther north.

Besides the 1,000 Germans surrendering in the Bordeaux area, the remaining forces inside a tightening French pocket are "going around in ever decreasing small concentric circles," said the officer in command of southern France. The Germans' chances of escaping are rapidly diminishing, he declared.

Bordeaux appeared to be the last center of German resistance in southeastern France.

A French lieutenant left in charge at Hendaye, on the French side of the international bridge here, said the total number of Germans captured in southwestern France could not yet be estimated, but "certainly there are thousands."

Lights went on again last night all over southwestern France. Hendaye, freed of the Germans, had its gayest night since 1940.

One dispatch said all Vichy and German authority south of the Loire had disappeared, with the Nazis fighting to esmape toward the Reich.

Fate of Toulouse in Doubt.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Border dispatches told of the collapse of German resistance in one city and town after another throughout central and southern France today as the French Forces of the Interior pressed a campaign to rid their country of the invaders. There was still no confirmation here, however, of a report that the vital Nazi bastion of Toulouse, sixty miles north of the Spanish border, had fallen. Toulouse was reported to have a Nazi garrison of 3,000 troops, mostly fanatical SS (Elite Guard) forces.

French patriots were said to be firmly astride all railroads and highways over which Germans in the Bordeaux area must fight their way to get through to the Reich.

Uniformed officers of the French Army took possession of the International Bridge at Hendaye last evening in the name of the French Committee of National Liberation, thus completing French occupation of the entire Pyrenees frontier. A group of 150 Frenchmen officered by a captain, a lieutenant and two Mobile Guards meanwhile were reported chasing a greatly superior force of Germans retreating northward toward Bordeaux today. The French were picking off stragglers and generally harassing the Germans' evacuation of southwestern France.

Capt. Pierre d'Hauverne and his little band, recruited from among the inhabitants of Hendaye, were reported to have passed through Biarritz without stopping in their anxiety to come to closer grips with the Nazis. The vanguard of the German force has already reached Bordeaux, where the German commander was hurriedly forming an armored convoy in an effort to force a way through to Germany, it was said.

Meanwhile, three Allied cruisers continued their patrol of the French Bay of Biscay coast from the Spanish frontier to the north.

Fernand Hirigoyen, a former Mayor of Biarritz, who has been appointed by Algiers as Regional Commissioner of Southwestern France, set about bringing order out of the chaos left by the German evacuation of the frontier region after four years of occupation. He is acting under direct orders from Algiers transmitted via Jacques Aruelle, the National Committee delegate to Spain.

Spanish Frontier Controlled

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 22 (AP)—Fernand Hirigoyen, former Mayor of Biarritz, who has been appointed by Algiers as Regional Commissioner of southwestern France, has set about bringing order out of the chaos left by the German evacuation of the frontier region after four years of occupation. He is acting under orders transmitted through Jacques Aruelle, Algiers' delegate to Spain.

Pulling Out of Vichy.

London, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The Vichy Government is transferring its seat to another city, the German-controlled Vichy radio declared in a broadcast picked up today by the Associated Press. The transfer is now in progress, Vichy added, but did not disclose the identity of the other city.

The broadcast broke a silence of several days. Several short bulletins on the progress of fighting in France and a program of music followed.

Laval Leaves Belfort.

Fort del Ecluse, France, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Four hundred Germans were forced to surrender this fort fourteen miles from Geneva, because their water supply had been cut off during a five-day siege by the Maquis. British planes parachuted new armaments to the French fighters.

Pierre Laval was said to have left Belfort, near the Swiss-German border. He had been reported keeping quarters with two Vichy Cabinet Ministers, Joseph Darnand and Fernand de Brinon, close to the frontier at Morvillars.

Tall Tale Nets Five GIs 750 German Prisoners

With the Canadian First Army, France, Aug. 22 (AP)—Five persuasive American GIs marched 750 German prisoners into Canadian lines from the Falaise gap and today the Yanks were toasts of the Canadian army. They must remain nameless now because the Americans had been German prisoners.

A Canadian officer said their feat was accomplished by fast talk that would impress any vacuum cleaner salesman. The five Americans told the Germans they would go through the lines and get the Allied artillery to stop shelling, if the Germans would surrender.

The Germans agreed. The Americans went off and came back within a suitable time and told the Germans they had arranged for the artillery to be silent for 20 minutes. The Germans lined up and the GIs marched them into Canadian lines.

By chance, shelling actually did cease during the parade of the 750 Germans to prison cages—but the GIs hadn't been very close to Allied artillery emplacements.

BULLETIN

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 22—(AP)—At least 100,000 Germans will be accounted for in captured, killed and wounded when operations are completed in the Argentan-Falaise trap in Normandy, it was estimated today.

Maquis Inside Maginot Line City of Belfort

NIGHT

London, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The Maquis and the Germans were reported by the Algiers radio today to be locked in fierce battles inside the Maginot Line city of Belfort, where Pierre Laval had scurried from Vichy with unarrested ministers to establish a new seat of the Nazi-controlled French Government.

Swiss reports said that the Germans were moving between 20,000 and 30,000 troops from the interior of France to Belfort to defend the gateway to the Rhineland and to perserve a foothold on French soil for Laval.

Heavy fighting between Patriots and Germans also was reported in Bellegarde, in the south of France, where both Germans and Maquis were reinforced.

In Paris, fighting was reported by the Swiss radio to be increasing in violence every hour while American armor probed at the outskirts.

Have Half of France.

30-24 — 18203

The French Forces of the Interior announced meanwhile that more than half of all France (212,000 square miles) was under control of the Allies or the Patriots. The FFI appealed to all Fighting French commanders to protect radio transmitters, cables and telephones which the fleeing Germans might be trying to destroy. This was a curious reversal of roles—only a week or so ago, the Maquis were still wrecking communications to hamper German military operations.

Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, the FFI commander, designated by Algiers to be the Military Governor of Paris, declared: "The hour of liberation is near." In a communique he added that all roads which might have been used by the Nazis as escape routes had been cut between France and Italy. The communique also said that Limoges was encircled by the Patriots, and that road blocks had been established at all exits. The militia at Tarbes was said to have surrendered with all its arms to the FFI.

In Marseille, the second city of France and her greatest seaport, the Maquis were reported striking at German strongpoints, and from the Swiss border to the Spanish Pyrennes the FFI were declared to be attacking isolated German garrisons. The Swiss radio said that the Maquis had seized the American-threatened French Riviera city of Nice, fifth largest in France, with a population of 242,000.

Alpine F. F. I. Capture Town

By KENNETH L. DIXON

With the French Maquis, Aug. 21 (AP—Delayed)—High in the lower Alps, French Forces of the Interior came out of the brush and woods from which they get the name Maquis and descended on a German-garrisoned village last night.

Today the town is liberated after four years. Nearly 1,000 prisoners were taken in and around the mountain-pass town, which nestles at the end of a long, green valley.

Motley men of the Maquis stormed the city at sundown. Obviously surrounded, most of the German garrison surrendered following parleys with American officers working with the F. F. I. However, fighting burst out here and there and one group of combined German army and Gestapo personnel barricaded themselves in the big stone schoolhouse in the middle of the village square.

Leader Under Death Sentence

Then I saw the most fantastic scene of my life.

Led by such men as a 20-year-old French patriot who had been sentenced to be shot this morning and had just been liberated from a Gestapo prison a few moments before, the Maquis unleashed four years of pent-up rage, stormed across the open courtyard, kicked down the barricades and killed or captured the Germans inside.

I saw gun flashes from the windows. Bullets kicked up the dust at the feet of the Maquis—but they did not hesitate. Halfway to the building was a three-foot-high stone wall. They reached the wall and leveled carbines, Sten guns, captured lugers, berettas and automatic rifles and a score of other type of weapons and threw a hail of bullets into the building.

Then in the fading afternoon light a handful of the Maquis leaped the wall and charged the building, while others remained at the wall and covered them with fire.

Not A Casualty Among Attackers

They charged through the barricaded front door. From the inside came automatic gunfire and pistols.

Miraculously, I saw not one casualty among the attackers. The only ones slain were two German prisoners who were being marched along the street next to the courtyard—apparently the victims of bullets fired by their own comrades inside the building.

From behind a near-by tree Capt. Ralph Hotchkiss, of Hartsdale, N. Y., and Washington, brandished a .45 with a belligerence which must have been born back in the days when he was a publicity agent for former Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

He let out a roaring bellow which cut through the sounds of battle.

"Look at them go," he yelled. "Brother, we got Allies what am Allies."

FRENCH FORCES FREE VILLAGE IN LOWER ALPS

KENNETH L. DIXON

WITH THE FRENCH MAQUIS OVER 100 MILES INLAND FROM THE RIVIERA BEACHHEAD, Aug. 21—(Delayed)—(AP)—High in the lower Alps, French Forces of the Interior came out of the brush and woods from which they get the name "Maquis" and descended on a German-garrisoned village last night.

F. D. R. To Witness March Into Paris?

London, Wednesday, Aug. 23 (AP)—The Daily Herald said today plans were being made for President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to be present at the Allied march into Paris "if that is practical."

The march will wait until the "campaign of destruction of the German armies goes a stage further," the paper said, but added that "special newsreel operators who will make a picture record of the march already have been detailed for duty and military bands which will play in the march are now in France practicing."

French troops will head the parade under the Arc de Triomphe, with Gen. Charles de Gaulle probably having the place of honor, it was said.

The Daily Mail, in an article by Don Iddon, also said that a conference between Roosevelt and Churchill would "take place within a matter of weeks on French soil."

PETAIN PRISONER OF NAZI GESTAPO

Marshal Removed to Belfort Bringing to End Vichy Authority.

ALBERT-SHELTON

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(AP) Aged Marshal Petain was kidnaped from his Vichy villa by the German Gestapo Sunday and now, along with Pierre Laval, is virtually a prisoner of the Germans at Belfort in eastern France, a reliable report from the French-Swiss border said tonight.

Petain was reported to have reached Belfort near the Swiss-French border, Monday afternoon after being spirited across France by the Gestapo. An earlier report had said Petain was being held at Wiesbaden.

30,000 Troops at Belfort

At the same time Germans were reported massing upwards of 30,000 troops around Belfort to defend the gateway to the Rhineland. Belfort is 25 miles from the Swiss border and an equal distance from Germany.

The Nazis apparently hoped to preserve a foothold on French soil for the government of Pierre Laval, who fled with them in the face of the roaring tide of the Allied advance to a place identified by the Nazis only as "another French town." A report Saturday said Laval had established headquarters at Belfort in an effort to escape attacks from the French Forces of the Interior.

The Algiers radio reported, however, that "violent fighting" already was raging at Belfort between the Maquis and Germans and that the patriots had cut the Belfort-Paris railway.

Heavy fighting also was reported at Bellegarde, on the Swiss border a few miles from Geneva, where both the Germans and the Maquis have been reinforced.

The 88-year old marshal after four years of collaboration with the Nazis was unceremoniously carried away with other members of his government, apparently as a result of his refusal to accompany Laval to the new puppet government seat.

A dispatch from Bern, Switzerland, quoted the Swiss newspaper, Der Bund, as saying that Petain was transferred to Wiesbaden, the German health resort where "suitable" quarters had been prepared a week ago.

Reported arrested with Petain were Lt. Gen. Eugene Bridoux, Vichy minister of war; Admiral H. P. A. Biehaut, minister of navy; Charles Antoine Rochat, secretary-general of the foreign ministry, and Bernard Genetrel, the marshal's private secretary and physician.

Petain before leaving reportedly wrote a short letter of adieu, copies of which already are in circulation in France.

A Wilhelmstrasse spokesman refused to give any hint where Petain was taken. Some "differences" between Laval and his cabinet colleagues were admitted by the spokesman, who added, however, that the "immediate danger had strengthened their mutuality."

Vichy Authority Ends

Petain's arrest spelled the end of Vichy authority so certainly that the Swiss minister returned home, planning to conduct through Berlin any business concerning parts of German-held France.

The National Zeitung of Basel, Switzerland, said the Germans forced their way into Petain's villa and demanded he go immediately to Belfort. Petain refused and called his bodyguard but yielded a few minutes later when the Nazis threatened to bomb Vichy to ruins. The paper said Petain considered himself a prisoner and his "mission as chief of state" ended.

It appeared likely, however, that Laval, who fled from revolt torn Paris with Otto Abetz, Nazi ambassador to France, would set up shop at Belfort.

But with more than half of France wrested from the Germans either by the advancing Allies or uprising patriots, there was scant chance that Laval could make his voice heard for German and collaboration radios have been virtually swept off the air.

Although not ruling out completely the possibility that Petain's seizure was a ruse to gain sympathy against the day of reckoning, Associated Press Correspondent Thomas Hawkins from Switzerland reported positively that Petain had an "understanding" with the Americans on his course of action when a crisis, such as now, approached.

If this is substantiated it may spell considerable trouble in future Allied relations.

Divided on Maquis

A commentator for the German news agency Transocean sought to minimize the work of the Maquis declaring that the French patriots had been active only in parts of the country unoccupied by Germans and that they had been unable to assist the military operations of the Allies.

The Nazi commentator Sertorius, however, credited Maquis aid as a vital factor in the fighting in southern France.

Paris was reported to be slowly freeing itself and Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig's headquarters announced that the French Forces of the Interior, supported by light artillery, had attacked Germans in the Place de La Republique and on the boulevard Bonne Nouvelle, with losses on both sides.

14 Departments Freed

Koenig also announced that the F. F. I. had liberated the departments of Indre, Haute Vienne, Dordorgne, Correze, Cantal, Lot-St-Garonne, Lot, Averyon, Tarn-Et-Garonne, Gers, Basses Pyrenees, Haute Garonne, Tarn, Haute Loire, including the following towns: Chateauroux Limoges, Periguex, Tulle, Aurillac, Agen, Montauban Rodez, Auch, Pau, Toulouse, Albi and Le Puy.

Germans fleeing from all parts of France are reinforcing not only Belfort but are taking up positions at the foot of the Vosges on the Plateau de Langres, which is well fortified.

Germans Quit Frontier

In a home broadcast of Radio National of Spain as reported by the FCC the Germans have withdrawn from the Spanish-French frontier after destroying "whatever they thought had any strategical value."

The broadcast said German forces in the department of Pyrenees-Orientals, on the Gulf of Lion, had retreated to Narbonne, capital of the adjacent Aude department to the north.

The Spanish radio quoted reports from San Sebastian, at the Atlantic end of the frontier, as saying that the Germans near by had fled in the direction of Lyons after requisitioning all automobiles, bicycles and other types of transport.

tary, Lieut.-Gen. Eugene Bridoux; an Admiral Biehaut, one Rochat, general secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Bernard Menetrel, private secretary to Marshal Petain.

Most reliable informants said that Marshal Petain refused a German request that he leave Vichy and go with Pierre Laval, the Chief of Government, to the new provisional capital at Belfort, and that the old Marshal was therefore summarily seized by force. Where he is was not known, but most guesses were that he is in Germany. Thus the old Chief of State became officially what he has been in fact for a long time—a prisoner of the Nazis.

He was arrested so swiftly that he was not even given time to shave, the informants said.

[The Swiss radio said today that Marshal Petain was able to write a short letter of farewell, copies of which are now circulating in France. In a broadcast recorded here by the OWI, Berne said its information came from most reliable informants.]

Maquis Were Attacking.

The Vichy regime is "finished," the Basle National Zeitung commented today. The Swiss Minister to Vichy is returning nome and relations concerning France will henceforth be conducted through Berlin.

Reports from the French underground said that the Maquis were attacking Vichy at about the same hour the arrests were made, had actually taken parts of the city and were themselves rounding up collaborationists.

The reported action of the Gestapo was taken as an indication that the Germans placed no trust in the Marshal.

Laval was reported installed in Belfort near the German fron-

Petain Is Reported Arrested

Geneva Hears He Was Seized by Gestapo as Maquis Were Attacking Vichy.

Geneva, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The German secret police have arrested Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, the French Chief of State, at his residence and headquarters at the Hotel du Parc in Vichy, advices from France said today.

The 88-year-old Marshal, hero of Verdun and head of the German-dominated Vichy Government of France since 1940, was reported seized on Sunday morning along with a number of associates, among them a Gen. Bridoux, possibly the War Secre-tier—a city once considered an anchor of the old Maginot Line.

French frontier reports said that from 20,000 to 30,000 German troops were moving northward from South and Central France toward Belfort where it appeared the Nazis were determined to defend a gap leading to the Rhine.

Berlin Won't Talk.

London, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—A German Foreign Office spokesman refused to give any hint where Marshal Petain had been taken.

The spokesman was quoted by the Berlin radio as saying that some differences had existed between Pierre Laval, the Chief of Government, and his cabinet colleagues, but added: "The immediate danger has strengthened them mutually."

Marshal Condemns Laval.

Taylor Henry, longtime Associated Press correspondent in Paris and Vichy, reported after his recent return from a German prison camp that Marshal Petain's contempt for Laval was so great that he refused to have any relations with him except on official business.

The Marshal's first breach with Laval occurred in December, 1940, when he learned that Laval was attempting to sabotage the Marshal's plan for an authoritarian government in France based on a minimum of collaboration with the Germans.

Mr. Henry also wrote that Marshal Petain considered fleeing France to join the Fighting French in North Africa in November, 1942, but that the German troops blocked him. He won the affection of France for his great defense of Verdun in 1914, and this accounted for whatever following he now retains. He emerged from semi-retirement as French Ambassador to Spain in June, 1940, when France was falling. As Premier, in rapid succession to Reynaud in the black days, he sued for an armistice. France was in despair and perhaps 2,000,000 of her fighting men were in German prison camps. His first official act was to order the surrender of Frenchmen still fighting in the outflanked Maginot Line.

ALL FLORENCE NOW OCCUPIED

Flanking Moves Ousts Foe, City Suffers Little Damage

Rome, Aug. 22 (AP)—Allied troops "by skill and patience" have completed occupation of the world famous art center of Florence without incurring extensive damage to its cultural treasures and have sent patrols digging into Nazi positions beyond the city, General Sir Harold Alexander's headquarters announced today.

"Unless the enemy decides to engage the city with long-range artillery fire the city will rapidly return to normal and full assistance will be brought to the inhabitants by the Allied military government," an official statement said.

"When the time is ripe Allied armies will continue their advance relieved to know that the city has been spared irreparable damage."

Street Fighting Avoided

Florence's position had been precarious since August 4, when Eighth Army troops penetrated to the south bank of the Arno river which flows through the city and found that the Germans had destroyed all but one of the bridges across the stream.

"Had troops of the Eighth Army forced their way into the city before the enemy had been compelled to withdraw from the town by our continued pressure on his flanks, street fighting inevitably would have broken out," General Alexander's statement pointed out.

"By skill and patience the city has fallen into our hands, and extensive damage, apart from demolitions effected by the enemy, has been avoided."

Poles Gain On Adriatic

Other than for patrol clashes and artillery exchanges the Adriatic sector continued to provide the only fighting along the Italian front. Near the Adriatic coast Polish troops with tank support broke enemy resistance after a day-long battle and pushed within 1,000 yards of the Metauri river, behind which the Nazis are building a new defense line. German losses were reported heavy, with 100 prisoners falling into Polish hands. Two German Panther tanks were knocked out.

Inland from the Adriatic Italian troops captured the town of Santa Maria Carpieneta, three miles west of Pergola.

The Eighth Army announced it took 13,171 prisoners from May 11 to August 1.

FLORENCE IS ALL IN ALIED HANDS

Rome, Aug. 22.—Florence has been completely occupied by Allied troops and Eighth Army patrols now are pushing out beyond the city's northern outskirts, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander's headquarters announced today.

Expaining the delay in ousting the last enemy opposition from the northern edges of Florence, the Allied command said:

"Had troops of the Eighth Army forced their way into the city before the enemy had been compelled to withdraw from the town by our continued pressure on his flanks, street fighting would inevitably have broken out. By skill and patience the city has fallen into our hands and extensive damage, apart from demolitions effected by the enemy, has been avoided."

Romans Not Yet Free From Want, He Says

Rome, Aug. 22 (AP)—General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied commander in the Mediterranean theater, told a conference of regional commissioners of the Allied Control Commission today that food and employment were the commission's two major problems.

"On these the reestablishment of Italy mainly depends," he said.

Wilson said the ACC must keep its eyes on the administration of the country and not become involved in politics. He said some Italians were below the subsistence level in food supplies and that this situation must be rectified.

The Italian theater is an example for future occupations, Wilson said.

Italian Assassin Reported Killed

Rome, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The Socialist newspaper Avanti, quoting an unidentified American soldier, said Gino Lucetti, anarchist who attempted to assassinate Mussolini June 11, 1927, was killed in a German air raid on Ischia Island last September only one hour after he was freed from the penitentiary by the Allies. He had served seventeen years of a thirty-year sentence.

The Avanti dispatch also said Osvaldo Sebastiani, Mussolini's private secretary who ruled the antechambers of the Pallazzo Venezia for years, was killed by Partisans in northern Italy a few days ago.

Swedes Halt Trade with Reich By Stopping Insurance on Ships

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 22 — (AP) The Swedish war insurance board announced today it no longer will underwrite Swedish ships traveling to German ports. This has the effect of eliminating all Swedish vessels from trading with Germany.

The action was a hard blow to Germany because an estimated 50 per cent of the trade between the two countries was carried in Swedish ships. Its effect, as far as reducing iron ore and other vital war exports to Germany, probably will be on a par with the embargoes on chrome and wolfram — other steel constituents — by Turkey, Spain and Portugal.

A Swedish communique said "the state war insurance board which on Aug. 11 ceased granting war insurance for Swedish ships to German North sea ports has today, owing to present conditions, decided to temporarily discontinue the granting of such insurance to German Baltic ports."

The Berlin newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter, timing its blast with the Swedish announcement, warned neutrals of possible economic reprisals.

"Certain neutral European countries might be economically and completely lamed by Germany but not by Britain or America if Germany wanted to take up the boycott as a weapon," the newspaper said.

The Swedish insurance board's decision means that the Germans hereafter must use their own ships exclusively to get goods from Sweden — a monumental job for the German merchant marine. The Swedes have been using 400,000 tons of shipping in the North and Baltic seas.

Four Newspapers Merged by Nazis

Madrid, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Four German newspapers have been amalgamated into one, and another, the Berliner Volkszeitung, has been suppressed in an effort to save man power, it was announced in German newspapers just reaching here.

The Berliner-Borsen-Zeitung, Deutsche Allemeine Zeitung, Berliner Lokalanzeiger and Berliner Morgenpost were those amalgamated into a single paper.

The announcement added that the only illustrated publications permitted in Germany are the Berliner Illustrierte and the Illustrierter Beobachter.

Lasting Peace Termed Sure By Molotov And Harriman

Moscow, Aug. 22 (AP)—Confident words that the Allied powers would shape a post-war world free of aggression were spoken today by Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, and United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman.

The occasion was presentation of 195 United States military awards to officers and men of the Red army.

Molotov formally accepted the decorations on behalf of the Soviet Union in a ceremony at Harriman's residence, attended by diplomats and army officers of both nations.

Referring to the blows falling on Germany from several sides, Molotov said: "More and more people in our enemy's camp realize the hopelessness of the situation and their closeness to disaster.

Success Held Assured

"Delegates of the United States, Great Britain and the U. S. S. R. are starting in Washington today to fulfill the task imposed on them to start developing the principles of international safety and organization indispensable to safeguard a permanent peace.

"The success of this is assured by the good will of peace-loving nations and increased consciousness of the necessity of dependable guarantees against instigators of new wars."

The Foreign Commissar gravely mentioned the sacrifices of his army and nation "in a war forced upon our peaceful people by Hitler and a criminal Fascist Government."

Friendship From Battle

He added that "out of the fire of this battle came the foundation for a friendship between people of the Soviet Union, the United States of America and other democratic nations, which will result in the destruction of our common enemy whose hours are counted, and will make possible the creation of lasting peace between nations."

Expressing certainty of victory, Harriman declared: "The ties that have been established between our countries and our fighting men during the war will hold fast for our common peaceful objectives."

He said the awards symbolized the esteem "we Americans hold in our hearts for . . . every soldier and airman of the Red army . . . and the recognition of the great contribution the Red army has made toward the total defeat . . . of our common enemy, Hitler, and Fascism."

The awards were distributed to all ranks of the Red army, from private to lieutenant general, and included the Legion of Merit, Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Distinguished Flying Cross.

119 Nazi Planes Bag Of Shuttle Bombers

Moscow, Aug. 22 (AP)—The United States military mission announced that since the beginning of shuttle bombing 119 enemy aircraft have been destroyed in operations ending at American bases in the Soviet Union.

In addition ten locomotives, 25 trucks and other vehicles have been destroyed in eight operations which terminated in Russia.

Berlin Reports New Bomber

New York, Aug. 22 (AP)—The Berlin radio said in a broadcast tonight that the German air force has put into service a four-motored bomber "for attacks on remote targets." The machine was described as the Heinkel 177, with a wing span of "about 100 feet."

Black Eight Days for War Correspondents

MacGowan Was Fired On Before Being Captured—His Companion Dying.

NIGHT

AUG 23 1944

First United States Army Headquarters in France, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The past eight days have been the blackest of the invasion for war correspondents as the luck of war finally turned. Two are dead, one is near death, two are injured and one is reported a captive of the Germans.

All their names cannot be given until the next of kin have been notified by the War Department.

Tall, dark-haired Tom Treanor of the Los Angeles Times, a veteran of four campaigns and one of the most colorful of war correspondents, is dead of multiple injuries received when his jeep was crushed by a tank northwest of Uaris.

Tom was conscious as he was taken to a hospital, and apparently he did not realize the gravity of his injuries. He insisted that the surgeons "hurry up and get this job over so I can file my story.

His D day story in the Los Angeles Times was one of the finest of the invasion. He had returned to London to get out one of the first eye-witness accounts of the landing of the American troops.

[The death of a third correspondent was reported today from London, where it was announced that William Stringer, an American covering the advance of the First United States Army for Reuters, had been killed. He was 27 years old and a former United Press man at New York. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anne Stringer, who is employed at Reuter's New York office.]

MacGowan Was Fired On.

Gault MacGowan, correspondent of The New York Sun, is a prisoner of the Germans. A British correspondent who was with Mr. MacGowan was shot in the stomach and is near death.

Mr. MacGowan was captured eight days ago on the road between Nogent-le-Rotrou and the town of Beaumont-les-Autels. He and two British correspondents headed for the town, believing the area safe since the American columns had already passed that way.

But two German armored cars came out of a side road and opened fire. Mr. MacGowan, Paul Holt of the London Daily Sketch, and the other British reporter jumped into a ditch on the roadside and dashed into the thicket. The Germans came up and raked the thicket with machine-gun fire.

Mr. Holt and his driver eluded the enemy, but Mr. MacGowan and the other reporter, who was shot in the stomach, were picked up. They were placed in the jeep and driven away.

Apparently Mr. MacGowan was uninjured, but later his British companion was found in a hospital in Chartres, where the Germans had left him. He is not expected to live.

Within an hour or so of Mr. Treanor's death another correspondent was killed by a German shell northwest of Chartres.

He was with Andy Lopez, Acme news photographer, searching for a command post near the front when they saw a burned-out jeep on the roadside.

"We slowed down," Mr. Lopez said, "and then there was a terrible explosion. We hadn't even heard a gun fired. I looked around and saw he was hit. He never knew what hit him."

Mr. Lopez and the driver, both slightly wounded by shrapnel, jumped into a ditch and crawled on their hands and knees while the German gun continued shelling them. They hid in a woods for thirty-six hours with nothing to eat or drink while enemy troops moved near them.

They were making their way westward in darkness when they ran into a group of French Patriots. Mistaking each other for the enemy, the driver and a Frenchman exchanged shots. The jeep driver was fatally wounded.

The French took the photographer to the home of the Mayor of a nearby village where he was identified as an American. He was later helped back to the American lines.

Ace Reporter Killed in France After Covering 4 Battlefronts

By HAL BOYLE

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, Aug. 19—(Delayed)—(AP) Last February when American troops smashed across the lowlands at stalemated Cassino and first got into the streets of that ancient Italian town which the Germans had converted into a fortress there was only one war correspondent with them.

He was Tom Treanor, of NBC and The Los Angeles Times.

A group of other correspondents worked their way cautiously through German sniper and shell fire the next day and got to within 300 yards of the city when they were stopped by a German anti-tank gun.

"You should have been here last night when my boys took the edge of the town," said a young captain in charge of a forward company." Tom Treanor went with us."

Tom had gone in, got his story, hitch-hiked back to camp and filed it to America for a clean and well-earned news beat — one of many similar exploits.

Now he is dead. It is one of the bitterest ironies that he should die in a traffic accident.

Tom never worried much about personal comfort. He used to sleep on a lounge in the Associated Press villa in Algiers—there never were enough beds—when he wasn't in the field. And he always was dropping in from Cairo, or Palermo, or Naples as casually as if he had just gone down to the corner and back.

I knew Tom on four battlefronts—North Africa, Sicily, Italy and France—and never met an abler, harder-working reporter and writer.

He was a nervy correspondent who would take any chance if the story at stake was worthwhile, and he had a knack of catching the emotional flavor of the fighting.

He always was pretty much of a lone wolf and always up to the neck in hot water with army public relations officers who sometimes are more interested in rules and regulations than they are in getting the full story of the war told.

When they took away his transportation, he hitch-hiked from China to Gibraltar. His battles and victories over red-tape are legendary from Chungking to London.

On Invasion Day he landed in France and filed one of the first and most detailed accounts of the fighting. Public relations officers at SHAEF promptly hauled him back and threatened to throw him out of the theater because they said he was unauthorized to land in France because his name wasn't on the list of the first group of reporters to be permitted ashore. Tom promptly played his ace—orders from the coast guard permitting him to go ashore, and the SHAEF grudgingly admitted they were outsmarted.

Tom had just published his first book and a number of magazine articles.

After the war he had hoped to bring his wife and children here and make Europe his newsbeat. He was interested in what kind of a post-war world would emerge from the battlefields he had been covering.

"I am fed up with war," he told me a few days before he died, "but I think this peace that is coming will be one of the greatest stories in the world. I want to cover it."

William Stringer Killed In France With 1st Army

DAY

Correspondent for Reuters Went to Normandy on D Day

LONDON, Aug. 22 (AP).—William Stringer, war correspondent for Reuters, British news agency, was killed while covering the advance of the United States 1st Army in France, it was announced officially today. He was twenty-seven years old.

Details of Mr. Stringer's death were not revealed.

He was born in Teague, Tex., and was graduated from the University of Texas. He had been in Britain just over three months when he went into Normandy on D Day with the first wave of American ground forces. After following the advance of the 1st Army across the Cherbourg peninsula he was the first reporter inside Cherbourg.

Previously he had served as a reporter, editor, foreign correspondent and chief of bureau for The United Press in New York, Buenos Aires, Dallas and Austin, Tex.; Columbus, Ohio; Charleston, W. Va.; Cincinnati and other centers.

Held Post in New York

Mr. Stringer was assistant bureau chief in the New York office of Reuters, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, briefly before going abroad, filing a London wire. His wife, Anne Stringer, an editor at Reuters, survives. She lives at 214 East Thirty-second Street.

Press Officer, Driver Killed in Crashes

By the Associated Press.

AUG 23 1944

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, July 12 (Delayed)—Lt. Walter L. Redell, New York City, a press conducting officer, and Pvt. John King, Roanoke, Va., a jeep driver, were killed early today in traffic accidents.

Redell and King were en route back to this base after delivering press dispatches to First Army headquarters when their jeep hit a hole in the road and overturned. Redell's neck was broken.

9TH AIR FORCE REPORTERS OUT

NIGHT

Ouster Is Laid to Row Over Demand for Publicity.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Three American war correspondents and one artist have been ordered by the Ninth United States Air Force to leave that force's headquarters in France and to return to London, but have been granted a ten days' extension because of the rapid movement of the American forces. They are Gordon Gammack of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, Stanley Frank of the New York Post, John A. Groth of Parade and Lee McCardell of the Baltimore Sun.

A Supreme Headquarters statement said today:

"Based on the policy of Supreme Headquarters to rotate war correspondents so that all assigned to this theater will have an opportunity to cover the war, the Ninth Air Force has ordered certaoin correspondents withdrawn for rotation. To allow for coverage of the present rapid movement of our forces, these correspondents, at their request, have been granted a ten-day extension of their assignment.

"As soon as facilities permit, correspondents who have not yet had opportunity to visit the battlefront will be accepted to replace them."

The statement added that later on the four ousted men, "upon their request, will be phased into other assignments to continue their coverage of the war."

TRANSFER OF WAR CORRESPONDENTS IN FRANCE CHECKED

AUG 23 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The War department said today that Secretary Stimson has asked Allied headquarters for a full report on orders of the Ninth Air Force for three American war correspondents and one artist to leave France and return to London.

The New York Herald Tribune said in a copyright dispatch from France that the men were ordered out of that war theater "apparently because their work has not measured up to standards set by publicity-minded Ninth Air Force officers."

Ninth Wants Publicity

"Ninth Air force officers in charge of publicity," the dispatch said "have made it plain to correspondents here that they are more interested in promoting their own unit than they are in getting war news out of this theater to readers in the United States."

Supreme headquarters said in a statement that the order was "based on the policy of Supreme headquarters to rotate war correspondents so that all assigned to this theater will have an opportunity to cover the war." Headquarters also announced that the effective date of the order had been deferred 10 days.

The correspondents are Gordon Gammack, Des Moines Register and Tribune; Stanley Frank, New York Post; and Lee M'Cardell, the Baltimore Sun. The artist is John A. Groth of Parade.

The controversy over the order for their return to London came to the attention of Secretary Stimson late yesterday, War department officials said. They added that he immediately cabled theater headquarters asking for a full explanation, and said that until this is received the War department cannot clarify the situation or comment on it.

The New York Post said it had protested "both at Washington and at Supreme Allied headquarters."

Claim Threats Made

The Herald Tribune's dispatch, from Correspondent Jack Tait, said the order to the correspondents 'is the aftermath of a long series of threats indulged in by certain public relations officers of the air force."

"Correspondents have been told that they must confine the bulk of their activities to coverage of Ninth Air Force news," the dispatch added. "Those who did not, it was made clear, would have to seek reassignment elsewhere."

Tait said the correspondents were inclined at first to regard such talk as a joke because "it seemed inconceivable that one group engaged in this war would consider publicity for itself more precious than giving the United States the story of this war, whether it be the air story, the ground story or a combination of both."

Supreme headquarters, in announcing that the correspondents were being withdrawn in accordance with a policy of rotation, said:

"To allow for coverage of the present rapid movement of our forces, these correspondents, at their request, have been granted a 10-day extension of their assignment."

TWIN RED DRIVES AGAINST ROMANIA

New Savage Offensives Believed Headed for Vital Ploesti Oilfields.

IASI IS ENGULFED

Other Russians Battle to Slice Off Warsaw From East Prussia.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(AP) Tremendous new twin Russian offensives on the long-dormant Romanian battleground have gained 38 to 40 miles on a 156-mile front, toppling the big industrial city of Iasi and costing the Germans 25,000 dead and more than 12,000 prisoners in three days, Moscow announced tonight.

Two orders of the day from Premier Stalin and the regular Soviet midnight communique confirmed the savage new offensives which the Germans had been pessimistically reporting since last weekend, and disclosed that the Second and Third Ukrainian front armies of Generals Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Feodor Tolbukhin had swept up more than 350 towns in the initial stages of their attack.

Aim at Oilfields

Quiet since last April, these two powerful armies apparently were aiming at the Ploesti oilfields, Germany's chief source of vital petroleum, now 160-odd miles southwest of the battle lines. Already the Russians were less than 65 miles from the Danube river.

On other fronts of a line now stretching 1,400 miles in a north-south zigzag, the Russians announced steady successes in an apparent campaign to slice Warsaw and northwest Poland off from East Prussia and extension of a sharp-pointed wedge into the center of Estonia while combating terrific German counterattacks on the Latvian gap position west of Riga.

Between Warsaw and Biaystok the Soviet communique announced capture of the large highway junction town of Zambrow, 14 miles southeast of Lomza. This represented an advance of 15 miles from previously reported positions.

Nearer to Warsaw, the Russians thrust suddenly northwestward and cleared the Germans from the south bank of the Bug river along a 40-mile front from Olekhny to Slopsk. Moscow dispatches said this drive threatened to outflank Warsaw by pushing to confluence of the Bug and Vistula rivers 28 miles northwest of the old Polish capital.

Prussian Border Crossed

Already it was furthering the isolation of East Prussia, where an unofficial Soviet account said the border finally had been crossed, apparently in the Schirwindt sector.

In Latvia, where the Germans Monday succeeded in reestablishing contact with the two army corps that had been cut off in the north Baltic states, the Nazis threw in strong tank and infantry attacks to try to widen the gap but the Russians said they failed. In Estonia, the Russians cut the important Tartu-Valga railway down the center of the country.

The great new Soviet drives against the Romanian front, however, posed the most instant threat to the straining Axis, leaving it an open question how much longer unhappy Romania could continue in the war as a German ally.

The Germans admitted the loss of Iasi before the Russians announced it, and the German radio military analyst, Gen. Kust Dittmar, tonight gave his homeland this frigid comfort:

"In these days, when the Soviets have passed over to a new major offensive in the Dnestr and Siret (river) areas — the third in the course of a single summer it becomes plainly evident that considerable Russian forces have remained quite unaffected by fighting of the present summer."

Reentry of the Second and Third Ukrainian armies into the field brought to at least 13 the total of Russian army groups now prosecuting the gigantic offensive from Finland to Romania. The Germans have mentioned still another, headed by Marshal G. K. Zhukov, operating on the Polish front, but the Russians have kept silent concerning it.

25,000 Nazis Slain

The great scope of the victories in Romania was emphasized by Stalin's two orders of the day and the communique which said that in three days the Second Ukrainian army had killed 13,000 German and Romanian soldiers and captured 7,000, while the Third Ukrainian army had killed 12,000 and captured 5,665.

During the same period the two armies destroyed 155 enemy tanks and captured 32, destroyed 487 pieces of field artillery and captured 439, plus thousands of motor, trucks, tractors and machine guns.

The Second Ukrainian army started its offensive from north and east of Iasi and stabbed through strong German fortifications to depths of 38 miles on a 75-mile-wide front, seizing 200 towns in the Siret river valley.

Besides Iasi, one-time Romanian capital, these included Targu-Frumos, 27 miles west of Iasi, and Ungheni-Targ, 10 miles east on the Prut river.

Knife Past Tighina

The Third Ukrainian army, operating directly southeast of the Second army, knifed past the ancient fortress town of Tighina, once a stronghold of the Turkish sultans, and took Cimislia and Tarutino, 25 miles beyond their starting points, as well as 150 other towns in the Prut river valley district. One of these was Valintiri, 60 miles from the mouth of the Danube.

The operation so auspiciously begun was described here as probably the first phase of a concerted Allied plan to hurl the Nazis forever out of the Balkans, where their hold already has become palsied.

In the battle for Warsaw, Moscow dispatches reported Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky had started a new drive westward from positions northeast of the Polish capital with the apparent aim of outflanking it by crossing the Vistula near its juncture with the Bug river 28 miles northwest of the city. The Bug already has been crossed in this offensive, the Russian accounts said.

In announcing the loss of Iasi, a city of 100,000 which was the fourth largest in the pre-war Romania, the German radio said it had been partly demolished to reduce its military usefulness. The withdrawal was unopposed and was caused by Russian penetrations on both sides, the Germans asserted.

The Germans said the Red army was using eight to ten divisions on a 100-mile front extending from Iasi southeastward to the vicinity of Tiraspol.

AUG 23 1944

The fall of Iasi was announced by Premier Stalin in an Order of the Day. A second order revealed that the offensive had carried through near Tighina, on the Dnestr River, ninety miles southeast of Iasi.

Iasi (population 104,471) lies west of the river Prut and is a junction point of railways linking eastern Romania and the Soviet-claimed province of Bucovina. It lies 165 miles northeast of the great Ploesti oil center and 120 miles north of Galati, strategic city on the Lower Danube.

The city fell before a three-day-old new offensive at the south end of the Russian front, where the Reds broke through on a seventy-five-mile front to a depth of thirty-eight miles, and swept up more than 200 populated places, including Targu-Frumos, twenty-seven miles west of Iasi, and Ulgui.

Stalin's order, addressd to Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky, declared: "Troops of the Second Ukrainian front going over to the offensive with support of massed blows from artillery and aircraft smashed strong and deeply echeloned enemy defenses northwest of Iasi and in three days of offensive engagements advanced up to thirty-eight miles, expanding their breakthrough along a front of seventy-five miles."

The Russians had driven to near Iasi in their winter campaign.

Stalin announced its capture a few hours after Berlin had admitted it had been evacuated. His broadcast order of the day was recorded by the Soviet monitor here. He ordered a salute of twenty salvoes from 224 guns to celebrate the new drive.

In his second Order of the Day, addressed to Gen. Fedor Tolbukin, Stalin said: "Troops of the Third Ukrainian Front, going over to the offensive with the support of massed blows by artillery and aircraft, broke through strongly fortified enemy defenses developed in depth south of Tighina and during three days of offensive engagements advanced up to seventy kilometers and expanded the breakthrough along a front of up to 130 kilometers, liberating more than 150 populated places."

Reds Cross the Bug.

Moscow, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Russian troops today stormed across the River Bug, northeast of Warsaw, in a grave new flanking threat in the prolonged siege of the Polish capital, and battled hastily mustered German reserves on the west bank of the river.

The forcing of the Bug, which flows into the Vistula twenty-eight miles above Warsaw, posed a threat to cross the largest river. Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's regrouped and reinforced group of armies pushed two Russian columns toward the confluence of the two streams. He pushed ahead against furious German counter-attacks from fifty recaptured villages in what appeared to be the most serious threat to Warsaw in nearly two weeks.

An Izvestia dispatch from northeast of Praga, the industrial eastern suburbs of the Polish capital, said that the Germans had introduced a new tank division from Italy and several divisions from other sectors, including Germany itself. The Nazi counter-attacks were strongly supported by their air force, by large concentrations of artillery and by groups of 100 to 120 tanks which came in "wave after wave, ten or twelve times a day," Investia said.

Another and growing threat to Warsaw was in the Sandomierz region across the Vistula and 100 to 110 miles to the southeast, where only 1.550 prisoners survived the final slaughter of 12,000 Germans in the Sandomierz trap.

The Germans meanwhile have recovered contact by land with their two battered Baltic armies, isolated for three weeks in Estonia and Latvia, but frontline advices today indicated that the enemy may attempt to use the newly won corridor for an escape to East Prussia rather than for reinforcement of the Baltic divisions.

The enemy's breakthrough was announced in the Russian midnight communique, which said that under a hail of German tank and infantry attacks, Gen. Ivan S. Bagramian's troops withdrew to more favorable positions after abandoning Tukums, where they had reached the sea thirty-three miles west of Riga on August 1. There was no letup, however, in the Russian pressure on the enemy's twenty or more imperiled North Baltic divisions, variously estimated at between 200,000 and 300,000 men.

Far up in Estonia west of Lake Peipus Gen. Ivan Masennikov's Third Baltic Army, driving hard for the railway center of Tartu, captured thirty or more communities. Other Russian gains were reported due east of Riga.

Although shortening his lines by pulling back from Tukums, Gen. Bagramian stood firm against other heavy attacks west and northwest of Jelgava, in Latvia, and north and southwest of Siauliai, in central Lithuania.

At East Prussian Border.

London, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Reuters quoted a Moscow broadcast today as saying that the Russians had penetrated to the soil of East Prussia but later canceled its account, declaring that there was some doubt over translation of the broadcast.

The Red Star, the Russian Army newspaper, in a dispatch datelined "At the German Border," said the enemy is dislodged from its last [illegible]s. We repulsed him beyond th[illegible]er on the other side of the border. Scores of villages have been burned to ashes by the Germans and the liberation of hundreds of Soviet citizens who escaped their captors and hid in the forests has taken place. Now the population moves eastward."

There was no official announcement, however, that the Russians have actually crossed the East Prussian frontier into Germany.

NICHT AUG 23 1944

London, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The Russians announced tonight the capture of Iasi, Romania's fourth largest city, in a new offensive which has carried in three days to a depth of forty-four miles on an eighty-one-mile front, liberating more than 150 towns and villages.

RUSSIAN TORPEDO BOATS SINK 14 ENEMY SHIPS

LONDON, Aug. 22 — (AP) Torpedo boats of the Soviet northern fleet have sunk 14 out of 31 enemy ships caught in Varanger Fjord in northern Norway, the Russian communique announced tonight.

Giving details of an attack first reported briefly Sunday night, it said air reconnaissance discovered three transports, two invasion barges, three torpedo boats, eight patrol ships, three minesweepers and 12 patrol launches in the fjord.

The Russian torpedo boats raced to the attack and sank two of the transports, two torpedo boats, six patrol ships, three minesweepers and one patrol launch, it was announced.

Retreating Germans Again Hit As Weather Clears

DAY

AUG 23 1944

London, Aug. 22. (AP)—As clouds which had blanketed the Western front for 48 hours rolled away, Allied airmen renewed late today their attacks on Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge's retreating German armies, and Italian-based American heavy bombers struck again at German oil supplies.

Allied planes which had been hobbled by the worst weather since D-day took to the air as the skies began to clear. Normandy-based fighter-bombers swept over an area from Lisieux to the Seine and from Dreux to the sea.

Italian-based Flying Fortresses and Liberators raided Germany and Austria earlier in the day, hammering a synthetic oil refinery at Odertal, 80 miles southwest of Breslau, and other oil installations in the Vienna area.

Successful Attacks Reported

The fighter-bomber pilots reported successful attacks on 23 vehicles, a gun position and a supply dump.

Tonight the Allied Expeditionary Air Force continued the aerial assault. RAF Mosquitos, flying out at dusk in the first operation by Britain-based planes since Sunday, penetrated far inland to the vicinity of Chagny, south of Dijon, where they bombed and strafed a dozen trains stalled on a single track.

Today's attacks were the third northward thrusts in less than 36 hours for the bombers of the Mediterranean air force, whose tactical units now are operating from bases both in Italy and southern [illegible] both in Italy and southern France.

American Liberators battered airfields in Hungary and Yugoslavia yesterday and RAF raiders slashed at oil targets in Hungary last night.

Enemy Fighters Out

Although the daylight blows yesterday took a heavy toll of German air strength in southeastern Europe, enemy fighters were out in considerable numbers today and the Flying Fortresses and Liberators and their fighter escort downed several of them in battling their way to the Austrian capital.

Field dispatches told of the destruction of 16 German planes in the vicinity of Mantes-Gassicourt in the past 24 hours, but this probably was accomplished by ground gunners. It was an indication, however, that the enemy was sending planes up even in the worst weather in an effort to protect troops fleeing north from the Seine.

15th Air Force Attacks Plants in Silesia and Near Vienna—Luftwaffe Up in Defense

DAY

LONDON, Aug. 22 (AP)—American heavy bombers flying from Italian bases smashed into Germany and Austria today, hammering a synthetic oil refinery at Oderthal, eighty miles southwest of Breslau, and other oil installations in the Vienna area.

The worst flying weather in three months again hobbled Allied airmen on the western front.

The day's attacks from Italy were the third northward thrusts in less than thirty-six hours for the bombers of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, whose tactical units now are operating from bases both in Italy and southern France.

Maj. Gen. Nathan F. Twining's Fifteenth Air Force sent out about 750 "heavies" and as many escort fighters.

Flying Fortresses struck at Odertal and Liberators hammered at underground oil storage tanks at Lobau, seven miles southeast of Vienna. They used heavy delayed-action bombs. Liberators also attacked a refinery at Korneuburg, five miles north of Vienna.

Luftwaffe were up in considerable numbers and the Liberators and their fighter escort downed several of them in battling their way to the Austrian capital.

Last night British bombers of the MAAF attacked oil installations at Gyov, Hungary. The Fifteenth Air Force bombed Nazi airdromes in Hungary and Yugoslavia by daylight yesterday.

ALLIES REPORTED BOMBING HUNGARY

NIGHT

London, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Britain-based Allied airmen, largely grounded yesterday, remained immobilized by adverse weather during the night and there was no indication when they might resume their devastating assaults upon the retreating German armies in northern France.

The German radio, however, reported Allied bomber formations over Hungary this morning, indicating the Mediterranean air forces were busy. Some daylight raiders, a Berlin broadcast said, penetrated into German Silesia.

The Germans also reported bombers over Vienna.

U. S. PLANES BLAST NAZI OIL PLANTS

NIGHT

Rome, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—A force of up to 750 Fortresses and Liberators today smashed at the synthetic oil refinery of Odertal in German Silesia and at other oil targets in the Vienna area.

The heavies and their escorting fighters met stiff opposition in the air over Vienna.

The Fortresses struck at Odertal, eighty miles southwest of Breslau, and the Liberators hammered at underground oil storage tanks at Lobau, seven miles southeast of Vienna. They used heavy, delayed action bombs. The Liberators also attacked a refinery at Korneuburg, five miles north of Vienna.

DNB CLAIMS NAZI POSITION SERIOUS

DAY

LONDON, Aug. 22 — (AP) The German people were told bluntly by a spokesman for the Nazi high command tonight that current fighting in France "threatens to render doubtful many facts which we considered an essential part of our military power and position."

In a broadcast from the official German News agency, DNB, heard by Associated Press monitors, the spokesman, Lt. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, said the German command was "confronted with extraordinary difficulties in parrying" the Allied advance through France.

"To fight and to march in an extremely narrowed area, to cover strong sectors as Orne and Dives in retreat, means at any rate an unusually difficult task in view of the extremely difficult conditions on the Western front where the enemy with his tremendous air superiority is able to render movements very difficult," Dittmar said.

He claimed, however, that "German fighting efficiency in its total results proved always successful against enemy troops fighting on the ground so that the large scale encirclement intended by the enemy command has so far proved a failure."

Dittmar warned that in Germany as well as France "it may be that we shall be forced to adapt our conduct of the war to a new and more restricted basis. We must face up to this sequel with determination. An unusual effort and determination of the whole nation will be necessary, and perhaps also luck."

ENGLAND BLASTED BY FLYING BOMBS

JUDSON-QUINN

LONDON, Aug. 22—(AP) Flying bombs plunged into Southern England today on an accelerated scale bringing a heavy toll of casualties while the populace dug into debris, with their ears cocked for news of the U. S. Third army's headway toward the rocket coast across the channel.

Taking advantage of several days of bad channel weather, the Nazis maintained intermittent salvos of buzz bombs, possibly with the idea of depleting their stocks in the Pas de Calais area before having to run for Belgium and Germany itself to launch more.

Although Prime Minister Churchill twice has urged all non-essential Londoners to evacuate the buzz bomb belt, the exodus has dropped to a trickle as the city's residents read day after day of spectacular victories in France. But the latest attacks, bringing heavy casualties and destruction, grimly underscored Churchill's sober advice that the robot menace is apt to continue until the final victory over Germany.

Powerful gun barrages on the coast this morning exploded a number of robots in their flight. Crashing robot bombs gave home defense workers a busy night. Huge cranes were pressed into action to lift blocks of masonry while stretcher parties and doctors stood by directing the search through loudspeakers.

One robot demolished a factory and damaged a nearby church. Fire broke out in the factory and about eight employes were killed. Shops and flats were leveled. There were stories of amazing escapes. One bomb smashed into an apartment building, trapping a family of ten. Civilian defense workers cut their way through a wall and tunneled under 20 tons of crushed masonry from three floors above to bring out unharmed a mother, father and their eight children.

ROBOT BOMBINGS CONTINUE SEVERE

NIGHT

London, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The Nazis blasted London and the southern counties with flying bombs throughout the night as rescuers dug by the light of flares for victims of yesterday's heavy robot attacks, which took a tragic toll of life and property.

Despite the severity of the attacks, Government efforts to persuade non-essential persons to leave the London area continued to meet with a cool response, apparently due to a growing popular conviction that the end of the war is near.

It was feared a heavy toll of life was taken when one of the robots struck an apartment house last night, burying many of the occupants under the debris. Rescuers still were working with cranes this morning to lift great blocks of masonry.

Bulgaria Looking For Way To Peace

DAY

London, Aug. 22 (AP)—Parvan Draganov, Bulgarian Foreign Minister, told Parliament in Sofia today that Bulgaria's declaration of war on the United States and Britain had been a mistake and that the government of Premier Ivan Bagrianov now was looking for "ways and means" to make peace.

His short speech was broadcast by the Bulgarian radio and recorded by Allied monitors.

Following the line taken by Premier Bagrianov in a speech to Parliament last Thursday, Draganov blamed the regime of former Premier Bogdan Filov for involving Bulgaria in the war on the side of Germany.

"Bulgaria is too small to take part in this World War," Draganov asserted. "Though today she is nominally in a state of war with Britain and the United States, this is not due to the wish of the Bulgarian people to intervene in the world conflict."

Draganov told the Parliament that his government was pursuing a policy of friendship with Russia, with which Bulgaria is not at war, and that she hoped her present attitude would be understood by Britain and the United States.

There had been speculation that Draganov might announce a Bulgarian decision to get out of the war. The fact that he did not was put to propaganda use by DNB, German official news agency, which said in a broadcast that Draganov in his speech had stressed Bulgaria's relations with Germany.

Allied Leaders Plan Air Units To Support Occupation

GLADWIN-HILL

London, Aug. 22 (AP)—Allied air leaders are working on an unprecedented problem in handling beaten Germany—installation of an occupational air force.

Just as a "police" force of ground troops will be established to preserve order when the Reich capitulates, it is likely the Allies will have to set up in Germany a force of possibly 15,000 bombers and fighters.

The problem did not arise at the end of the First World War because the airplane was then a minor weapon. A few squadrons of observation planes were put in Germany for a short while to assist the ground forces. But since then the airplane has become a major weapon and hence a vital factor in preserving postwar order.

Might Save Ground Force

Without a supporting air force, the occupation army might be crippled overnight by a sudden aerial attack. With an air force it probably would be possible to quash many outbreaks before ground forces would even have to take a hand.

The trend in peace planning is to strip Germany entirely of her own airplanes, military and civilian, and ban airplane production.

Most indications are that on the ground occupation end, Germany will be divided into three spheres of influence, controlled respectively by United States, British and Russian forces.

Joint Air Setup Likely

On the air side, more of a joint, combined setup without separate spheres of influence is likely, because the air distances in Germany are too small to divide efficiently and also because pooling of the three nation's somewhat differing air resources probably wiuld be more advantageous.

The American and British air forces are strong on heavy bombers, while the Russian is more notable for fighters. So each might contribute to the occupation air force from its strong suit. Russia and England, being much closer to Germany, could provide occupation forces more conveniently than the United States. This factor may be taken into account.

The 15,000-plane force mentioned by some informed observers would be a sizable chunk of Allied air resources. Neither the USAAF nor the RAF ever put out from England forces much over 1,500 heavy bombers.

Must Guard Neighbors

The estimate may be high, but the force would have the initial responsibility not only of policing Germany but of guarding adjacent nations like Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and France.

To avoid immobilizing too big a portion of Allied air forces, the occupation force probably would take on the character of a training and rest area for the Allies' greatly expanded post-war forces.

Aerial occupation probably will take place unspectacularly and automatically as the current progress to more and more advanced bases across Europe finally reaches Germany.

Labor Leaders See Eisenhower At Field Lunch

DAY

One Says Soldiers Begin to See 'This Strike Talk Is Purely Propaganda'

For the combined American press

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ADVANNCE COMMAND POST, Aug. 22 (AP).—Six American labor leaders dropped in on General Dwight D. Isenhower for lunch today to get first-hand impressions on how the war is run from the top.

The supreme commander had two other luncheon guests, Lieutenant General Omar N. Bradley, head of the United States 12th Army Group, and Lieutenant General H. C. Lee, commander of the communications zone.

The labor leaders, who flew from the United States about ten days ago, dropped in soon after noon. They said they had talked to many G. I.'s and got their ideas on how labor was helping the war effort.

Frank P. Fenton, director of organization for the American Federation of Labor, said the soldiers were starting to understand that "this strike talk is purely propaganda."

"Ninety per cent of them are in favor of unions," said R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers Union, C. I. O. "The union agrees with them that we should do everything possible now to end the war and I think they understand things pretty well."

"I ran across five or six who told me the word was being passed around that they wouldn't get jobs when they got back," said Fenton. "We put stop to that talk. We have 180-odd small and large contracts and every one guarantees that drafted or enlisted men go back with accumulated service to their same job or one of equal pay and status."

David J. McDonald, secretary of the United Steelworkers, C. I. O., said 300,000 automobile workers and 200,000 steelworkers who are union members were being carried on the rolls in good standing without paying their dues, and would have to pay no initiation fee when they were mustered out of service.

A. L. Wegener, assistant to the president of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said that 10 per cent of A. F. of L. unions' members were in service, and they were being accorded equal privileges.

"It has opened my eyes," Eric Peterson, executive vice-president of the International Association of Machinists said of their tour of the battlefront.

"We owe a great debt to these officers and men for the way they havev used the weapons we provided for them," said Sherman Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers, C. I. O.

Clad in G. I. uniforms with leggings, tin hats and field jackets, the labor leaders stood in front of Eisenhower's tent and talked informally after lunch.

Eisenhower's outlined views on reconversion were briefly that it was better to make a few too many tanks and guns than to slow the pace of production as victory nears.

EISENHOWER IN NEW ROLE

He Lines Up Bradley and Lee Before a Tiny Camera He Has

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ADVANCED COMMAND POST, France, Aug. 22 (AP)—Visiting generals have become accustomed to the whir of movie cameras and the glare of flash bulbs when they call on the supreme commander.

They caught it from a new angle today. Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of the American Twelfth Army Group, and Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, a deputy to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, started off to General Eisenhower's tent, only to be stopped and chased into the bright morning sun.

General Eisenhower fished from his pocket a miniature camera little larger than a cigarette lighter, squinted through the view-finder, and clicked.

He said the camera cost £100. Taking a 16-mm. film with a shutter speed up to 1/1000th of a second, it is of a type manufactured in Czechoslovakia and used by German intelligence agents.

Allies Hold Huge Stocks In Normandy For Paris

Supreme Headquarters, Advance Command Post, Aug. 22 (AP)—Huge stocks of food, medicine and clothing are waiting in Normandy for the relief of Paris as soon as the Germans are ousted, a high-ranking officer of the supreme commander's staff said today.

He estimated that 75,000 tons of food a month will be moved into the former French capital by truck, rail and barge, to feed the city's population.

Supplies which formerly flowed into the Nazi-occupied city from Normandy have been cut off since the Allied armies landed, and the Germans are reported in the last 48 hours to have been stripping the city and destroying what they cannot use.

Relief will be rushed to the city and administered by the civil affairs branch of the Allied command as soon as transportation facilities permitted it, it was said.

Didn't Know How Bad It Was

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 22 (AP).—The Americans captured a German corps general, a Major General Eldfeldt, in the Normandy pocket in an incident illustrating the confusion of the enemy and their ignorance regarding American positions and intentions. Three days ago he sent out an aide to reconnoiter a route of retreat for his armored division, and the aide tried to locate an open road in an area held by three American divisions.

YAP IS HAMMERED BY YANK HEAVIES

Island Guarding Central Approach to Philippines Offers No Opposition.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 22—(AP) American army heavy bombers based in the Marianas islands raided Yap island, guarding the central eastern approach to the Philippines, for the second consecutive day Sunday without encountering enemy interception.

Army Liberators that struck at Truk in the eastern Carolines, however, ran into Japanese fighter planes. They overcame the opposition, completed their mission and returned to their base.

Nauru Is Raided

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced these aerial actions today and also reported another raid on Nauru, west of the Gilberts, and an attack on enemy shipping in the Marcus island area. One Japanese medium cargo vessel was destroyed near Marcus, which is 1,200 miles southeast of Tokyo, and a smaller ship was left burning.

The announcement covered actions over a Pacific ocean area of 90,000 square miles, demonstrating how American warplanes can fan out from their new advanced bases in the Marianas.

A Nimitz report Monday night and today's southwest Pacific communique showed that Allied bombers are roaming the skies from north of Tokyo to Australia without encountering serious aerial opposition. The announcements covered raids into five island groups that failed to stir up a single enemy interceptor.

The island groups attacked were the Kuriles, north of Japan; the Marianas, south of Japan; the Carolines and Marshalls of the central Pacific and the Moluccas, south of the Philippines. Unmolested raids also were made on isolated islands such as Nauru, west of the Gilberts, and Celebes and Ceram, north of Australia.

The heaviest attack, reported by southwest Pacific headquarters, was on Halmahera. Heavy bombers hit bivouac and dump areas with 110 tons of explosives. That Moluccas island is the last major obstacle in the invasion route to the southern Philippines.

Jap Coastal Vessels Are Wrecked In Other Blows

General Heaquarters, Southwest Pacific, Wednesday, Aug. 23 (AP)—A record 135-ton raid against Halmahera and the wrecking of eight Japanese planes, five small coastal vessels and 28 barges marked new attacks on enemy targets south and east of the Philippines, headquarters announced today.

A mid-morning communique also disclosed that a Liberator patrolling Davao gulf, off Mindanao in the southern Philippines, barely missed an 8,000-ton freighter-transport with its bombs Monday at 10.30 A. M. Patrol planes also bombed the city of Davao.

Interceptors Missing

Liberators and Mitchells smashed key defense areas on Halmahera Monday. Eight parked planes were destroyed or seriously damaged. As in other recent attacks, there was no interception by enemy planes.

Reconnaissance planes raided Halmahera again at night and sank a small freighter northwest of the island. Near Ceram, south of Halmahera, attack planes destroyed or damaged two small coastal craft and two barges. Dutch-manned medium bombers sweeping the Flores Sea, south of Ceram, likewise sank or damaged two small coastal craft and two barges.

Fighters raiding the Vogelkop coast of northwestern New Guinea destroyed seven barges and damaged 13 in the Kaimana area.

Chinese Battle Hengyang Pincers

Chungking, Aug. 22 (AP)—Chinese forces are fighting desperately around Hengyang in Hunan province to prevent Japanese envelopment of their forces northwest of the Canton-Hankow rail junction, but in Yunnan province near the Burma border, their brothers in arms have stormed into new positions at Tengchung.

Reinforced Japanese thrusting two columns against the Chinese in the attempted envelopment, were engaged by the defenders at points 18 and 25 miles northwest of the city. To the south of Hengyang, Chinese forces have recaptured several points in the outskirts of Leiyang, in their effort to stem the Japanese tide southward down the railway.

Near Jap Supply Links

To the north of Hunan, on both sides of the Yangtze river, the Chinese driving ahead in heavy rains reached points near Kingmen, 50 miles northeast of Ichang, and Chungsiang, 30 miles farther northeast, both of them connecting links in the Japanese overland supply route to Ichang from Hankow.

Near the Burma border the Chinese stormed into the British consulate compound just outside the walls of Tengchung, thus removing a serious obstacle to their final assault on the trapped Japanese remnants, the high command said. They advanced from the southwest wall more than 100 yards into the city and took the ancient temple, fortified by the Japanese. A counterattack at the southwest wall was repulsed.

A communique said the strongest enemy positions at the concrete, tunneled fortress of Sungshan astride the Burma road were blasted on August 20 with 6,000 pounds of explosives. The position was occupied immediately after the blast, the communique said, as simultaneous attacks on two nearby hilltops prevented arrival of enemy reinforcements.

JAPANESE CASTING NET NEAR HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 22 (AP)—Japanese troops have launched an attempted enveloping movement against Chinese in the area of the enemy-held Canton-Hankow railway junction of Hengyang and were engaged by the defenders eighteen and twenty-five miles northwest of the city, the High Command announced tonight.

South of Hengyang the Chinese recaptured several points on the outskirts of the Japanese-held railway town of Leiyang, below which the Chinese have put up a determined stand to stem the enemy drive down the railway.

North and south of the Yangtze River, north of Hunan Province, the Chinese, despite heavy rains, made further progress in diversionary attacks, reaching points near Kingmen, fifty miles northeast of Ichang, and within three and a half miles of the important Han River town of Chungsiang, thirty miles farther northeast. Both towns are connecting links in the overland supply route to Ichang from Hankow.

In Chekiang Province, where fighting broke out when the Japanese moved southeast from Wuyi, ninety-five miles south of Hangchow, the Japanese-occupied provincial capital, the invaders were thrown back, the High Command said.

Japanese Hastening Flight To Tiddim

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, Aug. 22 (AP)—Japanese forces are in headlong flight down the Tiddim road in Burma, and five miles inside Burma Allied forces which chased them from India still were unable to establish contact, Allied headquarters asserted tonight.

Foe Cuts China Rail Travel

Japanese Also Restrict Coastal Ships in North-Central Sector

Yenan, China, Aug. 22 (AP).—The Japanese are enforcing unusually far-reaching restrictions on rail traffic in north and central China, and have ordered a further reduction of coastal shipping since July, reliable reports said tonight.

Further requisition of coastal steamers for military use, the reports said, had cut to two weekly the sailings between Shanghai and Manchurian and north China ports.

Such measures, according to well-informed opinion here, are caused partly by a growing shortage of rail materials and shipping tonnage.

Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Allied columns advancing along the Tiddim Road have penetrated five miles inside western Burma without contacting the fleeing Japs and all indications point to a major enemy withdrawal, Allied Headquarters declared today. Rearguards of the Jap forces retreating from India fought stubbornly for every mile on the Tiddim Road until Saturday, when they suddenly broke off contact.

Chungking, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Chinese forces besieging Tengchung in western Yunnan province have penetrated almost 100 yards into the city after overrunning Japanese positions on the southwest wall of the city, the Chinese High Command announced today. The former British consulate outside the walls, which the Japanese garrison once used as a headquarters, also has been captured, the announcement said.

Tinian cost her 44,956 troops killed—10 to 1 for American lives lost in this bloodiest campaign of the Pacific war.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced the new total yesterday in reporting new deaths in continued mop-up operations on the three captured Marianas islands.

The Pacific Fleet commander also reported new bomber strikes from the Kurile to the Molucca islands were without aerial opposition. The raids included record blows at Halmahera and Boeroe Islands in the Moluccas.

In fighting through Aug. 17, a total of 4,470 Yanks had fallen to secure the captured Marianas islands. A total of 20,345 American wounded and 721 missing also was reported. Nimitz said 981 additional Japanese had been killed on the three islands. Clean-up operations have continued since Aug. 9.

Strong Liberator forces from the southwest Pacific smashed 110 tons of bombs Sunday on Halmahera, 300 miles south of Mindanao. Warehouses were demolished, and large explosions erupted.

Kiss Of Frances 'Busts' Camera

With the United States Americal Division, Southwest Pacific (AP—Delayed)—Staff Sergeant James S. Oldham, Americal Division veteran from South Hanover, Mass., hadn't seen a white girl in 31 months.

Then along came Frances Langford with the Bob Hope show.

Learning of the extended absence of homeside femininity in the life of the sergeant, who wears the silver star, Frances said: "Why the poor boy. I ought to kiss him."

Private Clyde Hodges, Chicago (Ill.) army photographer, was on the job. As Frances kissed the blushing non-com Hodges' camera bulb exploded, showering the pair with glass.

"What a kiss," sair Oldham. "It busted the camera."

Liberator Sinks Cruiser In Epic China Sea Battle

DAY

5,100-Ton Japanese Ship Is Crew's Fourth in August

HEADQUARTERS, 14TH U.S. AIR FORCE, Aug. 21 (Delayed) (AP).—A closely knit team of eleven young Americans in a B-24 Liberator blasted a 5,100-ton Japanese cruiser to the bottom of the South China Sea Satuurday night in one of the epic feats of Major General Claire L. Chennault's airmen in this war.

The big bomber delivered three damaging attacks during the one hour and forty-eight minutes in which the crew, by unanimous vote, decided to "plaster hell" out of the warship regardless of consequences.

On the third bombing run the cruiser sent up the fiercest attack the combat-tested crew ever saw, but the Liberator came through without a scratch.

The heavy plane circled and came in for a fourth assault, with its two remaining bombs, when the crewmen discovered the cruiser had disappeared beneath the waves—evidently stricken below the waterline by near-misses. Four heavy bombs had been laid on the cruiser's deck—three on the first two runs.

On Aug. 13 the same plane sank three merchant ships totaling 27,456 tons in the same area. Four days earlier it sank the Italian liner Conte Verde after the Japanese had refloated the vessel in the Whangpoo River at Shanghai.

Jap Girls And Women Now Face Labor Draft

New York, Aug. 22 (AP) — The Japanese Domei agency said in a broadcast dispatch recorded by the Federal Communications Commission that a compulsory labor service law for girls and unmarried women from 12 to 40 years old in Japan went into effect today.

U. S. PLANE DROPS BEER ON ADELAIDE

Adelaide, Australia, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—The bomb bay doors of an American plane swung open accidentally and cascaded a shower of champagne and beer, eggs and oranges on the startled people of Adelaide today.

The heaven-sent cargoes, well-crated, smashed through roofs and knocked down fences, but no one was hurt.

One happy fellow salvaged two bottles of Burgundy, but most of the potables were smashed. One case of beer tore down part of a lemon tree and took a six-foot section out of a fence.

Argentine Police Find New Espionage Ring

DAY

Buenos Aires, Aug. 22 (AP)—Federal police in Argentina have uncovered "new active organization" operated by German spies, captured a large numberof agents and confiscated a great quantity of material, it was announced officially tonight.

Progress of the espionage investigation was given by the press subsecretariat in a 57-word communique which included no details.

The communique said these were the latest developments since April 17, when the Government announced the federal police had stamped out virtually all Japanese espionage and were continuing their efforts t eliminate isolated cases of spy activity.

LANDING GROUP SHORT ON SHELLS

Clay Says Group Didn't Get Half Its 155-M Ammunition

DAY

Washington, Aug. 22 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, director of materiel for the Army Service Forces, has informed Senate war investigators that a theater commander failed to get half the 155-millimeter ammunition needed for a recent landing operation.

Clay appeared before the war investigating committee last Wednesday and his testimony was released tonight. The committee is considering the whole question of surpluses and scarcities of war supplies.

Clay said that there were serious shortages in a number of categories, largely because of a manpower problem. But on small-arms ammunition, he said, the best estimates show that "our stocks on hand, plus production, would carry us through 1945, leaving us at that time with the authorized reserve levels."

Truck And Bus Tires

The supply of .30-caliber ammunition will last 19 months, he said, and there is a 17 months' supply of .50 caliber.

The general made these points:

A recent urgent request from Britain for 1,000 one-ton bombs had to be turned down "because we knew we couldn't make them."

Ample supplies of crude rubber, synthetics and manufacturing equipment are available, but not the manpower, so the army and civilian economy "face an acute situation in truck and bus tires. We cannot keep our present offensives going unless we have the large-size tires needed for heavy trucks and combat vehicles."

The army faces a difficult problem—a deficit of 50,000,000 yards this year—in obtaining enough duck to provide tents for men on combat fronts where they are in many instances the only form of housing available.

Shortage Of Duck

He testified that deliveries of war supplies in July were about 4 per cent. under the forecast made on the first of the month and 3 per cent. below the June rate.

Included in the shortages, he said, were a 9 per cent. deficit in heavy trucks, 5 per cent. in bombs, 45 per cent. in 155-millimeter shells, 53 per cent. in 8-inch howitzer shells and 46 per cent. in 240-millimeter howitzer shells.

The latest revised figure for August, Clay said, resulted in a reduction in anticipated deliveries of $17,000,000 in heavy trucks, $8,000,000 each in light-heavy trucks, tanks a[nd] bombs, and $3,000,000 in he[avy] field artillery ammunition.

PUTS HIROHITO'S FATE UP TO JAPS

NIGHT

Washington, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Dr. Victor Hoo, Chinese delegate to the world security talks at Dumbarton Oaks, said today that the continuance of the Mikado in Japan should be left to the Japanese people.

Dr. Hoo, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, suggested in an interview that some other emperor than Hirohito might be chosen, however. He will take part in discussions with Britain and the United States looking toward establishment of an international peace agency after current conversations among Britain, Russia and the United States.

Dr. Hoo expressed optimism over the war in the Pacific, and said he believed there may be mass suicides in Japan when the battle approaches its end.

"The Japanese are not like the Germans," he said, "who either surrender or fight to the death Great numbers may commit suicide."

WAR COMMITTEE TO CALL NELSON

NIGHT

Washington, Aug. (A. P.).—Senate War Investigating Committee members went ahead today with plans to question Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, despite President Roosevelt's statement that his "temporary mission" to China in no way alters WPB reconversion policies.

Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) said that he and other Senators were disposed to accept the President's statement at its face value, but "we want to find out how strong others at the WPB are for Mr. Nelson's plans for limited civilian production."

To that end, he said, the committee plans to question Charles E. Wilson, executive vice-chairman of the WPB, who will be in charge during Mr. Nelson's absence.

Rudolph Halley, counsel to the committee, reportedly was trying to arrange a closed session for Wednesday.

The President's statement yesterday said that any impression that Mr. Nelson's "temporary mission to China indicates a change in policy in the War Production Board is entirely unfounded."

World Agency Urged to Raise Output of Food

DAY

44 Countries Asked to Join

Project to Free Nations of Hunger, Help Farmers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (AP).—The constitution of a proposed permanent international organization to help free the world from hunger and to improve the economic lot of farmers has been drawn up and submitted to the governments of forty-four united and associated nations for ratification, its authors announced tonight.

The agency would be called "The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations." Similar organizations to deal with world security and financial problems have been suggested and are under consideration.

The constitution of the food organization was written by an interim commission created by the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture held at Hot Springs, Va., in the spring of 1943. The organization will come into being when twenty nations have accepted the constitution.

Broad Objectives Set Forth

The broad objectives of the "F. A. O."—the alphabetical designation given the proposed agency—as set forth in the preamble of the constitution, are:

(1) To raise levels of nutrition and standards of living among peoples of the world.

(2) To improve efficiency of production and distribution of all food and agricultural products.

(3) To better the condition of rural populations.

(4) To contribute by these means toward an expanding world economy.

In announcing submission of the constitution, the interim commission urged early ratification so that the organization might start functioning early in 1945 from temporary headquarters in Washington. The location of permanent headquarters will be decided later by the F. A. O. itself.

The interim commission chairman—L. B. Pearson, Canadian Minister in Washington—said in a statement that he believed the F. A. O. "is a permanent embodiment of the new kind of international co-operation which men and women all over the world have hoped would be born from the suffering and sacrifice of this war."

Mr. Pearson declared the objectives of the proposed organization are "fundamentals of a lasting peace."

Primary Function Advisory

"Without them," he said, "and without a successful working economy in which the average man has a chance for happiness, the best political arrangements are likely to crack."

AUG 23 1944

The F. A. O. would function principally as an advisory agency. Its constitution gives it no powers to inaugurate programs or to take definite actions. It would seek to achieve its goals by promoting research, disseminating information and by making recommendations.

The governing body will be a general conference, on which each member nation will have one voting representative. The constitution provides for an executive committee of nine to fifteen members and for standing advisory committees in major fields of the organization's work. The administration will consist of a director-general, who will be the responsible head of the organization, and an international staff selected for technical competence.

Direct contact with the public, consumers and producers will be maintained through conferences with representatives of national and international bodies concerned with food, argriculture, forestry and fisheries.

The interim commission estimated the F. A. O. would need an annual budget of $5,000,000 for the first five years, with half that amount needed for the first year. An annex to the constitution specifies that the United States is to bear 25 per cent of the cost of the first year's budget, the United Kingdom 15 per cent, Soviet Russia 8 per cent, China 6.5 per cent and other countries smaller proportions down to .05 per cent.

Membership Is for Five Years

The constitution accords original membership to the nations represented at the Hot Springs conference, when the constitution is accepted by their governments. Provision is made for admission of other nations by a two-thirds vote of the representatives of all the member nations. Initial membership is for a period of not less than five years, after which members would have the privilege of withdrawing.

The various governments also have been provided with copies of the interim commission's first report explaining the proposed new organization.

"In the struggle for food, mankind has been indifferently successful," this report said. . . . "Recent discoveries and developments have made it possible under certain conditions for all men and all nations to achieve freedom from hunger, which is the first step toward freedom from want."

Soviet Security Plan Offered

NIGHT

It Is First Presented at Dumbarton Oaks—Session Concentrating on Principles.

AUG 23 1944

Washington, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Ambassador Andrei Gromyko outlined to the Dumbarton Oaks security conference today Soviet Russia's ideas for post-war world organization.

What the chief of the Russian delegation said in this outline was not disclosed in the first official press bulletin issued on the talks which began yesterday. The bulletin, released at the State Department by Michael J. McDermott, special assistant to Secretary Hull, said:

"At the meeting of the heads of the three groups at Dumbarton Oaks Monday afternoon, August 21, Edward R. Stettinius Jr., was selected as permanent chairman of the conversations. Should Mr. Stettinius be absent at any time, Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyki or Sir Alexander Cadogan will act alternately as chairman.

"It was decided to discuss at the outset of the conversations the general principles of international organization presented by the Soviet group. At the meeting on the morning of August 22 the Soviet group presented its views on the general priciples of international organization.

"It was agreed that at the afternoon meeting the British and American groups will make statements of their views on the international organization for the maintenance of peace and security."

The sessions were understood to be concentrating on blocking out the basic principles of peace organization.

Connally Optimistic in Senate.

Predicting a successful outcome for the current discussions, Senator Connally, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told the Senate today they would be followed by a parley "on the higher levels."

"Personally," he said, "I think we stand at the crossroads. I think the outcome of the conference will mean we are going forward in the establishment of peace machinery or we are going to miserably fail in one of the greatest undertakings with which the nation ever has been confronted."

But, he said, the prospects for a successful outcome were "propitious indeed."

Both Mr. Connally and Senator Vandenberg said Secretary Hull had extended assurances that members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would be kept fully informed of the progress of the security talks now under way and that they could have any information they desired.

Senator Taft questioned Mr. Connally about a recent New York Times interview in which he said Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, spoke of a Russian-American alliance that might last for years. When Mr. Taft asked whether such an alliance existed, Mr. Connally said he thought Mr. Harriman had indulged in a "rhetorical flourish," that no alliance existed in the form of a treaty, and that probably the Ambassador was referring to the closer relations that developed during the war.

CIO ATTACKED BY AFL PAPER

Hillman And His PAC Also Are Assailed

DAY

Washington, Aug. 22 (AP)—An American Federation of Labor publication declared today the CIO was trying to "buy" the November election because CIO President Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman "and their CIO followers are afraid their organization will fall apart and be wrecked when the post-war pinch comes."

The article in the AFL's weekly news service was written by Philip Pearl, AFL publicist, and gave what he described as the "real lowdown" on the CIO's Political Action Committee, headed by Hillman.

Pearl declared the CIO is "basically insecure" and "is not in a position to withstand tough going." The Political Action Committee, Pearl asserted, does not "give a tinker's damn" for President Roosevelt or any other political candidate.

Roosevelt Their Only Hope

"The only hope for post-war survival of the CIO, its strategists figure," Pearl wrote, "is the election of a national administration so committed to the CIO that it will use the machinery of the Government to support and perpetuate the CIO during a period when nothing else could hold it together.

"But partisan politics is a strange game. John L. Lewis tried to buy an election in 1936 for the CIO but the bargain didn't stick and within four years Lewis and Roosevelt were at each other's throats.

"We do not believe that President Roosevelt can be bought. We do not believe his candidacy will be helped by the sort of support he is getting from the CIO. We are convinced that Mr. Hillman's political gamble will not only prove a fearful boomerang for the CIO but that it will do lasting harm to the cause of the entire labor movement of America."

PAC Called Anti-Labor

Pearl termed the PAC "the strongest anti-labor force" in the nation, asserting it had cost labor support in Congress and that much legislation desired by labor had been killed or would be killed because some Congressmen had been "antagonized" by the PAC.

The whole country, Pearl declared, is "so thoroughly prejudiced" against the PAC that Hillman and his followers are "bound to cost the Roosevelt-Truman slate a good many votes. . . ."

Mayor Would Destroy Surplus

LaGuardia Wishes to Save Only War Goods Useful in New Production.

NIGHT

Washington, Aug. 22 (A. P.).—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York recommended to Congress today the destruction of all post-war surpluses not needed for employment-stimulating activities.

On the basis of his testimony before the Senate War Investigating committee, Acting Chairman Hatch (D.-N. M.) later ordered an inquiry into a New York salesman's reported offer to sell surplus surgical dressing and hospital gloves to a New York city purchasing official.

Mayor LaGuardia told the committee that a man named E. Friedhoff of Brooklyn, who he said represented the Knickerbocker Building & Mortgage Corporation, called upon the purchasing agent yesterday with an offer to sell 400,000 surgical dressings at 5 cents each and 10,000 rubber hospital gloves at $3.01 and $3.03 a dozen.

Says Milk Was Offered.

"I have a contact in Washington," he quoted Mr. Friedhoff as having said, adding that the salesman also offered the city cases of evaporated milk.

Senator Hatch told reporters later that Mr. Friedhoff probably would be called before the committee to testify.

Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) said that "we want to find out how such a thing could happen."

Contending that pending legislation providing for surplus property disposal should be recommitted to committees for further study, Mr. LaGuardia declared:

"The legislation should provide that the only surpluses that can be sold are those necessary to create employment."

He predicted that if present proposals are enacted and a well-organized Federal agency starts selling surpluses on a large scale "Congress will repeal the legislation within sixty to ninety days in order to halt the sales."

Sees Industry Retarded.

"Its sale will retard the reconversion of industry to a peace-time basis," he said. "Take airplane motors. Sure, you can sell them. If you start selling them, it will be five years before we make an airplane motor in this country."

He said that city, State and country governments should be given surplus supplies for road and street improvement, replenishing hospital stocks and other services.

"There is a large amount of road machinery which we ought to put to work on deferred maintenance and airport development," Mr. LaGuardia continued.

"The intention should be to dispose only of those surpluses which will aid the conversion of industry and provide employment for dislocated war workers."

"What should we do with the balance?" asked Senator Hatch (D.-N. M.).

"It's expendable," the Mayor replied.

"You mean, destroy it?"

"It's being destroyed in war," Mr. LaGuardia answered. "That is part of the cost of war."

Pipe-line Provision.

The House wrote into the surplus property bill today a provision requiring congressional approval before the Federal Government may sell the big pipe lines built during the war to handle the greatly stepped up flow of fuel oil.

This amendment was adopted, 58 to 23, subject to a later roll call, after proponents declared that a close check will be needed to prevent an economic blow to the coal industry.

Representative Walter (D.-Pa.), author of the amendment, said he understood that the Standard Oil companies of Ohio and New Jersey are the only potential customers for purchase of the big lines and intend to use them to step up natural gas distribution.

The big line directly involved, he said, cost the nation $165,000,000 to build, and he contended that if it is used for gas distribution the Government will have to lay out $65,000,000 a year in relief to coal miners.

Representative Manasco (D.-Ala.) opposed the amendment, asserting that it and others like it will make Congress a "disposal agency."

House Moves to Expand Peace-Time Enterprise To Combat Unemployment

AUG 23 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — (AP) Deciding that emphasis should be placed on expanding peace-time enterprise, rather than anticipating large unemployment, the House Ways and Means committee today scrapped Senate-approved plans for the government to train discharged war workers for new jobs.

It also struck from the Senate legislation a provision for transporting civilian workers and their families, at government expense up to $200 a family, back to their pre-war homes or to locations of new employment.

Pass War Goods Bill

Meanwhile, the House after seven days of debate, passed without a record vote legislation creating machinery for disposal of an estimated $100,000,000,000 of surplus war property. Simultaneously, a Senate committee approved a broadly different bill for disposing surpluses. The House measure calls for one-man direction of surplus property disposal while the Senate bill would put it under a board of eight.

After knocking out the civilian retraining and reemployment section of the Senate's Demobilization and Reconversion bill, the Ways and Means committee received a motion by Rep. Mills (D-Ark) to eliminate provisions for paying unemployment compensation to 3,500,000 federal workers. A vote was postponed until tomorrow.

Rep. Knutson (R-Minn), ranking committee Republican, said "it is time we began planning to expand private enterprise, to provide jobs, instead of spending all our time thinking about unemployment. We can deal with the unemployment problem when we get to it."

He stressed that Congress now has a staff of experts studying ways of adjusting post-war taxes to encourage expansion of business and industry.

Rep. Jenkins (R-Ohio) told newspapermen the cost of administering the retraining and reemployment program, as adopted by the Senate, probably would "run into billions of dollars," and "by its very nature the system set-up by the eliminated section would be open to all manner of abuses."

The committee action, by a 15 to 5 vote, does not disturb prior legislation for retraining and reemployment of war veterans, nor the wartime retraining and reemployment program established by executive order and operated by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines.

There appeared to be a sharp division in the Ways and Means group on the proposal that government employes not be eligible for unemployment benefits.

A compromise was understood to be favored by some members to provide that only those government employes earning less than $3,000 a year should be eligible for unemployment benefits.

States Determine Amount

The Senate bill, sponsored by Senator George (D-Ga), leaves to the states the determination as to duration of such benefits. The administration has recommended a uniform minimum of 26 weeks of payments running up to $20 weekly.

Before the Senate War Investigating committee, Mayor F. H. La Guardia of New York recommended destruction of most of those war surpluses which cannot be turned to employment-stimulating production. He said "no one would quarrel" over sending food surpluses to the needy abroad, but that many items ought to be destroyed.

"Take airplane motors," La Guardia illustrated. "Sure, you can sell them. If you start selling them, it will be five years before we make an airplane motor in this country."

La Guardia also said "junk dealers" already had moved into the military property disposal business. He related that New York city purchasing agents had been offered 400,000 surgical dressings at 5 cents each and 10,000 surgical rubber gloves at $3.91 and $3.98 a dozen by a man named E. Friedhoff of Brooklyn.

Acting Chairman Hatch (D-NM), said the committee would investigate the circumstances under which these supplies became available.

The Ways and Means committee's decision against Federal retraining of war workers is subject to future House action.

LONDON, AUG.22-(AP)-THE EXILED POLISH GOVERNMENT IS EXPECTED TO CREATE A NEW SUPREME COMMAND OF ALL ITS FORCES IN AN EFFORT TO MEET RUSSIAN OBJECTIONS TO GEN.SOSNKOWSKI AS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, ONE OF THE CHIEF BARRIERS TO SOVIET-POLISH ACCORD.

THE CONCESSION PROBABLY WILL MEAN THAT SOSNKOWSKI WILL REMAIN AS COMMANDER EITHER OF POLISH FORCES IN FRANCE OR ITALY, BUT WITHOUT A SAY IN MATTERS OF POLICY. IT STILL IS UNCERTAIN WHETHER THE CHANGE WILL MEET PREVIOUS RUSSIAN INSISTENCE THAT SOSNKOWSKI'S CONNECTION WITH THE EXILE GOVERNMENT BE SEVERED COMPLETELY. RUSSIA CONSIDERS HIM ANTI-SOVIET.

THE POLISH CABINET CONSIDERED TODAY THE FINAL DRAFT OF PROPOSALS

ADD-MAQUIS - DIXON'S - AUG-24

HE WAS RIGHT. FOR A FEW SECONDS SOME AUTOMATIC FIRE FROM WITHIN THE BUILDING SWEPT THE STREET. THEN JUST AS SUDDENLY AS IT STARTED, THE SCRAP WAS OVER AND THE MAQUIS PROUDLY MARCHED A SCORE OF PRISONERS OUT OF THE BUILDING, PRODDING LAGGARDS WITH GUN BARRELS.

EXCEPT FOR A FEW SCATTERED SHOTS HERE AND THERE THE TOWN BELONGED TO THE RANKS OF THE LIBERATED.

AUG 23 1944

ALREADY CAPT. OMER BROWN, DUNELLEN, N.J., HAD MARCHED MORE THAN 150 PRISONERS FROM ONE BARRACKS WHERE HE HAD BEEN MORE THAN AN HOUR TALKING THEM INTO SURRENDERING.

"I DID A LITTLE SWEATING IN THERE WHEN THE SHOOTING STARTED OUTSIDE," HE GRINNED. "THEY WERE SORT OF HESITANT AT FIRST, BUT WHEN I TOLD THEM HOW WE WERE GOING TO BLAST THEM OUT THEY AGREED TO GIVE UP."

REJOICING HAD STARTED AMONG THE MAQUIS. THERE WERE WELCOMING SHOUTS, CHEERS, TEARS AND THOUSANDS OF KISSES. THE HAPPIEST OF ALL, PERHAPS, WAS THE MAN WHOSE RECORD AS A FRENCH "TERRORIST" HAD BROUGHT THE GESTAPO DEATH SENTENCE. HE WAS TO HAVE BEEN SHOT AT DAWN TODAY.

LIBERATED ALSO JUST IN TIME TO GRAB A CARBINE AND JOIN IN STORMING THE BUILDING WAS A SHORT, BEARDED CITIZEN WHO HAD BEEN TORTURED FOR TWO MONTHS FOR LENDING HIS CAR TO "TERRORISTS."

BY THE HUNDREDS THE MAQUIS POURED DOWN INTO THE GAP FROM THE OVERHANGING MOUNTAINS, AFOOT, ON BICYCLES AND IN CARTS. THEY WERE ALL AGES AND ARMED WITH ALMOST EVERY KIND OF GUN, SOME OF WHICH HAD BEEN PARACHUTED DOWN TO THEM BY AMERICAN AND BRITISH PLANES MANY MONTHS AGO. THEY WERE LED BY THREE OFFICERS - ONE AMERICAN, ONE BRITISH AND ONE FRENCH - WHO ALSO PARACHUTED DOWN HERE SEVERAL WEEKS AGO TO ORGANIZE MAQUIS OPERATIONS IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE INVASION AND SUBSEQUENT STABS NORTHWARD.

PRECEDE ALL BOYLE-WHITEHEAD

BY HAL BOYLE AND DON WHITEHEAD

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN WESTERN FRANCE, AUG.22-(AP)-THE GERMANS WEST OF THE SEINE RIVER ARE SO HARASSED AND DISORGANIZED BY AMERICAN COLUMNS THEY HAVE BEEN UNABLE TO MAKE ANY COORDINATED STAND OR LAUNCH ANY KIND OF COUNTER-THRUST IN STRENGTH.

"THEY HAVE TAKEN A THOROUGH SHELLACKING AND THEY KNOW IT," ONE OFFICER SAID.

FIELD MARSHAL GEN.GUENTHER VON KLUGE APPARENTLY HAD MANAGED TO EXTRICATE A LARGE PART OF HIS FORCES FROM THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN GAP, BUT HE HAS BY NO MEANS SAVED THEM. THEY STILL ARE THREATENED BY THE NEW NORTHWARD DRIVE WEST OF THE SEINE FROM THE MANTES-GASSICOURT REGION WHERE THE AMERICANS HAVE ESTABLISHED A BRIDGEHEAD OVER THE RIVER.

AUG 23 1944

TIGHTENING THEIR HOLD ON THE SEINE LINE, AMERICAN PATROLS ARE ACTIVE ALONG THE SOUTH BANKS OF THE RIVER BETWEEN PARIS AND THE MANTES-GASSICOURT AREA, AND OTHER AMERICAN INFANTRY HAS MADE SUBSTANTIAL ADVANCES SOUTHWEST OF PARIS AGAINST ONLY MINOR OPPOSITION.

FIGHTING IS CONTINUING IN THE VICINITY OF RAMBOUILLET, SOUTHWEST OF VERSAILLES, AND GERMAN ARTILLERY BEYOND THE LOIRE RIVER HAS BEEN SHELLING AMERICAN-HELD ORLEANS SPORADICALLY.

ONLY REMNANTS NOW REMAIN IN THE NORMANDY POCKET, AND INDICATIONS ARE THAT THE TOTAL ENEMY CAPTURED AND KILLED WILL RUN MUCH HIGHER THAN RECENT ESTIMATES, ALTHOUGH THE NUMBER STILL IN THE BAG IS A MATTER OF GUESSWORK. AN ESTIMATED 30,000 PRISONERS HAVE BEEN TAKEN ALREADY BY ALLIED ARMY UNITS WHO CLOSED THE TRAP DAYS AGO.

MORE WILL FALL, IN ALL PROBABILITY, IN THE NEW ENVELOPMENT WEST OF THE SEINE. THE SAME AMERICANS WHO TRAPPED THE CREAM OF VON KLUGE'S SEVENTH ARMY IN THE FALAISE POCKET NOW ARE ATTACKING WEST OF THE SEINE, INTENT ON CLOSING THIS NEW TRAP. SWIFT ARMOR AND INFANTRY THRUSTS ACROSS THE SEINE NORTH AND SOUTH OF PARIS AND THE ENVELOPING MOVEMENT WEST OF THE RIVER STILL HAVE THE GERMANS "IN A TAILSPIN" FROM WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN UNABLE TO RECOVER.

A135

THE NAZIS ARE ATTEMPTING TO FORD THE SEINE WITH FERRIES, SMALL BOATS AND EVEN BY SWIMMING, IN THEIR HASTE TO GET AWAY. THE GERMAN AIR FORCE CAME FLASHING OUT OF RAINY SKIES TO BOLSTER ITS FLEEING

30.24 — 18213

GROUND TROOPS AND STRAFED AND BOMBED ADVANCING AMERICANS, BUT CASUALTIES WERE LIGHT. HEAVY, ACCURATE ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE BROUGHT DOWN 16 OF THE RAIDERS.

ENEMY ARMOR ALSO HAS BEEN ATTEMPTING TO PROTECT THESE FLEEING UNITS, AND 30 TANKS HAVE BEEN KNOCKED OUT IN THE PAST 24 HOURS.

THE NAZIS HAVE NO CHOICE BUT DEFENSIVE MOVES, BECAUSE THEY ARE UNABLE TO MATCH THE STRENGTH THE ALLIES ARE POURING INTO THE FIELD.

AUG 23 1944

IN THE NEW DRIVE THE AMERICANS CAPTURED A GERMAN CORPS CHIEF-- LT.GEN.FARNBECKER, AN SS OFFICER. THREE DAYS AGO FARNBECKER SENT AN AIDE TO RECONNOITER THE ROUTE OF RETREAT FOR AN ARMORED DIVISION. THE AIDE, TRYING TO LOCATE AN OPEN ROAD IN AN AREA HELD BY THREE AMERICAN DIVISIONS, REVEALED THE COMPLETE CONFUSION OF THE ENEMY AND HIS LACK OF KNOWLEDGE OF AMERICAN MOVES AND POSITIONS.

LT.GEN.OMAR N.BRADLEY, COMMANDER OF THE 12TH ARMY GROUP, IS INTENT ON DESTROYING GERMAN ARMIES RATHER THAN ON THE SPECTACULAR CAPTURE OF LARGE CITIES. HE DIRECTED THE "SHELLACKING" OF THE ENEMY FROM HIS NEW MOBILE TRAILER HEADQUARTERS. BUILT TO HIS SPECIFICATIONS BY AN ORDNANCE UNIT, IT IS ABOUT 40 FEET LONG, SIX AND A HALF FEET WIDE AND SEVEN FEET HIGH. BOTH SIDES OF THE WALLS INSIDE ARE LINED WITH MAPS LIGHTED INDIRECTLY. AT THE FRONT END IS AN EASY CHAIR AND A BUILT-IN DESK--BRADLEY'S OFFICE IN THE FIELD.

THE BREST PENINSULA ALSO PRESENTS A PICTURE OF NAZIS IN DIRE STRAITS. AMERICAN SIEGE FORCES HAVE SHELLED HEAVILY THE GERMAN GARRISON IN THE PORT OF BREST, AND ALLIED PLANES SMASHED AT IT WITH BOMBS.

AT ST.MALO IT WAS REPORTED LESS THAN A TRUCKLOAD OF AMMUNITION WAS LEFT IN THE FORTRESS CITADEL WHEN ANDREAS VON AULOCK, "THE MAD COLONEL," SURRENDERED. A SECOND LIEUTENANT COMMANDING A SMALL GARRISON ON AN ISLAND IN THE HARBOR YIELDED AFTER HE FAILED TO GET FURTHER ORDERS FROM VON AULOCK TO HOLD OUT.

OFFICERS SAID THE CAPITULATION OF THE CITADEL WAS SPEEDED BY A CAPTURED AMERICAN SERGEANT, WHO DISCOVERED ONE OF THE GERMAN COOKS NAME FROM BROOKLYN, N.Y. TOGETHER THEY SECRETLY TAPPED THE WATER SUPPLY, AND THE SUBSEQUENT SHORTAGE WAS A FACTOR INFLUENCING VON AULOCK'S SURRENDER.

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS WEST OF VERSAILLES, AUG 22-(AP)-WE THREE--A MAJOR, SERGEANT AND A CORRESPONDENT--HEADED OUR JEEP IN THE GENERAL DIRECTION OF PARIS TODAY. AUG 23 1944

IT WAS 15 MILES TO GO TO VERSAILLES, 25 TO PARIS. THE DAY WAS BEAUTIFUL, THE HIGHWAY BROAD AND SMOOTH.

"A NICE OUTING AT THE TAXPAYERS' EXPENSE," QUIPPED SGT.LEWIS TODD, JR., OF COLERAIN, N.C., OUR DRIVER.

"THE DAY'S YOUNG YET, SON, SO KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON" CAUTIONED MAJ. JAMES P. (CHINK) OWENS OF JUNCTION CITY, KANS., A LEAN, OLD-TIME HORSE CAVALRY MAN WHO HAS BEEN SOLDIERING WITH LT.GEN.GEORGE PATTON FOR 20 YEARS.

WE HAD DRIVEN THROUGH THE AGELESS AND VERDANT RAMBOUILLETT FOREST, PAST COLUMNS OF AMERICAN TANKS, HALFTRACKS AND TRUCKS PILED HIGH WITH K RATIONS.

AT THE TOURIST TOWN OF RAMBOUILLETT ERNEST HEMINGWAY, AUTHOR TURNED WAR CORRESPONDENT, SHOWED US ON A MAP WHERE THE GERMANS WERE SUPPOSED TO BE, POURED US LIBERAL PORTIONS OF COGNAC AND SENT US ON OUR WAY.

OUTSIDE THE LITTLE VILLAGE OF PERRAY TWO PERSPIRING FRENCHMEN IN A CAR GROUND TO A HALT, WILDLY GESTICULATING AND SHOUTING, "GERMANS, GERMANS!"

JUST THEN A MORTAR PLUNGED UP AHEAD AND WE ALL TOOK TO A DITCH.

"WELL, WE'D BETTER INVESTIGATE THE SITUATION," SAID MAJ.OWEN CALMLY.

AUG 23 1944

THE MAJOR HAD GONE 25 FEET UP THE DITCH BETWEEN THE HIGHWAY AND A PARALLEL ELECTRIC RAILWAY WHEN BULLETS BEGAN WHISTLING OVER OUR HEADS. WE SAW THE MAJOR SPIN AROUND AND FALL. THE NEXT MINUTE HE WAS UP WITH HIS CARBINE AIMED ACROSS THE TRACKS.

OVER THERE IN A FIELD WERE THREE GERMANS CROUCHING AND RUNNING TOWARD A SHOCK OF WHEAT. THE MAJOR TOOK ONE SHOT AND NOTHING HAPPENED. HE TOOK A SECOND SHOT AND ONE OF THE GERMANS STRAIGHTENED UP. A THIRD SHOT AND THE GERMAN FLUNG UP HIS HANDS, HIS RIFLE GOING IN ONE DIRECTION AND HIS HELMET IN ANOTHER.

THE MAJOR WORKED HIS WAY BACK TO US, TOOK OFF HIS HELMET, WHICH HAD A BULLET HOLE ON THE LEFT SIDE, AND REMARKED, "A HALF INCH MORE AND THAT KRAUT WOULD HAVE GOTTEN MRS.OWENS' MEAL TICKET."

WHILE OWEN WAS OUT IN FRONT OF US WE HEARD VOICES.

"WONDER WHO THE MAJOR IS TALKING TO," SAID TODD. HE RAISED HIS HEAD TO LOOK AND A BULLET ZINGED PAST. THE TALKING WAS BEING DONE BY THE GERMANS IN THE OPPOSITE FIELD.

AFTER THE MAJOR HAD COOLED OFF 88-GUNS STARTED LAYING "SCREAMING MEEMIES" AROUND US SO WE TORE OUT DOWN THE ROAD IN THE DIRECTION FROM WHICH WE HAD COME.

BSO

THE ROAD TO PARIS, WE HAD LEARNED, WAS NOT YET OPEN.

BACK IN THE TOWN OF PERRAY WE MET AN ARMORED COLUMN LED BY LT.CLEO S.FREED OF CORVALLIS, ORE., UPON BEING TOLD WHAT HAD HAPPENED, ONE OF FREED'S NON-COMS SAID NONCHALANTLY, "DON'T BOTHER. WE'LL HANDLE 'EM."

PFC FRED DUCAS OF NEW IBERIA, LA., WHO IS FREED'S INTERPRETER, WAS SOON SWAMPED BY FIGHTING FRENCH, ALL OF WHOM WANTED TO GIVE INFORMATION AND ALL OF WHOM TALKED AT ONCE.

THE GERMANS WERE KICKED OUT RAMBOUILLETT YESTERDAY AFTER FOUR DAYS OF TOUCH AND GO FIGHTING AND A FUTILE ATTEMPT BY ENEMY "BEETLE TANKS," MIDGET AFFAIRS LOADED WITH EXPLOSIVES AND CONTROLLED BY CABLES.

AUG 23 1944

THE GERMANS TURNED A BEETLE LOOSE AGAINST ONE OF OUR ARMORED CARS AT THE SAME TIME THAT AN ENEMY LIGHT TANK WAS APPROACHING FROM ANOTHER DIRECTION.

CPL.RALPH SCHROEDER OF APPLETON, WIS., DROVE THE ARMORED CAR RIGHT THROUGH A ROADBLOCK TO GETAWAY WITH HIS PATROL, WHICH INCLUDED PVT.THOMAS REITH OF MEDINA, N.Y., PFC ELWOOD HAUBRICH AND PFC WILLIAM HABIG, BOTH OF KENOSHA, WIS., CPL.HERBERT KRINKE OF DETROIT AND PFC AL FANBER OF BUFFALO, N.Y.

MAJ.BURTON E.GENUNG OF TUCSON, ARIZ., SAID THAT IF ANYONE WAS A HERO IN THE RAMBOUILLETT ACTION IT WAS HAUBRICH, WHO SLEW TEN GERMANS WITH A SHORT BURST OF HIS 30-CALIBRE MACHINEGUN.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE,AUG.22-(AP)-CANADIAN FIRST ARMY TROOPS ROLLED FORWARD FOUR TO 10 MILES ON A BROAD FRONT TODAY DRIVING GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY REMNANTS BEFORE THEM TOWARD THE LOWER SEINE WHILE AMERICAN TROOPS HELD FIRM BRIDGEHEADS OVER THAT RIVER ON BOTH SIDES OF PARIS.

REPORTS THAT FRENCH PATRIOTS WERE SEIZING CITY AFTER CITY IN CENTRAL AND SOUTHERN FRANCE, INCLUDING LYON, GAVE A CLEAR INDICATION THAT THE GESTAPO-DOMINATED GERMAN HIGH COMMAND WAS CAPABLE OF OFFERING ORGANIZED RESISTANCE TO THE ALLIES ONLY IN NORTHWESTERN FRANCE.

BUT THIS WAS PRECISELY THE NAZI DEFENSES IN THAT SECTION OF FRANCE WHICH THE U.S.THIRD ARMY'S SEINE BRIDGEHEADS NORTHWEST AND SOUTHEAST OF PARIS WERE THREATENING, INCLUDING THE FLYING BOMB COAST IN THE PAS DE CALAIS.

IN THE AREA OF DREUX, 45 MILES SOUTHWEST OF THE HEART OF PARIS, LT.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON'S TROOPS ALSO TIGHTENED THEIR FLANK POSITIONS AGAINST THE GERMANS SHAVING THEM BACK TOWARD THE SEA AND THE SEINE. THE GERMANS HAD THROWN UP FLANK PROTECTION AND WERE FIGHTING VIGOROUSLY ALONG THE AVRE IN THAT AREA.

(FARTHER NORTH U.S.FORCES HAVE LAUNCHED A STRONG OFFENSIVE ALONG THE LEFT BANK OF THE SEINE, A REUTERS DISPATCH FROM FRANCE SAID).

THE MID-NORMANDY POCKET OF TRAPPED GERMANS NORTH OF ARGENTAN DWINDLED TO ALMOST NOTHING. IT HAS YIELDED MORE THAN 25,000 PRISONERS WITH THE COUNT STILL RISING, AND NO ESTIMATE YET HAS BEEN MADE OF THE THOUSANDS OF GERMANS DEAD IN THE AREA.

A FRONT DISPATCH SAID THERE ARE INDICATIONS THAT THE TOTAL ENEMY KILLED AND CAPTURED MAY RUN MUCH HIGHER THAN RECENT ESTIMATES, ALTHOUGH THE NUMBER OF GERMANS STILL IN THE BAG IS A MATTER OF GUESSWORK.

THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY AND THE AMERICAN FIRST ARMY WERE BUSY WIPING OUT THE LAST GERMANS IN THE POCKET AND THERE WAS A PROSPECT THAT ANOTHER 24 HOURS MAY SEE THE END OF THE POCKET ENTIRELY.

AN AMERICAN ATTACK WEST OF THE SEINE THREATENS TO ENVELOP ENEMY TROOPS WHO ESCAPED FROM THE ARGENTAN POCKET. AN AMERICAN OFFICER AT THE FRONT SAID THAT THIS ENVELOPING DRIVE PLUS THE ARMORED AND INFANTRY THRUSTS ACROSS THE SEINE STILL HAD THE GERMANS IN A "TAILSPIN."

THE CANADIAN PUSH ON A FRONT OF ABOUT 50 MILES FROM THE SEA TOWARD ARGENTAN WHERE IT MEETS PATTON'S FORCES VIRTUALLY WAS SQUEEZING OUT THE BRITISH SECOND AND AMERICAN FIRST ARMY IN PRESENT OPERATIONS.

THE CANADIANS OUTFLANKED CABOURG ALONG THE COAST AND WERE WITHIN A MILE OF THE IMPORTANT ROAD HUB OF LISIEUX, ABOUT 20 MILES INLAND. FARTHER SOUTH AN ADVANCE OF 10 MILES FROM CHAMBOIS TOOK GACE DRIVING ANOTHER DEEP SALIENT IN THE GERMAN REARGUARDS.

SOME REMNANTS OF THE GERMAN SEVENTH ARMY WERE CROSSING THE SEINE--USING IN A FEW CASES THE VERY BARGES IN WHICH IN THEIR DAYS OF VICTORY THEY HOPED TO INVADE ENGLAND.

WITH FRENCH FORCES NEAR MARSEILLE, AUG. 22-(AP)-THE TABLES HAVE BEEN TURNED IN A WEEK OF FIGHTING ON THIS FRONT. ALLIED COLUMNS ARE SPLURGING OVER SOUTHEASTERN FRANCE AND IT IS NOW THE GERMANS WHO ARE STRUGGLING ON A "BEACHHEAD."

FRENCH FORCES ARE CLOSING IN STEADILY AND HAVE ALREADY DRIVEN A WEDGE TO THE SEA BETWEEN MARSEILLE AND TOULON. TWO ESCAPE ROUTES REMAIN IN GERMAN HANDS. BOTH LEAD NORTHWESTWARD FROM MARSEILLE, ONE THROUGH SALON TO THE RHONE VALLEY AND THE OTHER OVER SANDY STRETCHES OF COAST AND THROUGH MARTIGUES.

THE MAIN GERMAN FORCE IN THE AREA IS ON AN 1,800-FOOT RIDGE KNOWN AS THE CHAIN OF ST.CYR, A FEW MILES OUTSIDE THE CITY AND DOMINATING ALLIED APPROACH ROADS FROM THE EAST.

THE HAZE AND SMOKE, AS THE GERMANS APPARENTLY ARE PROCEEDING WITH DEMOLITIONS IN THE METROPOLIS OF SOUTHERN FRANCE OBSCURED THE VIEW OF THE CITY FROM HEIGHTS HELD BY THE FRENCH. FRENCH ARTILLERY POUNDED AT THE GERMANS ON ST. CYR RIDGE, BUT THE GUNNERS REFRAINED FROM SHELLING MARSEILLE.

FRENCH TROOPS MADE FORAYS NORTH AND SOUTH OF THIS TOWN, TAKING 200 PRISONERS AND 19 FIELD GUNS. GERMAN RESISTANCE DID NOT APPEAR AS DETERMINED AS AT TOULON AND PART OF THE NAZI GARRISON MAY HAVE ALREADY SLIPPED OUT ALONG THE COASTAL ROAD.

WITH AMERICAN FORCES THREE MILES FROM CANNES, AUG. 21-(DELAYED)-(AP)-THE MOST DE LUXE WAR OF ALL SOUTHERN FRANCE IS BEING FOUGHT TODAY IN THE HEIGHTS AROUND CANNES, WHERE FASHIONABLE VILLAS AND CHALETS ARE BEING USED AS PILLBOXES AND STRONGPOINTS BY THE GERMANS IN THEIR EFFORT TO PREVENT AMERICAN FORCES FROM TAKING THE CITY.

DOUGHBOYS, HOWEVER, ALREADY ARE IN THE HEIGHTS IMMEDIATELY WEST AND NORTHWEST OF THE CITY AND CAN LOOK DOWN UPON ONE OF THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS BEACH RESORTS.

I REACHED A FRONT LINE CRAG OVERLOOKING CANNES WITH PATROL UNITS UNDER LT.COL.WILLIAM YARBOROUGH OF STAUNTON, VA., WHO WERE BLASTING AT GERMAN SNIPERS IN A PINK VILLA OVERLOOKING THE SHIMMERING BLUE MEDITERRANEAN. THESE SNIPERS ALREADY HAD KILLED ONE AMERICAN AND WOUNDED THREE OTHERS, BUT THEY WERE WIPED OUT BY MACHINEGUN FIRE FROM BENEATH THE RED AND WHITE STRIPED AWNINGS OF ANOTHER VILLA.

"THE CHATEAU IS CLEANED OUT. THERE ARE SOME DEAD KRAUTS. TWENTY-ONE JERRIES ARE CAPTURED. WE ARE GOING AFTER THE MACHINEGUN NEXT JUST BEYOND."

IN ONE FOXHOLE BEHIND A CRAG WHERE THE GERMANS HAD NO OBSERVATION I FOUND PVT.JOE ZAWAZKI OF 51 VAN BUREN ST., NEWARK, N.J., AND PVT.JOHN DE VANIL, 823 JOHNSTON ST., ALEXANDRIA, LA., SHADED BY A STRIPED BEACH PARASOL. ZAWADZKI TOLD ME "THIS WOULD BE SWELL IF THERE WEREN'T SO MANY MACHINEGUN BULLETS WHIZZING AROUND HERE. IT'S ALMOST AS GOOD A RESORT AS ATLANTIC CITY."

FROM THE OBSERVATION POST CANNES LOOKED TO ME AS THOUGH IT WAS VIRTUALLY UNDAMAGED. HEAVY GERMAN SHELLS COMING OUR WAY WERE BEING FIRED FROM BEHIND CANNES BUT I SAW PEDESTRIANS WALKING THROUGH THE WIDE BEACHFRONT BOULEVARD LIKE FLIES MOVING ACROSS WHITE PAPER.

CAPT.EDWARD TOMASIK, 15 ROOSEVELT ST., NEW BEDFORD, MASS., WHO WAS MAKING AN OBSERVATION OF GERMAN LINES ONLY 100 YARDS AWAY, SAID AS A NAZI SIX-INCH SHELL CRASHED THROUGH A VILLA NEARBY, THAT THIS WAS THE STRANGEST FIGHTING HE HAD IN THE WHOLE MEDITERRANEAN CAMPAIGN.

"THIS IS REALLY SWANKY FIGHTING," HE SAID. "THESE EXPENSIVE VILLAS BEING USED AS PILLBOXES BEATS ANYTHING I RAN INTO SO FAR IN THIS WAR."

PVT.FRANK SWEETITZ OF DEMAREST AVE., AVENEL, N.J., FIRING A GUN NEARBY, TURNED AND SAID HE'D "LIKE TO HAVE A GLIMPSE OF THIS PLUSH PLACE WITHOUT HAVING TO SWEAT OUT 170'S AND MACHINEGUN FIRE."

CPL.STANLEY HOWANIAK, 2091 WEST END ST., CLEVELAND, OHIO, ALSO FIRING AT GERMAN SNIPERS, SAID "THIS IS THE SWANKIEST LOCALE I'VE EVER BEEN IN DURING BATTLE. BUT IT DOESN'T MAKE BULLETS ANY SOFTER."

ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN NORMANDY, AUG 22-(AP)-BRITISH TROOPS AND TANKS IN A 10-MILE ADVANCE CAPTURED GACE, 15 MILES EAST OF ARGENTAN, AS THE ALLIED SWEEP TOWARD THE SEINE BEGAN TO PICK UP MOMENTUM ON A WIDE FRONT TODAY.

UNDER STEADILY INCREASING PRESSURE, REMNANTS OF GERMAN DIVISIONS ESTIMATED AT THOUSANDS OF TROOPS NOW ARE BELIEVED CAUGHT WEST OF THE SEINE ABOVE PARIS. TO ALL APPEARANCES THEY ARE DOOMED TO THE SAME FATE AS BEFELL FIELD MARSHAL VON KLUGE'S ARMY IN THE NORMANDY BULGE.

SINCE D-DAY, BY UNOFFICIAL ESTIMATE, ABOUT 300,000 GERMAN TROOPS, INCLUDING PRISONERS, HAVE "DISAPPEARED" IN THE BATTLE OF FRANCE.

AT LEAST HALF OF VON KLUGE'S ARMY IS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN LIQUIDATED, AND SURVIVING NAZI DIVISIONS WHICH ONCE AVERAGED ABOUT 12,000 MEN NOW HAVE BEEN REDUCED TO 4,000 OR LESS.

THE LAST GRIM CHAPTER OF THE "BATTLE OF THE BULGE" WAS BEING WRITTEN TODAY. THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY ALONE BAGGED 3,800 PRISONERS YESTERDAY AND A BRITISH STAFF OFFICER DECLARED "IT IS REASONABLE TO EXPECT THAT THE FINAL VSTIGES OF THE GERM EXPECT THAT THE FINAL VESTIGES OF THE GERMAN POCKET WILL BE BLOTTED OUT SHORTLY."

NEWLY-TAKEN PRISONERS SAID TRAPPED GERMAN PANZER COLUMNS HAD RUN SO SHORT OF FUEL THEY WERE PUTTING THEIR OWN TANKS TO THE TORCH. TWENTY WERE FIRED BY THEIR OWN CREWS IN ONE FOREST YESTERDAY.

THE PRISONERS SAID ONLY DERELICT TANKS WERE LEFT IN THE DEFLATED SACK IN THE ARGENTAN-TRUN-CHAMBOIS AREA, AND THAT VON KLUGE'S 11TH HOUR ATTEMPT TO RELIEVE THE FUEL FAMINE BY AIR HAD BOOMERANGED WHEN PARACHUTE-BORNE SUPPLIES OF DIESEL OIL LANDED BEHIND BRITISH LINES.

GERMAN REARGUARDS STILL WERE FIGHTING IN THE GOUFFERN AND FEUILLET FORESTS SOUTH AND WEST OF TRUN, BUT THEY WERE DAZED, HUNGRY, AND EXHAUSTED, AND NO LONGER WERE BATTLING TO THE LAST MAN AND LAST BULLET. A BRITISH RECONNAISSANCE COLUMN MET SO MANY GERMANS MILLING AROUND WITH THEIR HANDS UP THEY HAD TO SEND BACK FOR HELP.

30. 24 — 1817

IN THE NORTH ALONG THE ENGLISH CHANNEL COAST, DUTCH TROOPS ATTACHED TO THE CANADIAN FIRST ARMY BUT FIGHTING UNDER THEIR OWN COMMAND FOUGHT INTO THE OUTSKIRTS OF HOULGATE ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE DIVES RIVER ESTUARY, AND FALL OF THAT STRONGHOLD WAS EXPECTED HOURLY. RESISTANCE WAS DESCRIBED AS WEAK.

(ACROSS THE ESTUARY, A DISPATCH FROM THE CANADIAN FRONT SAID, BELGIAN TROOPS CAPTURED CABOURG).

ACROSS THE ESTUARY, HOWEVER, THE ENEMY WAS MAKING A VIOLENT DEFENSE IN THE OUTSKIRTS OF CABOURG AGAINST BELGIAN TROOPS.

BRITISH INFANTRY AND ARMOR ATTACHED TO THE CANADIAN ARMY ADVANCED TO WITHIN TWO MILES OF LISIEUX, AND STORMED THE TOUQUES RIVER A MILE AND A HALF SOUTH OF LISIEUX, CAPTURING ST.MARTIN DE LA LIEUE. LIVAROT ALSO WAS TAKEN.

STRATEGIC

BY JAMES M. LONG

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, AUG 22-(AP)-THE WHOLE GERMAN STRATEGY OF DEFENSE IN NORTHWESTERN FRANCE HAS BEEN UPSET BY THE AMERICAN THIRD ARMY'S THRUST ACROSS THE SEINE RIVER 25 MILES NORTHWEST OF PARIS, WHICH IS TWISTING THE GERMAN 15TH ARMY INTO AN OFF BALANCE STAND AND THREATENING TO BACK IT AGAINST THE SEA.

THIS BRIDGEHEAD ESTABLISHED BY LT. GEN. GEORGE S. PATTON'S MEN AT MANTES ALSO OPENS A PATH FOR AN OUTFLANKING DRIVE ON THE GERMANS' FLYING BOMB LAUNCHING SITES IN THE PAS DE CALAIS, 90 MILES TO THE NORTH.

IN SETTING UP THE ROBOT BASES AND MASSING COASTAL FORTIFICATIONS IN THE PAS DE CALAIS, THE AREA OF FRANCE CLOSEST TO ENGLAND, THE GERMANS APPARENTLY HAD CALCULATED THAT THE ALLIED INVASION WOULD COME HEAD ON AGAINST THEIR POSITIONS THERE. BUT THE ALLIES PICKED THE NORMANDY COAST INSTEAD.

DEEPENING OF THE NEW AMERICAN WEDGE AT MANTES WOULD FORCE THE ENEMY'S PATCHED UP 15TH ARMY AND ANY ELEMENTS OF THE BATTERED SEVENTH ARMY WHICH GET ACROSS THE SEINE TO FIGHT WITH THEIR BACKS AGAINST THE SEA ALL THE WAY FROM DIEPPE TO DUNKERQUE, AN AIRLINE DISTANCE OF ALMOST 100 MILES.

THE GERMANS' LINES OF SUPPLY OR GETAWAY WOULD BE CUT ONE AFTER ANOTHER WITH EVERY MILE OF PATTON'S ADVANCE.

EVEN THE NOW-OUSTED GERMAN MASTER STRATEGIST, FIELD MARSHAL GEN. KARL RUDOLF GERD VON RUNDSTEDT, EVIDENTLY HAD NOT COUNTED ON THAT. AND HIS SUCCESSOR, FIELD MARSHAL GEN. GUENTHER VON KLUGE, HAD NEITHER THE POSITION NOR THE TROOP STRENGTH TO COPE WITH IT.

POTENTIALLY THE GERMANS' GREATEST DANGER IS IN THE TRIANGLE WITH THE MANTES BRIDGEHEAD AT THE APEX AND LE HAVRE AND DIEPPE, OR PERHAPS ABBEVILLE, AS THE BASE.

TO SAVE GERMAN TROOPS IN THAT INCREASINGLY DUBIOUS CROSS-SEINE HAVEN OF FORCES ESCAPING FROM NORMANDY, VON KLUGE NEEDS EITHER TO CONJURE UP AN ARMY STRONG ENOUGH TO STOP PATTON WHERE HE IS OR WITHDRAW WHILE HIS MEN STILL CAN GET OUT.

A WITHDRAWAL WOULD CARRY THE GERMANS BACK TO THE FIRST WORLD WAR SOMME LINE FOR A LAST ATTEMPT TO SAVE THE ROCKET EMPLACEMENTS OF THE PAS DE CALAIS.

A11

BUT THE SECOND AMERICAN CROSS-SEINE SPEARHEAD IN THE AREA OF FONTAINEBLEAU, 35 MILES SOUTHEAST OF PARIS, OPENS POSITIONS FOR A NEW WAVE OF ENCIRCLEMENT WHICH MIGHT CRUMBLE A SOMME LINE STAND AS SURELY AS THE MANTES BRIDGEHEAD CRACKED OPEN THE LOWER SEINE DEFENSE. THIS SECOND SPEARHEAD NOW IS POINTED AT THE MARNE BATTLEFIELDS OF THE FIRST WORLD WAR.

THE BATTLE OF FRANCE HAS BURST INTO THE OPEN, AND EVEN AMID THE WHITE ROWS OF CROSSES OF THE BATTLEGROUNDS WHERE THE SOLDIERS IN THE LAST WAR DIED IN THE TRENCHES THE GERMANS SEEMINGLY HAVE LITTLE HOPE NOW OF HALTING THE ALLIED ONSLAUGHT ON ANY STATIC LINE SHORT OF THE GERMAN BORDER.

THE GERMANS' ROCKET BOMBING OF LONDON'S TWICE-TRIED CIVILIAN POPULATION IN THE LATEST FLYING BOMB ATTACKS HAS BEEN INTERPRETED BY MANY AS A FINAL ATTEMPT TO FORCE GEN. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER TO RISK NEW LANDINGS WHERE THE GERMANS WANTED THE ALLIES TO LAND.

EVEN THAT LAST HOPE--IF INDEED IT PLAYED A PART IN GERMAN STRATEGY--NOW HAS BEEN INVALIDATED BY THE SAME BOLD STROKE WHICH HAS LEFT THE 15TH ARMY MANNING A DEFENSE LINE POINTED THE WRONG WAY.

LA ROQUE BRUSSANNE, FRANCE, AUG. 21-(DELAYED)-(AP)-ANY QUESTION AS TO HOW VICHYITES WILL BE TREATED IN POST-WAR FRANCE HAS BEEN DISPOSED OF BY THE STORIES TOLD BY IVAN KOLEFF, CHIEF OF A MILITARY SECTION UNDER THE FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR--STORIES OF BRUTAL MASSACRES IN WHICH VICHY MILITIA TOOK PART AND WHICH VICHY POLITICIANS AND INFORMERS HELPED ORGANIZE.

ONCE SOME FRENCHMEN BELIEVED THERE WERE SOME GOOD MEN AT VICHY, SAID KOLEFF AND HENRY BERTOLUCCI, CHIEF OF POLITICAL SECTION 35, INTERVIEWED IN A TINY GROUND FLOOR OFFICE IN THIS PROVINCIAL TOWN OF 1,200.

KOLEFF, 30-YEAR-OLD, KEEN-EYED FRENCHMAN OF BULGARIAN ANCESTRY TOLD THIS STORY, LEANING FORWARD TENSELY AND SPEAKING SLOWLY TO BE SURE HE WAS UNDERSTOOD.

BERTOLUCCI SAT NEXT TO HIM, NODDING AGREEMENT AND FROM TIME TO TIME PROMPTING, INTERRUPTING, AND ADDING EXTRA DETAILS.

LAST MONTH THE GERMANS ATTACKED THREE SMALL FFI OUTPOSTS WITH A BRIGADE. THE MOBILE FRENCH RESISTED AS LONG AS POSSIBLE, THEN RETIRED TO A FOREST, WHERE THE GERMANS DID NOT DARE FOLLOW THEIR MAIN BODY.

INSTEAD, THE GERMANS KILLED HOSTAGES IN NEIGHBORING TOWNS, CHOOSING FFI LEADERS ON THE ADVICE OF COLLABORATORS.

THEIR BODIES WERE FOUND LATER--EYES GOUGED, HANDS CUT OFF AND JAMMED IN THE POCKETS OF THEIR CLOTHING.

THE VICHY MILITIA TOOK PART IN THIS MASSACRE.

"THAT'S WHY WE HATE THEM," SAID KOLEFF.

UNDATED PETAIN (420)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MYSTERY CLOAKED THE TRAGIC, BENT FIGURE OF 88-YEAR-OLD MARSHAL PETAIN TODAY, REPORTED UNDER GESTAPO ARREST.

FRANCE'S "CHIEF OF STATE", THE MAN WHO COINED THE SLOGAN OF VERDUN IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR--"THEY SHALL NOT PASS"--LOST HIS HEROIC LUSTER IN HIS DECLINING YEARS. HE HAD EMERGED FROM RETIREMENT AT THE AGE OF 84 TO TAKE OVER THE JOB OF CHIEF OF STATE IN A NATION BEATEN, DEMORALIZED AND UNDER STEEL NAZI DOMINATION.

PETAIN, AN OBSCURE REGIMENTAL COMMANDER WHEN THE FIRST WORLD WAR BROKE OUT, BECAME A HERO OF FRANCE WHEN FOR TWO YEARS HE STOPPED COLD 80 OF GERMANY'S BEST DIVISIONS TRYING DESPERATELY TO BREAK THROUGH KEY POSITIONS ON THE WESTERN FRONT. THEY DID NOT PASS.

HE WAS CALLED UPON AGAIN BY HIS COUNTRY IN 1934 TO BECOME

MINISTER OF WAR, WHEN FRANCE FEARED THE RISING POWER OF HITLER. AGAIN IN 1939, JUST BEFORE THE OUTBREAK OF THE PRESENT WAR, HE WAS CALLED UPON TO SERVE, THIS TIME AS EXTRAORDINARY AMBASSADOR TO THE REGIME OF FRANCISCO FRANCO IN SPAIN.

WHEN FRANCE WAS OVERRUN IN THE SUMMER OF 1940, HE WAS CALLED UPON TO BRING ORDER OUT OF CHAOS. WITH THE HATED PIERRE LAVAL, DISTRUSTED BY PETAIN HIMSELF, AS VICE-PREMIER, HE WENT ABOUT THE JOB METHODICALLY.

AUG 23 1944

PRESSURE WAS BROUGHT UPON THE AGING MARSHAL TO OUST LAVAL, THE OPPORTUNISTIC, UNSCRUPULOUS COLLABORATOR. IT WAS ACCOMPLISHED IN DECEMBER, 1940, BUT IN APRIL, 1942, LAVAL, FAVORED BY THE NAZIS, WAS BACK AGAIN, STRONGER THAN EVER. HE WAS REINSTATED AND BECAME CHIEF OF THE GOVERNMENT, AND A FEW DAYS LATER WAS ORDERED TO FORM A NEW GOVERNMENT TO AID IN COLLABORATION WITH GERMANY.

PETAIN HAD BEEN HELD UP AS A STERN, HONEST MAN IN THE PAST, BUT NOW HIS STAR WAS DESCENDING WITHIN AND OUTSIDE FRANCE. IT SANK EVEN LOWER IN THE DAYS PRECEDING THE ALLIED INVASION OF FRANCE, WHEN HE ISSUED AN APPEAL TO FRENCHMEN NOT TO SUPPORT ANY INVASION.

WHEN THE INVASION CAME LAST JUNE 6, PETAIN ISSUED ANOTHER APPEAL TO THE FRENCH NOT TO HEED "OUTSIDE VOICES CALLING UPON YOU NOT TO LISTEN TO OUR DECREES."

SUPPORT OF THE INVASION FORCES, HE WENT ON, "WOULD CALL DOWN ON YOU TRAGIC REPRISALS. FRANCE HAS BECOME A BATTLEFIELD. THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF BATTLE MAY COMPEL THE GERMAN ARMY TO TAKE SPECIAL MEASURES. ACCEPT THIS NECESSITY."

HIS WORDS WENT UNHEEDED. PERHAPS--MANY SAY THIS IS SO--HIS HEART NEVER WAS IN SUCH WORDS.

MYSTERY HAS CLOAKED HIM SINCE. LAST AUG. 7 HE WA REPORTED TO HAVE GONE TO GERMANY. BERLIN DENIED THIS. LATER ON AUG.16, HE WAS REPORTED IN PARIS, IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH THE GERMANS. THERE WAS NO WAY OF CONFIRMING THIS REPORT.

TODAY, THERE SEEMS SOME INDICATION THAT THE GERMANS NEVER FULLY TRUSTED THE OLD WARRIOR. THE REPORTED SWIFT ACTION BY THE GESTAPO IN VICHY WOULD SEEM TO INDICATE THIS.

UNDATED MARNE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMERICAN SOLDIERS TODAY WERE APPROACHING THE MARNE RIVER AREA, SCENE OF TWO DECISIVE BATTLES IN THE WORLD WAR, IN ONE OF WHICH THE FATHERS OF THE PRESENT DOUGHBOYS PLAYED A BIG PART IN HALTING THE FINAL GERMAN DRIVE AND LAUNCHING AN OFFENSIVE THAT ENDED IN GERMANY'S DEFEAT.

YANK ARMORED COLUMNS ALREADY HAVE PUSHED ACROSS THE SEINE RIVER AT FONTAINEBLEAU. THIS IS ABOUT 30 MILES FROM THE REGION IN WHICH THE FRENCH AND BRITISH, AIDED BY THE FAMOUS "TAXICAB ARMY," HALTED IN SEPTEMBER, 1914, A BOCHE DRIVE WHICH CARRIED TO WITHIN 17 MILES OF PARIS. THE CROSSING SITE IS 55 MILES FROM BELLEAU WOOD AND CHATEAU-THIERRY WHERE IN JUNE AND JULY, 1918, AMERICANS TOOK THE MEASURE OF VETERAN GERMAN TROOPS IN THE SECOND BATTLE OF THE MARNE.

THE MEASURE OF VETERAN GERMAN TROOPS IN THE SECOND BATTLE OF THE MARNE.

THE FIRST BATTLE OF THE MARNE--IN REALITY A SERIES OF ENGAGEMENTS--

30. 24— 18221

CAME WHEN THE GERMANS UNDER GEN. VON KLUCK, AFTER DRIVING TO WITHIN 17 MILES OF PARIS, SUDDENLY SWUNG SOUTH AND THRUST A SALIENT ACROSS THE MARNE RIVER.

AUG 23 1944

THE FRENCH AND BRITISH HIT THE SALIENT ON BOTH FLANKS AND IN THE CENTER. THE DECISIVE ACTION CAME THE AFTERNOON OF SEPT.9, WHEN FORCES UNDER GENERAL FOCH BROKE THE GERMAN CENTER AT LA FERE CHAMPENOISE.

HITTING THE GERMAN RIGHT FLANK WAS A FRENCH ARMY WHICH HAD BEEN RUSHED TO THE FRONT IN THE TAXICABS OF PARIS.

IN MAY, 1918, THE GERMANS AGAIN REACHED THE MARNE IN A SURPRISE THRUST.

ALLIED RESERVES WERE RUSHED FORWARD, INCLUDING THE 2ND AND 3RD AMERICAN DIVISIONS. THEY REACHED CHATEAU-THIERRY ON MAY 31 AND AFTER BLOODY FIGHTING KEPT THE GERMANS FROM CROSSING. A FEW DAYS LATER THE AMERICANS AGAIN PROVED THEIR FIGHTING WORTH BY THROWING THE GERMANS FROM STRONG POSITIONS IN BELLEAU WOOD.

BY JULY 18TH THERE WERE 12 AMERICAN DIVISIONS IN THE SECTOR AND MARSHAL FOCH LAUNCHED HIS OFFENSIVE THAT MARKED THE TURNING OF THE TIDE. AMERICANS AT THAT TIME MADE UP ABOUT 30 PER CENT OF HIS ENTIRE FORCE.

AMERICAN CASUALTIES ON THE MARNE WERE HEAVY.

A BATTALION OUTPOST, AITAPE, DUTCH NEW GUINEA, AUG. 10-(AP)-DURING ONE PARTICULAR HOT PHASE OF JUNGLE FIGHTING ADJT. CAPT. CLAUD CLARK, OF RALEIGH, N.C., PAUSED TO SAY:

"I'M LEARNING HOW TO FIGHT, TOO."

AT THE SAME TIME ANOTHER JAPANESE BROADCAST RECORDED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS QUOTED THE TOKYO NEWSPAPER ASAHI AS SPECULATING THAT THE SUPERFORTRESSES WHICH MADE THE RAIDS MIGHT HAVE TAKEN OFF FROM BASES IN INDIA, REFUELED AT CHENGTU IN CHINA'S SZECHWAN PROVINCE AND THEN FLOWN ON TO JAPAN.

THE PAPER ALSO NOTED, THE RADIO SAID, THAT THE FACT THAT APPROXIMATELY 100 B-29'S WERE USED IN SUCCESSIVE RAIDS IN JAPAN "INDICATES THE ENEMY HAS SEVERAL HUNDRED LARGE PLANES IN RESERVE FOR SUCH RAIDS."

Romania Joins Allies in War Against Nazis

Yarbrough AUG 23 1944

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 23 (AP) Romania, Adolf Hitler's most useful satellite, abandoned him last night and announced she was joining the Allies in the war against the Axis —a turnabout suggesting the imminent collapse of the whole blood-bathed Nazi empire.

NIGHT

Moscow immediately afterward reported that fighting had broken out between German and Romanian troops on the eastern front, with many Romanians slain by Nazi security forces as they sought to retreat before the gigantic Red army onslaught through Bessarabia and northeastern Romania towards Ploesti and the Danube.

The Daily Express reported it had recorded a German military broadcast saying that the Romanian Third army had already turned around and was fighting alongside the Russians.

The Russian advance already had broken through the last strong Romanian defenses. The nation had been under a steady Allied air bombardment.

Young King Mihai announced the capitulation and switch in a proclamation broadcast from Bucharest.

To Be Co-Belligerent

Indications were that Romania would be a co-belligerent, like Italy, rather than a full Ally, and that her main offensive intentions were against Hungary in the hope of recovering Transylvania.

The proclamation said "Romania has accepted armistice terms offered by the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States."

There was no official confirmation by any of the allies, but Britain already had approved Soviet terms in advance, and Prime Minister Churchill said on Aug. 2, "Russia has offered generous terms to Romania and I have no doubt they would be accepted with gratitude by the Romanian people if only the Romanian leaders had not a Prussian automatic pistol pressed closely against their breast or at the nape of their neck.

Antonescu Ousted

In desperation, Romania now evidently has chosen to defy the pistol, ousting her dictator-premier Ion Antonescu and his pro-German cabinet and, in King Mihai's words, taking her fate in her own hands.

(Washington officials said they knew of no negotiations being conducted and expressed some surprise at the Romanian announcement, although not inclined to doubt it.

(The Moscow radio, in a broadcast beamed to Germany, rebroadcast the Romanian armistice proclamation without comment within 40 minutes after it was issued, but later general Soviet broadcasts carried only the news item that Antonescu and his cabinet had fallen.

(The German radio, usually quick to react to world events, was silent concerning Romania, a possible indication that the Nazi regime had been caught unaware as it had been by Italy's similar action last Sept.. 8.)

The new Romanian cabinet headed by Gen. Konstantin Satanescu, made a brisk show of the sudden turnover, announcing that all concentration camps were being closed and their inmates freed and issuing amnesty decrees for political crimes since 1918 except in such cases as assassinations.

The new premier issued a proclamation declaring, "the dictatorial regime hitherto, by permanently violating the will of the country, has by its policy endangered Romania's existence. Today the dictatorship has been cast aside. The people reenter into their own rights. The regime which we shall follow will be a democratic one in which public freedom and the rights of citizens will be guaranteed and respected

"Our withdrawal from the war fought at the side of the Tripartite (Axis) powers and the cessation of hostilities against the Soviet Union are definitely intended to prevent certain and true national catastrophe. From today onwards, Romania considers the United Nations as friendly nations.

"Recognition by the governments of Moscow, London and Washington of the injustices to Romania by the Vienna award opens the possibility for Romanian armies at the side of Allied armies to liberate northern Transylvania from foreign occupation.

"Henceforth we mean to be masters of our destiny."

What Romania would be able to do next depended in large measure on the German army in Romania, and the extent of that army's reaction depended on its ability to cope with the Russian offensive which still was rolling ahead.

A proclamation by young King Mihai, read over the Bucharest radio, said all hostilities against the Red army as well as Romania's state of war with Britain and America would cease "from this moment."

Russian armies were stabbing into Romania to within 167 miles of Bucharest and threatening the Ploesti oil fields as the announcement went on the air.

Romania, the king said, will fight "at the side of the Allied army and with their help."

The King's proclamation indicated the terms offered Romania were help in routing the German forces from inside her borders and recovery of Transylvania from Hungary, which was given the province by Hitler in the Vienna award of August, 1940.

AUG 23 1944

"The United Nations have recognized the injustice of Vienna, under which Transylvania was torn from us," the King said. "At the side of the Allied army, and with their help we will cross the frontiers unjustly imposed upon us at Vienna."

Interpretation in London of this phase of the King's proclamation was that Romania would not be accepted as an ally, but as a co-belligerent in the category of Italy.

Part of the surprise in Romania's decision was that she beat Bulgaria to a withdrawal from the war.

Bulgaria Near Break

Bulgaria, first to quit Germany's lineup in the first World war, has been reported on the verge of a break with the Nazis for a week, but only Tuesday night her foreign minister, Parvan Draganov, appeared before the Bulgarian parliment and refused to take the plunge.

Romania's decision was bound to have a profound influence on other Balkan satellites in addition to immediately depriving Germany of the use of the rich Romanian oil fields.

Romania joined the Axis in November, 1940 and followed Germany into war against Russia on June 22, 1941. Six months later she entered a state of war with the United States and Britain.

Her collaboration with Germany —and the contribution of hundreds of thousands of troops in the fight against Russia—was done under the hand of Dictator Marshal Ion Antonescu.

His fate is now undisclosed, but his government passed into the hands of a new premier, Konstantin Sanatescu. The Bucharest radio said the Foreign Minister of the new cabinet was Grigore Niculescu-Buzesti and that cabinet posts had been given to George Bratianu and Juliu Maniu.

Transylvania is Prize

Aside from evading the Russian armies sweeping from the north and east, Romania's greatest stake in swinging over to the Allies at this time was the return of Transylvania. Great portions of that province, which lies just south of the Carpathian Mountains, were handed to Hungary by Hitler in 1940 as booty for Hungarian participation in the war on the Nazis' side.

The territory had been obtained by Romania from Hungary in the 1920 Treaty of Trianon. Its population of 2,370,000 includes more than 1,000,000 Romanians. Much of the land is forested and it also has fertile farms producing corn and wheat.

Two months before the Vienna pact giving Transylvania to Hungary, Romania had lost Bessarabia and parts of Bucovina and Moldavia to Russia through a Soviet ultimatum agreed to by Hitler.

These losses of territory led to the abdication of King Carol and the crowning of the youthful Michael, his son.

The Romanian Army suffered greatly at Stalingrad in 1942 and again in the Crimea this spring—when the Germans were reported to have left several Romanian divisions unsupported in the siege of Sevastopol, where they were hammered to bits.

The King's proclamation indicated that the Romanian Army's fighting now would be primarily aimed at forcing the Hungarians out of Transylvania, but any such action obviously would be a blow of direct bearing against Germany and on the side of the United Nations.

Following broadcast of the proclamation of King Mihai, the Bucharest radio listed the new cabinet of Premier Gen. Konstantin Sanatescu and gave a "statement of policy" of the new goverment which included two degrees providing amnesty for political crimes since 1918 and the closing of all concentration camps.

New Army Chief Named

These broadcasts, reported by the Federal Communications Commission, announced appointment of a new army chief of staff, Gen. Gheorghe Mihail, and a new Lord Mayor of Bucharest, Brig. Gen. Victor Dongorschi.

Besides Premier Sanatescu, the new cabinet includes the following ministers:

State—Juliu Maniu, leader of the Peasant party; George Bratianu, leader of the Liberal party; Lucretiu Patrascanu, Communist, and Constantin Petrescu, Socialist.

Foreign Affairs—Grigore Niculescu-Buzesti.

National Defense—Gen. Michael Popovici.

Interior—Gen. Aurel Aldea.

National Economy and Finance—Gen. Ion Potopeanu.

Labor and Public Health—Gen. Dr. Nicolae Marinescu.

Agriculture and Domains—Dimitrie Decutescu.

Public Works and Communications—Gen. Dimitrie Dumitru.

National Education—Gen. Ion Voiceanu.

Think Nazis Reduced Force

Military sources in London tonight declined to estimate the number of German divisions in Romania or the Balkans, but it was considered highly probable the Nazis has foreseen the Romanian surrender and had withdrawn large forces to more active fronts.

A corridor of 80 to 100 miles separates Romania and the Partisan Yugoslav forces of Marshal Tito. The Partisans have been fighting toward Romania recently.

Part of the surprise in Romania's decision was that she beat Bulgaria to a withdrawal from the war.

Text of Rumanian Proclama

AUG 23 1944

The text of the proclamation by King Michael of Rumania, surrendering for his country to the United Nations, as recorded by the British Ministry of Information and reported by The Associated Press, follows:

Rumanians! In the difficult hour of our country I have decided for the salvation of the fatherland on immediate cessation of hostilities with the United Nations and I call upon a Government of National Union to fulfill the determined will of the country to conclude peace with the United Nations.

Rumania has accepted armistice terms offered by the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States.

From this moment all hostilities against Soviet armies and the state of war with Great Britain and the United States will cease.

The United Nations have guaranteed the independence of Rumania. Anyone who opposes the decision we have taken and who takes justice in his own hands is an enemy of our nation.

I order the army and the whole nation to fight with all means and at the cost of any sacrifice against him.

All Rumanians must rally around the throne and the Government for the salvation of the fatherland. He who does not assist the Government and resists the will of the nation is a traitor to the country.

The United Nations have recognized the injustice of the Dictate of Vienna under which Transylvania was torn from us.

At the side of the Allied army and with their help we will cross the frontiers unjustly imposed upon us at Vienna.

An additional portion, as recorded by the Federal Communications Commission under poor radio reception conditions, said:

Rumanians! The dictatorship has ended.

Rumanians! The future of our country depends on the courage with which we will defend (it and its) independence against any attempt to prevent us from winning our rights by force. (Let us have) faith in the future of the new and free Rumania!

Romania's Statement Surprise In Washington

NIGHT AUG 23 1944

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP) — The Bucharest announcement that Allied peace terms have been accepted was met with some surprise today in Washington, where some officials said they knew of no negotiations being carried on at the moment.

There was no comment from the White House or the State Department.

Last spring Prince Barbu Stirbey of Romania went to Cairo and received Russian peace terms approved by the United States and Great Britain, but his Romanian Government never did anything about it.

It was believed here that King Mihai's announcement was meant to be a belated acceptance of last spring's unconditional - surrender dictate.

While it is not known precisely how many Germans are in Romania, Bucharest's public announcement of its decision seemed to indicate a belief that Germany could not pour in any additional troops to pull Romania back into the war.

Under the terms of the Moscow declaration, any armistice with Romania would have to be approved by the United States and Great Britain as well as Moscow before it could be formally signed.

YANK AND FRENCH TROOPS IN PARIS TO AID PATRIOTS

Gen. Le Clerc, French War Hero, Heads Troops Entering Capital.

DELIVERANCE HAILED

Aroused Citizens Force German Intruders to Sue for Armistice.

Galberg

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 24 — (AP) Paris — freed yesterday by its own people — was reported to have been occupied early today by the Second French Armored Division and some American units ordered into the city by Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley to seal the patriots' victory.

There still was no comment from Supreme Allied Headquarters on the liberation of the French capital, but from Paris, CBS reporter Charles Collingwood broadcast that Gen. Bradley decided to act when an armistice negotiated by the Germans with the French Forces of the Interior expired yesterday.

Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle, with American armies driving beyond Sens toward the German border, pointed out the American army could have occupied Paris at will during the last few days. But he said Paris was a side issue and Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's slashing spearheads had a more important task — chopping to pieces German forces.

Symbolically Brig. Gen. Jacques le Clerc, one of France's greatest heroes of the war, headed the troops entering Paris, Collingwood reported.

Bitter Street Fighting

Patriots liberated the capital from four years of bondage by beating down the Nazi garrison in street fighting as bloody as any the French revolution ever saw.

Immediate occupation had not been in Allied plans. It was supposed to wait while the main military weight was hurled against Evreux to pin down as much of the German Seventh army as possible along the Seine northwest of the Capital.

But the Germans were reported using the armistice to withdraw German forces which had been fighting west and south of Paris.

French men and women patriots fought in this new battle of Paris as their forefathers did in 1789 and the fury of their assault forced the German commander to sue for a truce.

With a great force of American armored troops poised in an assault arc almost halfway around the capital, 50,000 armed French patriots, aided by several hundred thousand citizens who wielded what arms they could find, defeated the Nazi occupation forces in a four-day battle ending last night.

The patriots occupied all public buildings and arrested all Vichy government representatives who did not flee, said a formal announcement signed by Lt. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior and newly-named Military Governor of Paris under Gen. de Gaulle.

Around the world — in London, New York, Buenos Aires, Algiers and scores of other cities — the release of the "City of Light" from the darkness of Nazi rule was hailed in ceremonies featuring the playing of "The Marseillaise," historic anthem of liberty, and the raising of the tri-color of the republic. Church bells were rung in London and many other cities of England.

Gen. Koenig was expected to go to Paris tomorrow with his entire London staff, and he may join Gen. de Gaulle there, but it was pointed out at Gen. Koenig's headquarters in London that no attempt would be made to move a full civilian governmental organization into Paris until the Germans are cleared out of the entire area and the danger of their return in force is passed.

The fact that the liberation of Paris was accomplished by the French, and announced by them rather than by Allied Supreme Headquarters, may have been part of Allied strategy to bolster French confidence and emphasize to the world the resurgence of France.

A press relations officer at Allied Supreme Headquarters said this evening that he had no official confirmation of the news of the liberation, but this presumably was simply because the city was freed from within. No doubt of the accuracy of the French announcement was implied.

An agreement which was to have been signed today between the British and the French for governing liberated France may now be signed in Paris in the near future, and a parallel agreement between the United States and the de Gaulle committee is expected also to be signed in the French capital, with Gen. Eisenhower representing the Americans and Gen. Koenig the French.

Gen. Koenig's announcement said the Germans were "defeated everywhere" in the French capital after street battles which began with a police strike and an order from the French Committee of National Liberation for a general insurrection.

Then, from Saturday through Tuesday, there came a mob battle surpassing anything Paris has known since the Battle of the Bastille. The core of the resistance was the Ile de la Cite, which was turned into "a fortress against which the German attacks broke," Gen. Koenig's special communique said.

Rail Strike Helped

A railway strike which tied up traffic in the whole Paris area helped, along with the police strike, in clearing the way for the French to wrest control of the city, French headquarters in London said. So determined were the employes to stop traffic that some of them lay full length across the rails.

Crack SS Elite Guard troops formed part of the Paris garrison, and these placed machine-guns at strategic intersections in a futile attempt to break up the massing of crowds.

As the outbreak started people were machine-gunned in the Boulevard Bonne Nouvelle, the Rue du Faubourg, Rue St. Denis and the Rue de Rivoli.

There was no word of the fate of the German force which the French caught in Paris, and it was expected to be several days before any estimate is made by the French on the number killed and captured. It was known the Germans had fled Paris by the thousands as the American armored pincers closed around the capital during the past few days. Allied airmen reported roads to the east jammed with Germans.

Today Paris, the first conquered Allied capital to be liberated, lived on enthusiasm, but French sources emphasized that tomorrow she will again be a city of increasing hunger.

The National government broadcast a promise to do all possible to alleviate any suffering, but pointed out that several days must pass before effective help arrives.

Fed by the Germans on the produce of Normandy, Paris has been on tight rations ever since the invasion cut that supply.

Gen. de Gaulle's government appealed to the whole population to see that the existing food stocks were preserved, and the populace was told by radio that authorities of the resistance movement would set up a food control to assure equitable distribution until the reorganization of transport makes a normal food supply possible.

The liberation of Paris ended a period of Nazi bondage begun June 14, 1940, when the German army marched through the capital's famed Boulevards in triumph. With France's capitulation a few days later, Paris entered a period of bewildered darkness.

Frenchmen were ordered off the streets after 9 a. m., daily, and the heavy-booted German soldiers swarmed through the city, buying silk stockings and perfume to send home, and eating and drinking with gusto in the once-gay cafes.

Then the French resistance moremement began to grow, and from 1941 on German occupation troops were frequently found slain in the streets or were killed in bomb explosions in public places.

With the entry of the United States in the war, with the strengthening AUG 23 1944 organization of the patriot armies, and with the turn of the tide of war against Germany, Frenchmen in the capital began looking forward with lighter hearts toward the new day of liberty finally announced today.

Patriot Forces Free Capital In 4-Day Battle; Marseille Is Captured By French Soldiers

Thousands of Armed and Unarmed Partisans Drive Germans From Streets of Paris---50,000 F. F. I. Lead Revolt---Yank Tanks Race North to Grenoble---Battle of Seine Becoming Rout for Nazis.

London, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Paris and Marseille—the two first cities of France—were wrested from German bondage today.

The capital fell to French Partisans after four days of street fighting, Gen. Charles de Gaulle's headquarters announced. Armed and unarmed thousands swept the Nazis from the streets of Paris where they had strutted more than four years.

In the south of France, French troops entered the great port of Marseille and occupied most of the city in the face of mild opposition from its German defenders.

(A public relations officer at General Eisenhower's invasion headquarters said early tonight the had received no confirmation of the liberation of Paris. This presumably was only because the capital was freed from within, rather than by the entry of Eisenhower's armed forces. No doubt on the accuracy of the French announcement was implied.)

50,000 Frenchmen

This time, the communique said, the fight was led by 50,000 organized French Forces of the Interior, bolstered by hundreds of thousands more who joined in with whatever weapons they could find.

The dramatic announcement touched off broadcasts to Frenchmen everywhere as the triumphant strains of "La Marseillaise" sounded again to the news of a French victory.

There was no word immediately that American troops had entered the city.

Public Buildings Seized

But the French said they had seized all public buildings, won complete control of the situation, and captured all the Vichy representatives who had not fled.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of the FFI and Military Governor of Paris, gave this official version of the deliverance of the capital:

"On Saturday, August 19, in the morning, the National Council of Resistance and the Paris Committee of Liberation in agreement with the national delegate, a member and representative of the provisional government of the French Republic, ordered general insurrection in Paris and the Parisian region

50,000 Armed Patriots

"The FFI (French Forces of the Interior), 50,000 strong, armed and supported by several hundred thousand unarmed patriots, went into action immediately.

"Yesterday, August 22, after four days of fighting the enemy had been defeated everywhere. The Patriots occupied all public buildings. Vichy representatives were arrested or have fled. So the people of Paris played a major part in the liberation of their capital.

"The Paris police, which was already on strike, took possession of the police prefecture and turned the Ile de la Cite into a fortress against which the Germans' attack broke.

"Long live France!"

Taken June 14, 1940

Paris, the city of light, was back in French hands just four years and 74 days from the time Adolf Hitler's troops marched in. German troops, then at the flood tide of conquest, entered June 14, 1940.

The city became the first continental capital of a full-fledged ally to be freed from German domination. Rome has been taken, but Italy started the war as an enemy and now is a cobelligerent.

De Gaulle conferred with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in France two days ago—presumably on details of civil-affairs control of the capital, which once more is the pride of all France.

Reaches Rennes

(The British radio reported today the head of the French Committee of National Liberation had arrived in Rennes, on the Brittany peninsula, after visiting Coutances, Avranches and a number of other liberated French cities.)

There was no announcement after the de Gaulle-Eisenhower conference. It seemed likely the French, who freed their capital, would be allowed to administer it.

There was no indication in the French communique as to what casualties had been inflicted on the German forces or how many had been captured. Allied airmen for two days have been reporting the Nazis pulling out of the city to the east over every road.

German Version

(The Germans did not immediately acknowledge any change in the status of Paris. A DNB broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission at 6.17 A. M. said "the situation in Paris has calmed down as the result of strict measures, but it cannot be said whether terrorist and irresponsible elements will not provoke unrest shortly.")

(A later German broadcast, recorded by FCC monitors, said:

("Paris has been reached by the enemy in the neighborhood of the southern suburbs along the Seine.")

Colonies Celebrate

The thousands of Frenchmen and women who struck down the invaders who had brought misery and despair to their homes rose from the underground of the Montmartre and Montparnasse. They struck from the east and from the west.

French colonies were quick to begin celebrating liberation of the capital of their homeland. An Algiers broadcast announced that Gen. Georges Catroux had ordered the display of the tri-color throughout Algeria and the ringing of all church bells. The liberation will be celebrated in Algiers at 6 P. M. by salvos of all the city's batteries and the blowing of sirens on all the city's buildings.

German Entry Recalled

Paris had been declared an open city several days before the Germans had reached it in the black days of 1940. German armor clanked into the stunned capital, roled past the Arc de Triomphe and down the famed Champs Elysees to the Place de la Concorde, and saw silent, deserted streets. Those citizens who remained in the city stayed indoors rather than look upon the degradation.

Confused, disorganized France, its vaunted military machine broken by the lightning German attack around the Maginot Line, and its faith in its generals and leaders broken, had no chance to fight for the capital. Even if the will had been there, there was none to organize it. A few days after Paris fell, the remainder of heartbroken, bewildered France capitulated.

Soldiers Like Locusts

German soldiers turned tourist swarmed like locusts over the city, buying up everything of value to consume or send home to Germany.

Before a year was out, however, Paris began to reawaken. On the walls the defiant words "Vive de Gaulle" began to appear. Sabotage harassed the Germans in factories feeding the Nazi war machine. Germans were being found mysteriously slain. Hostages were seized and curfews imposed, but the mute, deadly resistance went on.

After the United States entered the war, great things began to be accomplished by the Maquis in remote regions of France where the German garrisons were light, but a tight Gestapo grip was clamped on the capital to prevent outbreaks. Nevertheless, clandestine newspapers continued to appear; de Gaulle agents were sped on their missions, sabotage continued and plans for liberation became clearer each day.

Resistance Tide Grows

The tide of resistance grew hourly and swiftly. When the end finally came for the Germans, they had as little chance of keeping their stolen prize as the French four years before had of defending it.

Within the past month, as supplies from Normandy were cut by the Allied invasion and communications were rendered almost useless, severe shortages developed inside Paris and there were bread riots. Now that liberation has been accomplished, food will flow into the city.

A high-ranking Allied officer estimated 75,000 tons of food a month would be sent to the capital by rail, truck and barge. Huge stocks of food, medicine and clothing are waiting in Normandy for the relief of the city. Distribution will be made by the civil affairs branch of the Allied command.

Arms Obtained

The story of how the underground armed its great forces is still to be told in detail. Paris long was described by the French in London as the place where Partisans were largest in number and poorest in arms. But throughout years of occupation, the resistance movement added to the store of arms cached for the day of liberation. Weapons were stolen from Nazi supply depots, taken from slain German soldiers and stored until the supply could satisfy the need. These were small arms, easily hidden and easily moved in the event of German raids.

A heavy toll was taken of the Partisans in the long years of the stubborn resistance. London French estimated 12,000 Parisians were killed by the Germans before D-day and another 6,000 since. Between the armistice and D-day they believed, on the basis of underground reports, that 30,000 Parisians were arrested for political reasons, and that 349,000 were deported for forced labor.

Civil Government Plans

Now that liberation has come, arrangements are under way to restore French civil government to the capital. An agreement already drawn up may be signed within Paris itself in the near future by British and French. It probably will parallel the agreement between the United States and the de Gaulle organization, which will be signed in Paris with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower representing the Americans and General Koenig the French.

The fact that seizure of the city was completed and announced by the French may have been part of the plan to bolster French confidence and emphasize to the world the resurgence of France as a great nation.

At headquarters of Koenig, who also heads the French Forces of the Interior, it was said that no attempt would be made to move the full civilian governmental organization into the capital until the Germans are cleared from the whole Parisian area and the danger of a German return in force is passed.

Paris Problems Seen

De Gaulle is expected to bring the French Committee of National Liberation from Algiers to Paris as soon as military and economic conditions permit. He will start on the task of rehabilitating France as a great nation.

The freedom of Paris posed for the United States, Britain and their allies a thousand and one problems as different as they are welcome: Those of fuel and food, of restoring untilities, providing medical care and of returning the capital of 2,829,746 persons to normal.

Food for the hungry and supplies probably already are rolling toward the capital. General Eisenhower's headquarters disclosed

Koenig's Announcement

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 23—Maj. Gen. Joseph-Pierre Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior and military governor of Paris, gave this official version of the deliverance of the capital:

On the morning of Saturday, Aug. 19, the National Council of Resistance and the Paris Committee of Liberation, in agreement with the national delegate representing the Provisional Government of the French Republic, ordered a general insurrection in Paris and in the Parisian district.

The French Forces of the Interior, to the number of 50,000 armed men, supported by several hundred thousand unarmed patriots, went into action immediately. The Paris police, who had previously gone on strike, seized the police prefecture and the Ile de la Cité. They turned the Ile de la Cité into a bastion against which German attacks broke down.

Toward 8 P. M. yesterday, Aug. 22, after a four-day struggle, the enemy had been beaten everywhere and the patriots had occupied all public buildings. Representatives of Vichy were arrested or are in flight.

Thus the people of Paris have taken a prominent part in the liberation of the capital.

Long live France!

Koenig, FFI Head, Staff Slated To Go To Paris

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, military governor of Paris, is expected to go to the French capital tomorrow with his entire London staff and may join Gen. Charles de Gaulle yesterday that stocks were prepared.

Much Tension Eased

Much tension which has been building up for several months over the administration of French civil affairs during the period of liberation already has been eliminated by the decision of the United States and Britain to leave that responsibility to the de Gaulle group.

While the military has initial responsibility in such matters as providing food and medical care, these tasks ultimately may be taken over by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration headed by Herbert H. Lehman, of New York.

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, en route to liberated Paris, was reported by NBC to have arrived tonight at Laval, 145 miles southwest of the French capital, where he addressed several thousand French men and women gathered in front of the City Hall.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23—(AP) Herbert Clark, Blue network correspondent, radioed from somewhere in France tonight that 20,000 German troops had been or were being evacuated from Paris. The point of origin was censored.

ARGENTINES HOLD PARIS CELEBRATION

Buenos Aires, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—News of the liberation of Paris provoked a spontaneous demonstration today in the Plaza Francia where a French monument stands.

Several thousand persons thronged the plaza and almost buried the monument beneath flowers.

The crowd sang La Marseillaise, the Argentine national anthem and God Save the King. "Vivas" for France, England and the United States welled up.

The former socialist senator Alfredo Palacios, arrived — followed closely by policemen. He ascended the monument and made the only speech, which consisted of two sentences: "The hour of the fall of all dictatorships has arrived. Long live a free Argentina."

The crowd applauded vigorously and chanted: "Liberty! Liberty!" police reinforcements arrived in squad cars but refrained from interfering in the demonstration.

By CHARLES COLLINGWOOD

[Columbia Broadcasting System Correspondent]

Paris, Aug. 23 (AP—By Radio via London)—The Second French Armored Division entered Paris today after the Parisians arose as one man to beat down the German troops who had garrisoned the city.

It was the people of Paris who really won back their city.

The American army was occupied with the drive through Evreaux to the mouth of the Seine, after which it was planned to invest Paris.

Then yesterday, a Frenchman burst into Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's headquarters. He was the chief of the Forces of the Interior in Paris.

Armistice Concluded

He said he'd concluded an armistice with the German forces in Paris. The people of Paris had risen, and so hounded the Germans that the German commander requested an armistice. He wanted to withdraw troops from the road blocks west and south of Paris where they had been facing the Americans and pass them through the city.

[Herbert Clark, Blue network correspondent, radioed from somewhere in France last night that 20,000 Germans troops had been or were being evacuated from Paris. The point of origin was censored.]

The armistice was to expire at noon today.

Sensation Caused

This news caused a sensation in Bradley's headquarters because although we had known that rioting had been going on in Paris since Saturday, we had not known things had gone so far that the French had beaten the Germans.

The whole operation was geared to the complete encirclement of the Germans west of the Seine, but General Bradley decided we must go into Paris. It was short notice, for the troops had to be ready to enter at noon today. Bradley ordered the Second French Armored Division out of the line and told it to start moving east toward Paris.

[The Second Armored Division is part of Brig. Gen. Jacques LeClerc's French forces attached to the American Third Army.]

3,000 Tons Of Food Needed

On a moment's notice the whole machinery was set in motion to occupy the world's third largest city.

It is no mean responsibility. Paris is in desperate straits. It is estimated that she needs immediately 3,000 tons of food and 3,000 tons of coal. After that there must be huge and steady supply. But the decision had to be made, if only as a tribute to the tremendous fact that the French reconquered their own capital.

Every hand was raised against the enemy. For the first time in this war, the inhabitants of a city have wrested it from the enemy.

Paris would have fallen to our arms, but every American soldier in France would rather have had it this way.

Beacon Tells Mexico City

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 23 (AP).—The French colony in Mexico City made immediate preparations today to celebrate the liberation of Paris.

The news was flashed to the city by the newspaper "Excelsior," which turned on a large searchlight atop its roof at 5 a. m. (CST). Newspapers also issued extras.

Rome Telegraphs Congratulations

ROME, Aug. 23 (AP).—Italian Premier Ivanoe Bonomi telegraphed congratulations to General Charles de Gaulle on the liberation of Paris today, saying the Italian people "shares with you the most profound joy and emotion."

MARSEILLE FALLS TO FRENCH, YANKS DRIVE CONTINUES

Seventh Army Races Ahead, Captures Grenoble 140 Miles Inland.

TOULON DOOMED

Smash by Gen. Patch's Army Threatens to Bisect All France.

ROME, Aug. 23—(AP) Marseille, France's second city and greatest seaport, fell to the swift onslaught of French infantry and armor today as American forces swept 140 miles inland from the Mediterranean and captured Grenoble within less than 240 miles of a junction with Gen. Eisenhower's legions below liberated Paris.

Only eight days after the landings in southern France the inspired Poilus battered their way into the heart of Marseille against slight Nazi resistance and tonight were cleaning out pockets of last-ditch defenders.

Insures Supplies for Army

The unexpectedly easy capture of the great port insures the Seventh army of Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch an adequate flow of supplies and reinforcements for speedy continuation of their thrust toward northern France. Prior to the city's fall, other French troops had cut the last escape route for the German garrison along the coast to the west.

The encircled and doomed Nazi force in Toulon, big naval base 27 miles of Marseille, still was holding out tonight, but French troops had fought their way within a few hundred yards of the docks and the city's fall was expected any hour.

Matching the French victory in its spectacular quality was the dash of American forces into the big industrial city of Grenoble—a reckless drive that threatened to bisect France and trap every German soldier in the southern and western parts of the country.

American infantry and armor occupied Salon, 25 miles northwest of Marseille, and continued their advance with only slight opposition from the bewildered Nazis who claim they have been deserted by their air force.

Through French Alps

As the swift American column of armor, self-propelled guns and motorized infantry plunged almost unopposed through the French alps it appeared that the two Allied fronts would be joined much sooner than was originally thought possible—perhaps in a matter of days. Nazi resistance to the Allied Seventh army's smashing drive was officially described as "weak and disorganized." More than 17,000 prisoners had been taken.

80 Mile Advance

In their dramatic dash to Grenoble, an important communications center of about 100,000 population, Yank tanks and doughboys advanced at least 80 miles beyond their last reported position. Tonight they were less than 70 miles from the Swiss border near Geneva and virtually had severed communications between German forces in France and Italy.

Enroute to Grenoble the flying column captured scores of towns, including Digne, Sisteron, Aspres, Gap, St. Bonnet and L'Argentiere, the latter only 14 miles from the Italian border. Only at Digne, where it was held up for 13 hours, did the column encounter serious enemy resistance. There the Americans captured Maj. Gen. Hans Schubert, a German corps commander.

Patriots Active

Allied headquarters credited French patriot forces with "playing an effective support role" in the actual capture of Grenoble, long a hotbed of opposition to the Nazis. The city was the first one of importance to open its gates to Napoleon upon his triumphal return from exile on Elba 129 years ago.

From Grenoble the American spearhead—only a week after the landing on the beaches of southern France—was in position to strike 58 miles northwest to the great rail hub of Lyon and to throttle all enemy efforts to escape up the Rhone valley into northern France.

French forces battling their way in along the coast from the east occupied Hyeres and reached Le-Pradet, four miles from Toulon harbor.

17,000 Prisoners

As the bag of German prisoners scared past 17,000 and more continued to pour in by the hour, it was found necessary to establish a regular ferry service to Italy and Corsica to get them out of the way.

American troops pushing westward from captured Aix-en-Provence, 15 miles north of Marseille, advanced nine miles through Velaux. Yank spearheads following the Durance river westward were several miles beyond Cadenet and only 28 from Avignon on the Rhone river.

American and French squadrons of Thunderbolt fighter-bombers gave blazing support to Allied ground troops throughout southern France. Yank pilots destroyed or damaged at least 70 rail cars and two locomotives, while the French destroyed 27 enemy vehicles north of Marseille.

Allied battleships, cruisers and destroyers aided French infantry fighting into Toulon by pouring unremitting broadsides into enemy defenses, built by the Nazis from the ruins of the French fleet which was scuttled in Toulon harbor nearly two years ago.

Sid Feder, Associated Press war correspondent accompanying the American column which captured Grenoble, disclosed that this striking force was strongly supplied with self-propelled artillery that kept pace with tanks and infantry in the dash northward and quickly smashed each enemy attempt to check the advance.

He said that a "mighty artillery barrage" was laid on Nazi defenders of Dignan before that town was won on Sunday, with French Maquis taking a hand in the final house-to-house fighting. The bag of 500 prisoners taken there included 49 officers.

Nazi Forces Sealed Off

(A broadcast by Radio France at Algiers said Allied forces were less than 11 miles from the Italian frontier but there was no confirmation.)

At Grenoble the Americans were roughly only 70 airline miles from the Swiss frontier and for all practical purposes already had sealed off the Nazi forces in southern France from communication with the enemy in northwestern Italy.

The Americans also were in position, by striking westward, to cut off German units reported fleeing from the Mediterranean beachhead along the Rhone Valley—main route to northern France.

(An Associated Press dispatch from Geneva said French Forces of the Interior were reported attacking Lyon.)

Followed Napoleon's Route

Grenoble, the old capital of the province of Dauphine and the chief city of the department of l'Isere, has always been an active center of French patriot resistance. A hundred and twenty-nine years ago it was the first large city to open its gates to Napoleon Bonaparte on his return from Elba. It subsequently incurred the wrath of the Bourbons by celebrating the anniversary of that event.

The American column followed much the same route as Napoleon in spearing to Grenoble through the French Alps.

An Allied headquarters statement on the northward drive said "enemy resistance was spotty during the advance." Thirteen hours of house to house fighting occurred at Digne.

Supported by a mightly artillery barrage and aided in hand to hand fighting by Maquis, a frontline dispatch said, the Americans finally closed in on the town from two sides and cleared it out building by building.

The Nazis resisted stubbornly, hurling grenades from hiding places in buildings and harassing the attackers with small arms fire.

Among the batch of some 500 prisoners was Maj. Gen. Hans Shubert, civil affairs commander for

Allies Drive Into French Port

Rome, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Marseille, second city of France, fell to French troops today. Only small pockets of Germans remained tonight in the big southern seaport.

The prize port, a natural funnel to pour liberation armies into France, was occupied without much resistance even as Americans thrust 140 miles inland in a spectacular sweep, and entered the large industrial city of Grenoble.

The German garrison still is holding out at Toulon east of Marseille, but the Germans' land escape route has been cut off.

An American steel fist carried 140 miles north of Toulon in the deep plunge into Grenoble.

A swift American armored and motorized infantry column plunged into the city, long a hotbed of the French patriot movement, with French Forces of the Interior playing an effective support role, Allied Headquarters said.

This quick advance put Major-Gen. Alexander N. Patch's spearhead within less than 240 miles airline from the most southerly points officially announced as reached by American troops below Paris, and it appeared that the two Allied French fronts would be joined much sooner than originally thought possible.

Grenoble, fifty-eight miles southeast of Lyon and situated on a river leading directly to the Rhone Valley thirty miles to the west, is eighty miles or more beyond the last reported Allied positions in southern France. Lying in the French Alps, the city has a population of approximately 100,000 and is a rail center on the Paris-Lyon-Marseille route. It also commands access to important mountain passes in eastern France.

Towns taken by the Americans en route to Grenoble included Digne, Sisteron, Aspres, Gap, St. Bonnet and L'Argentiere, the latter thirty-five miles from the Italian border.

Allies Tighten Trap On Battered Germans

AUG 23 1944

Fighter Planes and Bombers Harass Remnants of Nazi Army as American Armor Hammers Ahead—Evreux on Lower Seine Captured by Yanks.

Boni

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Thursday, Aug. 24.—(AP) American armor hammered out fresh gains south and southwest of Paris today while to the northwest of the capital—now fully in control of French patriots—Americans and Canadians clamped a tightening stranglehold on remnants of the German army still below the river Seine.

Allied fighters and fighter bombers harried the Germans' frantic efforts to withdraw across the river by any possible means.

The latest advance south of Paris saw armored reconnaissance units drive more than 15 miles east of Sens while others passed through Corbeil and Melun, and still others gained positions between Orleans and Sens.

Evreux Captured

Chief prize in the drive on the lower reaches of the Seine was Evreux, which the Americans freed, while a parallel Yank advance neared Conches farther west. Resistance everywhere was light except where the Germans slowed the Canadian advance in the 45-by-30-mile pocket by blocking further bridgeheads across the Toques river.

(A Belgian communique said Belgian troops fighting beside the Allies had advanced 12 miles along the channel coast, overcoming stiff resistance as they fanned out above Deauville, but inflicting heavy losses on the Germans.)

"The main battle for France is already over," declared Associated Press correspondent Harold Boyle, who watched U. S. tanks drive 15 miles east of Sens to within 150 miles of the German border with no sign that the Germans were rallying for a stand.

Truckloads of prisoners streamed back in the wake of the American advance, but there was not a single smoldering enemy vehicle to indicate the enemy had put up a determined fight, said his dispatch, datelined "En Route to Berlin."

Only swarms of German warplanes fought against this peril to the German border.

Supreme headquarters lifted the cloak of secrecy only enough to report the thrust east of Sens, which is 65 miles southeast of Paris, and to report the tightening of the noose about tens of thousands of Germans in the Seine river loop northwest of Paris.

The Americans, driving from the south against these shattered remnants of the Seventh army, seized Evreux in a nine-mile advance. Evreux, one of the chief German antiaircraft centers, is 15 miles from the Seine and only 19 miles southwest of where the Germans are crossing the river at Elbeuf.

An ever greater weight of attack was being thrown into the battle southeast of Paris, with units of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army driving through Corbeil and Melun, 15 and 25 miles below the capital.

(The Nazi Transocean agency said 2,000,000 Allied and German troops were locked "in the invasion battle.")

The liberation of Paris was a feat performed by French patriots as American armies thrusting on both sides of the capital forced the bulk of enemy forces inside the city to flee.

Supreme Headquarters withheld from the World the progress of the American forces forging north across the Seine northwest of Paris in an attempt to pin the battered Seventh and 15th German armies against the sea.

But the speed with which these spearheads have been moving, and with the power of German arms sapped by the Normandy beatings, it was difficult to see how an enemy stand could be organized short of the Siegfried Line along Germany's western and southern frontiers.

Headquarters also had no comment on the deliverance of Paris.

Presumably American forces which drove through Rambouillet and Etampes, 27 and 30 miles respectively southwest of Paris, were engaging German forces fighting with their backs to a city now in hostile hands. Capture of Pithiviers, 48 miles south of Paris, also was confirmed.

American columns battled the enemy in the forest of Fontainebleau, 35 miles southeast of the capital. They were believed to be attacking forces by-passed in the Doughboy march on Sens along a front within 55 miles of Chateau-Thierry and the Marne battlefields of the first World war.

This was the only hint of enemy opposition in strength in this sector of a spreading front which now reaches from the sea at Trouville 170 miles southeastward to Sens. At last reports no opposition had been struck around Sens, indicating the enemy had once more left his flank exposed on the south, a neglect that spelled disaster in Normandy.

In the battle of the Seine loop northwest of Paris, Canadians on the west were charging ahead at a pace of from 10 to 16 miles a day, but Belgians and Dutch along the coast ran into heavy going after rolling to Trouville, 7 miles across the Seine estuary from Le Havre.

British and Americans on the south were constricting the area left to the tens of thousands of Germans still believed west of the almost uncridged river, by-passing cores of resistance and keeping up the pressure on Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's harried forces.

Artillery fire was bursting in the midst of the German forces below the Seine trying to get out of this pocket and escape northeast toward to rocket coast of France, now threatened on the south by the American bridgehead over the Seine northwest of Paris.

The area held by the Germans west of the Seine is deepest at a point from Laigle due north 48 miles to the coast, and along this front Canadians alone took 6,000 prisoners yesterday.

Canadians Take Lisieux

The Canadians stormed and captured the communications center of Lisieux, 17 miles in from the sea and about 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine.

At many points the Germans had abandoned the fierce rearguard fighting that had slowed the Allied sweep, and pilots said they appeared to be in a rout at some places, but a senior Canadian officer characterized the enemy retreat as orderly.

There were reports the Germans were preparing to make a stand along the Risle river which runs from 6 to 30 miles west of the Seine.

Streaming Across Seine

Germans still were streaming across the Seine, in rubber boats, in barges, in small steamers, in anything that floated, but were under bombardment from the skies.

The enemy air force tried to cover these crossings yesterday, but was attacked by Allied fighters who destroyed 36 German planes.

Allied air forces destroyed 600 enemy vehicles yesterday, including some tanks and locomotives.

Belgian and Dutch forces on the coast seized Villers-sur-Mer, Deauville and Trouville before they met builtup enemy positions and were locked in house-to-house fighting with rearguards. They also came under enemy guns at Le Havre across the estuary.

Orbec, 12 miles southeast of Lisieux, fell in a 16-mile advance and Canadians drove bridgeheads across the river of the same name. North of Lisieux, the Canadians captured L'Eveque and Gosset.

The British on the southwest end of the Seine pocket seized Laigle, 29 miles east of Argentan, and pressed on four miles northeast to Rugles.

The Americans on the south were operating north of the hamlet of St. Andre-de-L'Eure, little more than 50 miles southeast of the mouth of the Seine.

Verneuil Captured

On a line running east from Argentan to the Seine, the Americans captured Verneuil, 13 miles east of British-held Laigle, and thrust north from Verneuil. They also were in contact with Germans south of Breteuil, 17 miles southwest of Evreux.

From the latest supreme headquarters reports, the outline of the Seine pocket is now about as follows:

From Trouville south to Lisieux and Orbec, southwest to Le Sap, southeast to Rugles, southwest to Laigle, east through Verneuil and on northeastward below Evreux to the Seine around Vernon.

The battle of the Argentan pocket was ended, prisoners in cages totaled between 40,000 and 50,000 and uncounted enemy dead awaited burial in the fields and hills littered with the debris of battle.

German Flight Called Rout

Aug. 24 (AP)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 23 (AP)—Allied columns hammered in a tightening trap today on Germans falling back in a "rout" on the steel-swept lower Seine and speared deep below Paris in menacing new drives only 160 miles from the German border.

One United States armored column plunged beyond Sens, 58 miles southeast of Paris. It stood but 160 miles from the Reich's frontier.

Between Sens and Paris, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army was operating in woods near Fontainebleau. In this sector the Americans had thrown a bridgehead over the upper Seine.

Canadian and British troops scored advances of 10 to 15 miles in the chase of the battered German Seventh Army toward the lower Seine from the disastrous Falaise trap. On the coast Canadians battled some seven miles across the Seine estuary from Le Havre. Germans in that port lobbed shells across the water.

Evreux, Vernon Threatened

United States units hit down the river toward the sea, bringing in the eastern jaw of the pincers. They menaced Evreux and Vernon about 50 miles from the Seine's mouth.

Allied airmen declared the German retreat had appearances of a rout. By ferry and rubber boats, the enemy attempted to escape across the Seine at about 30 points, under a hail of bullets and cannon shells from low-swooping Allied planes.

Supreme headquarters declared 40,000 to 50,000 Germans had been captured in the Falaise pocket, with the Nazi dead still uncounted.

Bridgehead "Liquidated"

(One Berlin broadcast said the United States bridgehead across the lower Seine—presumably referring to the Mantes area 25 miles northwest of Paris—had been liquidated in a German counter-attack.

(The Germans reported fighting south of Paris, and said the "20th American Army Corps" was striking toward Nemours and Montereau, both about 40 miles southeast of the capital.)

Supreme headquarters this evening had no confirmation of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's announcement that Paris had been liberated, with its own citizens rising to expel the enemy.

City Outflanked

The city had been outflanked by American bridgeheads across the Seine to the northwest and southeast. Some radio reports, which were not confirmed at supreme headquarters, already placed American tanks at Meaux, less than 25 miles from Chateau-Thierry. If true, this report meant the Americans already were fighting on battlefields where other Yanks won undying fame in the first World War.

The new Allied trap of Field Marshal General Guenther von Kluge's riddled forces along the left bank of the Seine appeared to be closing on all sides as the Germans gave up all attempt at an organized rearguard action.

Allied planes were expected to deliver still more punishment at the Seine crossing as the weather showed signs of clearing.

AUG 24 1944

600 Vehicles Out

Six hundred German tanks, vehicles and locomotives fell before the guns and bombs of Allied planes, supreme headquarters said, while a belated German air force attempt to give fleeing Nazi ground troops cover resulted in the destruction of 37 enemy aircraft.

Driving up the coast toward the mouth of the Seine and the great port of Le Havre, Dutch and Belgian units took the famous resort cities of Trouville, Villers-sur-Mer and Deauville.

Canadian units made at least three crossings of the Touques river farther inland, the dispatch reported.

Seven miles southeast of Deauville the Allies took Pont-l'Eveque. The British and Canadian army lines squeezed forward, engulfing the important road hub of Lisieux, 16 miles southeast of Deauville. At Trouville the Allies were at the mouth of the Seine and as far inland as Lisieux they were all the way from 10 to 30 miles from the lower reaches of the river. In the center of the front Laigle, 15 miles east of recently fallen Gace, also was taken.

The whole German area south of the river was contracting rapidly. There were indications that all German resistance there would be wiped out within the next 48 to 60 hours.

Another German corps commander, Major General Elfelzt, was taken by Allied troops. In general the number of enemy officers captured in relation to the total bag of prisoners has been small, indicating that the officers were using the best means to flee the trap and were abandoning their troops.

The Argentan pocket now is just a battlefield of torn German equipment and thousands of corpses. It will probably be several days before burial parties can cover the area and get an accurate count of the German dead and any sort of list of the high officers killed in the deluge of Allied bombs and artillery fire.

the entire Lower Alps region, and 48 other officers. Several German hospital nurses also were taken.

Battle Rages In Toulon

On the Mediterranean coast a bitter battle still raged in encircled Toulon, French armor and infantry had pushed virtually into the outskirts of Marseille and the French-occupied Hyeres, east of Toulon.

The Allied command announced that the total number of prisoners taken since the landings had risen to more than 17,000.

Inside Toulon French troops yesterday blazed their way to points halfway between the railway tracks which bisect the city. The naval arsenal was half a mile away and the docks only a few hundred yards.

Three Miles From Marseille

The desperate defenders, trying to emulate the Nazi last-ditch fights in Cherbourg and St. Malo, fought from well-prepared positions with support of heavy coastal guns and depressed anti-aircraft guns. French forces battling their way from the east reached Le Pradet, four miles from Toulon harbor.

Encirclement of Marseille continued on a broad front, with Americans last reported only a dozen miles short of closing the gap on the west. French forces attacking frontally fought forward to three miles from the city's outskirts. American columns were fighting three miles from the Etang de Berre, a virtually landlocked body of water northwest of the city.

In the course of the Marseille encircling movement, French forces pushed on to high ground northeast of the city.

Yanks Gain Nine Miles

A dispatch from Associated Press War Correspondent Edward Kennedy said the main German resistance in the area was on another high ridge dominating approach roads from the east. Kennedy said haze and smoke rising from the harbor indicated the Germans were demolishing installations there.

American troops rolling westward from Aix-en-Provence, 15 miles north of Marseille, passed through Velaux in a nine-mile gain. Another column was beyond Euilles, northwest of Aix.

In a march down the Durance valley on both sides of the river of the same name, American spearheads were several miles beyond Cadenet and only 28 from Avignon, on the Rhone river.

ALLIED CAMPAIGN NEARS BORDEAUX

AUG 23 1944

Reinforcements Landed for Americans and French Attacking Seaport.

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 23.—(AP) American and French forces, reinforced by troops landed last night from the sea, were reported by French authorities at Hendaye to be pushing steadily toward Bordeaux from both sides tonight.

Frontline messages said Americans had reached Libourne, on the Dordogne river 15 miles northeast of the great Atlantic port of Bordeaux, which is the last center of German resistance in southwestern France.

French military authorities at Hendaye, French border town, said 800 French commandos were among Allied forces that landed last night south of Arcachon, below Bordeaux. They said the French landed from a French destroyer. Exact size and composition of the force were not known here but border reports said it was mostly American.

Escape Cut Off

The French at Hendaye said aerial reconnaissance indicated the Germans had given up previous attempts to organize an armored column and fight their way northward to the Reich, and now appeared to be preparing to make some sort of stand at Bordeaux.

The Allied naval vessels that landed the troops south of Arcachon continued to aid them by pouring shells into Nazi camps as they steamed along the coast.

There also was considerable Allied air activity over the area.

Hendaye, which donned a gala dress for its liberation yesterday, simply continued the celebration without interruption tonight in honor of the freeing of Paris.

The entire region south of Bayonne, meanwhile, began to assume a near normal appearance.

French civil officials worked swiftly to bring order out of the chaos left by the sudden departure of the Germans.

The regular rationing system was continued. Police and fire departments stood ready to function if needed. The citizens gave representatives of the French Committee of National Liberation every assistance in helping to speed the return to normalcy.

Bombing Heard in Spain.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—The sound of distant bombing and cannonading in southwestern France could be clearly heard today at the Spanish frontier, but a heavy fog masked all other signs of naval or military activity.

French military officials who announced an Allied landing last night in the Arcachon area southwest of Bordeaux declined to give any information on the situation there.

Border reports said that French forces continued to round up small parties of Germans.

Bordeaux Landing Is Reported

London, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—A third French invasion landing, striking into southwestern France near Bordeaux, was reported today from the Spanish frontier. French military authorities at Hendaye, France, said that the landing was begun last night under cover of a naval and aerial bombardment.

This report was cabled from the Spanish border by Charles S. Foltz, chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Madrid, who crossed the border into southern France after the Germans had evacuated frontier posts.

Twelve hours after Mr. Foltz's report was received, the Berlin radio said that a "small force" was put ashore near St. Jean de Luz, which is six miles from the Spanish frontier, lying between Hendaye and Biarritz.

[A Stockholm dispatch said that the Berlin correspondent of Aftonbladet had cabled that reports of a new Allied landing in the Bordeaux area were described in Berlin as "probably correct."]

The Hendaye officials said that the operation was co-ordinating with a ground attack by American and French forces, which effected a junction at noon yesterday at the outskirts of Bordeaux, closing in on that harbor city by inland routes.

Nazis Claim a Repulse.

There was no confirmation of any of the reports from Supreme Allied Headquarters.

The German account claimed that attempts to reinforce the landing party under the protection of naval guns were driven back by Nazi coastal batteries. St. Jean de Luz is 110 miles south of Bordeaux. It is 350 miles west of Marseille, the Mediterranean port besieged in the rapidly developing invasion of southern France.

Spanish advices said that American motorized columns had driven down from a crossing of the Loire River at Nantes in a 170-mile advance to Bordeaux, with French resistance forces striking up to the great port from the border of Spain, forming a junction on Bordeaux's outskirts.

A new landing could put a squeeze upon all of southwestern France, reportedly lightly garrisoned by the Germans, with French Partisans already seizing town after town. Inland drives could link up with the western invasion forces of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, and the southern army of Gen. Sir Henry M. Wilson.

Says Blois Is Liberated.

The Morocco radio said the Partisans had liberated Blois on the Loire River, 100 miles south of Paris, an action which would give the Allies a firm hold on virtually all the big Loire cities from the sea to the capital.

It also said that Carcassone, forty miles in from the Mediterranean and 150 miles west of Marseille, had been set free.

Hendaye officials said that Allied planes had paved the way for the landing with a low level attack and that Allied warships had poured shells into Bordeaux for more than an hour.

The American troops participating in the assault from the landward side of the city were said to have driven southward from the Loire River, 170 miles to the north, while the French were described as a well armed division of volunteers which left Hendaye yesterday.

Explosion Heard.

Mr. Foltz, who filed his dispatch through Spain after returning to the border, said explosions which sounded like an intense aerial and naval bombardment in the Bordeaux area were clearly audible in the Irun-Hendaye frontier region. Just before the blasts were heard, he said ,a single plane dropped flares at intervals along the Spanish frontier, apparently to mark the border.

In response to queries concerning the reported landing a spokesman at Allied Supreme Headquarters said the French announcement was "outside our province" and declined further comment. The war Department Public Relations Office in Washington said it had no information on a new landing.

Luftwaffe Revives To Aid Retreating German Armies

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—German troops crowded back against the Seine river were bombarded today by United States Ninth Air Force Marauders and escorting RAF Spitfires with 1,000,000 leaflets urging them to surrender.

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—Sky battles raged from northern France to Vienna today as the resurgent German air force fought to protect their airfields and routes of their retreating armies.

Big bombers of the Allied Mediterranean air force, struck the Markersdorf airdrome, 35 miles west of Vienna, in the second consecutive raid on the Vienna area, fighting through to their targets against swarms of enemy fighters.

[The German radio said today that American bombers from Italy had attacked the Vienna area and that air combats developed over the near-by aircraft center of Wiener Neustadt.]

Nazis Lose 37 Fighters

The Germans suffered a heavy blow yesterday when they sent 100 fighters into the center of Allied air strength over the Seine northwest of Paris, and 37 of these planes were destroyed. Fifty-seven other planes were lost on the Mediterranean front.

[The Berlin radio said strong aerial formations were sent against American ferry positions along a 13-mile stretch of the Seine between Montes and Vernon today and claimed a number of rubber boats and pontoons were destroyed.]

1,400 Sorties Flown

Under clearing skies, approximately 150 Thunderbolts were sent into the area north of Paris late today, bombing and shooting up railway yards, canal barges and motor vehicles of the withdrawing Germans.

About 20 barges were reported riddled, 34 vehicles were destroyed, and numerous railway cars were knocked out.

Fighter bombers hit railway yards east of Cambrai, southeast of Glisy and south of Lille.

The Allied communique said 1,400 sorties were flown yesterday as weather lifted across the Channel and 600 tanks, locomotives, railway cars and vehicles were smashed along the Seine.

Mediterranean air forces continued to give close support to the southern France invasion armies, and in all operations, which included new sweeps against the Balkans, Allied losses were 45 planes.

It was announced that the Balkan air force, in a spectacular operation yesterday, evacuated more than 900 wounded soldiers of Marshal Tito's Yugoslav forces and a number of British and American flyers who had bailed out over Yugoslavia, without losing a plane or a passenger.

Flyers Smash 600 Nazi Vehicles

London, Aug. 23 (AP) — Allied aerial forces resumed their assaults upon the fleeing Germans in northern France as the weather showed signs of clearing today, and headquarters announced that they had smashed 600 tanks, locomotives, railway cars and other vehicles in sweeps from the Seine mouth to south of Paris in the past 24 hours.

The Germans were reported in a rout, attempting to cross the Seine in 30 places west of Paris in a motley fleet of craft which included many callapsible rubber boats.

Danube Region Raided

The German radio, meanwhile, announced that for the third straight day Allied Mediterranean-based bombers and fighters were attacking targets in the Danube region.

From their northern bases, the Allied air forces yesterday flew 1,400 sorties — only about one-eighth of their D-day record but much better than the previous day, when the weather stopped all flying.

The battered German air force threw 100 or more planes into the battle area. Thirty-one were shot down and six more were destroyed on the ground against a loss of two Allied planes reported so far.

Both American and British planes crossed the sunny Channel in waves in the early afternoon to join other air fleets based in France in hammering the German paths of retreat.

PLANNING TO SEND AIR FORCE TO REICH

London, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Allied air leaders were reported today to be planning an occupation air force, possibly of 15,000 bombers and fighters to work with ground troops, which will be sent into Germany to preserve order when the Reich capitulates.

Most indications are that for ground operation purposes Germany will be divided into three spheres of influence, controlled respectively by the United States, Britain and Russia.

On the air side, a joint, combined setup without separate spheres of influence is believed likely because the air distances in Germany are small and because pooling of the three nations' differing air resources probably would be more advantageous. On this basis, America and Britain might provide many heavy bombers, with Russia furnishing a large part of the fighter strength.

There is no precedent for the establishment of a large occupation air force. At the end of the first world war a few squadrons of observation planes were put in Germany for a short while to assist the ground troops, but since then the airplane has become a major weapon and hence a vital factor in preserving post-war order.

VASLUI CAPTURED IN RED'S DRIVE

Soviet Army 140 Miles from Ploesti Oil Fields—Many Towns Freed.

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 24 — (AP) The two-fisted Soviet offensive that knocked Romania out of the war roared through its fourth day yesterday, capturing Vaslui, 140 miles northeast of the Ploesti oil center and toppling the two big Bessarabian bastions of Tighina and Cetatea-Alba on the west bank of the Dnestr, and more than 400 other towns.

Disregarding developments on the political front, at least for the present, the Second and Third Ukrainian armies deepened to as much as 60 miles the holes they have ripped in the German - Romanian defenses and advanced within 167 miles of the capital city of Bucharest.

Romania still was garrisoned with thousands of German troops, and the Russians were likely to continue their lightning campaign to drive the Nazis entirely out of the country, regardless of what Romanian troops chose to do.

The Romanians were attempting to retreat, and fighting the Germans in doing so, an early morning supplement to the Russian communique said. Already large numbers of Romanian officers and men have been slain by the Germans who are trying to bar their retirement, Moscow said, even as the Soviet advance continued.

While this campaign was bearing its first great fruits in Romanian surrender, the First Ukrainian army of Marshal Ivan S. Konev in southern Poland lashed out westward and seized the city of Debica, a large aircraft industry center and communications point 64 miles east of Krakow and 19 miles east of Tarnow, next probable objective of the offensive.

Konev's drive swept up more than 70 towns between Debica and Rzeezow to the east.

Continue Offensives

The flowering new offensive northeast of Warsaw advanced the Russians to within eight miles of the formidable Nazi fortress of Lomza, 20 miles below the East Prussian border, and freed another 80 towns, the Russians announced.

The Germans counterattacked from the Warsaw suburb of Praga, on the left flank of the Russian operations, but the Soviet communique said they were driven off with sharp losses.

Other German counterattacks were hurled repeatedly in Latvia, where they were trying to establish a workable communication line with the two Nazi armies still semi-isolated in the north Baltic states. The Russians said they not only beat off the German assaults but succeeded in improving their own positions.

30. 24— 18229

They were silent concerning a German broadcast which said Russian forces had reached "the beaches of Riga," and the Germans themselves did not explain this apparently inconsistent report.

The plight of the German armies in the Baltic states became increasingly grave, despite the narrow escape corridor to East Prussia, as the Red armies in the north thrust to within four miles south of Tartu, Estonian railway hub and key point the German communications.

It was the Romanian front, however, that held the spotlight.

Linked with the land drive was a new series of air attacks on Romanian Black Sea ports, which the Russians said sank a total of eight ships, an auxiliary cruiser, a transport and a patrol cutter at Constanta, a transport, two barges and a cutter at Sulina and a motor ship at Valkov.

Premier Stalin announced the latest successes in two orders of the day addressed to the 2d and 3d Ukrainian Armies, teammates in drives heading toward the Danube and the German "breadbasket" and oil reserves.

Fall of Vaslui to the 2d Army under General Rodion Y. Malinovsky marked another giant stride forward in the swift overwhelming of northeastern Romania which began Sunday. The city, midway between the Pruit and Siret Rivers, is on the main railway from captured Iasi to Galati.

General Feodor Tolbukhin's 3d Army completely by-passed Tetatea-Alba and Tighina in its first rush deep into Bessarabia, the territory which Romania ceded to Russia in 1940 and then took back in 1941, but which Russia still considers part of the Soviet Union.

Today both fortresses fell. Tighina's alternate name, Bender, indicates the town's military value, being a Turkish word for "gate," after the fortress built there by the Turks in 1558.

Located On Lagoon

Ceteatea-Alba, also known as Akkerman and as Belogorod-Dnestrovsky (white city on the Dnestr), lies on the Dnestr river lagoon a dozen miles from the Black Sea and has been an important fortress and port since Greek colonial days. It is but 60 miles from the Danube river mouth which is one of the apparent Russian goals.

To seize it, specially trained Third Ukrainian Front troops ferried across the upper reaches of the lagoon in motor boats.

Moscow dispatches suggested that the two armies were aiming at a junction around Galati, in the triangle where the Siret and Prut flow into the Danube.

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—Russian troops have reached the beaches of Riga, Latvian seaport and capital, the Berlin radio reported today in an official DNB dispatch.

Riga, largest city in the Baltic States with 393,000 population, has been virtually besieged for a month or more.

Russians pushed a ten-mile wide corridor to the Baltic 25 miles west of Riga some weeks ago, but on Monday the Germans said the corridor had been snapped and communications reestablished with the German 16th and 18th armies, estimated to number up to 30 divisions of perhaps 300,000 men.

Steady Pressure

Four Russian army groups cleaning up Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have been pressing upon Riga for weeks.

Early this week, Red columns were reported within 18 to 20 miles south, 55 miles east and southeast.

If the Riga beaches have been reached, another trap has been sprung on the bulk of German troops still in the Baltic States.

New Red Offensive

Moscow, Aug. 23 (AP)—A new Red offensive, probably designed to knock Romania out of the war and break Hitler's grip on the Balkans, smashed forward today on a 150-mile front beyond Iasi to within 180 miles of Bucharest and 155 of the great Ploesti oil center.

Advancing over the bodies of 25,000 Germans slain in three violent days, while 12,665 others trudged back to prison cages, Russians under Generals Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Fedor I. Tolbukhin drove to within 51 miles of the mouth of the Danube.

German shock troops tried to stiffen Romanian divisions as Russian tanks rolled at least ten miles south of Iasi.

Tolbukin's drive through Bessarabia headed cross country for a junction with Malinovsky in the Galati Gap, the capture of which would make much of the Balkan area untenable for the enemy. Advances ranged to 44 miles. The Bessarabian capital of Chisinau was left trapped in a deep pocket on the Dnestr.

In northern Poland, the Russians gradually were outflanking Warsaw and splitting German forces between that besieged Polish capital and East Prussia. The Russians moved 14 miles southeast of Lomza, communications hub.

German attempts to salvage her Baltic positions brought new tank attacks in the direction of Jelgava, which controls road and rail routes in Latvia.

Peace Talk Booms

As the Red drive into Romania went through its fourth day, Bucharest was reported in panic with many of Premier Antonescu's formerly fanatical supporters openly discussing the chances of suing for peace. Each mile the Reds advanced strengthened peace tremors in Bulgaria, too, and gave new hope to Yugoslavia and Greece.

Romania, besides being Germany's greatest oil reservoir, is one of her largest breadbaskets.

Red Star said Iasi's many blocks of trim stone buildings on a hillside above the Prut generally were intact and the "Soviet blow was so swift the Germans and Romanians could not evacuate their wounded and left 147 cars of munitions and food in the rail yards."

ROBOTS COME OVER IN STEADY BARRAGE

Germans Appear to Be Trying to Use Up Supply Before We Overrun Launching Sites

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP)—The Germans released a stream of flying explosives at southern England in a dawn barrage today, as if trying to use up their stock of buzz-bombs before launching sites are overrun by the drive of the Allied armies, but improved Channel weather and intensified anti-aircraft defenses brought a lull later in the day.

As death and destruction mounted, Britain took heart in the hope that the present launching spots across the channel would be captured, but even so, precautions were taken to reduce the heavy casualty lists. The Ministry of Health set up a plan for the evacuation of 800 expectant mothers weekly from London.

Grimy, weary workers probed the ruins of a southern England woodshop demolished by a direct hit that brought death to many women employes. Hours after the explosion, rescuers still were on the job, but there was little hope survivors would be found.

But at times such labor showed results. Rescue squads heard a faint "tap, tap, tap" in another pile of rubble that had been an apartment house. They tunneled through the crushed masonry and brought out nine persons alive, among them a 3-year-old girl.

In the dawn attack, flying bombs darted over so thickly that gunners had no respite. Clouds of smoke over the sea and explosions in the air were signs that a number of the bombs had been stopped.

American Officer Killed

A number of casualties, including some deaths, were reported, mostly from bombs striking residential sections. Bomb shelters survived the bombardment. An American Army officer awaiting a bus was killed.

Sir Max Beerbohm, writer and cartoonist, and his wife had a narrow escape recently when a robot bomb blasted the cottage where they were staying. The dwelling was wrecked. All windows were shattered and the roof was torn off, but the Beerbohms escaped without a scratch. The bomb landed only a few yards away from the home.

Worst Flying Bomb Raid

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—South England today suffered its heaviest dawn barrage of flying bombs yet, as Allied armies beat toward the launching platforms in Pas-de-Calais, beyond the Seine.

The robots came so fast that gunners had no respite in throwing up a terrific curtain of ground fire. Clouds of smoke over the sea indicated the number of bombs brought down in the Channel. Others were heard exploding aloft.

The anti-aircraft fire was the heaviest yet heard—a continuous roar along the coast.

Number Of Casualties

One buzzbomb after being hit shot upward above a town, leaving a trail of smoke, then dived inland in a wide circle before crashing.

A number of casualties, including some deaths, were reported, mostly from bombs striking residential sections. Bomb shelters survived the bombardment.

An American army officer awaiting a bus was killed.

In one district where tenements were blasted the women's volunteer service established relief offices in a saloon and served tea in tankards. Red Cross boxes from the United States helped bring comfort.

Entire Lyon Area Is Taken By F. F. I.

London, Aug. 23 (AP) — French resistance forces were reported to have taken the entire Lyon region and the city of Perpignan from the German occupying forces today in fighting that raged along the entire Spanish frontier area and against German pockets throughout the whole of France.

A recapitulation showed that the Allied armies and French Forces of the Interior had liberated roughly one third of France—212,569 square miles—as the last vestige of the Vichy Government of Pierre Laval disappeared as a political force.

Radio France at Algiers reported the liberation of the Lyon region and said that three Allied planes had already landed at Perpignan to establish contact with the F. F. I.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig's headquarters announced the F. F. I. killed 475 Germans and took prisoners in the liberation of Haute Savoie.

Paul Morand, Vichy Ambassador to Switzerland, said he had lost contact with Marshal Henri Petain and Pierre Laval and told the Swiss Government he considered "his functions terminated."

Swiss Break With Vichy

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—Switzerland broke off diplomatic relations with the Vichy Government today, asserting Marshal Henri Philippe Petain no longer considered himself chief of state.

An announcement of the Swiss radio said: "The Swiss Federal Council, having taken note of Petain's statement that he had been taken forcibly from Vichy and no longer considered himself chief of state, has broken off diplomatic representation with the Petain Laval government."

Paris Radio Still Silent

Nazis Last Used It to Send Home Programs; F. F. I. Has Limoges

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP).—The Paris radio, which blacked out several days ago, still was silent tonight. The Germans last used two of the Paris wavelengths to send German home and overseas programs.

[The Radio at Limoges in central France went on the air Wednesday with an announcement it now was a station of the French Forces of the Interior, the Federal Communications Commission reported.]

Marshal Petain Urges French People To Unite

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—The Swiss radio said tonight that Marshal Henri Petain in a letter to the French people had called upon them to rally around leaders who would give France rebirth.

The broadcast quoted the letter as saying: "For you, like me, there is only one France—that of our ancestors. Therefore I again entreat you to unite. Unite around those who give you the guarantee to lead you on the way of honor and order. These should lead France to renovation."

[Petain was reported yesterday to have been arrested by the Gestapo at Vichy and taken to Belfort on the Swiss-French border.]

PETAIN REPORTED HELD AT BELFORT

London, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Marshal Petain, 88-year-old Chief of State of the Vichy government, was reported today to be a virtual prisoner of the Germans at Belfort, where he was taken by Gestapo agents who spirited him from Vichy Sunday.

Advices from the French-Swiss border said that Petain was unceremoniously carried away by the Germans with other members of his government, apparently as a result of his refusal to accompany Pierre Laval to the new puppet government seat.

Laval also was said to be a virtual prisoner of the Nazis at Belfort, a French city about twenty-five miles from Basel, Switzerland, and an equal distance from Germany.

Marshal Petain was reported to have reached Belfort Monday afternoon. An earlier report had said that he was being held at Wiesbaden, Germany.

German 7th Army Chief Wounded

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—Col. Gen. Paul Hausser, commander of the German Seventh Army, has been wounded in Normandy, the Berlin radio said tonight.

Hausser, under the over-all command of Field Marshal General Guenther von Kluge, led the army which was battered heavily in the Falaise pocket and now is falling back upon the lower Seine, menaced with a new envelopment.

Berlin said Hausser was wounded in fighting in the Dives river area. The river flows east of Falaise and southeast of Caen.

Nazis Praise Red Methods

Says Bolshevism Must No Longer Be "Untouchable"

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP).—In a frantic effort to whip the weary Germans into last-ditch mobilization, the Nazis are beginning to point to Russian success in organizing the strength of their whole population as a model to be followed.

Urging the utmost vigor in carrying out drastic mobilization decrees, "Das Schwaze Korps," Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler's weekly, today called for an "end to the attitude which looks upon Bolshevism as something untouchable."

The Nazis "differ from the Bolsheviks in race and blood," the publication said, "but we do not need to differ from Bolshevik methods. Any method of winning the war for us is the right method. It is up to us to see that only the effect is Bolshevik, but the origin German."

Bulgaria's Efforts to Quit War Find Both Sides Cool

Allies Reported Insisting Upon Unconditional Surrender

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP).—Bulgaria's efforts to get out of the war before Germay collapses received a cold reception today from belligerents on both sides.

Authoritative British sources termed Foreign Minister Parvah Draganov's peace speech yesterday, in which he insisted that his country's declaration of war had been a mistake, a rather silly show, and in other Allied quarters the Sofia government's attitude was likened to that of a man trying to sell something he no longer owned.

In Germany, where Bulgarian regrets for the error of declaring war on Great Britain and the United States could only mean recognition that Adolf Hitler's war is lost, a Foreign Office spokesman said he did not consider it necessary to express German reaction to Draganov's personal views.

Competent sources said the Bulgarians already have been told by Britain, Russia and the United States that it is too late to drive a bargain for peace, and that Bulgaria must surrender unconditionally, expell all Germans and withdraw troops from non-Bulgarian areas received as a gift from Hitler at the expense of Greece and Yugoslavia.

No Conditions, Allied Stand

All available information indicates that peace talks reported to have been conducted in Turkey between Bulgarian and Allied representatives led up to only one point on which Britain and the United States would agree to an armistice — unconditional surrender.

Foreign Minister Draganov's statement that his country was looking for "ways and means" to make peace followed the line first taken last Thursday by Premier Bagrianov in a speech to Parliament.

In his broadcast speech, recorded in London, Draganov told Parliament his Government was pursuing a policy of friendship with Russia, with which Bulgaria is not at war, and that she hoped her present attitude would be understood by Britain and the United States.

Major Decisions by Slovakia

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP).—The Bratislava (Slovakia) radio said tonight that the Slovak government "held a meeting and discussed urgent problems and that important decisions were taken."

Bulgars Endeavor To Retain Gains

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—The Bulgarian Government of Premier Ivan Bagrianov put forth another tentative bid for peace last night, but Turkish dispatches said it was conditioned upon retention of at least a part of the Balkan territory Bulgaria gained as a German ally.

"Bulgaria is too small to take part in this World War," Foreign Minister Parvan Dravanov said, asserting that his country's declaration of war on the United States and Britain had been a mistake and adding: "Her interests are confined to the Balkans."

Names Thrace, Macedonia

He insisted that these "interests" embrace Thrace and Macedonia and an outlet through Thrace to the Aegean—long a sore point in Balkan diplomacy—as well as certain former Yugoslav territory. He offered to withdraw Bulgarian garrison troops from what he called "non-Bulgarian" parts of Yugoslavia.

The Greek Government in exile has already expressed its opposition to any peace that would strip Greece of Thrace or Macedonia, and similar opposition undoubtedly would come from a reconstituted Yugoslavia.

LONDON POLES WEIGH SHIFT IN PRESIDENTS

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP)—Seeking accord with Soviet Russia and unity among factions at home, Poland's exiled government in London, perhaps under a new President, will reshuffle and expand its Cabinet to include representatives of the underground army as well as the rival National Liberation Committee, it was disclosed today.

A shift in Presidents—with Thomasz Arciszewski succeeding Wladislaw Raczkiewicz—has been under consideration. This was revealed as the Cabinet forwarded to leaders of the resistance movement in Poland for their approval a copy of a broad policy that it hopes will stabilize the situation.

If the change in Presidents develops, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Premier of the London émigré government, would procede to Warsaw to form a new Cabinet.

PAPAL BLESSING ASKED BY POLES

London, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Declaring that the world is ignoring their plight, Polish women of Warsaw have appealed to Pope Pius XII to bless patriot forces battling in the city "for church and liberty," according to the Polish Telegraphic Agency.

The appeal, broadcast by radio, deplored the fact that "Russian armies which have ben standing at the gates of Warsaw for three weeks do not move a step forward," the agency said. Help sent by Britain in the form of supplies dropped by plane was described as insufficient.

TITO TAKES FORT

London, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Marshal Tito's Yugoslav partisans today announced capture of the heavily fortified German stronghold of Lebani, twenty-five miles south of Nis, junction on the Belgrade-Sofia rail line. Marshal Tito's broadcast communique said that the enemy garrison was trapped and wiped out with heavy losses, and 100 truckloads of war marterials were captured.

British Destroy 8 Ships In 2 Battles Off Brest

Royal Navy Vessels Escape Damage and Casualties

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP).—Royal Navy ships in two running battles destroyed eight enemy ships in the Audierne Bay between Brest and Lorient, before daybreak today, the Admiralty announced tonight. Two mine sweepers, three supply ships and three escort vessels were knocked out of action. Two of the escorts were heavily armed.

The British cruiser Mauritius and destroyer Ursa and the Canadian destroyer Iroquois took part in the action and came through without casualty or damage, although German shore batteries joined the battle.

Nazi Claim British Cruiser

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP).—The International Information Bureau, a German propaganda agency, declared today in a Berlin broadcast that a German submarine had scored three torpedo hits on a British cruiser of the Dido class in the Arctic Ocean.

The cruiser broke into two pieces and sank, said the broadcast. The German claim was not confirmed by British sources. The Dido class consists of eight 5,450-ton cruisers.

EIGHT NAZI SHIPS SUNK BY BRITISH

LONDON, Aug. 23 — (AP) Under the nose of German coastal batteries, Royal Navy ships destroyed eight enemy vessels before daybreak today in two running battles in Audierne Bay between Brest and Lorient, the British Admiralty announced.

Two minesweepers, three supply ships and three escort vessels were listed as the victims. Taking part in the engagements were the Canadian destroyer Iroquois, the British destroyer Ursa and the cruiser Mauritius, from which Capt. W. W. Davis commanded the force.

These ships came through without casualty or damage, said the Admiralty, although German shore batteries also opened up on them.

British Using New, More Powerful Incendiaries

London, Aug. 23 (AP)—The RAF is using a new and more powerful incendiary bomb which usually doesn't spare even the walls of a building. The old-style incendiaries customarily left the walls of a structure still standing.

The new type of bomb was used in the April 24 raid on Munich, when large industrial areas and Nazi party buildings were destroyed, and in a three-ply raid on Stuttgart in July, when hundreds of acres were devasted.

No details of the bomb were given in tonight's announcement.

HEADS COMBAT WING

A Liberator Base in England, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Col. Milton Arnold, 27 years old, West Pointer, who helped establish the Army Air Force's world-wide weather system, has been named commander of a Liberator combat bombardment wing, the U. S. Eighth Air Force announced today.

Col. Arnold, a native of Hogansville, Ga., whose wife, a former Versailles, Ky., resident, lives in Washington, D. C., also set up the two-way North Atlantic ferry route for the Air Transport Command, and inaugurated ferry service between Australia and India. He planned the air travel for the Casablanca conference of Allied leaders. He wears the Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with two oak-leaf clusters.

Baltimorean Hails Pilot's Bravery In Saving Crew

A Bomber Base in England, Aug. 23 (AP)—Sticking to his controls 15 minutes after his left foot had been blown off by flak, a courageous pilot saved the lives of his crew by pulling their crippled flying Fortress out of a 15,000-foot dive during the June 18 raid on Hamburg, Germany.

Even then the pilot, Lieut. Charles Hodges, of Sweetwater, Texas, felt his job was not done.

When he learned his copilot, Gaylord Corlis, of Albuquerque, N. M., would have to crash land the plane in England, he tried to crawl back to the cockpit to help him. Hodges has been recommended for a high decoration.

Baltimorean Praises Pilot

"I have never seen such a brave man as Hodges," said Lieut. Vincent Gisriel, of 2842 Ellicott Drive, Baltimore, bombardier. "Although he was in great pain and suffered considerable loss of blood, he was so determined to help Corlis out I had to hold him down."

Corlis landed safely at an RAF base, with Gisriel calling out the air speed from the nose. The airspeed indicator and other instruments in the cockpit had been wrecked.

A flak burst killed the command pilot, Lieut. Robert Crutcher, of Kansas City, Mo., who was sitting next to Hodges.

Administer First Aid

After Hodges leveled the plane, Gisriel and Raymond Alexander, of Mineola, N. Y., navigator, helped him out of the cockpit and administered first aid as Corlis took over the controls.

Alexander took Crutcher's seat, but a subzero wind blowing through the shattered cockpit windows forced him out, leaving Corlis to land the plane alone. Alexander's hands were frostbitten when he tried to board up the windows.

Catches Fire

The hydraulic system caught fire, but the top-turret gunner, Tech. Sergt. William Talbot, of Abilene, Texas, extinguished the flames.

Twice on the hazardous trip back through flak barrages the crew was given their choice of bailing out or staying. They stuck with the ship.

Canadians Wipe Out Nazi 'Murder' Unit

With the Canadian First Army, Aug. 23 (AP)—The German 12th SS Tank Division, accused by an Allied board of murdering 19 captured Canadian soldiers early in the French campaign, has been destroyed in the battle of the Normandy pocket.

A Canadian staff officer said today: "If the 12th SS ever shows up again on a battlefront, you can be quite sure it is an entirely reformed division bearing the same number as the one which has been eliminated."

The Canadians fought elements of the 12th SS Tank Division in a battle leading to the capture of Falaise. Then the division disappeared into the death trap along roads leading south from Trun, where the Germans suffered terrible casualties while trying to escape.

Patterson, Somervell Talk With Eisenhower

Supreme Headquarters Advance Command Post, Normandy, Aug. 22 (AP—Delayed)—Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commander of the United States Army Service Forces, conferred with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower yesterday, but the topic of their discussion was kept highly secret.

Patterson was accompanied by his son, Lieut. Robert Patterson, Jr., who flew over from a Liberator base in England for his first visit with his father since Christmas.

Among the cameramen accompanying the party was Sergt. Robert Hopkins, son of Harry Hopkins.

General Eisenhower recognized Hopkins in the crowd, extended his hand and shouted a "hello."

NEW BLACK WIDOW PLANES IN ACTION

United States Night Fighter Base, France, Aug. 14 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The new American "Black Widow" night fighter has gone into action with its 20-mm. cannon and already has destroyed four nocturnal German raiders.

The first victim of the P-61s, described as the greatest night fighter in the business, was a Junkers-88 shot down by Lieut. Raymond A. Anderson of Taylor, Wis.

Most details of the Black Widow and the date it went into action are secret. It is painted coal black, has twin engines and twin tails and looks very much like the P-38 lightning, but it is considerably heavier and larger. It carried a pilot and observer and there is a third seat for an engineer who often goes along. It is primarily a high altitude fighter and is reputed to have a faster rate of climb than any other two-engined fighter.

All Black Widow pilots have undergone special training in the United States. One of them, Lieut. Donald J. Doyle of Richmond, Cal., said: "We'll take on any day fighter made." In final training in England, the Black Widows shot down several robot bombs, proving themselves swift and ma[illegible]verable.

FRENCH SEEN MORE UNITED

Class Bitterness Lessens— Danger Of Civil War Scoffed At

By EDWARD KENNEDY

In Southern France, Aug. 23 (AP)—If the people of Provence are typical of all of France, it is certain that the French have come through four years of German occupation as a vigorous people with confidence in the future and a determination to make the Fourth Republic something that will restore French prestige in the world.

Not only have the resistance forces waged a full-scale war against the invaders, but they have taken over the local governments and have them working smoothly. They are maintaining order throughout the liberated territory in southern France.

On the surface, at least, there is little to support the oft-heard prediction that liberation of France would be followed by civil war.

30.24 — 18231

Class Bitterness Eased

The French, at the moment, seem united as they never were in peacetime, and class bitterness, which marked the days of the People's Front, seems much less now. Hardship apparently has made Frenchmen more tolerant of one another.

Officials have been jailed in some localities, but not in others. The Mayor of Tourvas was ousted, arrested, then provisionally released.

"In principle he was a collaborationist," the local resistance chief who succeeded him as Mayor said. "But he merely went through the motions of obeying the Germans and never did us any real harm."

De Gaulle's Worth Recognized

The anticipated clash between de Gaulle's provisional government and the resistance leadership inside France likewise has not materialized as yet. French Interior Force leaders here invariably say they recognize de Gaulle as the man who galvanized the French into continuing the war and as head of the French Government.

While the working classes seem to form the backbone of the French Forces of the Interior, there are also many aristocrats, professional and business men in them.

The bulk of the resistance people expect France's Government to be "very much to the left," but not Communist.

Communists Took Lead

They say, however, that the Communists were the most zealous and most effective of all the elements in the resistance movement.

"The proof is in the number of Communists who were shot—120,000 of them," a pistol-toting girl fighter said.

Frenchmen concede that France, a country of 40,000,000, bled white by the German occupation and in need of foreign supplies for its reconstruction, cannot immediately take its place as a world power of the same physical strength as the United States, Russia or the British Empire.

But they say Frenchmen always have been pioneers in the field of political ideas and in the realm of intellect and it is here that the new France will have its role immediately.

More Collectivism Seen

Important economic and political changes are likely to follow this war and France may be the test tube where many of them will be tried first.

"France will surely have more collectivism," a Frenchman said. "Our problem will be finding a formula which will keep the individual from being swallowed up by it."

The French are more restrained and less theatrical than the Italians in welcoming the liberating armies. But their feelings seem deeper and they are more inclined to weep as soldiers—especially French soldiers—enter towns on the heels of the fleeing Germans.

All Avid For News

Everyone is avid for news as the troops come in, for there have been no newspapers for a week and the cutting of electric power has silenced radios.

Towns are less battered than in Italy and the countryside is less despoiled, but food is short everywhere and the fine meals for which this country is famous have for most people been only memories in recent years. Despite this the French have not lost their magic touch in cooking. We found that out when we took army rations to a village hotel and let the proprietress see what she could do with them.

She turned out a meal fit for a king.

Johnson Raises Plane Toll to 37

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP)—Wing Commander Johnny Johnson, top-scoring British ace, raised his kills to thirty-seven today when he led his Canadian fighter squadron against eighty enemy aircraft over France and shot down two FW-190's.

VIENNA RAIDED BY U. S. PLANES

Flyers Fight Way Through Big Nazi Forces.

Rome, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Several hundred American heavy bombers and fighters fought through large forces of Nazi interceptors today and bombed military installations in the Vienna area of Austria for the second straight day. Medium bombers attacked rail bridges in southern France near Lyon.

Particularly heavy opposition was encountered at the Markersdorf airdrome, thirty-five miles west of Vienna, which Liberators bombed. A number of Nazis were destroyed there.

The German radio said that the aircraft center of Weiner Neustadt also was attacked.

The four-engined craft also bombed Po River railway bridges at Ferrarra.

The flight to Lyon was the deepest penetration of southern France yet for the American Mitchells based in Italy. Other planes continued the methodical destruction of rolling stock used by the retreating Germans in southern France.

Gets 18th Nazi Plane.

Major Herschel H. Green of Mayfield, Ky., a Mustang pilot, shot down his eighteenth plane today, a Focke Wulfe 190, and became undisputed top American ace in the Mediterranean theater. He had been tied with Capt. James H. Varnell, Charleston, Tenn., who has seventeen victories.

Germany's interior plants appeared yesterday to oppose the massive United States Fifteenth Air Force bombing assault against Silesian and Austrian oil targets and fifty-seven were shot down, an official announcement said today. American losses were thirty-nine heavy bombers and six other aircraft, from all operations.

Approximately 200 Nazi fighters attacked the American formations, which bombed oil refineries, storage tanks and other vital fuel installations at Obertal, in German Silesia, and at Korneburg and Lobeau, near Vienna.

The fiercest battles were fought by Liberators and escorting Lightings over Lobau, where flak also was intense.

"I've never seen the Germans so determined to halt a formation," said Lieut. Hugh P. Breen of 26 Steward avenue, Trenton, N. J. "They threw everything they had at us and then went back for more. They took their toll. I watched some of our bombers in flame and disintegrate in the air while parachutes blossomed."

Lieut. J. W. Redmond of Tivoli, N. Y., a Fortress pilot on the Odertal raid, brought his bomber home with two engines knocked out and the main spar of the left wing shatte[illegible]. He declared the flak was th[illegible]rst he ever had seen.

Churchill Confers With Italian Chiefs

Rome, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill conferred with Premier Ivanoe Bonomi, head of the Italian Government, and Marshal Pietro Badoglio yesterday.

NAZIS ARE SEVERE ON ITALY PATRIOTS

Rome, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Increasing severity of enemy treatment of Italian patriots harassing the Nazi rear areas in northern Italy was disclosed by the Eighth Army's capture of an order from Col. von Hofman, which decreed the immediate shooting of "any one assisting the criminal and treacherous partisans by giving them food or lodging."

He announced that he would support "any officer who exceeds our customary degree of restraint in his choice of measures for dealing with the partisans," adding: "All civilians arrested in the course of reprisals against the partisans will be sent to concentration camps and shipped to Germany as laborers."

Only minor activity was reported on the entire Italian front, with the Poles continuing to clear the enemy from their few remaining positions on the south side of the Metauro River on the Adriatic sector.

Allied Planes Evacuate 900 Wounded Slavs

Rome, Aug. 23 (AP)—Landing and taking off from a runway among wheatfields with a battle raging near by, C-47 transports of the Allied Balkan Air Force evacuated more than 900 pounded Partisans of Marshal Tito's Yugoslav army to Italy yesterday, without loss of a plane or passenger.

Many of the wounded were carried as much as 20 miles to the airstrip in a single day by Yugoslav women stretcher-bearers.

SILVER STAR GIVEN TO STATE HEROES

With the Fifth Army, Italy, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Four men from New York State have been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action on the Italian front, the Fifth Army announced today.

Sergt. Frederick Juliano of 647 Locust street, Mount Vernon, crawled 200 yards ahead of his platoon, in plain view of the enemy and under intense fire, to use a flame thrower and force occupants of a key German pillbox to surrender.

First Lieut. Joseph J. Orenstein of the Bronx rallied the men of his platoon and took command of an adjacent leaderless platoon to lead an assault on enemy emplacements, resulting in the death of twenty Germans and the capture of nine.

First Lieut. Donald Fisher of Utica aided wounded men in his platoon under heavy fire when four tanks, including his own, were knocked out by the enemy.

Sergt. William D. McDowall of 148 69th street, Brooklyn, ran toward the enemy firing his submachine gun and prevented the use of a German self-propelled gun.

Lieut. Orenstein, Sergt. Juliano and Sergt. McDowall are all members of the 85th "Custer" Infantry Division.

Nazi Retreat Penalty: Death

MOSCOW, Aug. 23 (AP).—German soldiers fighting against General Ivan Cherniakhovsky's 3d White Russian Army have been warned by Adolf Hitler that one man in ten will be shot if they retreat without orders, a front line dispatch said today.

Gen. Deane Returns To Moscow Post

Moscow, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. John R. Deane, chief of the American military mission to Moscow, and Rear Admiral Clarence E. Olsen, head of the naval section, returned today from Washington consultations.

2 Jap Flanking Forces Are Halted

Chungking, Aug. 23 (AP)—Two Japanese columns attempting to outflank Chinese positions northwest of the enemy-held Canton-Hankow rail junction of Hengyang have been halted, and to the south a battle was in progress with another Japanese column pushing eastward from the suburbs of captured Leiyang to prepare the way for a drive down the railway, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

The battles raged in a heavy downpour, but despite this a Chinese unit recaptured the small town of Sungpo, 18 miles south of Hengyang, about midway between the junction and Leiyang, and recaptured the position, the high command said.

Chinese Reach Tangyang

In Hupeh province, to the north of the Hunan fighting, Chinese diversionary drives reached the outskirts of Tangyang, key Japanese supply center northeast of Ichang, and several points were taken, the bulletin said.

United States 14th Air Force planes ranged a wide area over Hunan and the Yangtze in Hupeh, striking hard at Japanese water supply and land installations.

Blast Into Tengchung

On the Yunnan front in the west, Chinese forces blasted their way through breaches in the thick walls of Tengchung, besieged main Japanese bastion where a desperate garrison has been holding out for weeks.

The stubborn defenders were driven back to within 200 yards of the center of the city, and in the southwest portion of Tengchung, Chinese blasted fortified positions and took a number of public buildings after storming breaches in the wall. Fourteenth Air Force fighters strafed the enemy in the northwest corner of the city.

CHINESE TAKE TOWN SOUTH OF HENGYANG

Chungking, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Chinese troops driving forward in heavy rain have seized a small town eighteen miles south of Hengyang, and northwest of the city have halted twin enemy columns attempting to outflank their positions in the area of the fallen Canton-Hankow rail junction, the High Command announced tonight.

One Japanese unit pushed eastward from the suburbs of Leiyang, thirty-four miles south of Hengyang on the railway, and were engaged by defenders.

In Hupeh province to the north of the Hunan fighting, Chinese continued diversionary attacks on Japanese positions around Ichang, taking several points on the outskirts of Tangyang, important enemy supply center northeast of Ichang.

Chinese forces have w[illegible] consolidated of about one-third of Tengchung after bitter fighting and are slowly driving the Japanese garrisons back toward the center of the city, it was announced in a communique from the Yunnan front.

Drive On Tiddim Base Unopposed

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Ceylon, Aug. 23 (AP)—Allied troops driving toward the enemy's western Burma base of Tiddim are thrusting forward unopposed in an attempt to bring the fleeing Japanese to battle, a communique reported today.

While the monsoon held down activity in Burma to patrol action below Myitkyina, and to artillery attacks on enemy positions in the Kabaw valley clear across the Burma to the west, Allied flyers were active in the lashing rains.

Fighters of the Eastern Air Command scored hits on a 120-foot steamer and 22 smaller craft along the Irrawaddy river from Mandalay north to Katha.

GENERAL DECORATED

Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Brig.-Gen. Theodore F. Wessels received the Silver Star today for gallantry in the capture of Myitkyina in north Burma. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell made the award.

Gen. Wessels commanded the final assault on the Japanese base after Brig.-Gen. Frank Merrill had been relieved. His citation said that he repeatedly exposed himself to enemy forces.

Gen. Wessels' wife lives in Austin, Tex. A son is stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.

NAVY PLANES POUND DAVAO

Also Sink Jap Freighter In South Philippines

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Thursday, Aug. 24 (AP). Striking into the southern Philippines for the tenth time in two weeks, United States Navy Liberators touched off fires at Davao and sank a small Japanese freighter northeast of Mindanao, headquarters reported today.

Five other enemy vessels, one a destroyer tender, were hit in raids ranging from Celebes, south of Mindanao, to Palau in the Caroline Islands north of New Guinea.

Palau Bombed By Patrols

Air patrols bombed Palau Monday night, setting fires and explosions, and returned Tuesday to attack the destroyer tender and leave it dead in the water. Two enemy fighters ineffectively attempted interception, the only aerial interference reported in the raids listed today.

Near Celebes, patrol planes sank or badly damaged a small freighter and three coastal vessels Tuesday.

In the ten raids in the southern Philippines announced since August 7, the planes have bombed Davao dromes and water front four times and have sunk three ships and damaged five.

Continuing aerial assaults against the Moluccas, Southwest Pacific planes dropped 39 tons of bombs on Ceram Island Tuesday, and raided villages on Halmahera, north of Ceram.

PLANES BLAST HALMAHERA

American Attacks Stepped Up With 135-ton Bombing.

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—Unchallenged Liberators and Mitchells have begun to pour it on Halmahera, last island barrier between Gen. Douglas MacArthur and the Philippines.

A 135-ton bombing, which destroyed eight parked planes, supply dumps and defense positions and sank a freighter, was reported today against that octopus-shaped Japanese base. A 110-ton strike had been announced yesterday.

Considering Halmahera's topography—much of its 6,700 square miles are unexplored jungle wilds and only a few coastal sectors are of military use—these are gigantic blows.

They are being stepped up more than a week after its airfields were rendered useless to the enemy and its garrison has been weakened by continuous sinkings of small ships trying to sneak down with supplies from the Philippines.

These blows fit into the pattern of knockout punches.

The Halmahera action featured strikes of MacArthur's air arm, aimed largely at denying enemy garrisons replenishments, sweeping for 1,000 miles from Davao, southern Philippines, down to the Flores Sea.

Other air blows by planes based in the Marshalls and Marianas and extending over 90,000 square miles of ocean were reported from Pearl Harbor yesterday by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

Near Marcus Island, a little over 1,000 miles southeast of Tokyo, two supply ships were left burning by Navy Liberators.

Other planes combed the Carolines chain, hitting Ponape on the eastern extremity, blasting Truk, despite interception, and touching off fires and explosions at Yap on the western end.

Admiral Nimitz also reported strikes at Wake, by-passed former American island north of the Marshalls, and the repeatedly bombed phosphate center of Nauru to the south.

2 In Jap Convoy Sunk In Bonins

Pearl Harbor, Aug. 23 (AP)—Sinking of two cargo ships, with a third set afire, near Chichi Jima, in the Bonin islands, by the navy search Liberators, was announced today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

The raid on the convoy, which was made up of the three cargo ships and two destroyers, occurred in an area a little more than 600 miles south of Tokyo. One of the two attacking Liberators was lost.

The announcement said the planes, from Fleet Airwing two, attacked at low level.

The action took place Tuesday. The day before, Seventh Army air-force Liberators attacked Yap, in the Carolines, in daylight, hitting bivouacs and airfield installations.

The attackers encountered meager anti-aircraft. One Liberator hit Asor in the Ulithi islands without opposition the same day. No planes were lost over Yap or Ulithi.

N. Y. Model Is Pacific 'Girl I Left Behind Me'

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 19 (AP—Delayed)—Of all the sweethearts and wives of American servicemen in the Southwest Pacific, Jamie Sue Helmes, of New York city, has been adjudged the most beautiful.

Major R. B. Leonard, of the Australian army, and his associates, both Australian and American, so decided in the "Girl I Left Behind Me" contest. Judging was based on photographs submitted by the servicemen to Guinea Gold, the New Guinea soldiers' newspaper of which Leonard is editor.

Miss Helmes is a model with the John Powers studios in New York city and, as Mrs. Jamie Sue Osmun, is the wife of Capt. George Osmun, who is stationed at an advance base in New Guinea.

Miss Kay Coulter, Chicago, sponsored by Corporal Jack White, Signal Corps, was third.

New Zealand To Train Air-Force Men At Home

Wellington, N. Z., Aug. 23 (AP)—New Zealand will send no more airmen to Canada for training under the Empire Air Training scheme, Prime Minister Peter Fraser announced today.

He said the decision was reached after discussions with Allied staffs and governments. New Zealand will train 1,200 air-crew personnel yearly to meet increased responsibility in the Pacific.

New Zealand has sent about 25,000 air-force men overseas.

Guam Caves Sheltering Japs Sealed By Blasts

United States 77th Army Division, Guam Island, Aug. 14 (AP—Delayed)—Four mammoth caves, dug into the side of a depression in the jungle wilderness of northern Guam, became a tomb today for scores of bewildered Japanese soldiers who had retreated there before onrushing American troops.

By sealing the mouths of the caves with dynamite blasts, the Yanks left them still shrouded in mystery. The discovery of a powerful radio transmitter in the entrance of one indicated the cave might have been a headquarters.

Huge Underground Room

Col. A. D. Smith, San Antonio, Texas, said two natives who had been forced to dig the tunnels told him one underground room was 100 feet long and had concrete walls from a foot to 18 inches thick.

Japanese bodies were piled by machine-gun fire at one rear entrance to which the Nipponese fled after doughboys had wiped out scores of snipers on a ridge above the depression.

The caves were so cleverly concealed by bamboo trees that hundreds of American troops passed on a nearby trail without noticing the hideouts. The caves were discovered when a Japanese was caught running into an entrance. Then the battle began.

Capt. William H. McKeown, of Charlotte, N. C., who led an attacking company, said "there were bullets whizzing all around us. We couldn't see where they were coming from. They pinned us down three hours before we could get out."

Tanks Charge Ridge

The opposing front lines were so close the Yanks could not call for artillery or air support. Finally tanks charge the ridge above the caves.

As darkness fell the Americans withdrew. But they hit with force at dawn, charging the caves from different directions. The Americans covered every exit. Then the entrance was sealed with dynamite.

Capt. Edwin Lafferty, of Philadelphia, and Pfc. Charles E. Ryan, of Brooklyn, N. Y., reported small rail tracks, with carts on them, extended back into the tunnel.

AP Bolivian Writer Escapes Into Chile

Arica, Chile, Aug. 23 (AP)—Julio Valdes, Associated Press correspondent at La Paz, Bolivia, who took refuge last week in the Chilean Embassy at La Paz, arrived here by plane today.

Valdes, Bolivian citizen, took up residence in the embassy after sending out a dispatch reporting the reappearance in La Paz of the wealthy mine owner, Mauricio Hochschild, whose whereabouts had been a mystery for several weeks.

[There had been reports that Hochschild had been kidnapped and that the case had important political ramifications.]

ARGENTINA FINDS GERMAN SPY RING

Buenos Aires, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—The press sub-secretariat has announced that Argentine Federal police have uncovered a "new active organization" operated by German spies and that they have captured a large number of agents and confiscated a great quantity of material.

No details were included in the fifty-seven-word communique issued last night.

An unofficial but usually reliable informant said that the espionage inquiry being conducted by the police had resulted in the arrest of 126 persons and the seizure of twenty-six high-powered radio transmitters in recent months.

ARANHA QUITS POST IN BRAZIL'S CABINET

Foreign Minister Resigns in Protest as Police Close the Pro-American Club

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 23 (AP)—Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha, whose resignation was accepted today by President Getulio Vargas, was quoted tonight as saying "The foreign policy of Brazil will continue the same, unalterable, come what may."

Mr. Aranha's duties were taken over by Secretary General Ambassador Pedro Leao Veloso.

The official announcement said the retirement of Mr. Aranha was accepted with regret by President Vargas, and extolled him as having given to his country "numerous and signal services."

It added that "The Government of the Republic judges it opportune to reaffirm the directives of his foreign policy of continental solidarity and strict cooperation with the Allied nations."

Later, the afternoon newspaper Diario da Noite quoted Mr. Aranha as saying "It is difficult to translate my attitudes into English, but the policy of Brazil cannot change. I reaffirm that the foreign policy of Brazil will continue the same, unalterable, come what may."

There was no official explanation of Mr. Aranha's resignation, but sources in Buenos Aires with Brazilian connections said the Foreign Minister submitted his resignation more than a week ago because he was "humiliated" by the closing by the police of the Society of Friends of America a half hour before he was to address the organization on the occasion of his investiture as its vice president.

Mr. Aranha, a prominent member of the Brazilian Liberal Alliance, is said to have been the real leader behind the 1930 military revolt which placed Getulio Vargas in power and sent President Washington Luiz and President-elect Julio Presbes into exile. The United Press recalled. Mr. Aranha then became Interior Minister and later Minister of Finance in the provisional government.

He was appointed Ambassador to Washington in March, 1934, and held that post until December, 1937, when he returned to Rio de Janeiro to become Foreign Minister.

In that capacity he led Brazil into war with the Axis powers and presided over the Rio de Janeiro conference of American Foreign Ministers in January, 1942, which brought to its culmination the policy of continental solidarity.

Envoy Would Continue U. S.-Canada Trade Pact

Vancouver, Aug. 23 (AP)—Ray Atherton, United States Ambassador to Canada, today made an appeal for post-war continuation of a Canadian-American trade policy.

Addressing the Vancouver Board of Trade, he said, "we cannot participate in the great adventure of the 'era of the Pacific' spoken of by Vice-President Wallace and we cannot play our part in the right kind of post-war world unless we adopt sound policies at home, based on sound principles of expanded international trade."

BRITISH BUILD UP THEIR NAVAL POWER

NEW YORK, Aug. 23 — (AP) The British Information service announced today that Great Britain's Navy, despite the loss of 561 warships in nearly five years of sea warfare, "is actually more powerful now than at the beginning of the war."

Among the war losses listed up to Aug. 13 were: three battleships, two battle-cruisers, five aircraft carriers, two small carriers, 28 cruisers, 14 armed merchantmen, 124 destroyers, 64 submarines, seven frigates, 23 corvettes and 289 miscellaneous smaller craft.

The list of miscellaneous smaller craft, the service said, did not include landing craft of various types.

Death Of 2 More Jap Generals Announced

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—The Japanese Ministry of War announced today in a Tokyo broadcast that two more Japanese generals had met death "in line of duty abroad," the Office of War Information said.

Maj. Gen. Genkichi Shima died August 6 and Maj. Gen. Genzo Minakami died August 8, the Ministry said in announcing their posthumous promotions to the rank of lieutenant general.

Swedes Note New Allied Mine

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—A new type of Allied electric mine which is set off by sound and defies the usual mine-sweeping operations is cited by the Swedish press as an important reason that Swedish ship traffic with Germany is almost non existent, a dispatch received here today said.

Koiso Warns Japs Of Allied Landings

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—Premier Kuniaki Koiso bluntly warned the Japanese people tonight that "the enemy is watching for an opportunity to land on our homeland," and appealed to them to increase the nation's "fighting power" and improve the air-raid defenses.

Koiso said American bombers were certain to increase their attacks on Japan, and the nation faced an "unprecedentedly grave national crisis."

Emperor Hirohito told a conference of prefectural governors that "the war situation is pressing," and "the rise or fall of our imperial nation rests upon the present day."

Excerpts from the Emperor's and Koiso's talks to the governors were broadcast by the Toyko radio.

Haven For Laval In Switzerland?

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—The German Ambassador to Switzerland was reported by the secret German-language station radio Atlantik tonight to have asked the Swiss Government for asylum for Pierre Laval.

Radio Atlantik, whose location never has been officially announced, said the Swiss Government had not yet made any decision as this step was seen as an effort to assure a haven for Fascist leaders even from Germany.

There was no confirmation of the report in other quarters. Laval, Chief of Government in the Vichy regime, was last declared in Swiss-French border reports to be virtually a prisoner of the Germans in Belfort.

ARMY CASUALTIES

Washington, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—The War Department announced today the names of 1,674 Army casualties in the Asiatic, European, Mediterranean and Southwest Pacific war areas.

NAVY CASUALTIES

The Navy Department announced today the names of 300 casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard which makes a total of 55,972 casualties reported by the Navy since December 7, 1941. Of this total 23,063 are reported dead, 18,841 wounded, 9,602 missing and 4,466 prisoners of war.

9 Carriers Aided South-France Invasion

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—Ralph A. Bard, Acting Secretary of the Navy, disclosed today that nine Allied aircraft carriers participated in the invasion of southern France. This carrier fleet, providing air cover for the landing troops, included seven British and two American ships.

They were part of an armada of about 800 vessels of the American, British, French, Polish, Greek and Belgian navies, Bard said in a weekly review of naval activities. Emphasizing the light enemy opposition, he said the principal incident was the sinking of four enemy motor torpedo-boats by American destroyers.

Senate Confirms Patch Promotion

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—The promotion of Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, Jr., to the temporary rank of lieutenant general was confirmed today by the Senate.

General Patch, commanding the 7th American Army in southern France, is a native of Fort Huachuca, Ariz. He was elevated to his new rank at a session in which the Senate also confirmed promotions of ten officers to major general and 28 to brigadier general.

The major general list included promotions to that rank for Brig. Gen. James G. Christiansen, Portland, Ore., chief of staff of the army ground forces, and Brig. Gen. William Frazier Tompkins, Richmond, Va., chief of the army's special planning division for the post-war period.

used elsewhere.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who recently visited France to see how it was working out, said he found the French accepting "invasion money" with confidence.

Succeeds "Spearhead" Type

"Invasion money" has succeeded "spearhead currency" in connection with military operations. "Spearhead currency" was used in North Africa and in the early days of operations in Italy. "Spearhead currency" is regular United States currency with a yellow seal to distinguish it from other money. "Invasion money" looks somewhat like a high-quality cigar-store coupon.

"Invasion money" is printed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and turned over to military authorities. One question that never has been answered is who is going to pay for it in the end.

Different Payoffs

The payoff will be handled differently with each country, since each had a different status. Italy, for example, started out as an enemy and became a co-belligerent; France was an ally which fell under the Axis heel, and Germany has been an out-and-out enemy.

Some day the diplomats and financial experts will sit down with each country and add up the credits and debits, financially and otherwise.

In the case of Italy, it might—and only might—go like this:

The United States to take up the "invasion money" that troops spent and that military commanders used to obtain supplies, etc., but that Italy would have to stand for the money used for such things as the maintenance of schools and salaries of local officials.

France might be given a credit for the full amount of "invasion money" circulated there.

Germany might be told that, among other things, it was its job to pay off the "invasion money."

According To Law

The idea behind "invasion money" is not as complicated as deciding who's to pay off eventually. The purpose is to provide troops and commanders with a medium of exchange for goods and services. GI Joe wants to buy something for the girl friend back home. Having been paid in "invasion money," except what he sent home or put into war bonds, he goes to a shop, makes his selection and pays for it.

And it's all according to international law, which gives an occupying authority the right to provide for the currency needs of the area occupied.

The exchange rate is 100 lire to the dollar in Italy. In France, a dollar is worth 50 francs.

Who'll Pay For 'Invasion Money'?

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—When Anglo - American forces sweep across Germany's frontiers it's a pretty safe bet they will bring their "invasion money" with them.

"Invasion money" now is being used in France and Italy, will be used elsewhere.

Roosevelt Asks For Lend Lease Until War Ends

Sees U. S. Trade Aided, but Main Consideration Is Saving American Lives

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23. (AP).—The possibility that lend-lease will stimulate post-war American foreign trade was suggested in the latest report on its operations, sent to Congress by President Roosevelt today along with a recommendation that it be continued until both Germany and Japan surrender.

"The war has introduced American products to other countries in a volume and variety never approached before," the report commented. "After the war these countries will want to continue to obtain many of these products by buying them.

"American industry will have a greatly expanded foreign market, provided that our international economic policies make it possible for these nations to pay for their purchases."

The report, covering lend-lease operations through June 30, gave the total of American supplies and services furnished to Allies since the program started in 1941 at $28,270,351,000. In addition, American commanding generals in the field have been supplied with $678,241,000 worth of arms and other materials for lend-lease to Allied forces.

Big Increase Since D Day

The value of reverse lend-lease—the goods and services supplied to [illegible] forces by Allies, as estimated in excess of $3,000,000,000.

Possibly reflecting the vast expenditures of war materials since the June 6 invasion of Europe and the final equipping of the invasion forces, the report gave the total of American lend-lease in the three months ended June 30 as $4,045,000,000.

It also disclosed that the entire output of Britain's sheet steel rolling industry for three months was devoted to waterproofing various mechanized equipment used in the invasion.

In recommending continuance of lend-lease until Japan is defeated, President Roosevelt apparently took note of suggestions in Congress and elsewhere that the program be dropped once Germany falls. Under existing law, lend-lease will expire next July 1.

"We should not permit any weakening of this system of combined war supply to delay final victory a single day or to cost unnecessarily the life of one American boy," Mr. Roosevelt said.

"Until the unconditional surrender of both Japan and Germany, we should continue the lend-lease program on whatever scale is necessary to make the combined striking power of all the United Nations against our enemies as overwhelming and as effective as we can make it."

Here is the statistical story of lend-lease from its birth on March 11, 1941, to June 30, 1944:

Category	Amount	Pct. of total
Goods transferred:
Munitions	$15,162,329,000	53.6
Industrial materials	6,026,086,000	21.3
Agricultural products	3,630,585,000	12.9
Services rendered:
Servicing and repair of ships, etc.	$22,853,000	1.9
Rental of ships, ferrying of aircraft, etc.	2,210,752,000	7.8
Production facilities in U. S.	621,700,000	2.2
Miscellaneous expenses	96,046,000	0.3
Total lend-lease aid	$28,270,351,000	100
Goods transferred included:
Planes	30,900
Tanks	26,900
Ships, naval	1,400
Ships, cargo, 1,000 gr. tons up	511
Ships, under 1,000 gr. tons	1,294

Reverse lend-lease aid is put at more than $3,000,000,000 as of June 30, but preliminary figures are available only to April 1 and include:

Country	Value
United Kingdom	$1,934,400,000
Australia	457,623,000
New Zealand	109,368,000
Total	$2,501,391,000

In addition, reverse lend-lease aid in India is placed at more than $100,000,000 as of Jan. 1, 1944.

LEND-LEASE HELP GIVEN BY BRITISH

Washington, Aug. 23 (A. P.).—The entire output of Britain's sheet-steel rolling industry was taken for three months to waterproof hundreds of American and Britain wading tanks, trucks and other mechanized equipment used in the invasion of western Europe. This was disclosed in a lend-lease report submitted to Congress by President Roosevelt today.

In giving details of reverse lend-lease, it said that "one of the biggest last-minute rush jobs done for us by the British" was the waterproofing so that the Allied equipment would reach the invasion beaches in fighting condition after plowing through the surf. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's Headquarters was said to have reported that the sheet steel used for this pre-invasion job would have been enough to build a bridge 150 feet wide across the English Channel from Dover to Calais.

"So wide is the scope of the reverse lend-lease aid we receive from the British," said the report, "that a United States naval base in Britain has been operated for a full twelve months without making a single cash payment." Included in British aid furnished to the United States forces which is not measured in terms of money were rockets based upon a British design which are being used against the Japanese in the Pacific; a British-developed radio set widely used in American tanks built for Britain and Russia, and the engine based upon the Whittle design which the report said is used in jet-propulsion planes.

Justice Department Sues 47 Railroads Under Sherman Act

United States seizes strike-bound mines of Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company.....Page 11

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—In one of the largest anti-trust suits in history, the Justice Department today charged a group of railroads, trade associations, investment houses and rail executives wiith conspiracy to restrain and monopolize trade in the transportation of freight and passengers in the West.

Defendants named in the suit, filed in Lincoln, Neb., include the Association of American Railroads, the Western Association of Railway Executives; J. [illegible] & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of New York investment houses; 47 railroads and several score of individuals associated with the rail lines or the trade associations.

Collusive Action Charged

Individuals named include Roy B. White, of Baltimore, as president of the Alton Railroad Company [Mr. White is also president of the B. & O.], and William M. Jeffers, of Omaha, late rubber czar, as president of the Union Pacific.

Among many charges in the Justice Department complaint, the defendants are accused of acting collusively to maintain non-competitive rates; preventing improvements of service and facilities of Western lines, and with retarding and suppressing the development of motor carriers and other competitive transportation agencies.

Charge Of "Dictatorship"

Attorney General Francis Biddle, who is completing a tour of the West, declared in a statement that the "agreements, combinations, conspiracies and activities of the kind charged in the complaint violate the Sherman Act and are not authorized by the Interstate Commerce Act or any other act of Congress."

Charles E. Johnston, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, asserted in Chicago, however, that most of the alleged violations "are actions necessary to comply with proper regulatory laws and mandates of the Interstate Commerce Commission."

Johnston declared the suit raised questions whether industry will be operated "under the dictatorship of the Attorney General" and whether a "revolutionary change shall be enforced in the method of establishing freight rates."

The complaint asks dissolution of the Association of American Railroads, an organization of major railroads, operating more than 85 per cent. of the nation's railway mileage, and of the Western Association of Railway Executives, an organization of Western railroads.

It seeks also to prevent the continuance or revival of the Western [illegible] agreement, the western commissioner, or the committee of directors, through which the department charges the defendants controlled railroad rates and services. It also seeks to enjoin the defendants from setting up any similar system "to restrain trade and commerce in violation of the Sherman Anti Trust Act."

Specific Charges

The complaint made these specific charges:

1. Freight rates are maintained for the Western United States which are higher than those fixed for the East, an inequality which has deprived the West of the advantage of low competitive rates and has been a detriment to the West's economic development.

2. Improved railroad technology has been stifled.

3. The delivery of perishable products has been delayed through an unwillingness to speed up schedules.

Other Carriers Mentioned

4. By conspiring with the major oil companies owning and operating common-carrier pipelines, arbitrary and non-competitive rates were established for the transportation by rail and pipeline of petroleum and petroleum products.

5. The defendants have conspired with motor carriers and water carriers to bring motor and water carrier rates up to the higher rail level.

6. A highway department was established within the Western Association of Railway Executives to retard the development of the trucking industry.

7. The defendant railroads entered into the Western agreement, which established the office of Western commissioner, who acted as arbiter in matters relating to transportation rates and services and that his activities were subject to review only by a committee of directors.

8. J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and their affiliates have and still control substantially all the financing operations and security issues of the defendant railroads, have similar control in relation to many Eastern railroads and have substantial financial interests in numerous large industrial concerns in the East.

The compalint said further that Morgan & Co. and its predecessor participated in the organization of the Association of American Railroads, and that the defendant banking firms are represented on the committee of directors established by the Western agreement and have taken part in the alleged collusive fixing on non-competitive rates.

Wendell Berge, Biddle's assistant, told reporters the War and Navy departments had no objections to the filing of the suit but added he did not know what action might be taken by them later. The departments have requested the postponement of 30 similar suits.

it necessary to file this action in the midst of a national political campaign.

Regulated By Congress

"The railroad industry has been under rigid regulation prescribed by Congress for more than half a century and most of the alleged violations of the anti-trust law with which we are charged are actions

Railway Head Answers Biddle

AUG 25 1944

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP)—Charles E. Johnston, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, said today that the issues involved in an anti-trust suit are the same as those raised by Attorney General Biddle and his assistant, Wendell Berge, in speeches and interviews, they strike at the keystone of the economic and political structure of this country."

The association is a defendant in a suit filed by the Department of Justice.

Johnston continued:

"First, is the question of whether industry in the future shall operate under the dictatorship of the Attorney General through the questionable process of 'consent decrees' or under regulatory laws prescribed by Congress.

"Second, is the question of whether a revolutionary change shall be enforced in the method of establishing freight rates, resulting in widespread dislocation and reshuffling of industries throughout the nation and of agricultural production as well.

Produce National Chaos

"I wish to point out solemnly that anybody seeking to bring about a condition of economic paralysis at a time when the country is concerned with the successful conclusion of the war, reconversion of industries to peacetime pursuits, jobs for returning armed service men and women, and employment for the workers in closed war plants, could not have chosen a point of attack that would produce national chaos more certainly.

"Biddle and Berge will get the cheers of the elements in our country who are seeking the outright overthrow of our economic system.

"We have known for a long time that this suit was coming. We have neither invited it nor made any move to delay it, although it would have been our preference to concentrate all our efforts on the transportation job until the war was concluded. We are sorry, too, that the Department of Justice felt necessary to comply with proper regulatory laws and mandates of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Charges of regional discrimination in freight rates are political buncombe, pure and simple. Anybody who can write a letter and has the price of a 3-cent stamp can file a complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission. Any dissatisfaction with the commission arises from the fact that it considers complaints on their merits and resists the demands of pressure groups seeking advantages.

"Biddle and Berge propose to liquidate this procedure and set themselves up as the administrators of the railways and, presumably, every other form of private enterprise."

House Group Bars Jobless Pay For Federal Workers

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—The House Ways and Means Committee today struck from the Senate-approved Post-war Demobilization and Reconversion Bill a provision extending unemployment compensation to 3,500,000 Federal workers.

This action followed a committee vote yesterday eliminating from the legislation all provisions for retraining and reemployment of war workers and throwing out a program to pay for the transportation of these workers back to their homes or to places of new employment.

Provisions Retained

The committee retained in the bill a provision that States shall continue to determine the amounts and duration of unemployment benefits for covered workers.

It also accepted a Senate provision that the Federal Government guarantee the solvency of State unemployment compensation funds.

The committee's elimination of the Federal employes, including many shipyard and war workers, from the unemployment program was on motion of Representative Mills (D., Ark.). These workers are not now required to contribute to the unemployment compensation fund, as are those covered by the program.

"More Interested In Jobs"

Representative Knutson (R., Minn.), ranking committee Republican, said the committee "is more interested in planning to expand private enterprise, to create new jobs, than in spending all our time thinking about unemployment." He added: "We can deal with unemployment when we get to it. Let's try to assure jobs first."

The Ways and Means Committee changes left intact only a minute portion of the Senate measure, adopted in that body under the sponsorship of Senator George (D., Ga.) as a compromise among diverse proposals for unemployment benefits.

House Sets Up Machine... For Disposal of War Goo...

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — (AP)

Legislation creating machinery for disposal of an expected $100,000,000,000 worth of surplus war property received House approval late today.

First of the big post-war bills to clear the House, it calls for one-man direction of the disposal program and is expected to run into controversy in the Senate. A measure providing for an eight-man board to direct surplus property disposal was reported earlier in the day by the Senate Military committee. A similar proposal was defeated in the House, 142 to 38.

Under the House bill, the surplus property director would receive $12,000 a year. Will L. Clayton, cotton exporter who now is temporary director, is considered in line for the proposed two-year term.

Would Set Up Board

Other provisions of the House measure would set up a board of the administration's highest officials to advise the director and require the director to submit a report to Congress every three months.

Policies set down in the legislation require the agency to give public, governmental, educational and charitable institutions an opportunity to obtain surplus war property, give returning veterans a chance to establish themselves as businessmen by purchasing some of the equipment and allow property owners a priority to reacquire what the government conscripted or got by condemnation from them.

The House accepted amendments requiring congressional approval before the government may dispose of any synthetic rubber or aluminum plant or any of the big oil pipe lines; requiring approval of the advisory board before any plant costing more than $1,000,000 to build may be sold; granting small business a priority at obtaining surplus property in small lots.

In addition to calling for an eight-man board instead of centralized authority under one man, the Senate bill differs in other important respects from the House measure. It would:

1—Place the Departments of Interior and Agriculture in joint control of more than 30,000,000 acres of land acquired by the government during the war. Farming land would be disposed of by the Agriculture department under a system of purchase priorities favoring former owners, tenants and war veterans.

2—The Office of War Food Administrator Marvin Jones would be given authority over the disposal of surplus foods, cotton and woolen goods, with instructions to frame such policies as would prevent a breakdown of farm prices.

The House will would leave both farm lands and surplus agricultural commodities under the overall suspension of a single administrator.

Goes to Floor for Debate

The Senate committee bill, which now goes to the floor for debate tentatively scheduled to start tomorrow, would thus have the effect of nullifying a recent order by administrator Clayton which placed lands disposal under the jurisdiction of the Reconstruction Finance corporation (RFC).

Senator O'Mahoney (D.-Wyo.) said the committee favored a policy board rather than a single administrator 'because it felt the task was too complex and too far-reaching in its consequences" to be delegated to one man.

He said the proposed board would be composed of representatives of various geographical areas, and economic interests. In addition, two members of the Senate and two of the House would be non-voting members of the board, entitled to attend its meeting and keep Congress informed of its actions.

U. S. Loan Guarantees Proposed

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—Legislation to create a Government guarantee system for business loans, looking toward expansion of private enterprise after the war, was proposed today by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve System.

"The guaranteeing of such loans by the reserve banks," Eccles told the House Banking Committee, "would not be competitive with the private banking system. A borrower would be expected to apply for such a loan through his usual banking connection. The bank would in turn make application to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district for the guarantee.

"It is contemplated that the guarantees by the reserve banks under this authority would not exceed 90 per cent. of the amount of the credit, since any enterprise which has reasonable prospects of successful operation should be able to obtain financing in which its bank assumes at least 10 per cent. of the risk under the loan."

Such guarantees, under legislation proposed by Eccles, would be available for any type of loan made by financing institutions to business and industry, on a short-term or long-term basis and to provide either working capital or facilities.

Eccles told the committee:

"Numerous enterprises will not be able to resume peacetime operation without financial assistance, in many cases beyond that available from private sources upon terms which will meet the borrower's requirements. . . .

"Some contractors, in order to avail themselves of a favorable opportunity for purchasing Government-owned facilities and inventory, may require a larger amount of credit than can be obtained upon terms customarily granted by banks. Such situations may occur before settlement of canceled contracts as well as thereafter."

Republican Split On Peace Plans

AUG 23 1944

Held Unlikely

Washington, Aug. 23 (AP)—A prediction that there will be "no party cleavage" over issues of peace and post-war security was made today by Senator Austin (R., Vt.) after a conference with John Foster Dulles, foreign policy adviser to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

Austin, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who has supported the peace organization efforts that led to the present Soviet - British - American peace talks, and Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, another Republican committee member, discussed international questions with Dulles before he went to the State Department to confer with Secretary Hull.

Dulles came here as Dewey's representative after the Republican Presidential nominee had commented publicly upon the Dumbarton Oaks conference.

Vandenberg Agrees

Vandenberg, like Austin, said he thought the campaign could proceed with open discussion of foreign policy transcending partisanship.

"I don't think an unpartisan approach is necessarily a silent approach—quite the contrary," Vandenberg said, adding that discussions in the Senate illustrated this point.

The Michigan Senator said his views and Dulles' were "in complete accord and have been" since Dewey's adviser gave his approval to a draft of the Republican foreign-policy plank.

Dulles said only that "there was a very large area of agreement" in his talks with Austin and Vandenberg.

Reports GOP Senate Harmony

Leaving the private residence where Dulles is a guest, Austin said:

"I'm strengthened in my opinion that the campaign for President and Vice-President will not cast into the field of discussion any element of discord based on partisan, selfish interests."

Austin said that Republicans in the Senate, where opposition to the League of Nations after the last war blocked American participation, this time were in harmony.

"It is not today as it was before," Austin said. "It is my firm belief that today a very large majority of my colleagues hold these views which I have held for a long time. We have said so in the platform of the Republican party and in the Mackinac declaration. There is harmony that has not existed before for many years.

"Obstruction Not Aim"

"This encourages me to hold the view I express that it is possible to conduct a campaign without ripping open this matter on which practically all Americans are agreed."

As for the Republican party, Austin said: "It is not our purpose to obstruct; it is our purpose to be constructive." He added:

"This does not mean we are to shut our mouths and be silent and that the subject of international organization is not to be discussed from the party platform."

Details of the Dumbarton Oaks conference, Austin said, should be disclosed "as early as it is wise to do so."

Four Parley Subcommittees

While the peace-talk delegations were received at the White House by President Roosevelt, news from the conference was limited to an announcement of the formation of four subcommittees to deal with drafting of documents, legal questions, "general questions of international organization" and security.

The conference spokesman, Michael J. McDermott, special assistant to Hull, added to this the only other information he said he was authorized to give out—the time of various committee meetings.

Asked whether he could com-

30.24— 18235

ment on a published report that the British, American and Russian plans were discussed at great length after they had been submitted secretly at yesterday's session at Dumbarton Oaks, McDermott said: "I am not authorized to make any comment on it."

Documents Stay Secret

Upon further questioning by reporters, McDermott said there was "no thought of releasing any documents" which have been laid before the conference.

The press officer also said that he could make no predictions about future changes in the policy of secrecy under which the conference is operating. The State Department Correspondents' Association then sought an appointment with Under Secretary Stettinius, head of the American delegation and chairman of the Dumbarton Oaks meeting, in the interest of obtaining relaxation of the strict secrecy surrounding proceedings.

Dulles Might Revise Ideas

Dulles at a press conference gave some broad indications of possible developments in his talks with Hull. He brought along, he said, his own ideas and those of Governor Dewey, the Republican Presidential nominee, on organizing world peace.

Depending on how the meeting with Hull develops, he expected to present those ideas to the Secretary and he made it clear that if they were in conflict with the American plan, as already presented at Dumbarton Oaks, he might suggest some eleventh-hour alterations. However, he said he did not know what the plan is and could not say in advance whether changes would be suggested.

Truman Sees Union Block On Jobs Unlikely

Chicago, Aug. 23 (AP) — United States Senator Harry S. Truman, Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee, declared today: "I don't think unions can afford to stand in the way of veterans' preference" in post-war allocation of jobs.

"I think an understanding will be worked out between the unions and the veterans—there are as many union veterans as the other kind," Truman said at a press conference.

The Missouri Senator arrived from Kansas City this morning to address the National Encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars. Much of his press conference discussion was devoted to the post-war picture as it relates to returning war veterans.

"I stand on the Selective Service law as written," Truman said. "It was the intent of Congress to give veterans preference; no seniority should stand in the way."

In an address to the VFW yesterday, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, said "absolute employment priority" would not be an advantage for discharged service men and women.

'One Man Army' Nervous Bridegroom, Admits He Was 'Scared'.

AUG 25 1944

RED HILL, Pa., Aug. 23.—(AP) The "One Man Army of Anzio," steel-nerved Pfc. Alton W. Knappenberger who won the Congressional Medal of Honor for holding off two German companies and mowing down 60 Nazis, was just another jittery bridegroom today.

He dashed into the parsonage of St. Paul's Lutheran church here with his childhood sweetheart, 16-year old Ruth Eickhoff; fumbled in his pockets nervously, and dashed out again.

He had forgotten the marriage license.

Back in the parsonage again, "The Army" nodded at the minister, the Rev. H. H. Krause, and the ceremony began.

In 10 minutes, "The Army" had taken a bride and his nerves had simmered down to the point where he could extend a steady hand for congratulations.

Earlier, he told the marriage license clerk at Norristown, "you bet I'm scared—more than I ever was."

quiet Lancashire village of Freckleton.

It was feared thirty or forty other persons may have been trapped in the ruins of a snack bar across the street. None had been reached by rescue parties when darkness fell.

Eight American soldiers were among those killed, including three members of the plane's crew. The death toll was expected to reach seventy-five in Britain's worst accident of the kind.

The United States Strategic Air Force announced that the bomber, a Liberator, crashed after it was caught in a sudden storm. The pilot was among the three crewmen killed. Other members of the crew were injured. Identification of these casualties was withheld.

Another Liberator, accompanying the plane, continued on a local flight.

The plane smashed through the top of the school building, where forty-one children under five, many of them refugees from robot-bomb attacks, were assembled. It careened across the street and crashed into a snack bar, where several dozen soldiers and a staff of six women were gathered.

The flames spread rapidly through the school, the snack bar and several buildings near by. Fire brigades from neighboring districts brought the fires under control, and the bodies of thirty-four children and sixteen adults were recovered from the smoldering wreckage. Two or three of the fourteen infants removed were injured.

The rest were missing and believed dead and others who had been in the snack bar were unaccounted for. All 140 in another group of children who were in the junior and senior departments of the school escaped serious injury.

"There was a great crack, the windows caved in and children all over the school were knocked over," said F. A. Billington, the head master. "The flames spread rapidly everywhere."

American soldiers in the village joined in rescue work, comforted frightened children with candy and shed their coats to provide covering for others.

"The Americans were really splendid," said one mother. "After the crash they kept the children quiet by playing games and joking with them, and they did splendid rescue work."

Lacking full details, the United States Army Air Forces issued no report on the accident tonight.

On the British front, France, Aug. 23-(AP)-French refugees plodding wearily back to their liberated home cheered the allies and wept for today when informed of the deliverance of Paris.

"Paris est Liberee," a white-haired old French woman said, "France is reborn." Nearby her by the side of the Falaise-Argentan road lay a group of German dead. They lay beneath a black tarpaulins with their stiff jackboots pointed toward the sunny French sky.

WITH FRENCH FORCES IN THE SUBURBS OF TOULON AUG 23-(AP)-A HEAVY PALL OF DESTRUCTION, DEATH AND DISORDER HUNG OVER TOULON TODAY AS FRENCH INFANTRYMEN AND PARTISANS BATTLED GERMAN FORCES IN THE STREETS OF FRANCE'S MOST HEAVILY FORTIFIED SEAPORT UNDER A CANOPY OF ARTILLERY SHELLS.

THE NAZI GARRISON, STRONGLY HOLDING THE WATERFRONT ARSENAL, FT.MALBOUSQUET, AND THE PENINSULAR FORTS RINGING LA SEYNE AND SIX FOURS, THIS MORNING ATTEMPTED A BREAKTHROUGH WESTWARD TO MARSEILLES AFTER A NIGHT-LONG ARTILLERY BARRAGE ON FRENCH COMMUNICATIONS NORTHWARD THROUGH LEBEAUSSET. THEY WERE REPULSED BY COLONIAL TROOPS HOLDING SECTIONS OF TOULON INCLUDING THE RAILROAD STATION.

FRENCH TROOPS ALSO CUT OFF THE GERMANS AT BANDOL, 10 MILES WEST OF TOULON.

FRENCH AND AMERICAN BATTERIES ON THE HILLS NORTH OF TOULON WERE POURING TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON GERMAN POSITIONS AND RECEIVING PLENTY IN RETURN.

FROM THIS FORWARD COMMAND POST ON HILLS OVERLOOKING TOULON, THE CITY SEEMS LIKE A SAUCER INSIDE THE SURROUNDING HILLS. THROUGH THE HAZE YOU COULD SEE THE RED-TILED ROOFS OF HOMES AND THE TALLER BUILDINGS OF THE BUSINESS SECTION.

SMOKE RISES FROM THE ARSENAL SECTOR AS OUR SHELLS FIND THEIR MARKS ON THE GERMAN HOLDOUTS THERE. NAZI SHELLS WHISTLE OVERHEAD AS THE GERMANS THROW HEAVY COASTAL ARTILLERY BACK AT US. THE ALLIES HAVE NUMEROUS POSITIONS OVERLOOKING THE TOWN FROM THE NORTH, FROM WHICH THE INFANTRY BATTLED ITS WAY INTO TOULON'S STREETS TWO DAYS AGO.

THE ROAD INTO TOWN IS UNDER A STEADY HAIL OF SHRAPNEL, BARRING ENTRANCE TO ALL BUT ARMORED VEHICLES. INSIDE THE CITY WAR RAGES AS PARTISANS FIRE INTO NAZI MACHINEGUN NESTS AND AT SNIPERS IN BITTER HOUSE TO HOUSE COMBAT.

The WAKE OF OUR FORCES BUT A FEW GERMAN GUERRILLA OUTFITS TRYING DESPERATELY TO SIFT NORTH THROUGH THE LINES AND REJOIN GERMAN UNITS EAST OF THE SEINE RIVER.

THE MAIN BATTLE FOR FRANCE IS ALREADY OVER. PARIS--THE HEART OF FRANCE--IS ALREADY A MILITARY SIDE ISSUE IN THIS WAR, AND HAS BEEN FOR DAYS TO THE AMERICAN ARMY WHICH COULD HAVE OCCUPIED IT AT WILL BUT CHOSE FIRST TO CARRY OUT THE MORE IMPORTANT TASK OF KILLING NAZIS AND BREAKING THE BACK OF GERMAN RESISTANCE.

THAT MISSION HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED. THE BULK OF THE GERMAN ARMY IN FRANCE HAS BEEN DESTROYED IN TWO LIGHTNING ADVANCES--FIRST, LT.GEN.OMAR N.BRADLEY'S ISOLATION AND CAPTURE OF GERMAN FORCES ON THE CHERBOURG PENINSULA AND, SECOND, THE GREAT ARMORED DRIVE LED BY MAJ.GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON, JR., WHICH CUT OFF THE BREST PENINSULA AND POCKETED THE CREAM OF THE GERMAN ARMY WEST OF THE FALAISE-ARGENTAN LINE.

THERE APPARENTLY REMAINS IN FRANCE NO GERMAN STRENGTH CAPABLE OF LONG RETAINING THE NAZI GRIP ON THIS COUNTRY--AND THE GOAL OF EVERY FRONT-LINE DOUGHBOY AND TANKMAN FACING THE EAST TONIGHT IS THE GERMAN BORDER--THEN BERLIN AND VICTORY.

ONE-THIRD OF GERMANY'S OIL SUPPLIES ONCE CAME FROM THE RICH FIELDS OF ROMANIA, BUT WHEN THAT COUNTRY ANNOUNCED HER DECISION LAST NIGHT (WED) TO SWITCH TO THE ALLIED SIDE, THIS FLOW HAD BEEN REDUCED TO A COMPARATIVE TRICKLE.

REPEATED ALLIED BOMBING ATTACKS ON THE PLOESTI OIL FIELDS VIRTUALLY ELIMINATED THEIR USEFULNESS AS A SOURCE FOR NAZI PETROLEUM.

A REPORT THIS WEEK FROM HEADQUARTERS OF THE U.S.15TH AIR FORCE IN ITALY SAID 14 OF ROMANIA'S 21 REFINERIES, INCLUDING EVERY MAJOR PRODUCTION UNIT, HAD BEEN KNOCKED OUT OF OPERATION. THIS CONCENTRATED AERIAL ASSAULT OVER A PERIOD OF FOUR AND A HALF MONTHS COST THE U.S.AND BRITAIN 2,200 TO 2,500 FLIERS AND 250 TO 300 AIRCRAFT.

YANKS RACE TO MOUTH OF SEINE, TRAP NAZIS; GERMANS SHELL ALLIES IN FIGHT FOR PARIS

AUG 25 1944

REPORT GERMANS MAY MAKE STAND ON RIVER'S BANK

AUG 25 1944

Bad Flying Weather Helped German Seventh Army to Save Some Armor.

MAY DRIVE FOR COAST

Some American Units Push Toward Germany, 150 Miles from Border.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, Aug. 25. — (AP) American armor raced to cover the last 25 miles to the mouth of the Seine today and encircle the remaining German soldiers trying to hold back an Allied tide pouring through breaches in their Touques river line.

Highways converging on a pocket little more than 10 miles deep and 35 miles wide were loaded with troops, tanks and trucks hurrying Allied forces forward for the kill against whatever the German Seventh army has left between the Touques river and the Seine, 25 miles farther east.

Elbeuf, Seine river ferrying point 25 miles from the mouth, where the Germans shipped the bulk of their men and armor across, fell to a dazzling 25-mile American advance, and the enemy's main port of Rouen, 10 miles north, was believed under the sights of U. S. artillerymen.

Canadians streaming across the Touques swung on as much as 11 miles east and were nearing the mouth of the Seine for a junction with the Americans which will explode one more battle of annihilation before the last German is wiped out west of the big river.

May Try to Make Stand

Reports conflicted as to whether the Germans would try to rally for a stand along the Seine's east bank, but American forces already over the river both northwest and southeast of Paris were in a position to outflank these positions and roll them up against the sea.

One report said every available German soldier was being deployed along the stream while another said the Germans were in flight toward the Reich and had no more than 10 divisions left to hold the river and guard the rocket coast to the northeast.

Far to the south the Americans plugged the last hole in the Orleans gap south of Paris with the capture of Montargis, by-passed in the attack on Sens. Montargis lies about halfway between Orleans and Sens and controls most roads running through the gap.

The diversion of American and French troops to help hard-pressed Patriots liberate Paris apparently did not rob the Allied drive of any of its steam, although it was felt at headquarters that these forces could have been better employed elsewhere, since Paris' fall was a foregone conclusion anyway.

The swift American and Canadian advances reduced by half the area of the Seine loop held by the Germans only yesterday.

Inland the British were on the move. Other American forces hammering up from the south had linked up with the British, and the Germans were squeezed into a pocket no more than 10 miles deep and 35 miles wide, about half the area they held south of the Seine yesterday.

AUG 25 1944

Highways behind Pursuit were jammed with Allied vehicles, the great advance was on, the enemy's Seine base of Rouen was within range of American artillery, and the end of another big battle in the complete liberation of France was in sight.

The great port of Le Havre across the Seine estuary was in an untenable position. A big fleet of enemy light service warships and other vessels was seen putting to sea and wa... Allied warplanes pounced upon ... sinking an undetermined number of ships.

The Germans were holding out stubbornly northeast of their fallen communications center of Lisieux, but with the American deep behind their Risle river line—last stand before the Seine—it appeared the German command had written these rearguards off.

AUG 25 1944

Reports from the British front indicated the bulk of the men and armor of the Seventh army, with the reinforcements from the 15th, had got across the river during the recent days of bad weather, and the final bag would not be large.

All night long these crossings were under attack by British Mosquito planes and other night-flying craft, and undetermined numbers of boats and barges were destroyed. Bad weather hampered operations.

There was some speculation that the Germans now had but ten divisions left in northwestern France, both inside the pocket and along the rocket coast, while other reports said they were massing every available soldier for a stand along the Seine.

150 Miles From Border

Without waiting for this battle to end, hard-riding American forces hammered out two more bridgeheads across the Seine at Pontainebleau, 35 miles southeast of Paris, and pushed toward the German Border—some 150 miles away—along a 25-mile front.

Behind them all the area south of Paris to the Spanish border now was considered "Allied" and it was only a question of time until garrisons holding out in ports and cities were liquidated.

The American armored drive 15 miles south of Sens was nearing the road center of Troyes, 20 miles east of last reported positions. Troyes controls most of the enemy's routes still open to southern France.

(The German radio said these forces were preparing to sweep north on Paris "in an outflanking movement on a great scale.")

Front line dispatches said this juggernaut still had met little resistance from the ground, but the German air force rose against the challenge to its borders and suffered losses of 37 planes in dogfights which swirled near World War I battlefields.

Supreme Headquarters remained silent on the Mantes bridgehead across the Seine northwest of Paris, where American forces were in position to drive on the rocket coast or cut behind the Germans coming out of the Seine loop battlefield.

The collapse of the enemy's Toques River line broke the back of the sternest rear-guard resistance summoned by the Germans to protect their withdrawals across the Seine.

Blangy, a town three miles east of the river and fourteen miles inland from the sea, was overrun in general advances averaging more than six miles in depth. One force neared Cricqueboeuf, four miles beyond the river and almost at the mouth of the Seine.

GERMANS BREAK ARMISTICE PACT, RENEW FIGHTING

Conflicting Reports Received on Situation in French Capital.

AID IS RUSHED

Le Bourget Airfield Reported Held by Forces of Interior.

By JAMES M. LONG

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, Aug. 25 — (AP) American troops and a French armored division, meeting heavy German artillery resistance, battled in and near the Paris suburbs early today in their drive to join patriots fighting the enemy in the streets for complete liberation of their capital.

A dispatch from Edward D. Ball, Associated Press correspondent with the Allies near Paris, said one column of Brig. Gen. Jacques Le Clerc's French armor had driven a wedge into German-held territory from the west and another from the south had advanced to within nine miles of Paris. These columns met fierce German artillery fire. Allied field guns moved up to engage the enemy batteries.

Conflicting Reports

(The Paris radio, now in the hands of the FFI, said in a broadcast recorded by CBS that troops of LeClerc, "passing through Pont de Sevres, have entered Paris."

(The radio de la Natione Francaise broadcast that some of Le Clerc's fighters along with some Americans had reached Paris and that the bulk was expected to reach the capital with Gen. Charles de Gaulle tomorrow. The broadcast, recorded by CBS, said preparations already were being made for deGaulle's triumphal entry.)

A Free French broadcast early today said German guns were violently bombarding sections of Paris. One section being shelled, the radio said, was the fifteenth district lying opposite suburban Clamart, where it placed advancing French and American forces.

The French radio also broadcast an "urgent appeal for help", declaring the townhall in the 11th district was being attacked by Germans and that patriots were running out of ammunition. This district lies in the east of Paris and includes the Place de la Republique, where barracks of the Republican guard were situated.

Supreme Headquarters broke its silence today on the confused situation within the capital—whose "liberation" was celebrated in United Nations capitals throughout the world yesterday — and declared Paris could not yet be considered entirely free of the Nazi yoke.

The supreme command declared that while portions held the "greater portion of Paris, it could not be considered liberated in the military sense of the word since General Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces neither control the city nor have free access to it.

AUG 25 1944

The latest word at Supreme Headquarters was that French forces of the Interior still were fighting the Germans in the streets, after the Nazis broke the terms of an agreement under which presumably they would have withdrawn east of the capital.

"An agreement was made by the FFI in Paris with the Germans for some sort of an armistice in the capital," a SHAEF statement said.

"It was intended to let the Germans clear out, but evidently they changed their minds and threatened to destroy everything.

"The French in Paris called for help and we are furnishing that help for them now. Allied forces began moving on Paris this morning but it is not yet known whether they have entered the capital. When they do Supreme Headquarters wil issue an announcement."

Associated Press correspondent, Edward D. Ball, at the headquarters of Brigadier General Jacques Le Clerc's French Second Armored division, said that at 5:30 p. m. today (11:30 a. m. Eastern War time) there was no confirmation of a British broadcast report that Le Clerc had entered Paris. It was this force which first was reported in the capital.

Adding to a belief that the city's final liberation would be comparatively easy was the report of an underground leader that the Germans had fortified the city against the population, rather than against an invading army.

Machinegun posts have been set up at important crossroads, mostly in the Champs de Elysee, and there are some anti-tank obstacles.

Report Le Bourget Seized

(Radio France at Algiers said the great Le Bourget airfield outside Paris had been liberated, and the British radio declared the Germans had set fire to one wing of the famous building in Versailles where the peace treaty of 1919 was signed, the Federal Communications Commission reported.)

The Supreme Headquarters announcement took French sources in London by surprise. They declared their best information was that patriots still controlled the center of the city and the main public buildings although the Germans might be resisting Allied troops trying to break in.

General de Gaulle's headquarters yesterday released the announcement that Paris once more was a free city, which touched off celebrations throughout the world.

A German voice, speaking on the Paris radio wave-length, broke in repeatedly today saying: "Attention, attention, enemy tank spearheads which have broken through are to be wiped out at strongpoints. This is Unger speaking."

(The Germans still claimed control of Paris and said some sections had been wrecked by fighting after "terrorists" tried to "seize power.")

German Trickery

Unofficially it was understood the German request for an armistice was only an attempt to trick the patriots into granting safe conduct through Paris for troops who had been fighting the Americans west of the city.

At any rate, when the Germans turned on the Patriots, the French forces called for help and the Supreme Command sent columns rolling toward the city. There were no late reports on the progress of this fighting.

It was clear the armistice was negotiated without the knowledge of the Supreme command, whose orders are that no armistice can be negotiated without General Eisenhower's consent.

The feeling at headquarters was that the underground outbreak and the subsequent call for help caused the diversion of Allied troops which could be used to better advantage in destroying German armies, since the city's fall was a foregone conclusion anyway.

ELBEUF, KEY RIVER PORT, IS CAPTURED

Bulk Of German Forces, However, Are Thought To Have Escaped

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Aug. 24 (AP)—Allied armies, paced by a 25-mile American advance, cut the area of the Seine pocket in half today, but it appeared the bulk of the German forces had escaped across the river and were retreating before United States troops sweeping toward the Reich.

The strategic Seine city of Elbeuf was captured. Only 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine, it was a focal point for German boats and barges ferrying the Seventh Army across the river.

The Canadian First Army along the coast smashed the Toques river line and dashed on as much as 11 miles beyond, almost to the mouth of the stream.

British, Americans Joined

Inland, the British were on the move. Other American forces driving from the south had linked up with the British and the Germans were squeezed into a pocket no more than ten miles deep and 35 miles wide, about half the area they held south of the Seine yesterday.

The enemy's Seine base of Rouen, ten miles to the north, was within range of American artillery.

The great port of Le Havre across the Seine estuary was in an untenable position. A big fleet of enemy light service warships and other vessels was seen putting to sea, and waiting Allied warplanes pounced upon it, sinking an undetermined number of ships.

The Germans were holding out northeast of their fallen communications center of Lisieux, but with the Americans deep behind their Risle river line—last stand before the Seine—it appeared these rear guards must fall back.

Majority Believed Escaped

Reports from the British front indicated the bulk of the men and armor of the Seventh Army, with the reinforcements from the 15th, had got across the river during the recent days of bad weather, and the final bag would not be large.

All night long these crossings were under attack by British Mosquito planes and other night-flying craft, and undetermined numbers of boats and barges were destroyed.

There was some speculation that the Germans now had but ten divisions left in northwestern France, both inside the pocket and along the rocket coast, while other reports said they were massing every available soldier for a stand along the Seine.

Without waiting for this battle to end, American forces hammered out two more bridgeheads across the Seine at Fontainebleau, 35 miles southeast of Paris, and pushed toward the German border—some 150 miles away—along a 25-mile front.

The Americans plugged the last hole in the Orleans gap south of Paris with the capture of Montargis, by-passed in the attack on Sens. Montargis lies about halfway between Orleans and Sens and controls most roads running through the gap.

Called Question Of Time

Behind them all the area south of Paris to the Spanish border now was considered "Allied" and it was only a question of time until garrisons holding out in ports and cities were liquidated.

The American armored drive 15 miles south of Sens was nearing the road center of Troyes, 20 miles east of last reported positions. Troyes controls most of the enemy's routes still open to southern France.

[The German radio said these forces were preparing to sweep north on Paris "in an outflanking movement on a great scale."]

Front line dispatches said these troops still had met little resistance from the ground, but the German air force was out and suffered losses of 37 planes in dogfights which swirled near World War I battlefields.

Silent About Mantes

Supreme Headquarters remained silent on the Mantes bridgehead across the Seine northwest of Paris, where American forces were in position to drive on the rocket coast or cut behind the Germans coming out of the Seine loop battlefield.

The collapse of the enemy's Toques river line broke the back of the sternest rear-guard resistance summoned by the Germans to protect their withdrawals across the Seine.

Blangy, a town three miles east of the river and 14 miles inland from the sea, was overrun in general advances averaging more than six miles in depth. One force neared Cricqueboeuf, four miles beyond the river and almost at the mouth of the Seine.

While the Germans refused to budge from high ground east of Lisieux, Canadian forces on the south pushed ahead swiftly, captured Thiberville, ten miles east of Lisieux, and St. Aubin-de-Scallon, two miles north.

Pont L'Eveque Retaken

Ten miles north of Lisieux the Allies pressed back into Pont l'Eveque and found the town deserted. North of here they took Bonneville, two miles in from the coast.

There was heavy fighting near Lisieux, where Canadians won control of all the town but were under fire from enemy tanks and self-propelled guns directed by observers and snipers hiding out in the ancient cathedral to the east.

The town of Rugles was the southeast corner of the pocket yesterday, but the British during the day pushed on east and made contact with the Americans somewhere southwest of Conches, which is 14 miles northeast of Rugles.

Further tightening of the grip on the enemy, other formations reached Le Neubourg, 14 miles north of Conches and some 20 miles east of captured Thiberville. Patrols were reported pushing east of Thiberville without running into trouble.

NAZIS STILL BATTLE TO HOLD ON TO PARIS

P. M. (1:20 P. M. Eastern wartime), said: "Terrorists in some districts of the French Capital have attempted to seize power. As a result of the struggle waged against these terrorists, some sections have suffered heavy damage."

An earlier German broadcast said that Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton Jr.'s United States Third Army was preparing a sweep on Paris from the southeast from the area of Sens and Troyes in "an outflanking movement on a great scale."

The Germans were said to have threatened widespread destruction to public buildings and installations. A French underground leader who came to London from Paris a month ago said that the Germans then had at least 10,000 regular troops in the capital and strong forces of Gestapo secret police.

Confusion Over 'Armistice.'

The "armistice" negotiations by the French street fighters in Paris apparently were made without previous knowledge of the Supreme Command. A directive provides that no field commander can negotiate an armistice with the Germans unless Gen. Eisenhower gives his consent.

French Forces of the Interior, Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, had announced early yesterday that the capital was liberated and their statements were hailed by governmental leaders the world over.

French underground leaders, after four days of street fighting in Paris, negotiated an "armistice" with the German garrison, presumably on the terms that the Nazis were to leave the city, supreme headquarters of the Allied expeditionary force said. The Germans apparently repudiated the agreement and kept on fighting and the underground called on the Allies for help.

[In a broadcast picked up at New York late this afternoon by NBC, a Free French radio using a Vichy frequency said that "the first American tanks have entered Paris through the Alesia Gate and established a junction with the French Forces of the Interior." The Americans were established in Bourg la Reine and the Germans were massed between the Orleans and the Chantilly gates, this station added.]

Surprise to French in London.

The supreme headquarters announcement was a surprise to French spokesmen in London, who acknowledged there might be fighting around Paris as the Allied troops sought to break in. The French said their best information indicated that the French Forces of the Interior still were in control of the center of the city and its main buildings.

[An official statement from Supreme Headquarters, as distributed by the OWI, said French patriots were in possession of "a greater portion of Paris." A little later, the Algiers radio announced in a broadcast picked up by the FCC that the famous Le Bourget air field, just outside of Paris, has been liberated. The British radio said that the Germans had set fire to one wing of the building at Versailles where the 1918 peace treaty was signed, and that the Allied forces called to Paris to help the French are meeting with resistance.]

A mysterious German call, possibly code, repeated over and over on the Paris radio wave lengths asserted tonight: "Attention, attention, enemy tank spearheads which have broken through are to be wiped out at strongpoints. This is Unger speaking."

The German radio said tonight that some sections of Paris had "suffered heavy damage" in fighting against French patriots and that the Nazis still controlled the capital.

It is expected at Supreme Headquarters, however, that German resistance before the city will be of a "rear guard" character.

Up to a late hour today, no word had been received at Supreme Headquarters that Allied forces actually had entered Paris.

Headquarters Statement.

The text of the Supreme Headquarters statement today said:

"An agreement was made by the FFI in Paris with the Germans for some sort of armistice in the capital. It was intended to let the Germans clear out, but evidently they changed their minds and threatened to destroy everything.

"The French in Paris called for help, and we are furnishing that help for them now. Allied forces began moving on Paris this morning, but it is not yet known whether they have entered the capital. When they do Supreme Headquarters will issue an announcement."

In announcing the "liberation" of Paris yesterday, Gen. Koenig said "50,000 armed men, supported by several hundred thousand unarmed patriots," had gone into action.

"Toward 8 P. M. yesterday, August 22, after a four-day struggle, the enemy had been beaten everywhere and the patriots occupied all public buildings," Koenig's communique said, "representatives of Vichy were arrested or are in flight. Thus the people of Paris have taken a prominent part in the liberation of the capital. Long live France!"

The French announced today the capture of over 1,000 Germans in the first day of the four-day battle to liberate Paris, and declared that Nazi losses were heavy in bitter fighting street by street.

At least a dozen heavy tanks with which the German garrison charged massed patriots in the streets were destroyed in the first day of fighting and ten others were knocked out in the next two days. Many civilians were killed by the Nazis, the French forces of the interior commander, Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, announced in a communique.

Gen. Koenig said that the German commandant in the French capital tried to stall the fate of his troops by asking for an armistice. It was understood from other sources that he sought thus to gain temporary safe conduct for the withdrawal through Paris of German troops which still were in action against American forces in an arc west of the city. The French said they refused and fought it out and won.

Text of Communique.

The text of Gen. Koenig's communique today follows:

"Following orders for a general uprising on August 19, strikes became general and the Germans paraded the streets with tanks and fired into crowds, killing many civilians.

"Very soon guerrilla fighting was going on over the city. Particularly heavy fighting took place in the areas of the Hotel De Ville (the City Hall), the island of the Cite, between the Place St. Michele and Pantheon, between the Place Denferth-Rochereau and the Gobelins, between Porte D'Orleans and University City, and in the area between the Place De La Republique and the east station.

AUG 25 1944

"In the first day's fighting, a dozen heavy tanks were destroyed and more than 1,000 prisoners were taken as well as a large number of weapons including anti-tank guns.

"During the next night and day, the occupation of public buildings proceeded rapidly and during Sunday night, the enemy withdrew from certain positions.

Nazis Asked for Armistice.

"The German commander started negotiations for an armistice and offered to recognize the F. F. I. as combatants.

"In one action during Sunday and Monday, 400 Patriots entrenched in the Boulevard St. Michel destroyed ten tanks, four armored vehicles, twenty-one lorries and seventeen other cars. They inflicted heavy losses on the Germans."

Say Laval Seeks Asylum.

The German Ambassador to Switzerland was reported by the secret German-language station Radio Atlantic last night to have asked the Swiss Government for asylum for Laval.

Bordeaux Reported Taken—Patton's Tanks Plunge 25 Miles Toward Sea in Drive to Close Trap—Gain Below Paris.

London, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—American troops advancing north from the Riviera reached the border of Switzerland today, and Hitler's hold on France was slipping rapidly away.

AUG 25 1944

At the mouth of the Seine the Germans attempted a large-scale Dunkirk from threatened Le Havre, with many war vessels and other ships which were made the targets of ferocious assaults by Allied aircraft.

The Canadian First Army forces broke through German rearguards all along the line of the Touques River today and at some points their forward elements got eleven miles beyond, almost to the mouth of the Seine.

Bordeaux, last German stronghold in southwestern France, was reported to have been captured by American troops with the aid of French Maquis.

The Germans' evacuation fleet off Le Havre, including a wide assortment of torpedo boats, gunboats, corvettes and merchant ships, was bombed for eight solid hours from midnight on today by relays of British naval aircraft and other R. A. F. planes. The attempted German flight coincided with advances all around the Seine corner which hourly were choking off German escape routes. The Germans were retreating all along the front from Lisieux to the sea.

Nazis Have 10 Divisions Left.

Front line dispatches said Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's Seventh and Fifteenth armies had been reduced to about ten divisions.

The British closed in rapidly on the dwindling Seine pocket, capturing Thiberville, ten miles northeast of Orbec, and two other nearby points.

Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army had pushed fifteen miles beyond Sens, sixty-two miles southeast of Paris, toward the German frontier, 150 miles away.

The two forces apparently were less than 200 miles from a junction isolating all southern France—but already much of southern France is free.

Bordeaux Reported Freed.

An Algiers broadcast said Bordeaux, big French port on the South Atlantic coast, had been captured by a combined force of Americans driving south from the Loire and French Maquis who had marched north from the Spanish border.

Gen. Patch's Seventh Army, continuing its pace northwest past captured Marseille, drove into the Rhone Valley, capturing Salon, only twenty miles from Arles at the mouth of the river.

French patriots were reported in control of the entire Lyon region, the great southern metropolis on the Rhone in southern France, and at Perpignan, just north of the Spanish border on the Gulf of Lion.

Allies Ride Roughshod.

With a swiftness indicating the completeness of the German rout, the American Third Army thrust twenty-five miles northwestward along the south bank of the Seine toward the sea and captured Elbeuf, one of the chief ferry points where Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge had been trying to rescue his broken forces.

This thrust—to within thirty miles of the mouth of the Seine and only nine miles from Rouen—narrowed the pocket into which the splintered divisions of the German Seventh and Fifteenth armies were caught. This and other advances cut the pocket down to half its former size.

British troops, now fighting on the east side of the pocket, reached Le Neubourg, nine miles southwest of Lebeuf and twelve miles beyond Conches.

Le Havre Guns Fire at Allies.

Along the channel coast Allied troops were so close to the great port of Le Havre that German guns there sent shells across the Seine Bay into Allied positions.

The German communique declared American forces which had crossed the Seine northwest of Paris at La Roche-Guyon, near Mantes, had been thrown back across the river. Allied headquarters, however, gave out no news concerning this spearhead which was in a position to strike northward toward the Somme battlefields of the first world war and the rocket coast.

The Germans also declared Americans had suffered a reverse northeast of Fontainebleau where they had crossed the Seine southeast of Paris. On the contrary, Supreme Headquarters announced a fifteen-mile advance from Sens to the southeast and beyond Montargris, thirty miles southwest of Sens. The Loing River had been crossed.

A Berlin broadcast reporting fighting in the sector southeast of Paris, said today that the situation has yet to be clarified in the Rommilly and Troyes areas, indicating that American spearheads may have approached those towns. Troyes is thirty-five miles east of Sens and Rommilly is thirty miles northwest of Troyes.

South of Paris the Americans had a front forty miles broad pointed toward Nancy, Strasbourg, Belfort—a string of former French strongholds facing the Rhine.

The Americans who reached the Swiss frontier presumably were the force which took Grenoble. This force apparently was headed for a junction with Gen. Patton's Army and a joint attack on the Germans' West Wall.

Geneva reports placed the Americans at St. Julien on the Swiss frontier five miles south of Geneva. A reliable report said other advanced units also had arrived at Evian, twelve miles from St. Gingolph in the frontier.

The German radio reported today that Allied troops had carried out a "small" landing operation "south of Biarritz." The broadcast did not make clear whether this was the same landing as that at St. Jean de Luz, announced yesterday by Berlin radio after the operation was initially described in dispatches from the Spanish frontier. St. Jean de Luz is approximately ten miles south of Biarritz on the southeastern coast of France.

U. S. Motorized Forces Sweep to Swiss Border

AUG 25 1944

French Patriots Clear Path for Troops 70 Miles North of Grenoble.

ROME, Aug. 24.—(AP) A highly mobile American task force of tanks, motorized infantry and artillery sped northward beyond Grenoble today along highways already largely cleared of the enemy by French patriots—racing to join forces with Gen Eisenhower's Allied armies in northern France.

(An Associated Press dispatch from Geneva said American troops had driven into St. Julien on the Swiss border 70 miles north of Grenoble and little more than 120 miles from the Rhine border of Germany. The report was not immediately confirmed by Allied sources.)

Patriots were reported in full control of the area from Grenoble north to the Swiss border, having cut off whatever German troops remain in southern and central France from communication with Nazi forces in northern Italy.

Except in and near the naval base of Toulon, where a trapped German garrison fought from well prepared positions, the only enemy opposition to the swift movement of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army columns was coming from small and motley assortments of Nazi troops scraped together in some localities.

Thrown piecemeal into the hopeless task of trying to hold back the powerful American and French forces, these small units were being destroyed as fast as they appeared. Allied prison pens were filling so rapidly that an accurate count of captives was impossible. More than 17,000 had been tabulated.

Repair Marseille Docks

Allied engineers rushed into the great port of Marseille close on the heels of conquering French troops and began assessing the damage done to harbor installations by bombs and demolitions. Work began immediately to whip France's biggest port back into shape to handle a tremendous flow of Allied reinforcements and supplies.

Re-entry into Marseille was a sweet triumph for the French troops, among whom were many who sailed from the same port to refuge in North Africa when the Nazi panzer hordes crashed across their homeland more than four years ago.

There were unconfirmed reports that the Germans had sunk some vessels in the approaches to Marseille harbor, but it appeared certain that possession of the port would relieve the Allied supply services of the necessity of unloading thousands of tons of supplies on beaches from shallow draft landing craft.

Allied headquarters reported tonight that small pockets of Nazis were holding out in the harbor zone, but these were expected to be erased shortly. Sid Feder, Associated Press correspondent who accompanied French troops into the city, said bullets still were whizzing down streets throughout the city of almost a million population. He said some 500 German troops had been captured there.

The nightly Allied announcement said American forces striking westward across the Rhone delta toward Arles gained nearly 10 miles during the day. The Yank column speeding north from Grenoble made "further advances."

A field dispatch from Joseph Dynan, Associated Press war correspondent, reported that the German garrison of Toulon still held eight or ten of the 12 forts guarding the approaches to the besieged port and that the Americans were sending up artillery to help knock out these troublesome batteries.

Bitter Street Fighting

Dynan said bitter fighting was raging through Toulon's streets, with the hottest conflict in the neighborhood of the arsenal. Refugees from the city told him most residents were huddled in basements to avoid Allied shells and that normal activity was paralyzed. All public utilities had been out since French troops fought into the city last Sunday and food supplies were said to have been virtually exhausted.

(Ludwig Sertorius, German military commentator, said that all Allied attempts to reach the Toulon port area so far had been repulsed, but added gloomily that "enemy pressure is increasing hourly, with new enemy reserves arriving steadily.")

Some 200 Germans were taken prisoner when the little island of Porquerolles outside Toulon harbor surrendered after being subjected to a fierce bombardment by an American heavy cruiser.

Weather Ideal

Striking 25 miles northwest of Marseille toward the Rhone valley, an American column captured the town of Salon, but 20 miles from the mouth of the broad passageway to northern France. Headquarters said French troops also were driving westward into the Rhone valley.

American units in the Durance valley were reported only 25 miles from Avignon, important Rhone valley town. The Allied advance had the advantage of ideal weather. By noon yesterday it was estimated that between 6,000 and 8,000 square miles of southern France had been liberated.

The naval command reported tonight that an undesignated American cruiser and the French cruiser Gloire successfully shelled targets in support of troops fighting at Toulon and the British cruiser, HMS Aurora, scored two direct hits on an enemy battery near Cape Brun in Toulon bay.

The American cruiser knocked out enemy positions near Giens on the coast about 10 miles east of Toulon.

Farther to the east six other light units including the French light cruiser Le Terrible waged a successful duel with enemy coastal defense guns on the shore of the Gulf of Napoule in the vicinity of Cannes. Warships also bombarded enemy pillboxes, mobile guns and a motor transport.

The long arm of naval aircraft reached well inland with fighters from Allied carriers shooting up enemy transport and communications.

Gun Battles Sweep Marseille As Nazi Nests Are Mopped Up

AUG 25 1944

By Sid Feder

MARSEILLE, Aug. 24 (AP).—This greatest seaport of France may have been captured, as French forces officially announced last night, but you would never believe it by what is going on inside the city today.

There was gun fighting in virtually every street, not only from strong pockets of the enemy in various parts of the city of 800,000, but also among Frenchmen as patriots tried to clear places where collaborators were believed hidden.

Today in various other parts of the city I saw the same savage street fighting I witnessed yesterday at the point where the Boulevard de la Madeleine joins the famous Cannebiere. And at that point, too, action was still hot as small garrisons of Germans held out in Fort St. Jean and Fort St. Nicolas at the waterfront point guarding the Vieux Port. They fired light artillery down the Cannebiere like pouring oil in a funnel.

There were fewer Germans in this second largest city of France tonight, however. Mopping up, street by street and house by house, French troops have rounded up nearly 500 of the Wehrmacht, most of them apparently veteran troops.

In the late afternoon, after several civilians and soldiers had met death in blazing gun fighting, the Germans finally were overrun and the city was ours. But it was a ripping, tearing, slugging match while it lasted.

The French had to root the enemy out of the Hotel du Louvre, on the Cannebiere, where they had machine-gun emplacements, and then go across the boulevard to do the same thing at the Hotel Nouailles. Many houses along the way were death traps, too, as snipers in upper stories tried to hold out until the final minute.

Today's battling was the climax of nearly a week of armed resistance patriots put up before their uniformed comrades arrived. Only yesterday they were barricaded in the prefecture of police and the Germans tried to blow them out with two raids by lines of armored cars.

One of these cars, carrying a Red Cross flag, witnessed the raid and the patriots refused to fire on it. When it reached the front of the prefecture it opened fire.

For more than an hour and a half infantry and patriots tried to break through to the two hotels to end the strongest enemy in the heart of this seaport city, but they made little progress against organized opposition.

Then the tanks rumbled in. The first came to a halt in front of the doorway in which I was crouching, and that was the signal to the enemy to turn loose everything in a last-ditch effort to stop their approaching doom.

But the tanks rumbled on, while patriots and foot soldiers, some armed only with small caliber pistols, went along as support. Then for an hour gun blasts reached a new high until the tanks finally rolled the length of this spacious, beautiful boulevard to clear up the enemy.

The final drive on Fort St. Jean, which was used as a barracks for the Foreign Legion before the war, was an inch-by-inch struggle all the way from Aubagne, eight miles eastward. Trees along all the roads were scarred and damaged by gunfire. Entire hillsides were burned bare and black from shells.

Between La Valentine and Marseille there were still hot fights going on this morning. We stopped at the curve in the road less than a minute before one began. Otherwise we would have run squarely into where enemy machine guns were slashing away from a mountain chateau. The only reason we stopped was because a patriot hailed us to tell us they had twenty-eight Germans rounded up in the house and wanted us to take them.

Although Marseille was completely occupied, there were still small pockets being moped up.

AP Reporter Visits Liberated France, Populace Is Orderly

AUG 25 1944

(Charles S. Foltz, chief of the Madrid bureau of the Associated Press, is the first correspondent to visit French territory on the Spanish frontier newly cleared of Germans by the French forces of the interior. In the following dispatch, he tells of an overnight trip to Hendaye, across the international frontier from Irun, Spain.)

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 24—(AP) Territory held by France's internal army in southwest France many miles from the nearest Allied troops is under perfect control.

I have just visited a region where the tricolor floats and the only army is the French Forces of the Interior.

Thousands of towns and cities such as Hendaye are defended by citizens and soldiers of the new France.

Curfew in Force

I arrived in Hendaye at sundown. Although the curfew still keeps citizens indoors from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m., I was able to borrow a bicycle and visit a number of friends and acquaintances in both Hendaye and the outskirts of St. Jean de Luz.

They said I was the only out of town friend they had seen in years. They poured out their hearts to me. All knew of the reports of the fall of Paris, but they neither rushed out to kill collaborationists nor spent the night carousing in cafes.

I found them happily obeying the curfew orders they violated so frequently under German occupation. I watched them obey to the letter orders given them by soldiers without uniforms — Frenchmen like themselves—Frenchmen they trusted.

The only army at that time between the Bordeaux region and the Seine—300 miles apart, was the French Forces of the Interior.

In Hendaye and St. Jean de Luz it is by no means a Coxey's army of ne'er-do-wells nor is it composed only of those Frenchmen who obtained or already had arms. It is a carefully chosen army tried and found capable through four years of the toughest kind of fighting—underground warfare against the occupying army.

It has no uniform other than the FFI armband, but even without that all Hendaye recognizes the men who fought for freedom.

I talked to a member of the FFI committee of Hendaye. He told me that until now there has been no troop landings at St. Jean de Luz, although this morning an Allied warship and freighter entered the harbor.

He said the Allied landing in the area until this morning was limited to a landing at Verdon, at the mouth of the Gironde northwest of Bordeaux, and at Arcachon, southwest of Bordeaux.

Hendaye is an example of the people's determination to let no [illegible] desire for vengeance against the collaborationists cheat them of a democratic victory. There is plenty of hate stored up the past four years against Frenchmen considered traitors.

Yet so eager are both the FFI and the people to maintain their own self-respect, I was told everywhere, that not a single collaborationist had been assassinated or executed in Hendaye. I was told that not even the regular members of Jacques Doriot's collaborationists, the French popular party, had been arrested.

BRITISH TROOPS CONFIDENT WAR'S END IS IN SIGHT

AUG 25 1944

WITH BRITISH TROOPS EN-ROUTE TO THE SEINE, Aug. 24—(AP) All roads to the Seine are jammed tonight. The great advance is on.

In columns stretching many miles across the countryside, Allied armies are rolling eastward in what we all believe is the final phase of the war. I have heard British officers wagering that the European war will be over within the next three weeks. There were few takers.

Across the Seine, Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge is said to have massed every available soldier scraped from dregs of the German manpower reservoir to meet us.

"The enemy is leaving bits and pieces to try and delay us, but there is no major stand all the way back to the Seine," a field headquarters officer told the Associated Press.

On an 80-mile jeep ride to the front today, I traveled through and sometimes over wreckage of von Kluge's German Seventh army. The scene was incredible.

Mile after mile, sometimes forced to drive over enemy corpses squashed in the mud, we bumped along deep — rutted roads where the Germans made their last frantic attempt to escape the Normandy trap.

In ditches, in newly-harvested wheat fields, behind hedges lay hundreds upon hundreds of jack-booted enemy slain, dead horses, burned out tanks and charred skeletons of motor trucks.

Delayed Dispatch Explains Earlier Reports from Paris

AUG 25 1944

By DON WHITEHEAD

ON THE ROAD TO PARIS, Aug. 23—(Delayed)—(AP) A French armored column and some Americans moved on Paris today after an uprising of French Forces of the Interior had forced the Germans to seek an armistice under which they could withdraw from the city.

(This dispatch, nearly 36 hours in transmission, was written before it was disclosed that the Germans were still battling in the French capital. Supreme Allied Headquarters announced Thursday that Allied troops were fighting their way into the city to assist the patriots.

(Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball filed a dispatch from the headquarters of the French Second Armored Division, a unit of the U. S. Third army, at 5:30 p. m. Thursday—11:30 a. m. Eastern War Time—saying there was no confirmation at that time of a BBC radio report that French Brig. Gen. Jacques Le Clerc had entered Paris.)

The patriots' rebellion began Saturday and the entire French gendarme force went over to the patriots' side. Fighting raged inside the city for three days.

Tuesday the commander of the German forces inside Paris asked the FFI leader for an armistice until he could get his troops who were manning defense on the southeastern outskirts out of the city to the north. The armistice was granted until noon Wednesday.

The French resistance leader slipped out of Paris and came to Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley and asked that troops be sent into the city to control the situation. Bradley immediately designated a French armored column and an American unit to march on the city.

This development caused a swift night movement of armor and troops to get them into position facing Paris near Rambouillet and Dreux, where the Germans had road blocks guarding the approaches to the capital.

French armor and American units drew up on a line during the morning waiting for the armistice expiration. At noon the long columns began to rumble on Paris. The long awaited move to capture the great city, which fell to the Germans June 15, 1940, was under way.

The Germans had perhaps 15,000 troops, an officer estimated, guarding the approaches and manning the road blocks southwest of the city. The uprising inside Paris threatened these troops and cut off their supplies. Inside the city proper the Germans were believed to have had only some 2,000 security troops plus administrative officers.

The columns began their move on Paris expecting no resistance. Wildly cheering throngs of French stood on the roadside and gave the French and American troops a tremendous ovation.

As yet we do not know fully the story of what happened inside Paris since the rioting began Saturday. The leader of the French Forces of the Interior who directed the uprising reported the Germans had been increasingly nervous for days as the American advance neared Paris and the people became more excited.

The uprising was well planned and organized. It was not a leaderless mob action which the Germans could handle with a few well placed troops. In fact the Germans were so afraid of the workers' quarter of the city they threw a cordon around it rather than risk entering the streets.

When the hour came patriots brought guns and grenades out of hiding places and began attacking the enemy wherever they found him. It is not known how many Germans were killed by the patriots, but reliable sources say it was a considerable number.

Within a few hours after the battle began the Patriots held virtual control of all of Paris. The Germans had no freedom of movement and in fact were afraid to move through the streets.

Strange Development

And then came one of the strangest developments of all the war. The German military leader asked for an armistice on the understanding that he would withdraw his forces from the southwest and evacuate the entire city. The French leader agreed, but he wanted Allied troops to enter the city immediately after the armistice and take control.

30.24— 18255

Bradley agreed and machinery was set in motion to get the columns on the move.

The French armored column was led by Gen. LeClerc, who fought alongside the British through the Libyan and Tunisian campaigns and won fame with his defense of Bir Hacheim.

Bradley gave the honor of entering Paris in force to the French—a gesture typical of the tall Missourian.

If Paris is entered at this time it would place a burden on the army for the city is in need of food and coal. A leader of the FFI said thousands of tons of coal were needed immediately to keep utilities operating even on a limited scale.

Apparently the Germans had not done any widespread demolitions or sabotaged utilities up until last night. But they may be today.

The Allied high command does not want to make Paris a battle ground and has no intention, if it can be avoided, of fighting in the streets and endangering people and historic monuments.

Many German units appear completely disorganized as a result of the widespread communications breakdown.

During the day German planes made a series of raids on front-line troops but Thunderbolt fighters and heavy anti-aircraft fire brought down a number of them and drove the rest away.

Lieut. William Corbett, 130-22 89th avenue, Richmond Hill, Queens, said the machine-gunner in his jeep, Private Dewaine Fields, of Portland, Ore., shot down one of the Nazi fighters which swooped down on close skies.

AUG 25 1944

"They started buzzing around," said Private Fields, "and I put twelve incendiaries and about forty-eight bullets into the guts of his plane. He started smoking and crashed over the hill. The pilot didn't get out."

Prisoners Annoy Engineers.

Combat engineers complained they were running into too many prisoners, who were slowing up into the outskirts of the city. These Germans still can't believe how fast we can roll. They are completely disorganized now. They don't seem to know themselves what they are doing."

One German major had been [illegible]o Sens to organize German [illegible]glers. Before he could [illegible]sh his mission he was himself [illegible]n a prison pen.

"We have taken at least 400 prisoners in this area," said Major A. W. Frank of Alhambra, Cal.

The Germans fled so quickly they failed to blow the bridge spanning the Yonne River—a sure sign that their communications were chaotic and that they had to flee with only brief warning. They left huge stores of military booty.

"We found at least thirty carloads of Diesel and fuel oil," Major Clark said, "and one carload of coffee and another carload of canned fish and canned beef and

Hustling Yanks Find Prisoners a Bother

By HAL BOYLE.

With United States Troops Southeast of Paris, Aug. 23 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The main battle for France already is over.

There apparently remains in France no German strength capable of long retaining the Nazi grip on this country, and the goal of every front-line soldier facing the east tonight is the German border—then Berlin and victory.

American infantry and armor, breaking through light ground resistance, but fighting off swarms of Nazi planes, have driven beyond Sens to within about 150 miles of the German frontier.

I drove more than fifty miles to Sens and beyond today and never saw a corpse or a flaming vehicle. Truckloads of German prisoners streamed back from advance elements. Behind there are only a few German guerrilla outfits trying desperately to escape to east of the Seine.

Having Wonderful Time.

The road from Pithiviers to Sens and beyond is one long lane of rapturously happy French citizens. At every freshly liberated village they swarm around every Army vehicle that pauses and shower the troops with fresh apples, pears, bright flowers and wine.

"We are looking for blown bridges to repair, and these Germans keep coming out and wanting us to take them," said Lieut. J. Clarke of Trenton, N. J. "And everytime we go through a town French patriots want to turn over more prisoners to us," said Lieut. Leo A. Voskan, 1454 University avenue, New York city. "Those French really are going to town."

At an infantry command post in the Sens area, Major A. K. Clark of Lincoln, Neb., told how fast-moving American armor had caught high Nazi officers completely by surprise.

"They had their main headquarters in the Hotel de Paris in Sens, and the manager said that the German officers appeared completely unworried and told him there was no possibility of the Americans getting that far.

Nazis Take It on the Lam.

"He returned about five minutes later and found these same Nazi officers madly ransacking drawers and packing everything they could lay their hands on. Then they took off on bicycles or any other vehicle they could find.

Tons Of German Shells Captured

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

With United States Troops Attacking West of the Seine, Aug. 23 (AP—Delayed)—American troops west of the Seine are driving northward today. One of our headquarters outfits overran and seized tons of German ammunition in a forest.

Enemy shells in stack upon orderly stack fell to us in this wood—which will be outlived as a military position within a few hours as headquarters goes on again to the north.

The command post of this offensive has moved forward many miles in the last three days and the offensive itself has gained 25 miles since Sunday.

Prisoners are coming in by many hundreds. Some units up to company strength have been captured.

German resistance now is far different from what had been known before. Now the enemy, while still fighting, is without apparent conviction and without apparent heart.

Parisian Politics

Called Confusing

Houdan, France, Aug. 24 (AP)—A Paris businessman who fled the capital late yesterday declared today the city was in "great confusion" over the political situation.

He said most of the Germans had withdrawn in an orderly fashion, but that he had heard speculation it might be some kind of a trap.

"There has been little bloodshed there yet," he continued, "but a form of civil war is likely to break out at any time between local factions trying to take control if the regular troops do not occupy the city soon."

Eisenhower Gives DSC To Rear Admiral Wilkes

General Eisenhower's Headquarters in France, Aug. 24 (AP)—General Dwight D. Eisenhower pinned the Distinguished Service Medal today on Rear Admiral John Wilkes for "initiative, resourcefulness and ability" in the cross-channel movement of troops and supplies for the invasion of the continent.

Admiral Wilkes, whose home is Charlotte, N. C., now is stationed at Cherbourg in command of the United States ports and supply bases in France.

Argentina To Present Wheat, Meat To France

Buenos Aires, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Argentine Government announced tonight it was presenting 100,000 tons of wheat and 5,000 tons of meat to the people of France.

This food, the Government said in a decree, would be put immediately at the disposition of French authorities in the Buenos Aires port.

Papen's Cousin a Soviet Captive

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 25 (AP)—The Russians were reported in a communiqué supplement, broadcast from Moscow today, to have captured Lieut. Col. Adolf von Papen, whom it identified as a cousin of Franz von Papen, the German diplomat. The officer commanded the 406th Regiment of the 201st German Security Division, said the broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor.

ROMANIA NOW

OPENS ATTACK ON HUNGARY

AUG 25 1944

Nazi Regime in Budapest Moves to Block Peace Intrigues There.

BULGARS SEEK PEACE TERMS

Moscow Calls On German People to Surrender at Once or Face Total Downfall.

London, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Dispatches from Bucharest today reported the Romanians marching against Hungary in swift succession to their sudden changing of sides in the war yesterday, when they made an about-face that direly threatened the whole German position in the Balkans.

Germany, stunned, denounced the new Romanian Government as a Communist regime, reported rioting in the rich oil and wheat kingdom and appealed to the Romanian troops "not to take orders from the traitor King . . . but to remain faithful to the German ally who sheds her blood for the defense of Romania."

At 7:55 A. M., however, a Bucharest dispatch relayed by the Swiss radio said that Romanian troops began a march into Transylvania last night." Transylvania is the mountainous province, half of which Adolf Hitler took from Romania and handed over to Hungary in 1940.

Decrees Curb Hungary.

Meanwhile today Budapest, occupied by the Germans and gravely threatened by the Romanian capitulation allowing Russian troops to reach the Hungarian frontiers, abolished all political parties, apparently in fear of intrigue to take Hungary out of the war.

The Cabinet order was published in the Official Gazette and as reported by DNB, the German official news agency, decreed that every political party, "irrespective of its political outlook," must dissolve at once.

Property belonging to former party organizations was frozen pending further disposition. Severe penalties were provided for violations.

Liberal and Left-wing parties were dissolved when the Germans occupied Hungary earlier this year. The new decree indicates that even the Right-wing groups are no longer considered reliable.

[In a broadcast reported by the FCC, the Budapest radio said today that the Hungarian Government had taken all measures necessitated by the new situation in Romania. On the other hand, CBS announced in a broadcast from Berne that most of Romania, according to the Swiss newspapers, is firmly in the hands of the Romanian people, that the Romanians are fighting German troops in the grea Black Sea port of Constanza, and fighting the Hungarians on the border of Hungary, while in Bucharest itself a state of siege has been declared in expectation of a German attack.]

Berlin Denies Surprise.

Russian armies driving swiftly toward the heart of Romania signaled the punch that finally blew down the house of cards which the deposed Premier Antonescu had built up in Romania.

The Germans announced that Romania's capitulation had been expected. The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Aftonbladet said that German countermeasures can be expected. Berlin attributed Romania's move to the Russian offensive, Turkey's break with Germany, Bulgaria's peace overtures and the sustained Allied bombings of the Ploesti oil fields, he added.

Bulgaria, already outflanked in the south by Turkey's severance of relations with Germany, was now imperiled from the north as well, and was in a wholly untenable position. Yugoslavia and Greece, where patriot armies have been waging long and bitter guerrilla warfare against the Nazi yoke, were in a position for quick liberation.

The Hungarian and Slovakian Cabinets were reported in urgent meetings, and the expectation in London was that Bulgaria might capitulate in a matter of a few days or even hours.

[The British radio, in a broadcast recorded at New York this afternoon by CBS, quoted the diplomatic correspondent of the London Times as saying that the Bulgarian Government has officially asked the British Ambassador in Turkey "for conditions determined by the Allies which would permit Bulgaria to cease participating in the war." The correspondent added: "Naturally, the Russian Government was completely informed of the progress of the discussions. It is expected that now that Romania has ceased to fight, Bulgaria will do the same shortly."]

Call on Germans to Quit.

Meanwhile today the Moscow radio called upon the German people to "surrender immediately, or go on uselessly fighting on your own soil to your complete downfall." Continuing, Moscow said, "This is the eve of victory for the Allied Nations. We therefore call upon all Germans to save any further bloodshed by stopping this useless struggle before bitter fighting is brought to their own soil."

Moscow also urged the Germans to "join with all foreign workers in a mass strike" and to "put the SS out of action by a sudden bold stroke."

Germans in Panic.

The German Foreign Office threatened reprisals for "Romania's treason," but added: "The nature of the measures to be taken against Romania cannot yet be revealed. Developments in Romania are still in a fluid state."

Swedish correspondents in Berlin said that all communication between Bucharest and Berlin had been cut since last night, indicating that the Nazis were only guessing at what was happening within Romania.

The Germans were plainly in panic as the Balkan crackup seemed to be repeating the history of 1918 when the collapse of Bulgaria shocked the Kaiser's generals into a quick plea for peace.

Berlin announced the formation of a "Romanian national government" but it was not clear whether this regime or King Michael's government controlled Bucharest. Nor was it clear who controlled the Bucharest radio, which announced a curfew from 8 P. M. to 5 A. M. and ordered all civil officials to report for duty. Street cars and train traffic were announced as cut off during those hours as well.

Foe Quitting Greece.

Even before Romania's announced acceptance of armistice terms, reports reaching London told of German troop withdrawals from southern Greece in apparent preparation for a large-scale contraction of their lines in southeastern Europe. A quick, grand withdrawal now is even more imperative.

The Germans, frantically trying to repair the damage, termed the capitulation the act of a "clique of traitors" and announced formation of a "national government"—presumably a puppet regime—around which Berlin broadcasts asked the Romanian people to rally.

"'Obey only its orders and not those of the traitors," urged Berlin in a broadcast beamed to Romania.

[The Federal Communications Commission said the Berlin broadcast was in the form of a communique attributed to the new "National Government." The communique, rebroadcast at intervals, did not name any of those constituting the new Government.

[The Romanian domestic radio announced that the military commander of Bucharest had ordered an 8 P. M. to 5 A. M. curfew in the city. "All train and trolley traffic will be halted during those hours, said this broadcast, also reported by the FCC.]

Antonescu's Flight Reported.

The Swiss radio, relaying Bucharest dispatches, said Marshal Ion Antonescu, deposed Romanian Premier, had fled to Germany—a report indicating he may have been chosen to head the pro-German Government.

"Apparently, one effect of the capitulation would be to bar Germany from Romania's productive Ploesti oil regions, where Hitler once obtained one-third of the supply needed to operate his war machines. Allied bombing, however, has reduced this flow to a comparative trickle.

Germany also found large numbers of her forces in the midst of a hostile country with uncertain communications to the rear.

Politically, Hitler's Balkan edifice was cracking badly. Bulgaria has been edging toward peace for at least a week. After the Romanian announcement, the Cabinet of puppet Slovakia reported "important decisions" were made in an "urgent" meeting.

Hungary in Nazi Grip.

Hungary is still tightly in the Nazi grip, but the effect there was expected to be electric—especially since King Michael declared conquest of Transylvania a major Romanian objective.

Without specific mention of Romania's shift, the Moscow radio shortly after the Bucharest announcement called upon the German people to "surrender immediately," adding: "This is the eve of victory for the Allied Nations."

In world war I, only forty-one days elapsed between the time the first German satellite—Bulgaria—ceased fighting and the date of Germany's own signing of an armistice.

King Michael's proclamation said "Romania has accepted armistice terms offered by the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States." There was no immediate official comment in any of the Allied capitals or any word as to what the armistice embraced. It was widely assumed, however, that the capitulation was based on Russian terms offered early in the summer after communication with the British and United States governments.

These terms never were disclosed. Prime Minister Churchill in the House of Commons August 2 called them "generous." Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, reaffirmed on the eve of the Russian entrance into northeastern Romania last spring Moscow's claims to Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, taken from Romania in 1940, but gave assurance Russia had no other territorial claims or any intention of interfering with Romanian affairs.

The Bucharest announcement said the Allied governments had guaranteed Romania's independence, had promised non-interference with internal affairs, and had recognized "the injustice" of Germany's award of Transylvania to Hungary at a Vienna arbitration conference in 1940.

King Michael's proclamation summoned his armed forces to the side of Allied armies as a co-belligerent but by all indications Romania's main offensive intentions will be directed against Hungary to recover Transylvania.

Transylvania, long a disputed region, was cut from Hungary and ceded to Romania, then one of the Allied nations, at the end of the last war. Occupying an area of 22,812 square miles, it had a population of 3,217,149 before the present war, including 1,000,000 romanians.

The new Romanian Premier, in a broadcast to the people immediately following the king's announcement, proclaimed the Antonescu "dictatorship" had been "cast aside."

Sanatescu pledged a "democratic regime in which public freedom and rights of the citizens will be guaranteed and respected." In his first decrees he closed concentration camps and turned loose virtually all political prisoners.

King Michael's proclamation said that the conquest of Transylvania, half of which Hitler awarded to Hungary in 1940, was a major Romanian objective. He summoned all Romania's armed forces to the side of the Allies as a co-belligerent and said: "We shall cross the frontiers unjustly imposed upon us at Vienna so as to liberate our Transylvania from enemy occupation."

Antonescu Reported in Flight.

Antonescu was reported to have fled to Germany. The new Premier, Konstantin Sanatescu, pledged a democratic regime. The anti-Nazi Peasant leader, Juliu Maniu, is a Minister-without-Portfolio in the new Government. A Swiss radio broadcast said that Gen. Mihail was new Romanian Commander in Chief.

Some optimistic prophets in London said that there was a good chance for the European war to end before October 1 on the basis of the Romanian switch.

Hungary Gets Warning.

A grave warning to the people of Hungary was broadcast by the British radio today. In a broadcast picked up at New York by CBS, London said:

"Hungary can either finish the fight on Nazi Germany's side and thus share Germany's fate to the full—a fate, that is, of complete national catastrophe—or else she can take her fate into her own hands.

"Hungary can save herself by coming to terms with Russia and her Allies at once, with a view to an immediate cessation of hostilities."

Two Soviet Armies Topple Bastions On Romanian Front

London, Friday, Aug. 25 (AP)—Sweeping through hundreds of towns and capturing 25,000 more prisoners in capitulated Romania, two Soviet armies yesterday toppled the Bessarabian capital of Chisinau (Kishinev) and four other major strongholds in an offensive which put the Red army within 35 miles of the Galati Gap defenses guarding the invasion path into the heart of he Balkans.

"Enemy resisance is now broken along the entire front," said a front dispatch from Captain Platov, Soviet correspondent who is with Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukraine Army forces. "Our tank and motorized troops are pressing forward in forces from various directions on groupings of German and Romanian troops. The enemy is sustaining huge losses."

Take 47,000 In Five Days

The daily communique broadcast from Moscow said Tolbukhin's troops and the Second Ukraine Army under Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky during yesterday alone captured 25,000 Germans and Romanians for a five-day total of 47,000.

These Germans and Romanians already have lost more than 25,000 killed in the first three days of the southern offensive, bringing to 853,886 the number of Axis troops slain or captured since Russia began her huge summer offensive June 23.

Capturing more than 550 towns and villages, the Russians swept to within 125 miles of Bucharest, Romanian capital, with the seizure of Barlad on the Iasi-Galati railway 58 miles north of Galati. The fall of that bastion, announced in one of the two orders of the day issued by Premier Stalin, also put the Russians within 35 miles of previously prepared Nazi defenses along the lower Siret and Putna rivers in the 45-mile-wide "Galati Gap" between Galati and Focsani at the edge of the Carpathian Mountains.

Stormed By Both Armies

Encircled Chisinau, pre-war Romania's second city 75 miles northeast of Barlad, was stormed and captured by troops of both Red armies, Stalin's first order of the day said.

The other major strongholds taken were Roman and Bacau, the latter 37 miles northwest of Barlad. Both are rail cities on the Czernowitz-Bucharest trunk line, and Roman is 26 miles north of Bacau. They were captured by the right wing of Malinovsky's forces descending swiftly toward Focsani.

The conquest of Barlad represented a 68-mile advance in two days from Iasi, captured Tuesday on the third day of the offensive.

Fighting Way To Junction

Malinovsky's troops, striking southward between the Prut and Siret rivers, captured 300 localities yesterday, and Tolbukhin's forces after crossing the lower Dnestr river were fighting their way westward to a junction with Malinovsky's men along the Prut. Both sides were using great masses of tanks, cavalry and infantry and swarms of Soviet planes blasted a path at every German sign of resistance.

Dispatches via Switzerland said the German Eighth Army based along and north of the Galati Gap was in imminent danger of being entirely overrun by the defection of Romania, while the Sixth German Army in southern Romania also was imperiled by the swift advance of the Russians.

Malinovsky's troops captured 10,000 prisoners yesterday, and Tolbukhin's men took 15,000, among them Maj. Gen. Werner Klepp, commander of the German Ninth Infantry Division. He was the 29th Nazi general seized since the summer offensive began.

Moscow Won't Halt Its Armies Until Nazis in Romania Are Liquidated; Bucharest Reported in State of Siege; Berlin Assails Michael

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 25 (Friday).—Soviet Radio announced today that only by active military aid against the German Army could Romania obtain the armistice which Romania reported Wednesday night she had accepted.

A broadcast statement declared that "the conclusion of an armistice between Romania and the coalition of the Allies" could be effected only by Romania's military aid in the liquidation of the German armed forces.

It said that if Romanian troops stopped fighting the Russians and turned on the Germans, "or against the Hungarians for the liberation of Transylvania," then the Red Army "will not disarm them, will keep completely intact for them their entire equipment and help them in this honorable duty."

The text of the Foreign Commissariat's statement:

"In connection with events in Romania, the Soviet government considers it not out of place to confirm the declaration given in April of this year that the Soviet Union has no intention of acquiring any part of Romanian territory, or to change the existing social order in Romania, or to limit in any respect the independence of Romania.

"The Soviet government considers it essential to restore, together with the Romanians, the independence of Romania by the means of liberating Romania from the German Fascist yoke.

"The Soviet supreme command considers that if the Romanian troops discontinue military operations against the Red Army, and if they will undertake the obligation to conduct a war of liberation against the Germans hand in hand with the Red Army for the independence of Romania, or against the Hungarians for the liberation of Transylvania, then the Red Army will not disarm them, will keep completely intact for them their entire equipment, and will by all means help them fufill this honorable duty.

Must Beat Nazis First

"However, the Red Army can discontinue military operations on the territory of Romania only after liquidation of German troops in Romania which are the conductors of oppression and enslavement of the Romanian people.

"The assistance of the Romanian troops to the Red Army troops in the task of liquidating the German troops is the only means of speedy discontinuation of military operations on Romanian territory, and of the conclusion of an armistice between Romania and the coalition of the Allies."

The Germans, trying to salvage what they can from capitulated Romania, announced the vague formation of a puppet regime opposing King Michael's new pro-Ally government, appealing for Romanians to remain in the war on the Axis side, and said rioting had broken out in the country.

The Swiss radio broadcast a dispatch, dated Bucharest, saying that Romanian troops "started a march into Transylvania Wednesday night," referring to Michael's announced intention of recovering, with Allied help, that part of pre-war Romania awarded to Hungary by the Germans in the 1940 Vienna conference.

[A state of siege was proclaimed in Bucharest, according to an article in the Swiss newspaper "La Suisse," reported to the Office of War Information. A Romanian domestic broadcast reported by the Federal Communications Commission said that General Tedorescu, Bucharest military commander, had ordered an 8 p m. to 5 a. m. curfew, abolished concentration camps and granted amnesty to many political prisoners.]

Call Regime "Communist"

Berlin did not break the news of Romania's defection from the Axis until mid-afternoon, when the D. N. B. news agency told of the nation's acceptance of armistice terms offered by Russia, the United States and Britain. The new Romanian government, headed by Premier General Constantin Sanatescu, and including Juliu Maniu, Peasant party head; Dinu Bratianu, Liberal leader, and Socialist and Communist representatives, was termed a "Communist regime," and Berlin said that a new "National government" had been formed to combat it.

Berlin gave no details of this so-called National regime, either its organization or its supposed membership. By its praise of the ousted Premier, Marshal Ion Antonescu, the German radio suggested he might be a member. A Swiss broadcast said Antonescu had fled to Germany.

D. N. B.'s tardy bulletin on the situation said that "Chief of State Antonescu was ousted from the government as a result of Anglo-American pressure brought to bear on the King." Then, appealing to Romanians in the name of the shadowy "National" government, Berlin called the King a "willing tool of a small clique of traitors which has removed the state leader, Antonescu, and is now about to commit a miserable treachery by handing over all of us and our country to our arch enemy, Bolshevism."

The broadcast, beamed to Romania at intervals during the day, said the King was getting ready to flee tot America, as had his father, former King Carol, and branded as an "infamous lie" Michael's assertion that the United Nations had guaranteed Romania's independence.

It said the British and Americans long ago had promised Romania to Russia, and appealed to Romanians "not to follow the traitor King and his corrupt clique of business men." Romanian soldiers were likewise asked not to take orders from the King and his army helpers, "but to remain faithful to the German ally who sheds his blood for the defense of Romania the same as you."

Reds Declare Armed Assistance Price of Armistice With Allies.

AUG 25 1944

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 25—(AP) Russia called upon Romania today to send her armies against the Germans "hand in hand with the Red army for the liberation of Romania" and fixed this as the price of an armistice with the Allies.

In the first official reply from an Allied government to Romania's announced decision to accept Allied peace terms, the Soviet government said that if the Romanian troops stopped fighting the Russians and turned on the Germans, "or against the Hungarians for the liberation of Transylvania," then the Red army "will not disarm them, will keep completely intact for them their entire equipment, and help them in this honorable duty."

Russia disavowed entirely any desire to acquire Romanian territory in the statement, issued by the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs and broadcast by the Moscow radio.

The statement, recorded by the Soviet monitor, contained no direct reference to the proclamation by

King Mihai of Romania on Wednesday, but it answered the youthful monarch plainly by declaring:

"The assistance of the Romanian troops to the Red army troops in the task of liquidating the German troops is the only means of speedy discontinuation of military operations on Romanian territory, and of the conclusion of an armistice between Romania and the coalition of the Allies."

In effect this meant that, despite King Mihai's proclamation, a state of war continues to exist between Romania and Russia, Great Britain and the United States.

No statement has yet been made by the British and American governments and in London diplomatic sources disclosed that Romania's sudden capitulation came as colt from the blue to Britain. Since there had been no recent consultation it was believed Romania was moving now to accept what Prime Minister Churchill has described as the "generous" terms" offered six months ago.

Russia held up to Romania, as one of the conditions for peace, that Romanian troops war against the Hungarians for "liberation of Transylvania." A later Moscow broadcast reported "fierce armed clashes" were taking place in northern Transylvania between the Romanian populace and Hungarian troops.

REDS CAPTURE ANOTHER CITY IN ROMANIA

ADVANCE IN POLAND ALSO

Overrun Hundreds of German War Plants — Capture Several Key Towns.

London, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Premier Stalin in an Order of the Day announced tonight the capture of Kishinev (Chininau), in Romania, which the Russians had by-passed when they captured Iasi, fifty-five miles to the west, and Tighina, to the southeast. The city was the capital of the Soviet Moldavian Republic, which includes Bessarabia, annexed from Romania in 1940.

In a second Order of the Day Stalin said that the Russian forces have captured both Roman, thirty-three miles southeast of Iasi, and Bacau, fifty-three miles southwest of Iasi, along with several other Romanian towns. The advance took the Russians to within 120 miles of the oil center of Ploesti, he added.

Both Roman and Bacau are on the Cernauti-Bucharest railway skirting the Carpathians.

Rush for Oil Fields.

Moscow, Aug. 24 (A. P.)—Captives reported hostilities spreading between the troops of Germany and Romania today while two great Russian army groups swept toward the heart of the oil and wheat kingdom in drives apparently aimed at trapping any Nazi still in their path.

Companion offensives in south and north Poland continued apace.

AUG 25 1944

Troops which seized Debica were declared overrunning hundreds of German war factories, 150 of them in Debica alone. Red Star said the Lwow-Krakow railroad bristled with German war plants of all kinds. The advance moved within seventeen miles of Tarnov. Further north, Russian columns were within thirty-five miles of Krakow, and seventy-five of German Silesia itself.

Northeast of Warsaw, the Red Army drove within five miles of the important communications hub of Lomza, twenty miles below the East Prussian frontier, in an offensive gradually splitting German armies defending that Reich province and Warsaw.

Captured Romanians said the Germans had trained their guns on them, seeking to block their retreat in some places. Many Romanian units were reported raked by machinegun fire.

140 Miles to Ploesti.

The Russian advance continued uninterrupted toward the Danube Basin and Galati Gap. At midnight, Soviet troops had moved to within 167 miles of Bucharest and 140 of the Ploesti oil center, and less than fifty from the mouth of the Danube—a principal transport artery for Hitler. Tighina, Getatea-Alba and Vaslui all fell in Bessarabia.

Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian Army group has captured 6,000 square miles of Romanian territory in a push from Odessa and thundered on toward the Galati Gap. His troops were within thirty-five miles of those of Gen. Fedor I. Tolbukhin driving down from Iasi, and the armies appeared to be throwing a great noose around enemy forces clustered about the Bessarabian capital of Chisinau.

North of the Carpathians, Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian Army group was overrunning swiftly the arsenals where thousands of Polish and Russian war prisoners were put to work in 1941 and 1942. The Red Army here was actually getting into vital German industries, factories upon which Hitler depended to keep Germany in the war.

West of Debica the Russians were across the Wistoka River. Konev's objective is Krakow, the mother city of Poland, her ancient capital and a great industrial center of a quarter of a million persons. The Germans offered stiff resistance, the Red Star said, behind well prepared steel and concrete forts. Konev's left flank was curling along the Czech frontier, eleven to twenty-one miles away in the Carpathians.

In the middle Baltic republics the Red Army appeared to have withstood the latest German tank drive. The Russians maintained their pressure on Riga from the east and south.

No fresh reports came from the Warsaw front, where other Russian armies were besieging the city for the twenty-fifth day from immediately north and east. News also was lacking from the East Prussian front, the eastern boundary of which was reached last week.

AUG 25 1944

The historic Bessarabian towns of Tighina and Cetatea-Alba on the west bank of the Dnestr, 167 miles from the Romanian capital, and Vaslui, 140 miles northeast of Ploesti, were among more than 400 towns that fell yesterday all along the eastern front, a Soviet communique said.

Soon after Moscow's guns boomed twin salutes to the Romanian victories, foreign radio reports were heard telling of Romania's capitulation to the Allies, but there was no information available from Russian sources.

Romanians Battle Nazis.

The exit of Romania from the war has been regarded as inevitable here, however, in view of the Red Army's offensive through huge sections of Moldavia and Bessarabia in the past four days. The effect of Romania's reported collapse in shortening the war could hardly be overestimated.

The Russian war bulletin declared the Romanians, attempting to retreat, were battling with Germans trying to bar them, and that large numbers of Romanian officers and men had been slain by the Nazis.

Meanwhile, in the new offensive northeast of Warsaw, aimed at East Prussia, the Russians advanced to within eight miles of the German fortress of Lomza, twenty miles below the Prussian border, and liberated another eighty towns, the bulletin said.

Nazi counter-attacks from the suburb of Praga, just east of Warsaw, were driven off, with the Germans suffering sharp losses.

Konev On Move Again.

In still other successes, Marshal Ivan S. Konev's Ukranian Army, in a westward thrust along the rail route leading to Krakow and German Silesia, seized Debica, large aircraft industry center and communications point sixty-four miles east of Krakow and nineteen miles east of Tarnow, the next probable objective.

German counter-attacks in Latvia, aimed at reaching Nazi Baltic troops, were not only beaten off but the Russians succeeded in improving their own positions, the communique declared.

[Moscow made no announcement concerning a German radio report which said Russian forces and reached "the beaches of Riga," and the Germans had no further explanation.]

Linked with the Romanian land drive, whose latest successes were announced by Stalin in two orders of the day, were a series of air attacks on Romanian Black Sea ports. The Russians sank eight ships—an auxiliary cruiser, transport and patrol cutter at Constanta; a transport, two barges, and a cutter off Salina and a motor ship at Valkov.

Predict New Nazi Retreat.

London, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The Polish Press Bureau in London said today that the Germans were evacuating equipment from Krakow in preparation for a fresh retreat in Poland.

Gen. Bor's embattled headquarters within beleagured Warsaw said that the Germans were fighting savagely to keep open three main east-west roads through the capital to handle traffic for a new retreat.

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Aug. 24 (AP)—Five thousand Allied warplanes—more than half of them heavy bombers—struck from Britain and Italy today against German oil, aircraft and industrial targets from the Baltic to the Balkans and smashed naval and merchant vessels the enemy hoped to use in evacuating his western ports.

AUG 25 1944

An estimated 8,000 tons of exploding steel poured down on at least 21 objectives stretching from the great Baltic port of Kiel on through Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia and French and Dutch ports as good weather over Central Europe released the heavyweights which had been grounded five days.

25 Bombers, 5 Fighters Lost

Twenty-five bombers and five fighters of the British-based Eighth United States Air Force failed to return. But two of the bombers were known to have landed safely in Sweden. Reports of the Mediterranean losses were not immediately available.

Most of the 25 British-based bombers which went down were lost to heavy flak, although some formations encountered fighter opposition. Escorting fighters shot down ten German planes and bomber gunners accounted for two others. Fighters destroyed 14 Nazi planes on the ground.

Mustang Pilot Sets Record

Twenty-five separate attacks were made on light warships trying to escape from Le Havre and many were reported hit while others were chased back into port.

Fighters escorting British-based heavies strafed German planes parked on airfields. Capt. John T. Godfrey of Woonsocket, R. I., a Mustang pilot, destroyed four trimotored transport planes on an airdrome deep in Germany, bringing his total ground kills to 18—a new record for 8th USAAF fighter pilots.

Godfrey, former wingman for Capt. Don S. Gentile, one of the top United States aces, also has destroyed 18 enemy planes in the air.

8th Air Force Tops

In the first 70 days of the invasion, when all Allied airmen based in Britain and France shot down 2,990 German planes in combat, while Americans bagged 651 more on the ground, the Eighth USAAF topped the list in destruction. The Eighth's bomber gunners and fighter pilots destroyed 1,623 in the air and 548 on the ground.

Some of the Eighth's bomber crewmen today reported attacks by German fighters, including jet-propelled craft. Others had only heavy flak and some encountered no opposition.

Tactical air units which yesterday downed 50 German planes against a loss of 17 of their own over the northern France battle area were restricted by bad flying weather today, particularly in the Seine area.

Big Armada Strikes From England — Strong Forces Flies From Italy.

AUG 25

London, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—A vast armada of 2,300 American planes smashed a dozen targets in Germany and on the Czech border today.

[Rome, meanwhile, reported that from Italy a strong force of heavy bombers, probably numbering 750, attacked Czecho-Slovak oil refineries at Kolin, forty miles east of Prague, and at Pardubice, fifty-five miles east of Prague today.]

The attacks in Germany by 1,300 heavy bombers and 1,000 fighters constituted one of the greatest assaults ever mounted by United States air forces.

Targets included synthetic oil plants to Merseberg, Misburg and Ruhland in Germany and Bruk on the Czecho-Slovak border. Also bombed were an oil refinery at Freital, near Dresden; two airplane plants at Brunswick; German air force stations at Kolleda, near Merseberg, and Langenhagen, near Hanover; a radio factory at Miemar and other industrial targets at Kiel.

The air forces announced late today that fifty German warplanes were destroyed in operations from the British and French bases yesterday, and that in the first 770 days of the invasion 3,641 German planes had been destroyed in the air and on the ground. In the same period 2,959 Allied aircraft were lost. The figures included strategic bombing attacks on Germany itself.

The reported destruction of 3,641 planes constituted a force larger than the whole Nazi air fleet based in western Europe on June 6. The Germans had been reinforced since from the east and south however.

Swift Mosquito bombers made a "concentrated" attack on Cologne last night.

Residents on the British southeast coast reported heavy naval gunfire in Dover Strait during the night and violent explosions along the French shore, possibly caused by Allied air attacks on flying bomb launching sites. The activity continued most of the night, with the most violent explosions coming from the Calais area. Windows on the British coast rattled with the sound of the blasts.

Planes Strike From Both Britain and Italy.

London, Aug. 24 (A. Allied fighters and bombers filled the Channel skies during the morning.

AUG 25 1944

Other British bombers blasted objectives in the north.

Residents on the British southeast coast reported heavy naval gunfire in Dover Strait during the night and violent explosions along the French shore, possibly caused by Allied air attacks on flying bomb launching sites. Bag 45 Nazi Planes.

Rome, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The American Fifteenth Air Force chewed off another hunk of the Luftwaffe's fast dwindling power in central Europe yesterday, destroying forty-five enemy planes in the course of sweeping raids which included a heavy attack raids on airdromes in Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Allied air losses likewise have been heavy. Twenty-nine aircraft were lost yesterday and three during the preceding night.

Enemy fighters attacked formations of Liberators over Vienna with rocket and cannon fire yesterday, some diving in to within 100 yards of the big bombers.

The first Liberators over the Markersdorf airdrome west of Vienna showered fragmentation bombs on grounded planes and personnel. The next wave unloaded high explosives in installations.

The Fanto Vosendorf oil refinery six miles south of Vienna and unspecific military targets in the Vienna industrial district were other targets of the attacking Allied force, which numbered some 500 planes.

A brand new American Liberator bomber on its first mission came back to an Italian base yesterday from raiding on Vienna punctured with at least 150 cannonshell, rocket, flak and bullet holes. But the crew was happy—they shot down seven enemy fighters. Sergt. Lindley G. Miller, of Glen Cove, L. I., a gunner, shot down one.

Hitler Expected to Base All Hopes on Defense of Homeland

AUG 25 1944

By WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 24—(AP) The defense system of Hitler's European fortress is crumbling, and with capitulation of satellites in prospect and Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's armored columns already driving for the German border, the Germans' only hope now is defense of the Reich itself.

While the Germans have their reorganized 15th army on the rocket coast, it has been badly stripped to bolster the Seventh army. It is unlikely it would be able to withstand an Allied onslaught. Military men expect Hitler to fight a rearguard action from northern France and lower Belgium to the Siegfried line, then base all on an appeal to the people to defend the homeland.

Many Allied military men are of the opinion one more crushing defeat in battle and the German army—riddled with intrigue and hate—will collapse entirely.

Hitler's defense system was built on the vast territory he dominated in Europe. He planned to trade space for time to wear his enemies down and out. But he did not reckon with the drive and daring of an American general like Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr.

The force and violence of underground resistance movements, the wavering fairweather loyalty of his satellites in the east and the uprising by the French Maquis avenging four years of hate and brutality and the lightning Allied advance, particularly the speed of Patton's Third army, have given Hitler and the German army no time to establish any sort of defense line.

In the east, Romania—the Balkan weathervane which always first swings to the side most likely to win—has turned from the Nazis. Undoubtedly the Germans will be forced to withdraw from Romania as fast as possible before the onrushing Russian armies catch them in a vast trap. It is inconceivable that Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland will not quickly follow Romania's lead.

Their capitulation would force the Nazis from Yugoslavia and Greece. Thus, overnight, Hitler would lose "space" he so sorely needs.

He finds Gen. Sir Harold Alexander headed toward the Austrian border, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower on the French border along hundreds of miles of front and the Russians hammering through Czechoslovakia, Poland and East Prussia.

To date there has not been the slightest sign the Germans will be able to mount a defense in northern France capable of halting the American, British and Canadian effort. One month ago Hitler had the Allies hemmed in on a hundred-mile front. He was unable to hold it and lost some 20 or 30 divisions in the process.

Reinforcements Rush In

In a few days the Allied front will stretch from the channel hundreds of miles to the Swiss frontier. It will be supplemented by armies being poured into France at the greatest rate in history.

To hold that line, Hitler will have 30 or less divisions than he had a month ago. Then he can do that retreat into the borders of the Reich. But there is every indication that he lacks the manpower to hold even that front.

If they had enough air power to protect the ground forces, Hitler and Heinrich Himmler, chief of the home army, could make the invasion of Germany itself a costly process of house-to-house and street-to-street fighting. There also is the problem of persuading the German people to carry out such a fight in the same way the Russians did.

Inner Germany does not have the living space of western Russia nor does the Wehrmacht have anything capable of dealing with the Allied airforces which sweep Germany at will.

Turning German towns into strongpoints will only mean that Allied war planes in the thousands will come over and level every house as tanks sweep on past towards Berlin.

'AUSTERITY' RULE IN REICH PROVES NATION JITTERY

AUG 25 1944

LONDON, Aug. 24—(AP) In a new decree to squeeze out more manpower for Germany's armies and war factories, Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels today ordered a 60-hour work week for office workers in public administration and industry and drastically restricted schools and entertainment.

He directed closing of all German theaters, music halls and cabarets, as well as all art exhibitions, art competitions, and professional schools and commercial colleges without a direct bearing on the war effort. Unviersities, too, he said, would be subject to far reaching restrictions.

Those released by the new "austerity order," said a Berlin broadcast, "are to be employed in armament production or taken into the Wehrmacht.

The new order does not apply to women over 50 or men over 65.

At the same time in a weekly article is Das Reich broadcast by the Berlin radio, Goebbels, attempting to rally Germans against "this hurricane raging over the Continent," said it would be "high treason" to question Nazi principles now.

He exhorted "the fikle among us" not to "lose sight of the star in the gloomy clouds which are darkening the horizon" and said the "slightest offense" against principles of the National Solialist state must be "punished severely."

Goebbels order suspended editions of fine art literature and fiction works and further curtailed the number of daily newspapers. Illustrated weeklies with two exceptions were directed to cease publication.

The save 300,000,000 ration cards every ration period he ordered new collective food ration cards for the period starting Oct. 16.

Film and radio entertainment will be available only to soldiers and war workers. Actors, circus performers and others will be drafted into the Army.

Goebbels also ordered closing of all art exhibitions, art competitions and art colleges and the suspension of publication of fine art literature, fiction and most illustrated publications. The number of daily newspapers will be curtailed.

Two hundred traveling theatrical companies of the "strength through joy" movement who have been entertaining troops will be dissolved.

AUG 25 1944

Professional schools, household schools and commercial colleges without direct bearing on the war effort will be closed and universities will be subjected to far-reaching restrictions.

People released by the new austerity order will be employed in armament production or taken into the Wehrmacht, Berlin asserted.

Goebbels also ordered those employed in public administration and offices of industry to work a sixty-hour week and canceled all vacations effective immediately. The order will not affect women over 50 and men over 65.

Infringements of the order will be punished by imprisonment and fines, with hard labor or death for particularly malicious evasions, the announcement, as distributed by DNB, said.

ture Important Points

Rome, Aug. 24 (AP)—Taking quick advantage of lessening enemy resistance in the upper Arno valley southeast of Florence, British and Indian troops have advanced and captured several important points, including Mount Foresto, it was announced today.

Polish and Italian troops in the Adriatic sector made limited gains and established firm positions on the south bank of the Metauro river 12 miles inland from the Adriatic coast. German losses were reported high in that sector, where 800 prisoners had been taken by the Poles in the last 10 days.

Nazis Shell Florence

Nazi patrols were active in the area immediately north of Florence and enemy artillery dropped many shells "indiscriminately" into the central and southern portions of the art city during the day, headquarters said. Allied troops won possession of the city last Tuesday.

The front from Florence to the Tyrrhenian Sea remained quiet.

[The United Nations radio at Algiers reported General Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander in Italy, had called upon Italian Patriots to attack a "considerable number" of Nazi troops who had been observed escaping into northern Italy from the battle zone of southern France.]

ALLIES ADVANCE ALONG THE ARNO

Rome, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—British and Indian troops of the Eighth Army have made a considerable advance on both sides of the upper Arno River in Italy, in the face of lessening enemy resistance, and have captured a number of important points including Mount Foresto, headquarters announced today.

Minor gains were reported in the Adriatic sector, where Polish and Italian troops established themselves firmly on the banks of the Metauro about twelve miles from the coast. Allied forces are in contact with strong enemy positions on the north bank, the bulletin said.

Considerable enemy patrol activity was noted around Florence, in which the Nazis were said to have suffered casualties.

Allied Headquarters disclosed that "indiscriminately aimed enemy shells fell in most of the central and southern portions" of Florence yesterday. The extent of damage and casualties was not announced.

PRINCE UMBERTO, CHURCHILL CONFER

ROME, Aug. 24.—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill met Crown Prince Umberto, ruler of Italy as Lieutenant General of the realm, at a luncheon Wednesday with Sir Noel Charles, the British minister, it was officially announced today.

Later Churchill received the entire Italian government, representing all parties, for an informal conversation at the British embassy.

The announcement said a conversation between Churchill and Premier Ivanhoe Bonomi at the British Embassy Tuesday was "long and cordial."

The luncheon today was given in their honor by the minister and was attended also by Marshal Pietro Badoglio.

The announcement made no mention of Churchill and Badoglio confering privately, but an Italian communique published in Roman newspapers today reported they did so.

Col. Huntington Heads Mission To Marshal Tito

Officer Sent From Italy By U. S. Army Formerly Practiced Law Here

By Joseph Morton

Associated Press Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press

MARSHAL TITO'S HEADQUARTERS IN YUGOSLAVIA, Aug. 19 (Delayed).—An American military mission headed by Colonel Ellery C. Huntington jr., of Redding, Conn., has arrived at Marshal Josip Broz's (Tito's) headquarters.

Preceded by British and Russian missions, it is the fourth foreign group to join the Yugoslav leader. Several of its members served formerly under Brigadier Fitzroy Hew Royle Maclean on the British-American mission to Tito, which is now solely British.

Colonel Huntington came to his present post from an assignment at Allied force headquarters in Italy.

[Prior to the war, Colonel Huntington practiced law in New York as a member of the firm of Satterlee & Warfield, 49 Wall Street. He is a graduate of Colgate University and the Harvard Law School.]

Plans For Allied-Yugoslav Operations Set, Tito Says

By JOSEPH MORTON

Marshal Tito's Headquarters in Yugoslavia, Aug. 22 (AP—Delayed)—Plans for much closer coordination of military operations by Allied forces in Italy and the National Army of Liberation in Yugoslavia were worked out at the recent conferences of Prime Minister Churchill, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson and himself, Marshal Tito told this correspondent today.

Joint operations by British and American ground troops and the Partisan army may be expected on a growing scale in the near future, he said.

Elbow-Deep In Work

Noting that detachments from the three forces already had carried out several actions together on the Dalmatian Islands, he said the necessity for secrecy forbade a more detailed discussion of plans.

Secluded in his new headquarters, garrisoned by hand-picked British ground troops and Commandos as well as his own men, the marshal was elbow-deep in work at the time of the interview.

Ten days of almost continuous discussion and negotiation with Allied military and diplomatic leaders and members of the Royal Government had tired him noticeably.

Agreed On Armaments

Matters discussed at his conferences with Churchill were principally military. He said among other things an agreement was reached on increased shipments of armaments to the National Liberation Army and on increased evacuation of wounded from the country.

In addition to the British Prime Minister, who Marshal Tito said made a deep impression on him, he conferred with Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, commanding general of the Mediterranean Allied air forces and RAF Vice-Marshal William Elliott, commander of the newly formed Balkan air force. He also visited General Sir Harold Alexander at his headquarters and spent a day on the island of Capri as the guest of Grig. Gen. William J. Donovan, director of the United States Office of Strategic Services, which has just sent a military mission to Yugoslavia.

Mission Long Needed

This mission had been needed a long time and was very important, Marshal Tito said, because it took a very long time in America for the truth about the real situation in Yugoslavia to be known. While in Italy, the marshal reported, he and Dr. Ivan Subasic, Prime Minister of the Yugoslav Government in Cairo, reached complete accord on the use of remaining units of the Royal Yugoslav Navy, long a point of contention between the National Liberation Committee and the London Government.

It was agreed the vessels, principally corvettes, torpedo boats and mine layers, would remain part of the Allied Mediterranean naval command and be used to further the Partisans' war efforts, Marshal Tito said.

Disposition Of Forces

He and Dr. Subasic enacted agreements on a number of other points in discussions which lasted three days. The marshal reported it was decided that the 2,000 men of the Royal Yugoslav Army in the mid-East would fight as a unit under the supreme Allied command in the Mediterranean and that the Royal Yugoslav air force squadron likewise stationed in the mid-East would be permitted to fight intact.

A special commission comprised of three representatives of the National Liberation Committee and three of the Royal Government would handle matters pertaining to Yugoslavian gold deposits frozen abroad, he said, using them as security for loans to finance the common war effort.

Merger Discussed

He and Dr. Subasic likewise agreed on plans for obtaining assistance from the United Nations Relief Rehabilitation Administration, Marshal Tito expressing belief food, clothing and other aid for his war-ravaged countrymen would be forthcoming shortly.

The marshal stressed that the basic foundation agreement of June 16 under which all the negotiations have been carried out remains unchanged. Nevertheless, he said, ultimate merger of the Royal Government and the National Liberation Committee still is conditioned by these three prerequisites:

1. The degree and efficiency with which the Government of Dr. Subasic works abroad in favor of the people and the National Liberation Army.

2. To what extent this Government will, by its work and influence, correct the mistakes made by previous governments hostile to the people.

3. Whether conditions in the country become mature enough for such welding to contribute still more to the unification of all national forces and a still closer merger of the nations of each federal unit.

TITO SENDS PISTOL TO NEW YORK MAYOR

MARSHAL TITO'S HEADQUARTERS IN YUGOSLAVIA, Aug. 24.—(AP) Marshal Tito is sending his pistol—which he carried through three years of warfare in Yugoslavia's hills and mountains—to Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York as a token of his esteem.

Dr. Sava Kosanovic, Minister of the Interior in the new cabinet of the royal government who recently visited Tito at his headquarters, is carrying the gift.

In New York when he was appointed to his present post, Kosanovic was asked by LaGuardia to deliver a message expressing the mayor's admiration of the partisans' struggle.

Acknowledging the mayor's long friendship toward the National Army of Liberation, Marshal Tito is sending back the pistol along with a reply.

BULGARIA PEACE TERMS STUDIED

Allies Expected to Demand Unconditional Surrender.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 25—(AP) Peace terms for Bulgaria are under official consideration in London and Washington, it was reported in authoritative circles here today.

A representative of the Bulgarian government submitted his country's proposals through Sir Hughe M. Knatchbull-Hugessen, the British ambassador to Turkey, these reports said.

Russia, not at war with Bulgaria, is being kept informed, and it is believed no official statement will be made until a decision is reached.

While official comment was lacking it was regarded as certain that negotiation with Bulgaria is out of the question, and that unconditional surrender will be required. Other Allied demands probably will include withdrawal of all Bulgarian troops from invaded and seized territories, removal of Fascists from office and liberalization of the government.

Bulgarian officials, who have been blowing hot and cold in peace statements, have been warned by Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, that the Allies do not intend to buy Bulgaria out of the war. Prime Minister Churchill has warned that "the time for Bulgaria's repentance is not yet past, although it is passing."

The Russians have been bringing peace pressure on Bulgaria, whose frontiers were laid wide open by the Red army advance into Romania.

London, Aug. 24 (AP)—A stampede of Adolf Hitler's unhappy satellite nations trying to get out of the war before Germany itself throws up the sponge appeared imminent today as indications grew that Nazi leaders fear revolt inside the Reich.

As the Nazis tried to offset the jolt of Romania's capitulation, the electric effect of the collapse was felt in the capitals of the satellite nations Bulgaria and Hungary and the cobelligerent Finland.

In Sofia, Bulgaria, already on record in public statements of her Premier and Foreign Minister that she was anxious to get out of the war, maintained contact with the Allies and the expectation in London was that the Bulgars would quit the war in a few days, perhaps in a few hours.

Finland "Clearing Decks"

In Helsinki, Finnish President Carl Gustav Mannerheim was reported "clearing decks" for an armistice in the face of "go-slow" propaganda from reactionary forces.

Stockholm reported that the Finnish Minister to Sweden, George Gripenberg, had left for Helsinki on a trip connected with efforts to withdraw Finland from the war.

In Budapest the Hungarian Government decreed banishment of all political parties "no matter what their political tendency," apparently in an effort to block a coalition action by combined parties such as negotiated an armistice for Romania. Regent Nicholas Horthy was reported to have called the Hungarian Cabinet into permanent session.

Slovakia Also Stirring

The Cabinet of satellite Slovakia also was reported in urgent session, although there was no details.

A bad case of jitters inside Germany was apparent in the German radio broadcast to the German army, heard by Reuter, which warned soldiers of "internal disorder such as terrorist attacks against your own people."

Moscow radio stabbed at the weakening home morale by urging the German population to "join with all foreign workers in a mass strike."

"Hang On" Nazis Urge

Further evidence of Nazi panic was seen in the tone of the latest editorials pleading with the Germans to hang on "for a few more weeks."

The Muenchner Neueste Nachricten, bluntly referring to the "immensity of the threat" confronting Germany in recent Allied victories, said there were a few weeks left before a decision, "but we must stand the test unless collapse just before or at the goal is to nullify five years of war."

Greece Wants Bulgaria Occupied By Allies

Cairo, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Greek Government demanded tonight Bulgaria's occupation by Allied forces to guarantee her punishment for "crimes" against Greeks, as Bulgarian capitulation in the wake of Romania's was widely predicted.

Although Bulgaria is not at war against Russia it was pointed in Soviet quarters that Red army divisions driving into Romania might press into Bulgaria and become a force of occupation there unless Sofia surrenders soon to the Americans and British.

Among Greek demands made public tonight were:

1. Strategical guarantee of the northern frontier (Greece's) so that the keys to her house (Thrace and Macedonia) may not be held in foreign hands, especially Bulgarian hands.

2. Punishment of Bulgarian rulers and military chiefs and also all of those who have committed crimes against the population of Macedonia and Thrace.

3. Occupation of Bulgaria by armies of the United Nations as a guarantee for execution of the sanctions which will be applied on her.

Finnish sources said that Procope last Thursday told a secret session of Parliament that there was strong "pro-Finnish and anti-Russian sentiment" in the United States and that if Finland holds on, this sentiment "may make itself felt, despite the attitude of the American Government."

The United States ordered Procope to leave Washington for actions inimical to the United States.

Contact Reported Made.

Finnish newspapers today splashed the news of Romania's break with Hitler under banner headlines, and a Foreign Office spokesman was quoted as saying that, if the report is confirmed, "then naturally it must influence Finland's position."

The Arbetarbladet, the only newspaper commenting, said: "Romania changes sides in the war, and the road is now open to the Danube. The Finnish people now look to the Government and Finland's First Man (Baron Mannerheim)."

Finland May Quit War Too

Envoy Suddenly Leaves Stockholm in Move Linked to Peace Efforts.

Stockholm, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The Finnish Minister to Sweden, G. A. Gripenberg, suddenly departed by air today for Helsinki in a journey obviously connected with efforts to get Finland out of the war.

In reliable quarters it was said, however, that "as far as we know, the Finnish Government has made no attempt directly to contact Moscow up to Thursday morning." It was Gripenberg's second trip to Helsinki in two weeks.

Opinion here was that Romania's exit from the war might hasten action by Baron Mannerheim, President and Marshal of Finland.

Finnish informants said that the old leader had been "clearing the decks" for an armistice. Reactionaries, Germans and the former Finnish Minister to the United States Hjalmar Procope were reported pushing a "go slow" propaganda campaign regarding peace.

Information from Finland said that the Germans were spreading propaganda that they were giving up France in order to launch a tremendous offensive against Russia. Finn reactionaries were reported cooperating with the argument that "we had better wait because once the Germans have launched their counter-attack, we will be in a better position to negotiate with the Russians."

In a broadcast picked up at New York today by CBS, the British radio reported from Stockholm "that indirect contact between the Finns and the Russians has been established in the Swedish capital during the past few days."

Sweden's Diplomatic Ties With Vichy End

Stockholm, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Swedish Foreign Office announced today that diplomatic relations between Sweden and Vichy had been ended.

Vichy's Minister to Stockholm, Francois Conti, also declared that his mission to Stockholm had been concluded in view of the fact that Marshal Petain had been taken to Germany.

[Switzerland announced yesterday the ending of relations with Vichy.]

Australia Not to Serve Poles

Moscow Ends Property Powers Cites Link to New Committee

MOSCOW, Aug. 24. (AP).—The Soviet Foreign Office notified the Australian Legation today it could no longer recognize Australia as the protecting power for Polish nationals' property in the Soviet Union because of establishment of relations by the U. S. S. R., with the Polish Committee of National Liberation.

The Australian Legation, with the Kremlin's consent, assumed its Polish responsibilities at the request of the Polish government-in-exile in London after the Russian-Polish diplomatic break in April, 1943.

CBS EXPLAINS PARIS ERROR

Tells How Premature Dispatch On Fall Of City Got Through

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Aug. 24 (AP)—Supreme headquarters tonight described as a "pure but serious" error the manner in which a Paris-datelined dispatch by CBS Correspondent Charles Collingwood reached the air Wednesday without having been passed by or submitted to the supreme command censorship.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Columbia Broadcasting System issued the following statement today concerning a Paris-datelined dispatch under the byline of Charles Collingwood, CBS correspondent in France, which was broadcast and distributed to the press last (Wednesday) night:

"The story reached London by courier plane toward midnight, London time (6 P. M., E.W.T.). It was in typewritten form and with it was a film recording made by Collingwood. It was the first time in the experience of our London office that such a record had been accompanied by a script and it was assumed, it now appears erroneously, that the script had passed army field censorship.

"The radio censor in London passed the script in time for delivery on the air at 12.45 A. M., London time, upon the statement of Columbia men there that they had assumed such prior censorship had taken place.

Able War Reporter

"Both the Collingwood story and the film recording, which was played later and found to parallel the script, contained these words:

"'The people of Paris rose in their might and drove the Germans out and then we came in with the French Second Armored Division proudly leading the way into the city which is the spiritual home of all Frenchmen.'

"Collingwood is an able and experienced war reporter, whose coverage of the Allied invasion of North Africa won him both the Peabody and National Headliners award in 1943."

No Paris Dateline

Collingwood's original dispatch did not carry a Paris dateline. The version distributed by CBS by teletype to news agencies and newspapers in New York, had this introduction under Collingwood's byline:

"Paris, Aug. 23 (By Radio Via London)—The Second French Armored Division entered Paris today after the Parisians arose as one man to beat down the motley, terrified German troops who had garrisoned the city.

"It was the people of Paris who really won back their city. It all happened with dramatic suddenness."

Answer Was Paris

A CBS spokesman explained that editors who handled the dispatch for press distribution concluded that the context indicated convincingly that the dispatch came from Paris and that the Paris dateline was justified. The CBS New York office asked the London office where the dispatch came from and the answer was Paris.

Supreme allied headquarters announced today (Thursday) that in its view Paris had not yet been liberated, that "Allied forces began moving on Paris this morning, but it is not yet known whether they have entered the capital."

Collingwood's dispatch contained the first news to reach America of the armistice between the French Forces of the Interior inside Paris and the Germans and the fact that the F. F. I. had called for Allied help. This was confirmed today by a supreme headquarters announcement, which added, however, that the Germans had repudiated the armistice and fighting had been resumed.

7250 ROBOT BOMBS AIMED AT BRITAIN

London, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The Germans have sent about 7,250 flying bombs, each carrying a ton of explosive, against London and the south of England, the Government disclosed tonight as the buzz barrage continued after a lull of several daylight hours.

A joint committee from the Ministries of Air and Home Security estimated that the Germans fired 5,250 robots from the beginning of the attacks in mid-June until the end of July, and another 2,000 during the first three weeks of August. The number which reached their destinations was not disclosed, but intensified coastal defenses have been credited with considerable success in shooting down buzz-bombs before they reach congested areas.

The Ministry of Home Security announced that league football matches would be held in southern England as scheduled on Saturday, to be halted temporarily if flying bombs appear.

British Open 'Invasion' Coast, Warn Of Robots

London, Aug. 24 (AP)—The British War Office announced tonight that the last stretch of the English "invasion coast" on the east and southeastern sides of the island would be reopened to the public.

The army still is in control along the shore, however, and the War Office warned the public there still was danger of robot bombs coming over the coast. The British information service emphasized that warning, declaring flying-bomb salvos had reached such a pitch that 17,000 homes were being destroyed or damaged by them every 24 hours.

CRASH TOLL MAY BE 84

Freckleton, England, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—With fifty-four bodies removed already, fear was expressed today that thirty more persons may be buried in the wreckage of a school and nearby shack bar destroyed yesterday when an American Liberator crashed in this Lancashire gardening village.

The known dead included thirty-five children—all but six of the village's forty-one youngsters between 4 and 6 years of age. The other victims included nine American servicemen, two Royal Air Force men and eight civilians. The tragedy occurred when the Liberator was caught in a sudden storm while on a local flight.

American troops stationed nearby were praised fo rtheir rescue efforts. Many rushed to the scene and helped move women and children out of danger from a 100-foot wall of flame which enveloped the school and nearby houses.

Mass Funeral for 35 Children Held in British Town of Tears

FRECKLETON, Eng., Aug. 24—(AP) This is a town nearly without small children — a town of tears.

With the help of American soldiers, the populace today arranged for the mass funeral of 35 youngsters, all but six of the village's total. They and 19 adults, including nine American servicemen, were killed yesterday when a flaming U. S. Liberator bomber plummeted into the quiet Lancashire town—Britain's worst tragedy of the kind.

The plane, carrying three of its crew to death, crashed into an infants' school, its bursting gasoline tanks spraying it with flames, and caromed into a nearby snack bar.

Soldiers helped dig a communal grave for the children in the village churchyard where burial will take place Saturday.

Meanwhile an American air force officer accompanied the vicar of Freckleton from home to home of the grieving parents to offer the flying men's sympathy.

Townsfolk, their eyes swollen by tears and lack of sleep after a night of searching for bodies, told of the heroism of an American soldier. He hoisted an iron beam to his shoulder to free some trapped children. After they had been pulled to safety, the onlookers said, the beam collapsed, amputating the soldier's arm.

The expense for the damage to the town will be met by the U. S. government.

MAQUIS SAVE AIRMEN

Rome, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Sergt. Robert Allen of Austin, Tex., and Corp. Harold Waldron of Columbia, Ala., B-26 gunners, were back at their base today after spending ten days in enemy territory under the protection of French Maquis.

The two gunners bailed out when their Marauder was shot down over Toulon August 13 and landed in a field where the patriots clothed, fed, and hid them.

Shelling drove them from their shelter Tuesday night and they made their way to the outskirts of Toulon where they were picked up by an R. A. F. officer entering the town behind French troops.

COL. LAY ESCAPES

United States Bomber Base, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Col. Beirne Lay Jr., Washington author and commander of a Liberator group, has escaped German captivity and returned to England. His plane was shot down by ground fire over Europe last spring.

Col. Bobby Jones Asks Discharge As Overage

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Aug. 24 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Robert Tyre (Bobby) Jones, Jr., United States Ninth Air Force intelligence officer, has applied for a discharge from the army under the over-38 regulations and is on his way back to the United States or already there, the Ninth Air Force disclosed today.

The noted Atlanta golfer, who joined the air forces as a captain in June, 1942, was 42 last March 17. He entered the replacement pool in England a couple of weeks ago after returning from an assign-

Jones came to Britain nearly a year ago and took up duties with a fighter unit.

West Orange Man Decorated in France

London, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Lieut. Richard Armstrong of 47 Quimby Place, West Orange, N. J., received the Soldiers' Medal yesterday for pulling a trapped bombardier from the wreckage of a Marauder

He was one of seventeen officers and enlisted men of the Ninth United States Air Force decorated at ceremonies in France by Brig.-Gen. Samuel Anderson, chief of the Ninth Bomber Command.

CHINESE SEEK TO DIVERT FOE

Redouble Blows Along 370 Miles Of Yangtze River

Chungking, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Chinese have redoubled their diversionary blows along 370 miles of the Yangtze river between Hankow and Ichang in an attempt to distract the Japanese from their drive to cut China in half, the high command said tonight.

The Chinese attacks were directed at overland supply routes from Hankow to Ichang and came as the Japanese were reported building up reinforcements far to the south in Hunan province for a renewed drive to conquer all the Canton-Hankow railway.

The high command said the situation had improved in Hunan itself, farthest point of enemy advance southward along the railway to Canton, with attacks against the enemy flanks apparently making progress.

Chinese Take 3 Points

North of the Yangtze, the Chinese seized three strong points on the outskirts of Tangyang, northeast of Ichang and made progress in the Kingmen sector farther northeast.

Still farther northeast the Chinese recaptured four more points in the suburbs of Chungsiang, a Han river town 80 miles from Ichang, Chungsiang, Kingmen and Tangyang are connecting links in the enemy's overland route.

The Chinese also fought into the important Japanese stronghold of Kingshan, 75 miles west by northwest of Hankow, where street fighting was still raging, the high command reported.

Chinese Attack Liling

In Hunan province, Chinese entered the northeast suburbs and launched an attack on Liling, 75 miles northeast of the fallen railroad city of Hengyang and another key point on the enemy's overland routes.

In heavy rain the Chinese repulsed Japanese assaults at Chekiang, northwest of Hengyang, beat back an enemy column east of Leiyang, and entered the outskirts of Anjen, 38 miles east by southeast of Hengyang.

A report from the Salween front, where forces in southwest China are trying to join hands with Allied forces in Burma, said the Chinese had liberated more than 150 populated places and more than 10,000 square miles in the world's highest and toughest battleground since May 11.

HALMAHERA RAID HEAVIEST

156 Tons Of Bombs Hit Island South Of Philippines

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Friday, Aug. 25 (AP)—The heaviest single raid on Halmahera Island, southern guardian of the Philippines, was reported by headquarters today among an unusually strong series of aerial thrusts which unloaded a total of 315 tons of bombs on Japanese defenses.

An undisclosed number of raiders smashed 156 tons on Halmahera. More than 200 Allied fighters and attack planes ranged over Vogelkop peninsula, Dutch New Guinea. They left runways at the Babo, Nabire and Otawiri airdromes unserviceable.

400-Ton Total Dropped

This brings to more than 400 tons the explosives unloaded on Halmahera in the last three raids to be reported. Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique Wednesday said 135 tons had been expended on the octopus-shaped island, and the previous day he announced a 110-ton raid.

Liberators smashed and set fire to bivouacs and supply dumps in the important Galela area, the northern part of Halmahera, during the record assault Wednesday.

No Jap Interception

There was no Japanese interception. Nipponese planes likewise refused to challenge the two previous heavy attacks. MacArthur previously had reported the enemy was withdrawing aerial garrisons from Halmahera to safer areas farther westward.

On the same day, 90 tons of bombs smashed Japanese positions on Vogelkop peninsula, northwestern Dutch New Guinea. In other widespread raids, Allied aircraft left 36 tons of bombs on the Kai Islands, in the Banda Sea, and 33 tons on the Sarmi area of Dutch New Guinea.

An additional 1,647 more Japanese were reported killed in ground fighting in nine scattered sectors, from Sansapor — the American beachhead at New Guinea's extreme tip—to Bougainville Island, in the Solomons.

Yap Hit For 4th Day; Paramushiro Bombed

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 24 (AP)—Yap Island on the eastern approaches to the Philippines was bombed for the fourth straight day, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported today.

Other bombers flying out of the Aleutians attacked Paramushiro Island on the northern approaches to Japan for the seventh time this month. A cargo vessel was sunk and direct hits scored on installations at the northern enemy naval outpost. One interceptor was shot down.

Pagan, Rota, Nauru Hit

The Paramushiro raid was made Sunday and the attack on Yap Tuesday. The airfield and bivouac areas were hit in the Yap sorties, made from recently conquered bases in the Marianas.

Pagan and Rota islands in the Marianas, and Nauru, phosphate island in the Central Pacific, were also raided.

Nimitz disclosed tiny Agiguan, a supposedly uninhabited Marianas island five miles south of captured Tinian, was bombed. The attack indicated that some Japanese escaped from Tinian in small boats and were hiding out on Agiguan.

Allies Control Most Of Pacific: Nimitz

San Francisco, Aug. 24 (AP)—The major part of the Pacific Ocean now is under Allied control, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said tonight in a broadcast from Pearl Harbor, and navy patrol search planes daily make it necessary for the Japanese to enter the portion left to him "at his peril."

The commander in chief of the Pacific fleet and Pacific Ocean areas spoke on the March of Time program in observance of the 31st anniversary of the creation of the naval air force.

He said the Pacific offensive is attaining the essential objective of winning control of the sea approaches to the Japanese Empire in order to sever ocean routes over which the enemy must move men and supplies.

"When this goal is completely achieved, the 'co-prosperity sphere will then become a non-prosperity sphere," the admiral said.

He characterized planes of the carrier task forces now ranging westward as "manmade typhoons."

Vandegrift Says Japs Know Not How To Quit

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, commandant of the marines, said today the Japanese do not know the meaning of "quit."

Speaking at a news conference, he told of visiting Saipan, Tinian, and Guam.

"I want to stress that the people in those engagements thoroughly realize they are fighting an enemy that does not know the meaning of quitting," he said.

As an example of the fanatical Japanese opposition to surrender, he told of one instance where a father on Guam "took his child by the feet, bashed in its head and threw it over a cliff, cut his wife's throat and threw her over the cliff, then jumped over himself."

YAP BOMBED AGAIN BY YANK AIRPLANES

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 24.—(AP) Yap island on the eastern approaches to the Philippines was bombed for the fourth straight day, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported today.

Other bombers flying out of the Aleutians attacked Paramushiro island on the northern approaches to Tokyo for the seventh time this month. A cargo vessel was sunk and direct hits scored on installations at the northern enemy naval outpost. One interceptor was shot down.

The Paramushiro raid was made Sunday and the attack on Yap Tuesday. The airfield and bivouac areas were hit in the Yap sorties, made from recently conquered bases in the Marianas.

Pagan and Rota islands in the Marianas, and Nauru, phosphate island in the central Pacific, were also raided.

Nimitz disclosed tiny Agiguan, a supposedly uninhabited Marianas island five miles south of captured Tinian, was bombed. The attack indicated that some Japanese escaped from Tinian in small boats and were hiding out on Agiguan.

CLASH IN BURMA

Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Allied troops pursuing Japanese forces retreating from India along the Tiddim Road have regained contact with the enemy ten miles inside Burma, Allied Headquarters announced today. Last contact with the Japanese was reported Saturday, when the enemy began a precipitate withdrawal.

Headquarters said that Allied aircraft had destroyed ten enemy river craft and damaged six near Kalew in the Chindwin Valley, from which the Japanese launched their ill-fated invasion of India.

Roosevelt Hails Free Paris

Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt, asserting that "we rejoice with the gallant French people at the liberation of Paris," saluted today the French and Allied commanders who made possible "this brilliant presage of total victory."

The White House issued Mr. Roosevelt's statement prior to the arrival in this country of dispatches from Supreme Headquarters reporting that while French resistance groups held part of Paris the city could not be considered liberated.

Subsequently the White House said the statement was issued on the basis of all information available in Washington official sources at the time it was released. It was as follows:

"The joy that entered the hearts of all civilized men and women at the news of the liberation of Paris can only be measured by the gloom which settled there one June day four years ago when German troops occupied the French capital.

"Through the rising tide of Allied successes that patch of gloom remained and has only today been dispelled. For Paris is a precious symbol of that civilization which it was the aim of Hitler and his armed hordes to destroy.

"We rejoice with the gallant French people at the liberation of their capital and join in the chorus of congratulations to the commanders and fighting men, French and Allied, who have made possible this brilliant presage of total victory."

Secretary of State Hull also issued a statement at his noon press conference in which he said: "The news of the liberation of Paris will come to all Americans as it has to me, as one of the most heartening events of the past four years." He added:

"From the military point of view its importance is outstanding and it is inspiring to know that it was made possible by the combined action of French patriots and their Allied comrades in arms.

"But wholly apart from the military aspects of this great victory, the entire civilized world will rejoice with the French people in the lifting of the tyrant's yoke from their capital."

CAPITAL HAILS FREED PARIS

U. S. Officials Happy In Spite Of Military Reservations

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—Joyously—if a bit prematurely in the eyes of military commanders overseas—American officials from President Roosevelt on down today hailed the liberation of Paris as presaging final and full defeat for the Nazis.

Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of War Stimson commented formally after the announcement from Gen. Charles de Gaulle that Paris had been freed.

About the time their statements were released, press dispatches arrived from supreme headquarters saying that officers there did not consider the French capital was yet liberated; that Allied troops were having to fight their way into the city.

Little Resistance Expected

Nevertheless, the general feeling here was that those Germans still in and about Paris could not put up any substantial resistance.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull both stressed the symbolic meaning of what they termed Paris' liberation.

The President's statement, which the White House later explained was issued on the basis of all the information available in Washington at the time, said:

"The joy that entered the hearts of all civilized men and women at the news of the liberation of Paris can only be measured by the gloom which settled there one June day four years ago, when German troops occupied the French capital. . . .

Called "Precious Symbol"

"For Paris is a precious symbol of that civilization which it was the aim of Hitler and his armed hordes to destroy."

Hull called it "one of the most heartening events of the past four years."

Stimson coupled with a recital of the favorable military developments a plea for no slackening now in the war effort.

"On every side Germany weakens," he said. "Now is the time for us to muster all our strength and unity for the final blows."

STIMSON CALLS WEEK HISTORIC

Says Foe Can't Make Stand in Northern France.

Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Secretary of War Stimson said today that Allied military victories, coupled with the rising of French forces, have shattered German hopes of making a prolonged stand even in northern France. He told a news conference:

"This has been a historic week—the climax of the battle of northern France, the forward surge of the Allies in southern France, the liberation of Paris and now Romania's abandonment of the Axis. On every side Germany weakens. Now is the time for us to muster all our strength and unity for the final blows. The liberation of Paris by the French people themselves after our own American forces had half encircled the city is a fitting demonstration of the waning power of the Nazis and the rebirth of freedom."

Mr. Stimson said that already the great bulk of metropolitan France has been liberated, for all practical purposes, by the combined actions of Allied armies and the French people themselves.

Issues a Warning.

In the midst of success, he said, it still is necessary to remember that a substantial number of divisions of the German Fifteenth Army in the Calais area were not yet in combat. Standing north of the Seine River, he said, they undoubtedly will seek to reorganize such Seventh Army units as manage to escape from Normandy and increase their strength.

"Allied air and ground forces, with teamwork and power," the Secretary added, "are in the midst of effective action to undermine and crush the ability of the Germans to make a prolonged stand in northern France."

Mr. Stimson said that the spectacular advance of an armored force of the 7th Army in Southern France, pushing beyond Grenoble, threatens to cut the Rhone in its upper regions, ruining German plans for a hard fought withdrawal up the valley of that river from the coast. It also has sealed off all direct routes of communications between the German forces in France and Italy.

Some Pockets Exist.

Pockets of resistance, in some of which the Nazis are fighting bitterly, still exist in Southern and Western France, the Secretary said, but they soon "will be as isolated as the Japanese in the Eastern Marshalls or New Britain."

Mr. Stimson said that the only area left for a German attempt at a real defense is a region of the last war's battlefields in Northern France. But the enemy's supply and reinforcement routes into this territory are under constant air patrol and attack he added, as far as the interior of Belgium and the German border.

In the last week, Mr. Stimson said, Allied planes destroyed 2,279 railway cars of all kinds and destroyed or damaged more than 800 locomotives. Now they are concentrating on barges and small boats, while keeping up their attacks on German trucks, tanks and troops concentrations.

U. S. LOSSES 2975 IN SOUTH FRANCE

Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Secretary of War Stimson reported today that the first five days of the invasion of southern France cost the Army 2,975 casualties.

The five days began with the landings on the morning of August 15. The killed and missing number 1,221 and the hospitalized 1,754.

The latest over-all battle casualty figure for the armed services, on the basis of reports to next of kin, is 317,846. For the Army, Mr. Stimson put the total at 261,589 up to August 6, not including the southern France figures. The Navy said its most recent casualty summation was 56,257.

In the Mediterranean area, Mr. Stimson said, total ground and air forces casualties of the American Army from the first landing on the Italian mainland through August 7 were 17,035 killed, 54,377 wounded and 20,411 missing. The Army aggregate of 261,589 included 48,880 killed, 125,931 wounded, 42,956 missing and 43,822 officially reported prisoners.

This compares with a total of 244,775 announced a week ago as of July 29 and broken down as follows: 45,491 killed, 113,977 wounded, 42,102 missing and 43,205 prisoners.

The Navy's casualty total of 56,257 was divided as follows: 23,135 killed, 19,063 wounded, 9,593 missing and 4,466 prisoners. Comparative figures announced August 17 were 54,699, 22,665, 17,819, 9,746 and 4,469.

EDGE WOULD DELAY FRENCH CONTROL

Trenton, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Gov. Walter E. Edge, former United States Ambassador to France, believes the French people should be permitted to govern themselves "only after a free and uncontrolled election of their own citizens, those who are not tainted with collaboration or previous political scandals." Until that election is held, he added, the help of the Allied nations must be welcome and never resisted.

The Governor, in a statement commenting on the liberation of Paris, said:

"French liberation means much more to the Allies and in fact to the civilized world than just the restoration of French freedom, as much as that great accomplishment was so eagerly sought and desired.

"It means as well the re-establishment of a great republic, its representatives to sit with other liberty-loving peoples as a balance of power against possible greed and selfishness.

"The French have had their bitter lesson. With three overpowering invasions in the lives of their older citizens, they know the necessity of preparedness and security."

Radio Is Only Contact Between Spain, Reich

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—All German communications with Spain except by radio have now been cut as a result of Free French control of the French-Spanish border, it was learned today from official sources.

The Lufthansa has stopped all flights to Madrid and Lisbon, and German officials in both Spain and Portugal can communicate with Berlin only by radio, which the Allies are equipped to monitor.

LT. COL. GABRESKI,

AMERICAN FLYING ACE, IS PRISONER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—(AP) Lt. Col. Francis Gabreski, missing since he flew out on volunteer extra duty July 20 to protect his standing as America's all-time top air ace, is a prisoner of war.

The War department in making the bare announcement that the 25-year-old Oil City, Pa., flier is held in Germany, still withheld details of his last operational flight.

The fact that the Thunderbolt pilot was missing was announced in England July 29 and the news that he is alive, though a prisoner, brought joy to his family at Oil City, Pa., and to Kay Cochran of Prairie du Chien, Wis., his 20-year-old fiancee.

"Oh, I knew my prayers would be answered!" Miss Cochran exclaimed. She and the flier has made plans to marry this month. He was due for a 30-day leave Aug. 1.

At the time Gabreski was reported missing, his record stood at 28 enemy planes shot out of the air and three more destroyed on the ground. His air kill total was one more than that of Major Robert S. Johnson of Lawton, Okla., in Europe, and Major Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wiss., leading act of the Pacific theater. He still was seven planes back of Wing Commander J. E. Johnson, commander of a Canadian Spitfire squadron, leading ace of the R.A.F.

There is a possibility that his record may have been built higher on the last flight. On the day he was recorded as missing, at least 13 German planes were downed out of formations which attacked heavy American bombers which Gabreski and other fighters were escorting over Germany. More planes were destroyed on the ground.

HOSTAGES FREED

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—(AP) The Polish Telegraph Agency said today that underground army forces in Warsaw had stormed the German police headquarters in Warsaw and freed eight priests seized as hostages in the Nazi "surrender" ultimatum to the Polish republic troops.

In the attack, 30 Germans were declared killed and 60 captured.

The agency, quoting a dispatch broadcast from Warsaw to London, said the Germans, in addition to taking the priests had set fire to Warsaw's Holy Cross church.

GAVE UP HOSPITAL TO YANK PATIENT

German Admiral Lays Sword On American's Bed

New York, Aug. 24 (AP) — The story of how a wounded radio operator-gunner of an American heavy bomber received the surrender of the Nazi medical staff of Marine Hospital, in southern France, was related today in a dispatch by Homer Bigart to the New York Herald Tribune.

The commandant of the hospital, Rear Admiral Karl Eyerich, laid his sword on the bed where the captured airman lay recovering from a broken leg and gravely said:

"I yield my command but on one condition. You must go out and find Americans and bring them here quickly."

He said he feared French Partisans would break into the hospital and harm his 300 German patients and staff of seven doctors and 28 nurses.

Despite the pain of his injured leg, the airman, a youthful sergeant from Cleveland, finally contacted American tanks. A short time later Lieut. Col. William McCarthy, a surgeon from Philadelphia, inspected the captured hospital. He found the majority of the patients were German, with some Dutch, Poles and Czechs.

The sergeant, who broke his leg when he bailed out August 13 when his Marauder was destroyed on a pre-invasion raid against gun emplacements, said the Germans gave him "good medical care" and good treatment.

"I think I know why they treated me so well. The Partisans were raising hell all about and they were happy to have an American around for heir own security," the sergeant said.

MINE OFF NAPLES SINKS LIBERTY SHIP

Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The loss of the Liberty Ship James Guthrie off Naples a few weeks ago was reported today by the War Shipping Administration.

The James Guthrie and another Liberty ship, the Alexander Graham Bell, had discharged military cargoes at Naples and were starting home when they struck mines. Although extensively damaged, the Alexander Graham Bell has reached a home port. There were no casualties.

KUNG SUPPORTS ARMY OF PEACE

Chinese Foreign Minister Is in Favor of Plan.

Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—China's Finance Minister, Dr. H. H. Kung, told the Senate today that the Chinese "are prepared to back up a properly constituted world organization with all we have in the enforcement of peace."

"For the Chinese Government and people," he asserted, "I am privileged to say here, that in all matters of international cooperation we wholeheartedly support the policies of the United States, which we are convinced are founded on the same ideals of justice and decency which the Chinese people traditionally cherish."

Peace and democracy can only be realized, as the Chinese sages taught long ago, Dr. Kung declared, when the big have learned to serve the small and the strong have learned to serve the weak. The United Nations, he said, have a unique opportunity to work toward the realization of a world commonwealth in which all nations shall live in peace and equality and all peoples shall be protected in their inalienable rights.

Dr. Kung gave assurances that his Government is "irrevocably committed" to a democratic program and is well on the way toward the development of a modern democracy, and, he said, the Chinese people are solidly behind the national government and its leader, Chiang Kai-shek.

After addressing the Senate, Dr. Kung was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Capitol given by Chairman Connally (D.-Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. It was attended by high Chinese officials, representatives of the State Department, and Congressmen.

NO INTEREST

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 —. (AP) The Japanese-controlled Manila radio said today that Jose P. Laurel, puppet president of the Philippines, had reshuffled his cabinet "to enhance and revitalize the government" and to fill vacant positions.

Wedding Bells Scare Anzio's One-man Army

Red Hill, Pa., Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Wedding bells did what the enemy couldn't—shake the steel nerves of the "one man army of Anzio."

It took just ten minutes to turn Pfc. Alton W. Knappenberger, Congressional Medal of Honor winner for holding off two German companies and mowing down sixty Nazis, into a jittery bridegroom.

Maybe it was the marriage license clerk at Norristown who first noticed the change for he asked the "army" to speak louder.

That's when the 20-year-old veteran—his childhood sweetheart, 16-year-old Ruth Eickhoff, by his side—admitted he was "more scared than I ever was."

However, every one smiled when he hurried into St. Paul's Lutheran Church; rumbled in his pockets and then dashed off again, leaving his bride-to-be to explain:

He had forgotten to bring the 30.24 — 18263

marriage license.

It wasn't long before the "army" was back, with the license. The ceremony was started.

It was over in 10 minutes. By that time the "army" had steadied down to the point where he was almost as calm as his young bride.

The honeymoon trip will have to be postponed until after the war because the "army" expects to return to service soon.

Paratrooper Honored.

Cleveland, Tenn., Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Sergt. Paul Huff, 26-year-old paratrooper, who won the Congressional Medal of Honor for action against the Germans in Italy, received the plaudits of his city and State in a celebration yesterday, but reminded his listeners that other service men and women are "serving their country just as faithfully as I ever have."

The slim paratrooper said: "I am thankful I have been able to serve my country as I have," and added:

"But don't forget these other men and women. They need your support, your prayers and your letters."

Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee extolled Huff as a man of "superb courage" and made him an honorary colonel on his staff.

2 Army Air Force Pilots Are Honored By Senate

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—Two American army air force pilots who distinguished themselves fighting with "Merrill's Marauders" in Burma—Cols. Philip [illegible] of Erie, Pa., and John R. Alison of Gainesville, Fla.—were honored by the Senate today.

While sitting in the gallery listening to debate on the surplus property disposal bill, the two officers were introduced by Senator Chandler (D., Ky.). Senators stood up and applauded while the aviators took a bow.

Press Protests Secrecy Policy

Dumbarton Oaks Conferees to Issue Brief Communiques on Peace Talks.

Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The Dumbarton Oaks security conference received today a protest from the State Department Correspondents Association against its "policy of complete secrecy," and Chairman Edward R. Stettinius Jr. responded with a promise of periodic communiques, provided that they did not interfere with the progress of the meeting. The statement presented to Mr. Stettinius, Sir Alexander Cadogan, the British delegate, and Ambassador Gromyko, the Russian delegate, by sixteen members of the correspondents' association, said, in part:

"The correspondents suggest that a dynamic information policy, emphasizing the release of facts on a day-to-day basis, rather than their suppression, would better serve the purposes of organized world peace than the policy of secrecy now in force. This would not necessarily mean a violation of the privacy which officials say is necessary to the work of the conference. It would mean seeking for substantial information to release instead of relying on the issuance of reports of meaningless mechanics."

Statement of Reply.

In reply, Messrs. Stettinius, Cadogan and Gromyko issued this statement:

"We wish everybody to understand that we have met here at Dumbarton Oaks to hold informal conversations and exchanges of views on the general nature of an international security organization, the results of which are subject to the approval of our respective governments. We hope, after we have had opportunity for the fullest and freest exchange of viewpoints, to arrive at agreed recommendations which we can submit to our respective governments.

"We will release, through our press officers, periodically joint communiques, in so far as these will not interfere with smooth and rapid progress toward agreed recommendations regarding an international security organization conference."

News Is Up to Hull.

Secretary of State Hull and John Foster Dulles, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's foreign policy adviser, after their first meeting yesterday, told reporters that in the more than two and a half hours they were together, they made "very considerable progress in exploring the possibilities of bi-partisan co-operation." One thing they talked about, Mr. Dulles said, was the question of the policy of secrecy which cloaks all conference discussions.

AUG 25 1944

He said that he was inclined to think more information could be given out, but he declared that Secretary Hull, as host, was responsible for the conference's public relations policy and obviously he had the final decision. They were to confer again late today.

Cadogan Presses for Decision.

Evidence from Romania that Hitler's Europe is beginning to collapse on political as well as military fronts gave new emphasis today to British insistence at the conferences for early decisions on post-war world security organization.

Sir Alexander Cadogan has taken the lead in urging that at least a part of the security organization should be set up soon to span the gap between the end of the European war—which, he says, may come sooner than expected—and the formal creation of a new international league to preserve peace.

The British view, it was learned, is in line with the feeling in some quarters of the American delegation that the British-Russian-American-Chinese pledge made at Moscow to co-operate in the enforcement of peace after the war should now be given some specific and organized form.

This has raised speculation in diplomatic circles here that the spadework of the Dumbarton Oaks talks might be followed relatively quickly by a meeting of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin to conform and set in action three-Power co-operation in the European area in the immediate post-war period.

Want Small Nations' Views.

The present plan is to delay forming a permanent peace agency until all smaller nations have had opportunity to make suggestions and offer criticisms of the proposals to be evolved here.

Despite recent assertions that the work might be rushed through to a full-dress United Nations conference this fall, the opinion in informed quarters here still is that it will be the end of the year or the first part of 1945 before such a meeting can be arranged.

Although there was no official report of progress, it was known that the delegates worked into their fourth day of combing over their three separate plans for points of agreement, setting aside for the time being issues on which they find themselves in disagreement. It was understood that the areas of agreement were fairly large and the hope was that the work would proceed rapidly.

DULLES AND HULL REPORT PROGRESS

Conferences to Be Continued Tomorrow After Two Hour Session Today

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP) Indicating progress has been made toward a bi-partisan agreement on American participation in a world security organization, John Foster Dulles said tonight he would continue conferences with Secretary of State Hull "to be sure we have a meeting of minds and a clear program agreed on."

Dulles, who is foreign affairs adviser to Republican presidential nominee Thomas Dewey, held his second two-hour session with the secretary today exchanging views on international affairs. He told reporters afterward that the unprecedented convetsations would take place for a third time tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Dewey's representative was asked if difficulties had arisen which necessitated continuing the talks.

"We are trying to do something rather novel in American political life," he replied. "We are breaking new ground and moving slowly and carefully."

Dulles added that the talks are taking longer than he first thought they would because "we have got a lot of things to cover."

The issue of secrecy surrounding the Dumbarton Oaks world security conference threatened to overshadow the three-power talks themselves tonight as Undersecretary of State Stettinius, chief American delegate, told correspondents he will consult with Russian and British delegates to see if "something can not be worked out."

Stettinius made his statement after receiving a protest from correspondents over the skeleton communiques which have been issued thus far, reporting only mechanical aspects of the meeting.

Later he went to the White House, accompanied by four members of the American delegation, but declined to say whether he had taken up with President Roosevelt the policy of withholding all details of the American-British-Russian conversations on establishment of a world peace agency.

Late in the afternoon Michael J. McDermott, press spokesman for the conversations, released a four-line communique which indicated that detailed discussions had begun on proposals for an international court.

The communique read:

"The subcommittee on international organization continued its discussions at a meeting this morning.

"The legal subcommittee met this afternoon and began its discussions on the subject of an international court."

SENATE GETS NEW OIL PACT

Submitted As Treaty By President For Ratification

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—An Anglo-American oil agreement, signed for the declared purpose of assuring fair utilization of the world's petroleum resources, was submitted to the Senate by President Roosevelt today in the form of a treaty requiring ratification.

The action drew its significance from the fact that the Administration had decided to regard the pact as a treaty rather than an executive agreement which would not require Senate approval. It came at the beginning of a period when international pacts will be negotiated more frequently.

Could Broaden Influence

In asking for ratification of the oil agreement, the Administration has set a pattern which, if followed through, could broaden rather than restrict Senate influence in the field of international affairs.

The oil agreement was made public August 8. At the time, State Department officials said it had not been determined whether it was an executive agreement, or a treaty.

But the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which acts on treaties, and a special petroleum committee took a deep interest in the document, studied what members termed its "merits and demerits," and decided that perhaps it needed long and careful consideration.

Use Of Pressure Apparent

Members would not say so openly, but it was apparent they were using pressure to persuade the Administration that the Senate should have an opportunity to ratify any agreements of such magnitude.

The Foreign Relations and Oil committees held a joint session yesterday and subsequently met separately. Members reported no decisions were reached.

But late today a special message from the President arrived in the Senate transmitting the "oil treaty" and asking for ratification.

Secretary Forrestal Back From War Fronts

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—James V. Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, back from a tour of the European fighting fronts, reported today that 231 American ships, including 60 warcraft, participated in landings on the southern coast of France.

The battlesnips Texas, Arkansas, and Nevada, topped the list of American craft under command of Vice-Admiral H. K. Hewitt. Others included the cruisers Quincy, Augusta and Tuscaloosa; the light cruisers Brooklyn, Marblehead, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Omaha; the escort aircraft carriers Tulagi and Kasaan Bay and 47 destroyers. He did not identify the destroyers except to say that one was the Plunkett which he reported "had been blown off by a German bomb at Anzio last spring, but is now back in the ring."

In addition, he said, American craft in the big invasion operation included 12 assault transports and 159 other ships.

Free World Press Is Held The First Step in Peace'

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP) Determined and vigorous measures to assure truthful news in all countries are urged by Kent Cooper, Executive Director of the Associated Press, and Christopher Chancellor, General Manager of Reuters, in separate articles in the September issue of "Free World" magazine, out tomorrow.

The "elemental, essential step" to a durable peace, says Cooper, "is the assurance of the free and untrammelled flow of news between nations."

In his article, "Free News—First Step in Peace," Cooper writes:

"It is a shocking revelation to most people when they are informed that the great masses of intelligent thinking people throughout the world have had no adequate and effective means of knowing the truth about each other.

"How will they have such means after this war, unless determined, thoughtful and strenuous effort is immediately applied to this long overlooked problem."

He asserts that "systematic and purposeful distortion, perversion and choking of the news channels" had long been a common practice over much of the world, carried out by secret arrangements between foreign news agencies in-

...ced by governments and other ...terests.

Now, however, Cooper points out, the entire background has changed, referring particularly to the change in the British agency, Reuters, which became a cooperative operated mutually for the newspapers of Great Britain three years ago, and to the disappearance of several other foreign agencies during the war.

AUG 25 1944

"While government control of the flow of news and information must be prevented," Cooper continues, "major governments of the United Nations should lend their benediction to the development of independent news agencies responsible only to the publications, radio stations and other outlets they serve, which in turn are responsible to their public.

"They can now well advance the principle that the peace settlements will include guarantees of the right of men to get, send and publish the news."

Offered as an amendment to the Surplus Property Disposal Bill, it would permit this procedure: If a buyer of surplus government property sold it for large profits, the government could "renegotiate" the original sale and recover a part of the profits.

The amendment was proposed by Democratic Senators McKellar of Tennessee, Eastland of Mississippi, and McFarland of Arizona with the [illegible] McKellar put it, of preventing a gang of speculators from hornswoggling" the government.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) opposed it on the ground it would "permanently regiment" $100,000,000,000 worth of property" as it passes from hand to hand."

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) argued it would wreck the bill and impose an "administrative impossibility."
